Lexington, March 24.—Our meeting here of two and one half weeks closed last Thursday night with 25 additions; 15 by baptism. Two of those added were husband and wife, both deaf and dumb. The entire service last Lord's day morning and the last night of the meeting was interpreted to them by signs by Bro. Turton, ex-superintendent of several schools for the deaf and dumb. He is an expert and taught these people, and interpreted the confession as given by Bro. Wickham. It was a very impressive service, two noble young ladies making the confession at the same service. We begin at Fairview Saturday evening. Address at Elm Creek, Neb.—R. A. GIVENS.

ARAOMONGHPLYTN $1000 FREE

Can you arrange these fourteen jumbled letters so that they will form a title to one of the best story papers in the land? IF SO YOU MAY SHARE IN THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE $1000 WHICH WE ARE GIVING AWAY for doing a little work for us. In arranging the letters use them only as many times as they appear and no letter can be used which does not appear. This and other most liberal offers are made to introduce one of the best NEW YORK STORY MAGAZINES into every home in the United States and Canada. WE DO NOT WANT ONE CENT OF YOUR MONEY. Send your solution to us plainly written on a postal card with your address in full and you will hear from us by RETURN MAIL. STICK TO IT AND TRY AND GET YOUR SHARE OF THE $1000. A copy of this celebrated NEW YORK MONTHLY MAGAZINE WILL BE SENT FREE to every one answering this advertisement. Do not delay. Send your answer immediately. Address THE PARAGON PUBLISHING CO., 22 North William Street, New York City.

Rheumatism Can Be Cured

promptly and easily, its tortures banished, comfort and rest brought to the aching limbs and frame by cleansing the impurities from the blood with a Swiss-German preparation which was discovered by a wise old physician, but advertised only within recent years.

Dr. Peter's Blood Vitalizer

—The 100 year old remedy

It restores purity and life to the blood, strengthens the entire system and builds up the general health. Seldom fails to cure all diseases caused by impoverished blood or disordered stomach.

No Drug-Store medicine; is sold only by regular Vitalizer agents.

Persons living where there are no agents for Dr. Peter's Blood Vitalizer can, by sending $2.00, obtain twelve 35-cent trial bottles direct from the proprietor. This offer can be obtained only once by the same person.

Write to DR. PETER FAHRNEY,
112-114 South Hoyne Ave., Chicago.

AMERICA'S MOST POPULAR RAILROAD
CHICAGO AND ALTON RAILROAD.
PERFECT PASSENGER SERVICE BETWEEN
ST. LOUIS AND CHICAGO,
ST. LOUIS AND KANSAS CITY,
ST. LOUIS AND PEORIA,
KANSAS CITY AND CHICAGO.
Direct connections at terminals and at junction points with through trains of connecting lines for
ALL POINTS NORTH, WEST AND EAST.

If you are contemplating a trip, any portion which can be made over the Chicago & Alton, it will pay you to write to the undersigned for maps, pamphlets, rates, time tables, etc.

D. BOWES,
GEO. J. CHARLTON, General Western Passenger Agent, 216 North Broadway
General Passenger and Ticket Agent, ST. LOUIS, MO.
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

MISSOURI.

Sweet Springs, March 24.—Meeting continues with increasing interest. I have organized a large chorus of children. I will assist Willis F. Jordan, of Newport, Ark.—V. E. RIDENOUR, singer.

Sedalia, March 25.—Bro. J. S. Myers is with us in a special meeting at the East Broadway Christian Church. Meeting 11 evenings old, with 90 additions. Will continue another week. This is Bro. Myers' eighth protracted meeting here, where he was pastor eight years.—F. L. COOK.

Nevada, March 26.—One addition at Hume yesterday, which makes three since last report.—S. MAGEE.

Grant City, March 26.—One confession here last evening, an excellent lady.—W. H. HARRIS.

Rockport, March 26.—Closed my meeting at Westboro with nine additions. Church has called me for half time. Will probably accept the pastorate. Rockport, our county seat, has also called me for full time, provided they can raise salary. Thus I am halting between two churches.—G. HALLECK ROWE.

Farmington, March 26.—One added by letter, one by statement and one confession at my different places of work since last report. Expect to hold a few days' meeting for our Doe Run mission, beginning next week. Farmington is to have the best church building owned by our brotherhood in Southeast Missouri in the very near future.—A. M. HARRAL.

Kirksville, March 29.—Last night I baptized a Methodist minister. His wife, who had been immersed, also united. He is a nice young man and a good preacher. He has been preaching five years. There have been 10 additions to the church here the last month.—H. A. NORTHCUTT.

Joplin, March 26.—We have received, during the month of March, 16 additions. Seven were by letter, three by statement, one reclaimed, five by conversion. Of the latter, one was raised a Catholic. This makes 31 added this year, and 151 in 15 months, all at regular services.—W. F. TURNER.

Sedalia, March 29.—J. S. Myers has been with us in our meeting 15 evenings, and there have been 118 additions. Our city is deeply stirred. We join with the First Church in a union gospel service Sunday, conducted by Bro. Myers. We are all happy.—F. L. COOK, pastor.

Beulah Church, St. Louis.—Four additions; two by baptism.—W. A. MOORE.

Compton Heights, St. Louis.—One addition.—S. B. MOORE.

First Church, St. Louis.—Two additions.—F. O. FANNON.

ILLINOIS.

Du Quoin, March 26.—Du Quoin is a well-located town of 5,000 people on the Illinois Central Railroad, 288 miles south of Chicago and 73 southeast of St. Louis. The church here is one of the oldest and is the strongest in Southern Illinois. When the writer became its pastor, April 1st, one year ago, he found on roll 450 names; during the year, previous to this meeting, 28 were added; 13 were lost by letter, etc. Last August it was determined to secure an evangelist to hold us a meeting. About Dec. 1st Bro. J. V. Coombs, of Indianapolis, Ind., was engaged to begin as soon in the new year as he could reach us. Three months were spent by us in preparation. Five weeks were spent by the church and pastor, holding meetings every night, all pointing toward the great meeting to be. Socials were held at which ways and means of carrying on the special work were considered; teachers were instructed to prepare their classes for Christ; all were urged to talk about the coming meeting and to make it their daily prayer. One week before the evangelist arrived we began special services again and these were largely attended. Feb. 27th Bros. Coombs and W. E. M. Hackleman, also of Indianapolis, came. Bro. Hackleman led the music the first ten days to the great profit of the meeting, when he had to leave us. From the first the audiences were immense. The preaching was logical, clear, forceful and true gospel, and as a result 97 souls took their stand with us on the Bible and Bible alone as their rule of faith and practice. The meeting was a success every way and the church is planning for great things. It has been my privilege to work with many of our strong men and great evangelists, but none ever did better work than did J. V. Coombs in this meeting.—W. H. KERN, pastor.

Rantoul, March 26.—Two added on the 25th and four on the 18th at Rantoul. Almost $60 raised for missions and not all in.—H. H. PETERS.

Lawrenceville, March 29.—We closed a short meeting here last night with 16 added to the church.—W. M. GROVES.

Harvey, March 25.—Four confessions at the Christian Church.—E. H. ORR.

Chicago, March 26.—Yesterday was observed by Englewood Church Sunday-school as "Decision Day," with most happy results; six boys and two girls having come forward and made the good confession. We are so impressed with the "Decision Day" idea that our school has decided to observe the day quarterly hereafter, the last (Review) Sunday of each quarter. It is gratifying to know that the custom is growing among all evangelical churches.—W. P. KEELER.

Sailor Springs, March 28.—Began a meeting here last Monday evening. One addition last evening. Good interest.—WALTER KLINE.

Sullivan, March 26.—Work here moves on toward greater things; four baptized Saturday and two more confessions yesterday. Accessions every week.—E. W. BRICKERT.

St. Joseph, March 26.—Closed our 25 days' meeting Friday night with 45 additions; 35 confessions and 10 otherwise. The congregation kindly remembered wife and I with a liberal donation. The church in fine working condition.—H. J. HOSTETLER

Williamsville, March 26.—Three additions since last report. All departments of our work moving nicely.—W. W. WEEDON.

Windsor, March 27.—Two confessions at our regular appointment at Humbolt last Sunday. We have taken collections for Foreign Missions at Atwood, Arthur and Humbolt.—A. H. HARRELL.

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR, ECKSTEIN } Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC, BRADLEY, BROOKLYN, JEWETT, ULSTER, UNION } New York.
SOUTHERN, SHIPMAN } Chicago.
COLLIER, MISSOURI, RED SEAL, SOUTHERN } St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

WHEN you see the paint cracking, peeling or falling off the house in shreds, you may be sure it was not painted with Pure White Lead, but with some mixture of Zinc, Barytes, etc.

Pure White Lead unites with Linseed oil to form an elastic coating that never cracks nor peels. It is the good, old-fashioned paint that lasts. To be sure of getting Pure White Lead, see that the package bears one of the brands named in margin.

FREE For colors use National Lead Company's Pure White Lead Tinting Colors. Any shade desired is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving full information and showing samples of Colors, also pamphlet entitled "Uncle Sam's Experience With Paints" forwarded upon application.

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

"Better late than never." It is best, however, to be never late about taking Hood's Sarsaparilla to purify your blood. Take it now.

A Bicycle Free.

The Mead Cycle Co., of Chicago, is offering an up-to-date 1900 model bicycle to any person who will act as their agent. The employment is easy and consists of distributing 1,000 catalogues in your own town. This seems an easy way of getting a good wheel, and if you want one and can give good references, write the Mead Cycle Co., Department 165 Y, Chicago, Ill.

Special Rates to New York via B. and O. S-W. R. R.

For Ecumenical Conference of Missions, held April 21st to May 1st, rate of $28.10 for the round trip from St. Louis. Three Daily Through Trains, Sleeping and Dining Cars. Stop-over at Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia. Rate open to all persons attending the meeting. Full particulars by addressing

JNO. P. ROGERMAN, T. P. A., B. & O. S-W. R. R., Dallas, Tex.

A. C. GOODRICH, T. P. A., B. & O. S-W. R. R., Kansas City, Mo.

G. B. WARFEL, A. G. P. A., B. & O. S-W. R. R., St. Louis, Mo.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

Miscellaneous wants and notices will be inserted in this department at the rate of one cent a word, each insertion, all words, large or small, to be counted, and two initials stand for one word. Please accompany notice with corresponding remittance, to save bookkeeping

THE ACME SMELTING AND REFINING COMPANY, of Phœnix, Ariz., is controlled by Christian business men and offers for a short time excellent opportunities for either large or small investments. Write for full information. A thorough investigation is desired by the company.

SEND to Thomas P. Ullom for a catalog of Good Books for the Home, Endeavor and Sunday-school. Special rate NOW. Moody Bible Institute, 80 Institute Place, Chicago, Ills.

A SINGER of seven years' experience would like to make engagements for the spring and summer months. Terms: traveling expenses, entertainment and free will offerings. Effie M. Wright, singing evangelist, Hillsboro, Ohio.

MYSTERY OF THE GOLDEN CLOTH. The greatest book ever written on John's Revelation. Price, $1.50. Also Seer of Patmos, or John's Place in the Christian Economy. Price, 25cts. Address J. S. HUGHES, Station O, CHICAGO.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR BUSINESS MAN.

A business man with from $4,000 to $6,000 to invest in a Publishing Company with good job office and religious newspaper in the best city west of St. Louis, and who could become business manager of the company, can learn particulars by addressing "Business Man," this office.

Ladies and Children without Escort

En route to California should join one of the Santa Fe Route personally conducted excursions.

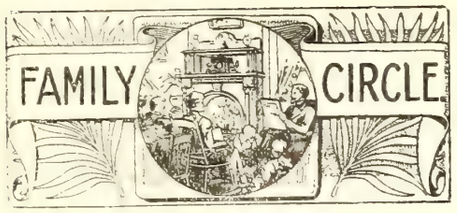
The petty cares and annoyances of long-distance travel are taken off their minds by a special excursion conductor.

No extra charge.

Full information cheerfully furnished.

T. A. GRADY,
Manager California Tourist Service,
The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway,
1 9 ADAMS STREET, CHICAGO.

The Land is the title of the NORMAL INSTRUCTOR, Part IV., by W. W. Dowling. A knowledge of Bible Geography is essential to a proper understanding of the Word of God, and no where else can the same amount of reliable information on the subject be found as in this manual. Price, 15 cents per copy. Christian Pub. Co., St. Louis, Mo.



The City Street.

BY MILTON H. H. LEE.

The long street wended through the city strife
To east and west. All day the sound of toil
Had murmured low. But toil had ceased, for it
Was eventide, and rest was hovering o'er
The struggling multitude. A few there were
Who walked, with weary steps and slow, upon
Their homeward way. To east, as far as eye
Could see, the ceaseless smoke of toil arose
Above the city, black and grim, and made
The deepening gloom of even' darker seem.
Almost it made me shudder as I looked;
Because I knew the misery and sin
That cloud o'ershadowed. Yet the sky was clear,
Save here and there, and like a placid sea:—
A gloomy picture toward the east, but toward
The west—how different! The winter sun
Was going down, and shed its light o'er all
The west in heaven and earth. A sea of clouds
Spread o'er the nether sky in which the light
Made waves of purple on a golden sea.
The street that struggled through the town, and left
The eastern gloom, found glory in the west,
And seemed a pathway through the gates of gold.
I stood enraptured, while a vision came
To me of life's long pathway to the skies.
I saw it quit earth's turmoil, and the gloom
Of clouded skies, and struggle onward through
The crowded market ways, and busy streets,
And calms of lonely harvest fields, and fields
Where ne'er a sound of scythe or note of song
Breaks silence. Onward thence, far into skies
Of grandest sunset. Thus it struggled on Till most I heard the angels singing praise.
The gates of Life were opened, and the street
Ablaze with matchless glory entered in,
And thousands walked upon its shining way
With songs of joy and praise upon their lips.

The Lost Emigrants.

BY R. H. JOHNSON.

CHAPTER XXIII.

One day a remarkable discovery was made. On looking over the warehouse stores, some one incidentally inquired: "Where is the safe?"

This was an iron safe of several hundred pounds weight, in which the colonists had deposited their money on leaving Philadelphia and, as they had no use for it on the island, it had not been withdrawn.

Those present looked around upon the inquiry as to the safe, and to the consternation of all it was nowhere to be found.

The news spread like wildfire, and soon the entire village assembled with looks of incredulity which changed into stupefaction. Some looked at the roof; but a bird could not fly out there, much less a great iron box. Some looked at the earth; but there was not visible even a rathole. Some looked at the walls; but a big safe could hardly crawl out where there was not a place for a mouse to escape.

The Captain and others surveyed every foot of ground surrounding the building, but there were no telltale tracks of men, let alone the deep trail of a heavy safe, and after each repeated search they returned and looked again at the place where the safe had stood, as if they could not trust their senses.

Finally, the Captain said: "May I be keel hauled if since the days of the Phantom Ship anything has happened so mysterious! Is it only a dream that we ever had a safe, or has it melted like a block of ice, or been spirited away through the keyhole, while the guards stationed here every night were wrapped in a Rip Van Winkle sleep?"

It is needless to say that many of the villagers were thoroughly alarmed by this event, which seemed impossible to other than a supernatural agency. In fact, so widespread was the alarm that it was thereafter very difficult to get men to watch the building at night. And, as the watch, despite unusual vigilance, had utterly failed in the protection of property, after a few days it was given over.

Meanwhile, a new grievance arose with the Blackbirds. It was discovered that our potatoes and other vegetables were being stolen from the field.

One evening, near dark, some of our men who had been hunting on the west side came upon a boat moored as near as possible to the potato field. They at once knocked a hole in the bottom, and hastening to the field caught the bay men filling baskets with potatoes and other vegetables.

The party were about equal in numbers, but our men having guns had the advantage, and seizing the filled baskets made off with them; while the other party went away empty-handed, making direful threats.

There was some apprehension and unusual vigilance for a day or two, but when a messenger came from the bay with an apology and a proffer to pay all damages when we should make out a bill—which they never did—our fears were allayed and we were delighted.

But Pat said: "Arrah, go long wid ye! I misdoubt but it's the howlin' of the calm before the sto-r-m." We little heeded Pat's enigmatical warning, but had cause afterwards to remember it.

Very properly, at our next conference, after the baptisms recorded in the last chapter, the subject of church organization came up. As was very natural, the views of those present varied in accordance with their previous church relations. Some favored an Episcopal, some a Presbyterian, some a Congregational form of government.

Mr. Fergus said: "One thing is certain: So far as we are related to other churches we will be independent, as we are cut off from them by thousands of miles of intervening seas.

"It is also certain that the organization of the church in the start was an evolution, and was developed just as the exigencies required.

"Turn to the record of the selections of deacons, Acts 6, and you will find: 1. They were chosen to meet the emergency. 2. They were chosen by the brethren—'Look ye out among you.' 3. They were ordained to their work by the twelve—'Whom we will appoint.' Any arbitrary selection, therefore, by ecclesiastical authority that nullifies the voice of the congregation is a violation of apostolic teaching.

"The deacons seem to have been chosen chiefly for secular duties, though it seems probable that their ministry had a wider range. The Greek word diakonos occurs thirty times in the New Testament. Only thrice is it rendered 'deacon' in the common English Bible; while it is translated seven times 'servant,' and twenty times 'minister.' Our custom of exclusively calling the preacher the 'minister' is a departure from New Testament usage. The deacon is entitled to the name fully as much as the preacher, if not more so.

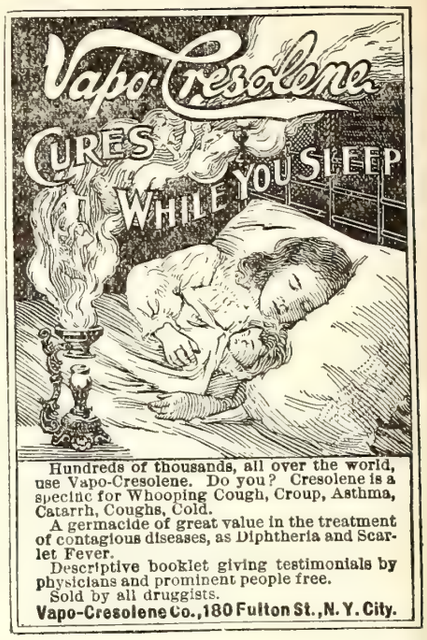
"Though sometimes used to designate a special office in the church, it is applied in the New Testament in a general way to the apostles, elders, women, domestics, or to any one who were 'servants'—as the word signifies—whether in a religious or a secular sense.

"In addition to deacons, the New Testament speaks of apostles, bishops, overseers, elders, pastors and evangelists.

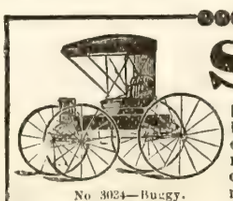
The apostolic seems to have been an extraordinary office, held by men specially taught in the school of Christ and gifted with miraculous powers, and was incidental to the planting of the primitive church.

"No one was qualified for the office but a witness of the resurrection (Acts 1:22).

"Paul speaks of Jesus having been seen o



Hundreds of thousands, all over the world, use Vapo-Cresolene. Do you? Cresolene is a specific for Whooping Cough, Croup, Asthma, Catarrh, Coughs, Cold.
A germacide of great value in the treatment of contagious diseases, as Diphtheria and Scarlet Fever.
Descriptive booklet giving testimonials by physicians and prominent people free.
Sold by all druggists.
Vapo-Cresolene Co., 180 Fulton St., N. Y. City.



No. 3024—Buggy. Price, $38.50 with leather quarter top.

Save All Profits

but the makers, when you buy a carriage, buggy or harness. Our method of selling direct enables you to save all agents commissions, besides giving you the advantage of dealing with manufacturers and a wider range of choice than any dealer could offer. If you want a thoroughly well built, modern style vehicle, high-grade harness, robe, blanket, or other horse accessories, write for our fully illustrated catalogue. We guarantee everything we make, and will refund your money should you be dissatisfied with your purchase.

No. 240 Single Strap Buggy Harness. Price, $8.15.

THE COLUMBUS CARRIAGE & HARNESS CO., Columbus, Ohio.

all the apostles, and last of all by himself, 'as of one born out of due time' (1 Cor. 15: 7, 8). Again he says: 'Am I not an apostle? Have I not seen the Lord Jesus Christ?' (1 Cor. 9:1). Jesus had personally appeared to Paul to make him a witness (Acts 26: 16). Since only eyewitnesses could hold this office, it necessarily could not be permanent, unless Christ were appearing to men of every age, and gifting them with miraculous powers. For 'signs and wonders and mighty deeds' were the evidence of apostleship (2 Cor. 12:12).

"Whosoever, therefore, claims to be in the apostolic succession must be a witness of the Lord's resurrection, and must be a worker of mighty miracles, or we must brand him as a pretender, even though he sit in the chair of St. Peter."

Mr. Burton was next called on to discuss the offices of bishops, elders and pastors.

His views were the following: "I have been studying this subject, at your suggestion, and I will say that I only found the word pastor once in our English New Testament (Eph. 4:11). The Greek word occurs eighteen times. Seventeen times it is rendered shepherd, once by the Latin word pastor, certainly a slender foundation on which to warrant the exclusive use of a general term to designate a special officer, called "the pastor," meaning thereby the regular preacher for a congregation. The Greek word means one who feeds the flock. It is applied to Jesus seven times, to feeders of sheep ten times, to persons once.

"We will then rule out the pastor as a distinct officer. Further investigation will greatly simplify the organization by revealing the fact that elder, bishop and overseer are not separate functionaries, but merely three words to designate the same office.

"Bishop and overseer are from the same Greek word episcopos, from which we get 'episcopal.' Elder is from presbuteros, which means older.

"The fact is, the overseers or bishops were chosen from the older ones of the congregation; hence they are frequently called 'elders.' "

Mr. White: "How do you make these three officers to be one?"

Burton: "Bishop and overseer are from the same Greek word, hence are identical, as already stated.

"The elder is a bishop or overseer because divine inspiration says so. Turn to Acts 20:17-28. In the first verse cited Paul sends to Ephesus for the elders of the church, and in the last cited verse he says to these elders: 'Take heed, therefore, unto yourselves and to all the flock over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers.' Again, Paul instructs Titus to 'ordain elders in every city, if any be blameless, for a bishop must be blameless' (Tit. 1:5, 6).

"That there was a plurality of elders in each church is evident from the passages cited. Paul sent to Ephesus for the elders of the church. He instructs Titus to ordain elders in every city. Some one may say there were probably more churches than one in a city, but facts are opposed to this. In every city the church is always spoken of in the singular; never the churches; and instead of one elder for several churches there were several elders for one church; a wise provision, as in a multitude of counsellors there is safety.

"I might multiply proofs, but I forbear. Enough has been said to show that the organization of the primitive church was very simple.

"Afterwards there came the 'falling away' predicted by the apostles, when the apostate church went into pomp and spectacular show, and multiplied offices of power and glory, as popes and cardinals and bishops and archbishops and vicars and reverends and right reverends and deacons and arch deacons and monks and nuns and acolytes, and all the show and splendor so foreign to the simplicity of the apostolic church."

A Singer Sewing Machine

The Best Investment on Earth, earning more in proportion to cost than any other purchase possible.

Three Different Kinds, either lock-stitch or chain-stitch.

Built Like a Watch, at the largest and best equipped factory in the world, where every machine is carefully tested on practical stitching.

SOLD ONLY BY THE SINGER MANUFACTURING CO.

As Ye Would.

If I should see
A brother languishing in sore distress,
And should I turn and leave him comfortless,
When I might be
A messenger of home and happiness—
How could I ask to have what I denied
In my own hour of bitterness supplied?

If I might share
A brother's load along the dusty way,
And I should turn and walk alone that day—
How could I dare,
When in the evening watch I knelt to pray,
To ask for help to bear my pain and loss,
If I had heeded not my brother's cross?

If I might sing
A little song to cheer a fainting heart,
And I should seal my lips and sit apart,
When I might bring
A bit of sunshine for life's ache and smart—
How could I hope to have my grief relieved,
If I kept silent when my brother grieved?

And so I know
That day is lost wherein I fail to lend
A helping hand to some wayfaring friend;
But if it show
A burden lightened by the cheer I send,
Then do I hold the golden hours well spent,
And lay me down in sweet content.

—Edith V. Bradt, in Nashville Christian Advocate.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O

Sold by Druggists, 75c.
Hall's Family Pills are the bes

Specific Prayer.

BY B. W. RICE.

"No use disputin' it, it's so," remarked Luke Savage, as he rested against the fence.

"We was in a tight place, Sarrah and me, ane we didn't have no seed to put in the ground, ane we didn't have no way to get none, neither. Sarrah says, says she, 'Jim, w-e w-i-l-l g-i-t t-h-e r-y-e.' And thar was somethin' about the way she sade it that made me abeout half wise b'lieve she knowed what she was a talkin' of. You see, she sometimes calls me 'Jim,' and sometimes she sase 'Lukey;' but this 'casion she meant business ane just say, 'Jim.'"

Here the rancher gave way to a vehement and positive declaration, emphatically asserting that some proposition is true.

"I allers prayed in a generl way that God in a generl way would bless us, but it never seemed like it was jess the right thing to do to get specifak and name the things what you want. Well, Sarrah, she allers was specifak in prayin' ane she'd mention things right out, too. You remembers when old Jake Jones was sick and we had prayers at the church for him, well my Sarrah was the only soul what said, 'Old Brether Jake Jones, Lord,' durin' the whole meetin', ane if it hadn't been for that one remark the Lord would not had no way of tellin' who we was a prayin' fer, either. Well, Sarrah jess always is specifak, and what I'm goin' tell you abeout is no 'seption, and she was specifak as usule this time."

"Is this goin' to be how you got your seed rye?" asked the companion, as the man stood in deep meditation, as if solving some momentous problem.

"That's jess it," he continued. "We didn't have none, we didn't know no one who did have some, ane we didn't have no credit, but in addition to the generl faith I allers had, Sarrah, she had a specifak faith, and it got us the rye.

"She sase to me, 'Jim, how much rye we want?' I sase we want nuff to plant twenty acres. She says, 'Jim, cain't you git in thirty acres if you had the seed?' I sase, 'Yes, Sarrah, cartenly, I could git in forty acres if I had the seed.' 'How much rye plants an acre well?' continude Sarrah. 'Bushel ane a half,' sase I. 'You'd want forty-five bushels,' went on Sarrah, just specifak like ane juss as erness like she knowed of some one who had that much rye to give us.' 'Will our wagon-bed hold forty-five bushels,' she went on?' I sase, 'Yes, by fixing it a little.' Sarrah sase, 'You better be fixin' of it then.' She went on, 'How far can you go and git back in three days,' says Sarrah. I sase, 'I can make forty miles ane back.' 'Then if you git forty-five bushels of rye in forty miles of here we will be all right, we will,' sase Sarrah, and I just tole her you better recon we would, and I didn't laff at her either, for she jess looked like an angle as she spessifide these things out, ane she jess went on askin' which road was the bess, which was the easies drivin' ane if I had axle-grease nuff to make sich a trip. I commenst to feel jess like I had rye for sale overn abuv what it would take to plant thirty acres, still I didn't like to git specifak and come right out and jine in askin' God to bless us with forty-five bushels of seed rye. Well, Sarrah, she sase, 'Jim, to-night we will pray for what we wants.' I was willin', course, and I opened prayers, and was middlin' in earness, but I didn't say a word about rye, but throwed myself open for jess anything the Lord was willing to give us, but Sarrah, she was specifak and she jess prayed for what we most needed, and didn't harp around about it long either, after she saw I had stopped my recitin' prayers. I askt the Lord for daily bread, for food, ane raimant and sich articles, and the same time in a generl round abeout way was not tellin' him jess what we most needed. Sarrah, she commenced and she said somethin' abeout like this, 'Lord, you see our fiel out there, but thou dost not see no grain thare to put in it. We wants to put rye in it, and consequently it is rye we needs. Thou dost cartainly have some chile somewhare in forty miles of here who has some rye to part with, ane my husband here is goin' to hitch up to-morrow and go for forty-five bushels uv it, and he is goin' to make the trip in three days ane be back here ready to commence planting it on Thursday morning. Lord, thou hast seen for weeks that we have got no money to buy rye with, but thou allers hears thy chile, even him without money, and blesses him accordin' to thy will. Amen! Go our security for this amount of rye. Amen!' She said this last sentence with a tone you'd never forgit. It would been jess like her to say, go our security for forty-five bushels of rye, but then she jess sase 'this amount,' cause she had jess sade 'forty-five bushels' a second before.

"We had an early breakfast next morning and I hitched up. Sarrah, she sase better start in the direction of the river, and that is what I done. I didn't have no money and no rye. I knowed some of the people, and a good many uv them I didn't know, but I jess started off on a trot.

"'Where is Luke goin'?' axed Pete Brown of Sarrah, as I rounded the corner, ane I jess heard her say as truthful like, 'He has went to git rye to sow on the Gray fiel and will be gone three days.' Some people will say that Sarrah had no right to tell that for the truth, and maybe she didn't, but she was specifak in that too. I camped that night and no rye in sight and I knowed it had to come mighty early the next mornin' or I would not git back in the three days, so I didn't sleep very much, but jess rolled around in the wagon and wondered.

"'How much of them willers is there?' said a man to me, as I turned around a corner where he was disputin' with another man as to the size of a willer patch. Now I hadn't never seen either of them and I hated to git mixed up, but a fair question had been askt and I jess stopped and calculated a bit and I says jess about seven acres.

"'What did I tell you?' said one of them men to the other, 'I sade jess seven acres, and you sade ten.' This made the other man mad ane he rode off down the road.

"'I was jess tryin' to git that feller to clear the willers off for me,' went on the man who lived at that place, 'and he wouldn't do it unless I paid him for ten acres and give him money at that. I told him I had some grain that I would not want and would trade him grain if he would clear the willers, but he got mad and wouldn't do it.' 'What kind of grain is it?' sase I. 'Rye,' says he; "good, first-class seed rye.'

"I jess teembled as he talked. I sase, 'No use in a man gettin' mad 'cause he caint have his own way abeout things,' but I couldn't go no further with my talkin. I was jess collapsin'. 'I will give you forty-five bushels of good seed rye, if you will clear the willers off for me, ten acres or seven acres, whatever there is,' went on the man, and before I could collect my mind I had taken him up. 'But,' sase I, 'ain't got no tools here to do it with.' 'Jess take your rye home and sew it and come back ane clear the willers while it is growin',' sase he. 'I can't give you security,' sase I. 'The Lord is your security,' sase he. 'Come ane load up the rye.'

"Well sir, I jess driv in ane loaded up the rye and started home the bewilderest man in the country. When I got within ten miles of home I met Joe Larkens and he sase Sarrah was tellin' him that I would be home that night with forty five bushels of seed rye.

"'Oh no, Luke,' sase Joe, 'don't git crazy on religion. It jess happened that you got along there at the right time to fall in on the trade,' and he would not take the prayer part of it into consideration at all. I jess sase, 'It's nice to have a good pius wife who knows jess whar to send a man to have sich things happen to him. And now I am specifak when I prays."

Ontario, Ore.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS.

Leading Paper for the Young People of the Christian Church.

W. W. DOWLING, EDITOR.

Our Young Folks is a Large Sixteen-Page Weekly Journal devoted to Bible Study, Christian Work and Home Culture, first-class in every particular, with a large and brilliant corps of special and general contributors.

WHAT IT CONTAINS.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS contains, among other valuable features, the following special departments:

I. The Picture Gallery: First-class pictures of prominent Ministers, Sunday-school Superintendents, Endeavorers and other Christian Workers, with biographicel sketches.

II. The Church: Short, pointed articles on First Principles and Practical Duties; Talks on the mid-week Prayer-meeting Topics, and notes of Church Doings.

III. The Sunday-school: Full Expository, Illustrative and Practical Notes on the International Texts, that will afford teachers and older pupils all the aid needed in the study, teaching and application of the Sunday-school lesson.

IV. The Y. P. S. C. E.: Expository Notes on the Y. P. S. C. E. and Junior Prayer-meeting Topics for each week, with Illustrative and Practical Applications and Quotations, that will help young Endeavorers to take an active and intelligent part in the Service.

V. The Home Circle: Poetry, Stories, Illustrated sketches of travel, familiar chats about books, music, amusements and kindred topics.

WHAT IT WILL DO.

1. It will interest your big boys and girls, and help you to keep them in the Sunday-school.
2. It will instruct them in the Scriptures as understood and interpreted by the Disciples of Christ.
3. It will make your young disciples familiar with the work and principles of the religious body with which they are connected, and "root and ground" them in the faith.

WHAT IT WILL COST.

The Subscription Price is very low—so low that it comes within the reach of all. The following are

The Rates.—One copy, one year, seventy-five cents; in clubs of ten and upwards, fifty cents each per year.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY,
1522 Locust Street, - St. Louis, Mo.

IF YOU HAVE

Rheumatism

and drugs and doctors fail to cure you write to me, and I will send you free a trial package of a simple remedy, which cured me and thousands of others, among them cases of over 50 years' standing. This is no humbug or deception but an honest remedy that you can test without spending a cent. It recently cured a lady who had been an invalid for 52 years. Address JOHN A. SMITH, 1195 Summerfield Church Building, MILWAUKEE, WIS.

The Advance Society.

J. BRECKENRIDGE ELLIS.

As many new names have been added to our subscription list I seize this opportunity (as people often say, just as if they thought it was trying to get away from them) of describing briefly the five resolutions of the Advance Society. I have received many questions about this subject from new readers. You resolve to read five pages of history and thirty lines of poetry, and memorize a quotation from a well-known author every week; read a Bible verse every day, and keep account of what you read in a notebook. Every twelve weeks that you keep in this way you are entitled to be printed upon our distinguished Honor List. The society, as I told you recently, numbers about one thousand.

James R. Bryant, Liberty, Mo., inquires: "Is the Red Box Clew to be published in book form? If so, where, and at what price?" As others have asked me the same question, I reply that if there is a demand for the story in book form the Christian Publishing Company will bring it out. If you would like to see the story bound like a book, write and say so (not binding yourself to buy it); and if you have had enough of it in serial form, all right. Nobody wants to force his books upon you. Ethel Mae Taylor, Harlan, Ia.: "I am pleased that we are growing so fast. I like the Red Box Clew very much. I think Frank will find her folks at last. One day our teacher told her little cousin to bound Iowa. She ran to the door and jumped off the step. When the teacher asked her why she did this, she replied that she had been told to bound Iowa and she had done it. In reading our required history, is biography or history of animals and plants counted?" (I think biography the very best kind of history; animals and plants are "counted," but personally I prefer human beings.) Florence Belle Beattie, Dover, Mo.: "I feel almost ashamed to write; I was one of the first to join the Av. S.; I kept the pledge faithfully for awhile, then failed. Now I want to repent and return to my first love. Poor little Frank! will she ever find her mother? I will be 11 next Christmas day. Enroll me and auntie in the mighty number."

D. H. McIntire, Avalon, Mo.: "I am reading for the Honor List. I have read through Uncle Tom's Cabin and John Halifax for the second time. I am now reading in the way of poetry, Tennyson. I am reading History of the World and like it exceedingly well." Cora Polly, Pennville, Ind.: "I have been longing to join the Av. S. I send my name. I am 14, and in the sixth year in school. Burleigh Cash (one of our members) is in my class, and sits right behind me." Edna Polly: "As my sister is sending her name, I send mine. I am 12. My father is a preacher in the Christian Church. We had a nice time Washington's birthday. We had from half past 3 to nearly 6." Madge Masters, Ozark, Ark.: "It is snowing, and our early flowers are in bloom (March 21st). School will soon be out and I will be glad, for when spring comes I don't like to stay indoors and keep quiet. My best quotation is from Whittier: 'Not to him who rashly dares, but to him who nobly bears, is the victor's garland.'" Alta (15), Perla (12) and Tallie Millsop (10) write: "We have been reading the continued story and would like to join the Av. S." They live in Rooklins, Mo. Eugene and James Jameson, Havensville, Kan.: "We are two brothers, 11 and 13, and want to join the Av. S. I think we shall like it. Our favorite books—Little Men, Beautiful Joe, Black Beauty, Robinson Crusoe, Swiss Family Robinson, History of U. S. Favorite authors—Marshall Saunders and C. H. Cooper. We have read all three of the continued stories, but like Red Box Clew the best." Mary Emily Day, Sparta, Mo.: "I have decided to join the Av. S. I have read about it from the beginning. The Red Box Clew is so interesting. I am a member of the Christian Church. I am seventeen. I live in the country and can read as much as I like, as school is out." Myrtle A. Searcy, Farmingdale, Ill.: "I have decided to join the Av. S. We have had no Sunday-school since Christmas; it was at the Baptist church, where my father belongs. They have now started one at the United Brethren. My mother and sister belong to the Christian Church. The nearest one is as Salisbury, about seven and one-half miles. I will be 14 by the time you read this. I am in fifth reader, spelling, arithmetic, physiology, grammar, geography, history. If I don't keep the resolutions next summer don't be disappointed, as we have over an acre of berries to tend to." Vera Davenport, Perry, Okla.: "I am trying to start an Av. S. here, but it seems that everybody has too much to do. I was 11 March 9. I had some girls at my house to play and mamma gave me a little book to keep my diary of the Av. S. in. I find it quite easy to keep the resolutions and have time to play and study too." Dottie Standish, Meeteetse, Wyo.: "I enjoy keeping the resolutions. Besides having your name on the Honor List, it teaches anybody something. I like the Red Box Clew very much. We have Sunday-school and never miss going if we can help it. Mamma is commencing to keep the resolutions. Her name is Mrs. Flora Standish." Mattie Lorena Upton, Houstonia, Mo.: "I have read Dombey and Son and think it a fine book. My best quotation is from Hattie L. Judson: 'No service in itself is small; none great, though earth it fill. But that is small that seeks its own, and great that seeks God's will.'"

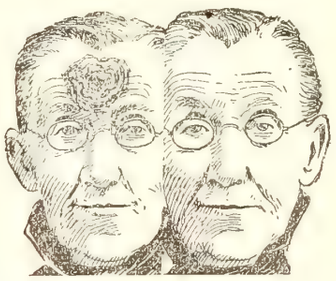
New Honor List: Mattie Lorena Upton (5th quarter), Ethel Mae Taylor (5th quarter), Dottie Standish, Madge Masters (5th quarter), Helen Ross, Independence, Mo., 2nd quarter). Next week we take up the Red Box Clew I hope to receive many letters from you soon. I am sorry to omit many letters which were guesses on my story. As they were so very much mistaken, I think it better not to give them. One rather ingenious guess came from Nannie M. Thompson, Princeton, Mo. But it was far from the true solution. Let's hear from you.

Plattsburg, Mo.

Remarkable Success

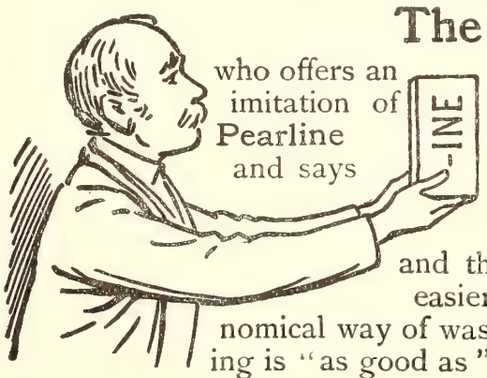
Attained in the Treatment of Cancer. Many are cured by Soothing, Balmy Oils.

Words of gratitude expressed by Dr. Bye's many patients continue to come in. Many afflicted with this dread disease are flocking to this great physician. The alarming increase of cancer in the last few years has interested the medical profession. Dr. Bye has proven beyond a doubt that cancer is curable, and his success in the past year has certainly been phenomenal. Persons afflicted, or having friends suffering with cancer, or any of the diseases which he treats, should write to him.



Mrs. B. F. Smith, of Columbia, Mo., who was suffering with cancer on the forehead, had given up all hope of ever being cured, but reading the Register-Review of so many cures being effected by Dr. Bye with Soothing, Balmy Oils, decided to give his treatment a trial, and the result is above shown to be a radical cure.

Write for illustrated book on cancer. Sent free. Call or address Dr. Rye, Room 109, 9th and Broadway, Kansas City, Mo., U. S A.



The Grocer

who offers an imitation of Pearline and says it's "the same as," "as good as," etc., gives you a poor imitation of the truth. To get a little more profit he's willing to give you all the dissatisfaction and the risk. If you want an easier, less wearing, more economical way of washing than with soap, nothing is "as good as" Pearline Twenty years of use have proved what it will do to save work—and what it won't do in the way of harm.

598

Don't argue the matter—use Pearline.

Sunday-School.

W. F. RICHARDSON.

THE DAUGHTER OF JAIRUS RAISED.*

The lesson committee have departed from the chronological order in placing this lesson before the healing of the centurion's servant, which it certainly follows. Indeed, the date of the present lesson probably is later than those of the next several lessons following immediately after Jesus' visit to the country of the Gadarenes, and his healing of the fierce demoniac. But the order is not very important, and the lessons to be learned do not depend upon our knowing the exact place of each event of Jesus' life.

The synagogue in Capernaum had already been the scene of many notable sermons and miracles of Jesus. Every Sabbath day when he was in the city he would be found worshiping there. He could hardly enter it without being invited to take part in the service. The people hung on his words and watched with amazement his mighty deeds, crying out in wonder: "What is this? A new teaching! With authority he commandeth even the unclean spirits and they obey him." They could not forget the cure he wrought on the man with the withered hand, or how he cast out demons with a word. But the Pharisees and scribes saw in his growing popularity the prophecy of their downfall as leaders of the people and hated him with undying hatred. The rulers of the synagogue, men of high standing in the community, whose office it was to direct the synagogue service and to have oversight of the congregation worshiping there, might have been equally ready to turn against the great Rabbi, who was attaining to such power as to throw their authority into the shade. But an event had recently occurred under their very eyes which compelled faith in Jesus. They had gone to him in behalf of the centurian who had built their house of worship for them, and in answer to their appeal he had restored to health the favorite servant of that noble officer. This event we will have in our next lesson, though it occurred previous to the time of our present study. When the little daughter of one of these elders is struggling in the agonies of death, it is not strange that he hastens to Jesus with the pitiful appeal that he will come to his home and restore her. She was his only daughter, Luke tells us, and was at the attractive age of twelve, on the lovely borderland between childhood and womanhood. The Master goes at once to give the help his loving heart always delighted to afford.

But the multitude thronged his steps and he made but slow progress to the home of mourning. Among the throng that pressed upon him so dense that he could with difficulty make his way through, there was one poor woman who had for many years suffered with a painful and loathsome disease which had baffled all the skill of the physicians and had brought her to poverty. Having heard of the power of Jesus to heal, and perhaps witnessing some of his marvelous cures, she is impelled by her great suffering to seek relief at his hands. But she remembers how the physicians have demanded money for their services and she has no more to pay. It is true, she has been told that this great Physician charges nothing for his services, but she is ashamed to confess her poverty before the multitude. She feels that he can heal her if only she can get near enough to lay her hand upon the fringe of his outer garment; for, without understanding fully the secret of this unfailing power to cure, she believes it to reside in the person of Jesus rather than in any visible means such as physicians use. Besides, she may have been ashamed to ask in public for his touch, since the nature of her disease was such as to render her ceremonially unclean, and the crowd would have driven her away. She therefore crept through the mass of people that filled the street until her outstretched hand touches the garment of the Master. Immediately a thrill passes through her body which gives her blessed assurance that her malady has been cured. Her touch might defile the mere servant of the law, but it could not contaminate him who is the fountain of cleansing for all the house of David. The faith that prompted the touch opened the fount of grace and it flowed freely forth in blessing. Jesus was never unconscious of the appeal of such a faith, and though she would have escaped the observation of the crowd, he drew from her an acknowledgment of her act and gave to her his gracious benediction.

All this occupied some time, and at the close of this scene there came a messenger from the ruler's house to say to him that he had appealed too late to the great Teacher. His little daughter has died during his absence and he need trouble the Master no more. It is manifest that the people had as yet no knowledge of Jesus' power over death. He could heal all manner of diseases, but that he could bring back the departed was beyond their highest conceptions of his power. It was with the utmost anguish, therefore, that the ruler heard the tidings. He knew not that he stood in the presence of the Lord of life. He could only bow his head in despair. But Jesus quickly gave new vigor to his faith, saying: "Fear not, only believe." How must these words have acted upon the minds of the multitude. What! will he raise the dead? Dare he presume to rob the grave of its victim? With supreme consciousness of his power the Master reaches the house and orders the crowd to remain without, taking with him only the three disciples who seemed closest to him in the crises of his ministry —Peter, James and John. The house is already full of the family and friends, whose weeping is rudely interrupted by the wailing of the hired mourners and the music of flutes, in accordance with the funeral customs of the times. "She is not dead, but sleepeth," said Jesus. What they called death was to him but a sweet slumber, from which his highest word would awaken her. To the Christian death is but falling asleep in Jesus, for he has taken its terror away and has promised to call us forth unto eternal life and glory.

Disregarding their mocking, Jesus drives forth the crowd from the room and in the presence of his chosen disciples and the parents of the damsel takes her little white hand in his and tenderly calls, "Talitha cumi!"—Damsel, arise! O, sweet words to the ears of the loving parents! The recently departed soul hears the call and returns to the body from which it had gone out. The broken family circle is restored, the happy home made doubly happy by the reaction from the grief that had seemed to have no consolation. The Resurrection and the Life had visited that household, and at his coming the shadows had fled away.

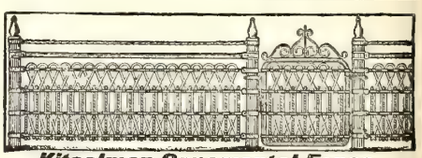
O, that we might ever go to Jesus when sorrow wraps its sable robes about us and obscures the blue sky with its clouds of present or of threatened disaster! In his hand is the sure means of relief and of comfort. He can drive away the clouds and flood our pathway with the bright sunshine of his joy. Or, if in his mercy he deems it best that we should bear the storm through the raining of our tears, he will send the beams of his loving sympathy and tender promise, and we shall see the bright rainbow of hope spanning our way. To every fainting, breaking heart the dear Master gives the sweet command, which is both entreaty and promise: "Fear not, only believe!"

*Lesson for April 15—Mark 5:22-24; 35-46. Paralle passages—Matt. 9:18-26; Luke 8:41-56.

DRUNKENNESS CURED.

An eminent St. Louis physician has given a positive answer to the oft asked question, is drunkenness a disease, or is it simply a temptation that cannot be resisted by a vast number of the human race? The physician in question is Dr. Ozias Paquin, who for years has been a practicing physician in the City of St. Louis. He has answered this question by taking five of the worst drunkards that could be found and cured them of all further appetite for intoxicating drinks. The five cases were all beyond middle age and they had sunk into the deepest pit of drunkenness, with the odor of drink about them so obnoxious that it was almost impossible to stand within speaking distance. He not only cured them of all desire for intoxicating drink, but at the same time placed upon their cheek the flush of health and into their eyes the light of happiness, and took from their person the odor of whiskey. It was almost a miracle, for he had raised five cases from degradation into the sunshine of health and happiness. Dr. Paquin has cured hundreds of patients who were relapses from other treatments, and in every instance he cured these patients, and they have remained cured for months and years. It can therefore be said that the Paquin Treatment is a permanent cure, and not a temporary one, for the patient never relapses to his former condition. We know of no more humane work being done at the present time than that which Dr. Paquin is doing, and it is the duty of every reader to assist Dr. Ozias Paquin in his noble work, and if any reader has brother, sister, husband, father or friend in whose system lurks the disease of drunkenness, he should at once send their name to Dr. Paquin or see that they either visit or place themselves in communication with the Ozias Paquin Immune Co., Suite 1113 Chemical Bldg., St. Louis. The reader that does this will certainly be doing a christian act, for no matter how hopeless the case may seem, and no matter how many other treatments have unsuccessfully been tried, the method known as Ozias Paquin Treatment will perfect a cure, dispelling all desire for drink, and at the same time will place the constitution in a robust and healthy condition.

EASTER SERVICES for the Sunday School.
EASTER DAWN. Music by Thiel & Davis. Price 5 cts. per copy; $4.00 per 100, postpaid. Enclose 10 cts. for samples of our three latest Services.
CHURCH CHOIR CANTATAS: Jerusalem and The Nazarine. Price 30 cts. each. The March issue of THE CHURCH CHOIR contains Easter Anthems, quartets, etc., for the choir. Sample copies free to Choristers.
GEO. F. ROSCHE & CO.
Chicago, 38 Randolph St. New York, 22 N. William St.



Kitselman Ornamental Fence.
Excels in strength, beauty and durability. Made of steel and iron. Cheaper than wood. 50 Designs. Catalog free.
KITSELMAN BROS, Box 163 Ridgeville, Ind.

Church, Peal and Chime Bells, Best Metal.
BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY,
THE E.W. VAN DUZEN CO. Cincinnati, O.

Largest Foundry on Earth making
CHURCH BELLS CHIMES & PEALS
Purest copper and tin only. Terms, etc., free.
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, Baltimore, Md.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

1900 BICYCLE FREE
For distributing 1000 catalogues for us. One Agent wanted in each town. Give references and send for catalogues. Enclose stamp.
MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. 165 y Chicago

The Magic Darner

is a household necessity; mends any garment by weaving to match original warp; marvellous.
By Mail, 35 cents.
AGENTS WANTED—CITY AND COUNTRY—MANY QUICK SELLERS. Chas. H. Till, 207a Lake Street, Chicago.

ONE HUNDRED

copies of a letter, piece of music, drawing, or any writing can be made on a Lawton Simplex Printer. No washing. No wetting of paper. Send for circulars and samples of work. Agents wanted.
LAWTON & CO., 30 Vesey St., New York. 59 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

Christian Endeavor.

By Burris A. Jenkins.

TOPIC FOR APRIL 15.

THE BREAD OF LIFE.

(John 6:24 40.)

The staff of life—symbol, then, of dependence. All mortals need something to lean upon. We cannot stand alone. Now and then we toss our heads up and assert our independence of any higher power, and immediately something causes us to wither and droop, like Jonah's gourd. How long could we stand without the staff of life? No more can our souls stand alone. We are dependent creatures all, and we lean upon a stronger, higher power. As our bodies are dependent on grains and meats, so are our souls dependent and must have sustenance. "Thou hast made us for thyself, O Lord, and uneasy are our hearts until they rest in Thee."

Bread from heaven—symbol of refreshing, refreshing from the presence of the Lord How our spirits droop and pine, sometimes, and but a little refreshing cheers us once again We waver in steadfastness, we fall out of line, we step amiss, or we take a melancholy, morbid view of life. We then need refreshing as a hungry, weary traveler, and we know where to find it. We are weary and heavy laden; we know where to find the rock that is higher, and its shadow in a thirsty land.

Jesus, then, is the bread of life. He it is upon whom our souls depend, and from whom we draw our sustenance. Nothing strained or hard in this metaphor. It is easy to understand and perfectly apt. We must take into our lives the life of Christ, into our souls the refreshing from his soul, into our minds the mind of the Master; in short, we are to come into that union with Christ of which Paul so frequently speaks.

And is it not altogether in keeping with this word of Jesus that the Lord's Supper should have been later established, in which we actually partake of bread that symbolizes his life coming to us? And with this bread ought to come the graces of his character.

Bread means strength. We need it, too, to bear the whips and scorns of outrageous fortune, and of this world's contumely.

Bread means confidence, faith in the outcome of things; for where the heart is cheered with plenty it believes in itself and in the world.

Bread means, in brief, life—

> "'Tis life whereof our nerves are scant,
> Life, not death for which we pant,
> More life and fuller that we want."

Life more abundant—this it is which the Bread of Heaven came to bring us. And after all, in this one word is summed up all for which we can strive at any time and anywhere—Life.

University of Indianapolis.

The Topical Hand-Book for 1900 contains an analysis of each Sunday-school Lesson for the year, with the Golden Texts; the Outlines of the Mid-week Topics, and an analysis of each of the Y. P. S. C. E. Topics for the year, with Daily Readings, also Helpful Outlines of the Junior Topics, a neat booklet of nearly one hundred pages, for 50 cents per dozen. Christian Publishing Company, St. Louis.

Moses the Man of God is a volume of over three hundred pages, by Dr. D. R. Dungan, containing a faithful record of the life of the most wonderful character of Old Testament Times, and aside from "The Man of Galilee," probably the greatest character the human race has produced. The information contained in the book is drawn from the Scriptures and other reliable historical sources. Price, $1.00. Christian Publishing Company.

My Good Poems, by Professor Alfred Fairhurst of the University of Kentucky. A volume of 240 pages, well-printed and neatly bound, containing more than 100 separate compositions, besides three prefaces. As to the poems the author says they are "good," and as he wrote them he ought to know. $1.25 per copy. Christian Publishing Co., St. Louis.

Bethany Reading Courses.

PIONEER DISCIPLES IN THE EAST.

(The last article in a series of five on "Pioneer Disciples.")

By F. D. Power, Director.

Of the beginnings of this movement, from Virginia southward, there is little to be mentioned in these chronicles. The advocate of reform carried these principles into North Carolina. Dr. Chester Bullard in the western part of the state and J. T. Walsh, E. E. Orvis, and others in the eastern. James O'Kelly had begun his work here, pleading for the Congregational system, the New Testament as the only creed and the name Christian only. His followers and the Disciples, however, never came into close fellowship, as O'Kelly did not take the Bible position as to the action of baptism.

In 1838 Alexander Campbell made a tour through this region, visiting Charleston, S. C., Augusta, Ga., and Mobile, Ala. The immense labors of this man in sowing seed all up and down the Atlantic Coast as well as broadcast over the great West should be held in everlasting remembrance. On this trip, in the fall of 1838, he tells us he delivered twenty-three addresses in South Carolina, twenty in Georgia and ten in Alabama, "besides some hundred fireside sermons, almost as laborious as those in public assemblies. I am a wonder to myself," he says, "in enduring fatigue, often almost done out, yet as fresh in the morning as ever. I perform daily ablutions, either sponging or rantizing the whole person, followed by friction sweats; which lustrations, being performed about the dawn of day, greatly invigorate and fortify against colds and the accidents of new lodgings and a very variable climate." Where is the preacher among us to-day who performs one-fourth of the labor of this imperial man? What an example he is to us of industry, of zeal, of missionary enthusiasm, of loyalty to the truth, of heroic endurance! Well might the great Southern leader, Robert E. Lee, declare: "If I were asked to select a representative of the human race to the inhabitants of the other spheres in our universe, of all men I have ever known, I should select Alexander Campbell; then I know they would have a high impression of what our humanity is like!"

Now it is a long stride from the Carolinas to New England, but our pioneer work "down East" was done long after these movements which I have described. Alexander Campbell spent two weeks in Massachusetts, 1836, and visited the capital of New England. He spoke in the temple on "Tremont Street" and the cathedral of Dr. Channing, and the "meeting house" of Elder Adams of the Christian Connexion. He had as large audiences as these buildings would contain, he tells us, and a candid hearing. "Between the conflicts of Unitarianism and Trinitarianism, Universalism and Particularism, and frequent skirmishes between the subaltern parties about union matters, society in Boston is not the most favorable attitude for a prompt and decisive compliance with the simple requisition of the New Institution."

With the exception of Danbury, Connecticut, all our work in this region is modern. The earliest effort in Boston was in 1866. Churches had previously been established at Swampscott and Worcester, Mass. In the fall of 1866 Mrs. W. H. Varney, formerly of Butler, N. Y., called a meeting at her house, No. 28 P inceton St., where, on Nov. 11, four persons "broke bread." The first addition by baptism was W. H. Varney, Dec. 9. Meetings were continued at this house until May, 1867, when a chapel was purchased at the corner of London and Decatur Sts. Wm. Rowzee preached here, and George Garrity held a meeting in August, '67. John B. New gave a series of sermons here in June '68, and Benjamin Franklin visited them in 1869. For two years after meetings were held in the chapel, when it was sold, and the church entered upon the nomadic period, journeying from hall to hall until the final settlement on Shawmut Avenue, and finally Roxbury.

The cause in New England has never succeeded as it should. Among these five millions of people we have but twenty-one churches, with perhaps 2,500 members. We have no congregations in New Hampshire, the only state in the Union save Nevada in which we have no representation; and if the governor of New Hampshire is to be credited, they greatly need us. Our plea has always met with success in New England when faithfully presented. The Danbury Church has had six hundred additions the last nine years. Our General Home Board should place half a dozen of our best evangelists in the field at once. The whole East calls for workers as never before. We have less than fifty thousand communicants in this region, which represents two-thirds of the wealth and one-third of the population of our entire country. Whatever may be said of our vast territory, the brains and the purse of the nation command it, and these are here. As go Boston and New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, so goes the United States. It may not always be so, but it is so. The great institutions of learning and the great publishing houses are here, the seat of government is here, the almighty dollar is here, millions of souls are here that need the truth which is ours to give to the world. What we need is the greater enthusiasm to give to our plea and its mighty power to conquer all obstacles. "This world," said Frederick W. Robertson, "is given as a prize for the men in earnest." "A man in earnest," said Channing, "finds means, or if he cannot find, creates them." "Every great and commanding movement in the annals of the world is the triumph of some enthusiasm," says Emerson. "Nothing great was ever achieved without it." "Nothing is so contagious as enthusiasm," says Lord Lytton. "It is the real allegory of the lute of Orpheus, it moves stones, it charmes brutes. Enthusiasm is the genius of sincerity, and truth accomplishes no victories without it."

Our fathers were men of a mighty faith, a sublime earnestness. No difficulties daunted them. They believed and therefore spake. Their enthusiasm was kindled at the altars of divine truth. Without means, without prestige, without popular favor, with all the deep-rooted prejudices of religious society against them, they courageously entered upon their work. We have seen these principles triumph on a thousand fields; we have seen those who resisted the ackdowledging of the truth; we have seen all religious society more or less permeated by their influence; we have known that they were of God. Shall we be unworthy to our heritage? Shall we not feel a far greater responsibility than ever rested upon these pioneers, to take up the work which they began and carry it forward to its final and glorious consummation? God give us a holy enthusiasm for this plea for the restoration of apostolic Christianity and the union of his people, a passionate belief in the justice of this high and holy name, an unselfish devotion to this noble cause! God keep alive the life, the force, the power, the divine virtue and vitality of this mighty movement in our preachers and churches! Moses was an enthusiast as he led Israel out of Egypt and through the wilderness. Christ was an enthusiast as he proclaimed his kingdom and wrought his miracles in proof of his mission. Paul was an enthusiast as he preached Jesus the resurrection. The martyrs were enthusiasts as they went on, unmoved by the cry, "Christians ad leones!" Martin Luther was an enthusiast, Alexander Campbell was an enthusiast. God fill us with a holy enthusiasm for his gospel: its faith in its purity—its practice without change.

Marriages.

BERRY—EDWARDS.—Married, at London Mills December 27, 1899, J. S. Berry, of Harmon, Ill., to Ola B. Edwards, of Ellisville, Ill.; S. A. Ennefer, officiating.

BOUNDS—SHRADER.—At the home of the bride's parents, March 6, 1900, Mr. J. David Bounds to Miss Irene Shrader, both of Monroe County, Mo.; C. H. Strawn, officiating.

DuMARS—MORRIS.—Married, January 10, 1900, at Eden, Ill., Arthur DuMars and Nellie Morris, both of Eden; S. A. Ennefer, officiating.

DUNN—KNABLE.—Married, March 14, at London, Ill., John T. Dunn and Estella Knable, both of London Mills, by S. A. Ennefer.

GRAY—PETERSON.—Married, at Corning, Iowa, on March 25, Chas. Gary to Miss Fannie Peterson; W. B. Crewdson, officiating.

HARLAN—McELREA.—Married, at London Mills, Ill., October 15, 1899, Custer Harlan and Luella McElrea, both of London Mills: S. A Ennefer, officiating.

HOPKINS—DAVIS.—Married, March 11, at Hermon, Ill, Frank Hopkins, of DeLong, Ill., and Anna Davis, of Hermon; S. A. Ennefer, officiating.

MAGRAW—KEOWN.—At the home of J. Keown, near Blue Ridge, Harrison County, Mo., their daughter, Harriett, was united in marriage to Mr. Walter Magraw on the 11th of March, 1900; C. Gall, officiating.

MURRY—BECKER.—At the home of the bride's mother, Wednesday, March 14, 1900, Mr. Grant Murry and Miss Natalie Becker, both of Savannah, Mo.; A. R. Hunt, officiating.

THOMAS—BRIGHT.—At the residence of the bride's parents in the city of Macomb, Ill., March 21, by J. S. Gash, Mr. Melvin Thomas and Miss Daisy Bright.

THOMAS—McCRACKEN.—At the home of G. A. Hess, pastor of the Christian Church, Greene, Iowa, March 1, 1900, Arthur Thomas to Bertha Q. McCracken.

RONNEBURG—STEWART.—Married, February 28, at Rapatee, Ill., Dr. W. G. Ronneburg, of London, and Dollye Stewart, of Rapatee; S. A. Ennefer, officiating.

Obituaries.

BENTON.

Mrs. A. R. Benton died at her home in Irvington, March 11th, 1900. Her sickness was without pain, loss of faculties or mental distress. For many years she had been a confirmed invalid, but through it all had had a most happy and cheerful spirit, that had been an inspiration to her friends, who were numerous and devoted to her. Her children were with her in her final sickness and at the time of her death. She leaves a husband, three children and four grandchildren. Mrs. Dales and Mrs. Stewart reside in Lincoln, Neb. Mr. Howard Benton and wife reside in Indianapolis. Mrs. Benton, nee Silence Howard, was born in Volney, Oswego County, New York. She was the oldest daughter of Dr. Ransome Howard, a noted physician of Oswego County. Her education was conducted by the best teachers of her time and she was proficient in literary studies. She was married to Prof A. R. Benton in 1851, then the principal of Fairview Academy, Rush County, Ind. In 1855 Professor and Mrs. Benton removed to Indianapolis and from that time have been closely identified with Butler University, then the Northwestern Christian University, of which Dr. Benton was elected president in 1861. In 1871 he was chosen the first chancellor of the University of Nebraska and removed with his wife to Lincoln. In this new home Mrs. Benton's social and intellectual influence were very great. Recently she returned to Lincoln to visit her two daughters and was pleasantly reminded that she founded the first literary club of that city. The social attention which she received on this visit to Lincoln was very gratifying and full of delightful reminiscences. In 1876 Dr. and Mrs. Benton returned to Indianapolis, he being called to the chair of philosophy of the Northwestern Christian University. In 1886, after the college was changed to Irvington, under the name of Butler University, Dr. Benton was again elected president and removed to Irvington, where they have since lived. After her family interests two things claimed prominently Mrs. Benton's thought and labors. These were, first, her deep interest in the work and prosperity of the college. Her love for young persons in college was deep and abiding and her influence on all with whom she came in contact was made beautiful by her generous sympathy and interest in those who came to her home and by her gentleness and patience. The second great interest cherished by her was the prosperity of the church, especially in its missionary efforts in foreign lands. She was president of the Irvington Auxiliary Society of the C. W. B. M. for nine years. Mrs. Benton was a most entertaining and charming letter writer, and in earlier life and in more robust health she was a frequent contributor to the religious press. She was always an acceptable contributor to the Christian Standard, conducted by Isaac Errett, with whom a sincere and lasting friendship existed. Her personal attractions were set off and enhanced by a vivacity of speech, a keen perception of the beauties of expression and rare powers as a conversationalist. —The Indianapolis Journal.

BEERY.

Mrs. Nannie Beery died in Kansas City, Missouri, March 14th, 1900, whither she had gone for medical treatment. Her maiden name was Miss Nannie Scott. She was born in Clay County, Mo., Sept. 30th, 1852. Of her father's family, once a large one, but three brothers now remain. She was married March 20th, 1871, to Mr. Beery. Of this union there were born five children. Two little girls died in infancy. One son and two daughters, together with the father and husband, remain to mourn their great loss. Sister Beery's home life was a beautiful one—loving, kindly affectionate to all; her death was like the going out of a sweet light. At the age of 13 she became a member of the Christian Church, and until the day of her death she was a loyal, devoted child of her great Teacher. Her funeral services were held at her home church in Edgerton, Mo., where a large concourse of friends and neighbors gathered to pay respect to her memory. The C. W. B. M. laid a beautiful offering on her casket as a token of their esteem. Interment was made in the old burial ground near Ridgely.

FRED V. LOOS.

Liberty, Mo.

BROWN.

Died, near Sigsbee, Shelby county, Mo., Mrs. Sarah M. Brown, wife of Rev. D. A. Brown. Born July 26, 1869, died Feb. 27, 1900. She was buried at Concord March 1. Words are almost inadequate to express the sorrow and gloom cast on the community when it was made known Sister Brown had passed away; for she was a woman of noble character, loved by every one who knew her. She had served God for 13 years, having united with the Christian Church at the age of 17, and when she came to die she gave to her friends the consoling and glorious evidence that her reward was sure. There is a fond husband to whom she was indeed the helpmeet in the truest sense, and four little children—Noble, Vera, Munnella and an infant hardly two weeks old—left to bitter grief and sorrow. The great, strong motherlove asserted itself and she struggled heroically for life, but at the last she said she was as happy as could be, clasped her hands, raised her eyes heavenward and exclaimed: "Blest be the Holy One." To the husband we would say, Be not discouraged, but continue in the Master's calling, dispensing words of life. Be faithful and God will surely bless you. Dear little children, be good, learn to trust your Heavenly Father, and he will one day permit you to share your mother's joy in heaven.

A FRIEND.

DeSHAZO.

Earle, the infant son of Allie Leona DeShazo and Albert Paine DeShazo, of Kaysville, Utah, departed this life March 18, 1900 (Sunday), at 2 o'clock P. M.

NORA PUGH.

GOODRICH.

At Chicago, Ill., while visiting her son, Mrs. J. A. Goodrich, of Auburn, N. Y., died March 4, 1900, aged 78. She became a Christian at nine years of age and through a long life her activities touched almost every department of Christian work. In local church work her influence was everywhere felt. Her prayers, exhortations and readings in prayer-meeting and often in Y. P. S. C. E. will long be remembered. In interdenominational work in the city she was prominent. She was an earnest C. W. B. M. worker at home, in the district, state and nation. She was ever eager to know and willing to do.

D. H. PATTERSON.

Auburn, N. Y.

The Starvation Plan

Of Treating Dyspepsia and Stomach Troubles is Useless and Unscientific.

The almost certain failure of the starvation cure for dyspepsia has been proven time and again, but even now a course of dieting is generally the first thing recommended for a case of indigestion or any stomach trouble.

Many people with weak digestion as well as some physicians, consider the first step to take in attempting to cure indigestion is to restrict the diet, either by selecting certain foods and rejecting others or to cut down the amount of food eaten to barely enough to keep soul and body together, in other words the starvation plan is by many supposed to be the first essential.

All this is radically wrong. It is foolish and unscientific to recommend dieting to a man already suffering from starvation, because indigestion itself starves every organ, nerve and fibre in the body.

What people with poor digestion most need is abundant nutrition, plenty of good, wholesome, properly cooked food, and something to assist the weak stomach to digest it.

This is exactly the purpose for which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are adapted and the true reason why they cure the worst cases of stomach trouble.

Eat a sufficient amount of wholesome food and after each meal take one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to promptly digest it.

In this way the system is nourished and the overworked stomach rested, because the tablets will digest the food whether the stomach works or not, one grain of the active digestive principle in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets being sufficient to digest 3,000 grains of meat, eggs or other albuminous food

Dr. Harlandson and Dr. Redwell recommend these tablets in all cases of defective digestion, because the pepsin and diastase in them are absolutely free from animal matter and other impurities and being pleasant to the taste are as safe and harmless for the child as for the adult.

All drug stores sell this excellent preparation, and the daily use of them after meals will be of great benefit, not only as an immediate relief, but to permanently build up and invigorate the digestive organs.

B. & O. S-W.

"ROYAL BLUE SERVICE."

ST. LOUIS,
CINCINNATI,
LOUISVILLE,
COLUMBUS,
PITTSBURG,
WASHINGTON,
BALTIMORE,
PHILADELPHIA,
NEW YORK.

BEST LINE BETWEEN THE EAST AND WEST.

Luxurious Vestibuled Trains, Palatial Ladies' Coaches.

Pullman Drawing Room, Sleeping and Observation Cars.

B. & O. S-W. DINING CARS. Meals Served a la carte at POPULAR PRICES.

For Rates, Maps, Time-Tables or Sleeping Car Space—Call on any Ticket Agent or address

O. P. McCARTY,
General Passenger Agt.,
G. B. WARFEL, Cincinnati, Ohio.
Asst. Gen'l Pass. Ag't, St. Louis, Mo.

The Iron Mountain Shortens its Time to Texas.

Train No. 51 now leaves St. Louis 2:21 P. M., daily, shortens the time by several hours from St. Louis to Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio, Houston and Galveston. Through Pullman Buffet Sleeping Cars will be operated on this train from St. Louis to San Antonio, and reclining chair car service to Dallas and Fort Worth. A delightful feature of this train is the daylight ride along the Mississippi and through the beautiful Arcadia Valley. Time of other trains remains the same excepting train No. 57 for Delta, Columbus, Cairo and Shreveport which now leaves at 8:00 A. M.

DEVRIES.

At the first meeting of the Nebraska Christian Missionary Society Board after the death of Bro. H. O. Devries, of Omaha, our state Bible-school superintendent, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, In the dispensation of an overruling Providence our brother and co-laborer, H. O. Devries, has been taken from us, in whose death the Church of Christ and the Nebraska Christian Missionary Society have lost a consecrated, devoted member, one who at all times was a wise counselor and an active and faithful worker; therefore be it

Resolved 1, That we bow in humble submission to Him "who doeth all things well," yet our hearts are filled with sorrow by the loss of one we so much loved; we shall miss his faithful help in our work.

Resolved 2, That we tender our sympathy to his bereaved wife and two children, and commend them to God and his promises for strength and comfort in this time of their great sorrow.

COMMITTEE.

GRAVES.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Graves, wife of John Graves, of Pleasant Grove, Kan., died at her home Friday, Jan. 26, 1900, at 9 o'clock P. M. The funeral was conducted by Elder Z. S. Hastings, assisted by Rev. L. Z. Burr, of Kansas City, who preached the funeral discourse. Mrs. Graves was born in Owen County, Indiana, Dec. 15, 1833. She came with her parents to Missouri in 1849, and was married to John Graves, Feb. 10, 1850. If she had lived until the 10th of this month (February), they would have celebrated their golden wedding. She and her husband came from Missouri to Kansas March 28, 1855, and settled near the spot where she died. Mrs. Graves and her husband were charter members and pillars in the Pleasant Grove Church, which is one of the oldest churches in the county. She leaves, besides her husband, three children to mourn her departure. Mrs. Graves was a faithful wife and a tender and loving mother. She left, for all who knew her, a noble example of true piety and devotion to the righteousness of Him who is right. Peace to her memory.

H.

FLACK.

Elder Benjamin F. Flack died at his home two and one-half miles east of Plattsburg, Feb. 21, 1900. He was born at Stanford, Ky., October 30, 1815. He married Elizabeth Clark, of Crab Orchard, a relative of Gov, Owsley, of Kentucky, in the year 1836. He came to Missouri in 1843, and locating in Platte County, near Camden Point, where he lived 30 years, whence he moved to Clinton County, near Plattsburg, in 1873, where he died, at the date above mentioned, at the ripe age of 85 years. The survivors are his wife, now almost 82 years old, a woman of very rare accomplishments and richly blessed with all the Christian graces; J. Mont Flack (oldest son), of Vernon, Texas; Aytchman Perrin Flack, of Leavenworth, Kan.; Mrs. Jennie Henderson, of Marysville, Kan.; Benj. F. Flack and Wm. C. Flack, of New Mexico, and Mrs. Dollie Flynt who, with her son Roy, continues to reside with her bereaved mother. He joined the Christian Church under the preaching of (Raccoon) John Smith when about 15 years old, at Stanford, Ky. He helped to organize, under the preaching of Eld. A. H. F. Payne, one of the first churches (if not the first) of his order, near Camden Point, ever established in Platte County, Mo., of which congregation he was an elder for many years. The funeral services were held at the home, conducted by Elders Capp and Thompson, of Plattsburg. Elder Flack had quite a church history, having been a member for 70 years, and being personally acquainted with many of the pioneer preachers of the present reformation, such as Alexander Campbell, Barton W. Stone, John (Raccoon) Smith, Ben Franklin, John T. Johnsen and many others, and delighted in rehearsing their anecdotes.

A. K. PORTER.

TURPIN.

Miss Eliza Turpin was C. W. B. M. manager of the 12th district and had been for many years. She was indeed the Phœbe of that district. She made church work her life work, giving all her labor and her love to it. She had little means, yet she toiled unselfishly. If one could measure service it would seem that she has done as much for the cause of Christ as any minister of the gospel, yet the financial support of the weakest one was not given her. Then she lived and labored alone. My heart goes out to the many grand women of our churches who seem to have lived for the extension of the Master's kingdom. Bravely as they have trodden it, and glorious as has been their via solitaria, I know that under happier conditions they might have known more sacred companionships. Why did such noble spirits choose to walk life's paths alone? One I know was keeping faith with a lover, long since dead, and she mourned for him as pathetically as did Washington Irving mourn his lady love during the remaining years of life; yet she led a useful and unselfish life, giving all of her strength, time and money to the church. Miss Turpin was well versed in the Bible and her pastors have said that at prayer-meeting she has made as fine an exegesis of Scripture as they ever heard. She was a woman of intellectual ability, moral probity and refined taste. She was a leader who never compromised the dignity of her cause by manner, sentiment or argument. She was a friend whose character is a priceless pearl and will be kept by the world's Redeemer among his jewels. She lived alone and her life went out one dark, cold night, but in the light of Christ's presence she did not die alone.

VIRGINIA GILKESON-HEDGES.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES

Quarterly Helps.

THE PRIMARY QUARTERLY.

A Lesson Magazine for the Youngest Classes. It contains Lesson Stories, Lesson Questions, Lesson Thoughts and Lesson Pictures, and never fails to interest the little ones.

TERMS.

Single copy, per quarter,	5 cents.
10 copies, per quarter,	$ .20;	per year,	$ .75
25 copies, "	.40;	"	1.50
50 " "	.75;	"	3.00

THE YOUTH'S QUARTERLY.

A Lesson Magazine for the Junior Classes. The Scripture Text is printed in full, but an interesting Lesson Story takes the place of the usual explanatory notes.

TERMS—Single copy, per quarter, 5 cents; ten copies or more to one address, 2 1-2 cents each per quarter.

THE SCHOLAR'S QUARTERLY.

A Lesson Magazine for the Senior Classes. This Quarterly contains every help needed by the senior classes. Its popularity is shown by its immense circulation.

TERMS.

Single copy, per quarter,	$ .10;	per year,	$ .30
10 copies, "	.40;	"	1.25
25 " "	.90;	"	3.00
50 " "	1.60;	"	6.00
100 " "	3.00;	"	12.00

THE BIBLE STUDENT.

A Lesson Magazine for the Advanced Classes, containing the Scripture Text in both the Common and Revised Versions, with Explanatory Notes, Helpful Readings, Practical Lessons. Maps, etc.

TERMS.

Single copy, per quarter,	$ .10;	per year,	$ .40
10 copies, "	.70;	"	2.50
25 " "	1.60;	"	6.00
50 " "	3.00;	"	10.50
100 " "	5.50;	"	20.00

BIBLE LESSON PICTURE ROLL.

Printed in 8 colors. Each leaf, 26 by 37 inches, contains a picture illustrating one lesson. 13 leaves in a set. Price per set—one quarter—reduced to 75 cents.

CHRISTIAN PICTURE LESSON CARDS.

A reduced fac-simile of the large Bible Lesson Pictures, 13 cards in set, one for each Sunday in quarter. Price reduced to 2 1-2 cents per set.

Monthly.

CHRISTIAN BIBLE LESSON LEAVES.

These Lesson Leaves are especially for the use of Sunday-schools that may not be able to fully supply themselves with the Lesson Books or Quarterlies.

TERMS.

10 copies,	1 mo.,	$ .15;	3 mos.,	$ .30;	1 yr.,	$1.00
25 "	"	.25;	"	.60;	"	2.40
50 "	"	.45;	"	1.20;	"	4.60
100 "	"	.75;	"	2.10;	"	8.00

Weekly.

THE LITTLE ONES.

Printed in Colors.

This is a Weekly for the Primary Department in the Sunday-school and the Little Ones at Home, full of Charming Little Stories, Sweet Poems, Merry Rhymes and Jingles, Beautiful Pictures and Simple Lesson Talks. It is printed on fine tinted paper, and no pains or expense is spared to make it the prettiest and best of all papers for the very little people.

TERMS—Weekly, in clubs of not less than five copies to one address, 25 cents a copy per year.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL EVANGELIST.

This is a Weekly for the Sunday-school and Family, of varied and attractive contents, embracing Serial and Shorter Stories; Sketches; Incidents of Travel; Poetry; Field Notes; Lesson Talks, and Letters from the Children. Printed from clear type, on fine calendered paper, and profusely illustrated with new and beautiful engravings.

TERMS—Weekly, in clubs of not less than ten copies to one address, 30 cents a copy per year, or 8 cents per quarter.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS.

A Large Illustrated Weekly Magazine, devoted to the welfare and work of Our Young People, giving special attention to the Sunday-school and Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor. It contains wood-cuts and biographical sketches of prominent workers, Notes on the Sunday-school Lessons, and Endeavor Prayer-meeting Topics for each week, Outlines of Work, etc. This Magazine has called forth more commendatory notices than any other periodical ever issued by our people. The Sunday-school pupil or teacher who has this publication will need no other lesson help, and will be able to keep fully "abreast of the times" in the Sunday-school and Y. P. S. C. E. work.

TERMS—One copy, per year, 75 cents; in clubs of ten, 60 cents each; in packages of ten or more to one name and address, only 50 cents each. Send for Sample.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, St. Louis, Mo.

"Opportunity is the cream of time." Now is your opportunity to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and derive the most benefit from it. The blood is now loaded with dangerous impurities which this medicine will promptly expel.

Sick headache is cured by Hood's Pills.

An All-Year Resort.

The Crescent Hotel, Eureka Springs, Ark., opens March 1, 1900. A most desirable, attractive and convenient resort for health and pleasure-seekers. Ideal climate, pure, sparkling water, best accommodations. Through Sleepers via Frisco Line. Write for particulars to Manager Hotel or to any representative of Frisco Line.

Harbingers Wanted.

I want Millennial Harbingers of July, November and December, 1870, or whole volume of 1870. Please state price. C. G. MCNEILL, 670 33rd Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

Rape and Speltz and Bromus.

Greatest, cheapest, richest food on earth these three make. Wonderful testimonials on same. See Salzer's Big Catalog, sent you for 5c. postage and this notice. John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis. [F]

Home Seekers' Excursion.

The Union Pacific R. R. will make One Fare plus Two Dollars for Round Trip from Kansas City and Omaha March 30th, April 3rd and 17th to Kansas, Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington. Purchase tickets from your nearest ticket agents For maps, time tables and further particular. address J. F. Aglar, Gen'l. Agt., St. Louis, Mo.

MARCH AND APRIL
Are the most disagreeable months of the year in the North.

In the South they are the pleasantest and most agreeable. The trees and shrubs put forth their buds and flowers; early vegetables and fruits are ready for eating, and in fact, all nature seems to have awakened from its winter sleep. The Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company reaches the Garden Spots of the South, and will on the first and third Tuesdays of March and April sell round-trip tickets to all principal points in Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia and West Florida at about half rates. Write for particulars of excursions to P. Sid Jones, D. P. A., in charge of Immigration, Birmingham, Ala.

A PURE GRAPE CREAM OF TARTAR POWDER
NO ALUM - NO AMMONIA

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

Superior to all others in purity, richness and leavening strength.

Highest Honors, World's Fair
Gold Medal, Midwinter Fair

Announcements.

Program for Prayer-meeting, May 2nd.

HOME MISSIONS.

Song. "Ho! Reapers of Life's Harvest."
Lesson John 4:34-38; Romans 10:13 15.
Prayer. For Home and Native Land.
Address. "The American Christian Missionary Society and Its Field" (eight minutes).
Address. "Three-fourths of the United States is Dependent on the General Home Board of Missions for Help."
Song. "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord."
Prayer for our Home Missionaries.
Address. "What the Home Board is Doing."
Address. "America, the Richest Field in the World."
Song. "God Save Our Native Land."
Address. Home Missions to the Front."
Prayer. For the May Offering.
Address. "Why Should We Help Home Missions?"
Song. "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."
Benediction.

Send to Benj. L. Smith, Cor. Sec. Y. M. C. A. Bldg., Cincinnati, O., for help in preparing this program.

Christian Preachers' Institute.

The C. P. I., of Southwest Missouri, will be held in Bolivar, May 15-17.

PROGRAMME.

TUESDAY EVENING, MAY 15.

8:00—Address by Clinton Lockhart, President of Christian University, Canton, Mo.

WEDNESDAY FORENOON, MAY 16.

9:00—Discussion of the evening address.
10:00—Two papers on the Eldership by R. L. Lotz, of West Plains, and W. W. Blalock, of Lamar.

WENESDAY AFTERNOON, MAY 16.

1:00—Discusion of the forenoon papers.
2:30—The A. C. M. S. by M. J. Nicoson, Monroe City, Mo.
3:30—The Money, F J. Yokley, Billings, Mo.
4:00—Discusion.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, MAY 16.

8:00—The Y. P. S. C. E. by C. E. Hill, Pleasant Hill, Mo.

THURSDAY FORENOON, MAY 17.

9:00—Discussion of the evening address.
10:00—The Ideal Preacher, W. F. Turner, Joplin, Mo.
11:00—The C. W. B. M., Mrs. L. G. Bantz, St. Louis, Mo.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, MAY 17.

1:30—Discussion of forenoon address.
2:30—The Value of Religious Controversy, by W. B. Cochran.

THURSDAY EVENING, MAY 17.

8:00—Address by Clinton Lockhart.

The church at Bolivar will provide free entertainment for all visitors. The meeting is not for preachers alone. All classes will be benefited by coming. If you are coming drop a card to F. M. Hooton, Bolivar, Mo., so a home can be provided for you.

F. M. HOOTON, President.

Rest and Health to Mother and Child.
MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over FIFTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, with PERFECT SUCCESS. It SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHŒA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" and take no other kind. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

History of the Church of Christ at Mulkeytown, Ill.

Through the kindness of Bro. T. K. Means the brotherhood has obtained the following valuable history of one of the oldest if not the oldest congregation of our church in Illinois:

I have been requested by my brethren to write the history of the Church of Christ at Mulkeytown, Ill., but as there is no one now living, so far as I know, that knows personally of the history of the church, I will have to write and give my best recollections of the church and what I have heard old people say when I was young.

The first settlers of this part of the state were from Tennessee; and before they moved from that country had been baptized by John and Philip Mulkey, who were noted preachers in that day in the Baptist Church and who were among the early reformers, John Mulkey having preached the doctrine of the Bible as early as 1809.

These early settlers organized a church at the house of Jno. Kirkpatrick, who settled on the old Indian Trail from St. Louis to Shawneetown, Ill., on the Little Muddy River, in the year 1818. This church was then called a Baptist Church. It is not positively known who first organized these people into the Church of Christ, but the first preacher of that doctrine (or Church of Christ) was Warren Underwood, but no one now knows who he was or what became of him.

Philip Mulkey came to this country in 1835; he then found a church organized and in existence, but we have no records now of the church reaching further back or dating beyond 1850, as all earlier records were lost, but my recollection reaches back to the time Philip Mulkey came to this country in 1835, and I recollect that there were other preachers about that time, and soon after a very old man by the name of Elijah Spiller was among them, and soon after Silas Reid, then Wm. Briston, John Hays, Lyssias Heape, Wm. Kirkpatrick, Wm. Ostien, Jno. M. Mulkey, son of Phillip Mulkey, afterwards Price Bayless and Isaac and John N. Mulkey, sons of John Mulkey, brother of Philip Mulkey.

The first members of the Church of Christ that I remember were John Kirkpatrick and wife, Sally; Philip Mulkey and wife, Ruth; Jno. M. Mulkey and wife, Matilda; Jonathan H. Mulkey and wife, Lucinda; Wm. T. Mulkey and wife, Elizabeth; Hiram Means and wife, Benjamin W. Pope and wife, Allen Chapman and wife, John Thornton and wife, Allen D. Burton and wife, Wm. Tinsley and wife, and there may have been others, but these are all that I now remember when Philip Mulkey came to this country in 1835.

At the earnest solicitation of some of the members Bro. Means has furnished the above history, which is indeed worthy a place in our memory, and as there are many of the relatives of the Mulkey's, and so far as I know the older Mulkeys were all preachers and reached all the way from Kentucky to Texas, but they were all very reticent men and never wrote for our papers; therefore, a great deal of valuable history has been lost to the church, as there were doubtless brethren in this country as early as when Alexander Campbell was preaching in Kentucky and elsewhere; and yet, the congregation at Mulkeytown continues to meet on the first day of the week as they did 65 years ago. Oh that our older brethren may give the history of the church so far as they know, for it does us good.

F. M. MORGAN.

Ashley, Ill.
(Will other papers please copy?)

Mena, Ark.

We are now two and one-half years old. We have a modern building with a seating capacity of about 300. We have a neat little cottage or parsonage on our lot almost ready to use. We are situated on the corner of Port Arthur and Campbel Streets. We have a debt of $150 and some accumulated interest. We have a membership of about 80 We have a working force of less than half that number. We raised last year for all purposes about $550. We had preaching about half the time. Bros. Wyatt, Cabble and Bracher have acted as pastors of the church; also Bro. Young. Others have preached at different times.

W. B. LEGATE.

Kansas District Convention.

The seventh district has just closed a very interesting and practically helpful convention at this place. That beautiful spirit of brotherly love was present and prominent at every session. There were no selfish ends to be met; no gladiatorial exhibitions; no axes to grind. Sociability, courtesy and a sincere, prayerful earnestness and Christ Jesus the Lord exalted, characterized every meeting. The convention made and left a fine impression on the community at large. One young lady made the good confession during the convention. Others are expected soon.

A constitution and bylaws were adopted for the directing of the work. The zeal for scriptural evangelism was strong and manly. A determination to go forward and do what Christ would like to have us do seemed to be the ruling passion.

I wish the membership of the churches might be aroused to the importance of considering and acting on the problems of the present

C. C. DEWEESE, Pastor.

Cheney, Kan.

FOR 14 CENTS

We wish to gain this year 200,000 new customers, and hence offer
1 Pkg. City Garden Beet, ● 10c
1 Pkg. Earl'st Emerald Cucumber 15c
1 " La Crosse Market Lettuce, 15c
1 " Strawberry Melon, 15c
1 " 13 Day Radish, 10c
1 " Early Ripe Cabbage, 10c
1 " Early Dinner Onion, 10c
8 " Brilliant Flower Seeds, 15c
Worth $1.00, for 14 cents. $1.00

Above 10 Pkgs. worth $1.00, we will mail you free, together with our great Catalog, telling all about SALZER'S MILLION DOLLAR POTATO upon receipt of this notice & 14c. stamps. We invite your trade, and know when you once try Salzer's seeds you will never do without. $200 Prizes on Salzer's 1900—rarest earliest Tomato Giant on earth. F. 309
JOHN A. SALZER SEED CO., LA CROSSE, WIS.

BURPEE'S
"Seeds that Grow"

If you want to get the Best seeds for your garden this year, you should send your address on a postal card for

Burpee's Farm Annual for 1900

It is a bright new book, considered by intelligent planters everywhere, "the Leading American Seed Catalogue." You had better write to-day. Simply address

BURPEE, Philadelphia.

Try YOUNG'S MONTHLY ROSES

They Bloom the Entire Summer.

Our FOREST PARK COLLECTION contains 13 different varieties, ALL HARDY and vigorous growers:

2 Year old, 50 cents each; 13 for $5.00.
1 Year old, 25 cents each; 13 for 2.50.

FLOWER SEEDS, Our Popular Collection.

13 Varieties, that will bloom the entire summer, 25c.
NASTURTIUM, 8 pkgs., all distinct colors.....25c.

Young's

Illustrated CATALOGUE FREE. Gives practical information for growing the BEST kinds of Vegetables, Fruits and Flowers.

1403 OLIVE ST., ST. LOUIS, MO

THE
CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST

"IN FAITH, UNITY; IN OPINION AND METHODS, LIBERTY; IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY."

Vol. xxxvii. St. Louis, Mo., Thursday, April 12, 1900. No. 15.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
Current Events....449
Transfiguration and Resurrection....450
The Evolution of a Motto....451
The Reign of Commercialism....452
Failure Through Self: Victory Through God.452
Editor's Easy Chair....453
Questions and Answers....453
ORIGINAL CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Philosophy of Opinionism.—Chas. Lloyd Garrison....454
Alexander Balmain Bruce.—H. L. Willett....455
Preaching—1860 to 1900.—S. C. Humphrey.456
The Spiritual Side of Our Plea.—A. B. Jones.456
CORRESPONDENCE:
English Topics....462
New York Letter....463
Colorado Letter....464
Washington (D. C.) Letter....465
Texas Letter....465
C. W. B. M. and Consolidation....466
FAMILY CIRCLE:
Resurrection (poem)....471
The Lost Emigrants....471
A Great Volunteer Army....472
Resurrection (poem)....473
MISCELLANEOUS:
Our Budget....458
Personal Mention....461
Missionary....467
Evangelistic....468
Notes and News....469
With the Children....475
Sunday-school....476
Christian Endeavor....477
Literature....478
Marriages and Obituaries....479

CURRENT EVENTS.

The present advantage in South Africa seems to be all on the side of the Boers. Gen. Roberts is still inactive at Bloemfontein on account of lack of horses and winter clothing for his men. Gen. Kitchener is busied with the task of keeping the line of communications with the rear by railroad unbroken. The expeditions for the relief of Mafeking have as yet achieved no definite results. Gen. Brabant at Wepener, on the border of Basutoland, southeast of Bloemfontein, is surrounded on three sides by Boer forces, and may have to fight his way out. Meanwhile the aggressive movements of the Boers have been increasingly bold and successful. The capture of five companies of British at Reddersburg was far from compensated by the capture of a small body of Boers by Gen. Methuen near Fourteen Streams, which has been the only British success of the week. Evidently there is a vast amount of work to be done in clearing the southern part of the Orange Free State before a general advance toward Pretoria can be made. This work will not show up brilliantly in the reports, but it is difficult and important. It is at such a time that confidence in a commander is displayed to advantage. The British people do not know exactly what Lord Roberts is doing, or why he is so slow in starting north, but they are convinced that he is acting wisely and are satisfied.

The visit of Queen Victoria to Ireland for the first time in nearly forty years, coming so soon after the enthusiastic celebration of St. Patrick's Day in London and the wearing of the green at the Queen's command, marks the better feeling which is beginning to prevail between England and Ireland. The valor of the Irish troops in South Africa has won warm praise, and the war in which the whole empire is involved has knit the various parts of it closer together. The Queen is finding a warm reception in Ireland. A few Irishmen, of churlish spirit, insist upon remembering nothing but their country's ancient wrongs and are unwilling to be friendly, but most of them are wisely of the opinion that, while there is no reason to abate their efforts to secure redress of any grievances which they may think they have, now is the time to lay grievances on the table and shake hands across the channel. The cause of home rule will be helped more by meeting England's friendly advances cordially and graciously, than by going off in the sulks.

A fifteen-year-old would-be assassin made an attempt on the life of the Prince of Wales a few days ago at Brussels. The prince was fired at as he entered a railway carriage, but the aim was bad. It was a lucky escape for the prince, but the attempt was a matter of no political importance. It was simply the case of a crazy child handling firearms. The youth had his pocket full of anarchistic literature and his head full of anarchistic ideas, and seemed to think that he had made quite a hero of himself by attempting the life of a man who, while he may not be a very useful member of society, is certainly one of the most harmless men in the world. There is about as much heroism about the young anarchist's course as there is of manliness about the small boy who gets sick trying to smoke a strong cigar like a man.

Admiral Dewey's announcement of his willingness to accept the presidency if the public insists, is one of the most surprising and pathetic occurrences of this political season. Every one honors the Admiral as a naval officer and respects him as a man, but his success in handling a fleet is no guarantee that he would be a success in the presidential chair. The public has had little or no opportunity to observe his capacity for politics or statesmanship until his announcement of his candidacy, and since that, indeed in that very act and in the interviews which he has given, he has exhibited a painful lack of political sagacity. To declare positively that he would never be a candidate at a time when his name was prominently before the public, and then to nominate himself and attempt to launch his own boom after the popular enthusiasm had entirely subsided; to express so low an estimate of the importance of the office of President and the abilities required for the performance of its duties; to declare himself a candidate without giving any hint as to the platform upon which he would stand —these are acts which do not evince the highest degree of political genius. The suspicion naturally arises, whether rightly or wrongly, that the Admiral is being used as a stalking-horse by ambitious persons who are in a position to influence him and to profit by any advancement which he might receive.

The preliminary stage in the trial of Senator Clark, of Montana, for bribery, has been concluded and the briefs have been presented to the Senate committee on privileges and elections. The prosecution states the following propositions as facts established by the testimony submitted, and none of them are directly denied by the defense: (1) That at least fifteen members of the legislature were paid by Mr. Clark and his agents for their votes. (2) That at least nine others were offered money for their votes, and that the total amount of offers proved aggregates $175 000. (3) That $100,000 was offered by Dr. Treacy, a friend and agent of Mr. Clark, to bribe the Attorney General to dismiss the proceedings in the Wellcome case. (4) That the agent of Mr. Clark offered Justice Hunt of the Supreme Court $100,000 to dismiss the Wellcome case. (5) That Mr. Clark and his friends engaged in wholesale bribery and attempted bribery of members of the legislature to secure the election of Mr. Clark. In addition to these facts, the prosecution sets forth a number of deductions of facts and some propositions of law bearing on the case. Among the latter are the following: (1) That proof of general and extensive corruption practices in connection with an election is sufficient to warrant and require a judgment of the Senate that the election is void. (2) That Mr. Clark is responsible for the actions of his agents, appointed by him and supplied by him with money, even though he did not know how they were using the money, and is equally guilty with them. (3) That since he was at the Capitol during nearly the whole time of the struggle, he must be charged with a knowledge of the acts of his agents. The brief presented by the counsel for the defence presents a large amount of irrelevant material, most of which sets forth the unworthy motives of those who have been active in pushing the case against Mr. Clark. It shows, too, how the prosecution failed to prove that bribes had been taken by twenty of the thirty-five members against whom they attempted to prove it (a substantial admission that fifteen were bribed, as stated above). It is undoubtedly true, as the defense claims, that the animosity of Mr. Daly and the Daly faction in Montana has furnished the motive for much of the prosecution. The Clark-Daly feud is the controlling factor in Montana politics, but the question now at issue is, not the comparative merits of these two men or their comparative unscrupulousness, but whether or not Clark was elected by bribery. The evidence shows that he was.

The burning of Kansas City's great convention hall, in which the Democratic National Convention was to have been held in July, so far from interfering with that event has only given to that wide-awake city an opportunity to exhibit its enterprise. Before the flames had reached their height several thousand dollars had been subscribed for the restoration of the building, and the contracts had been let and the work of clearing the ground for the new hall was begun before the ashes were cold. It is not to be doubted that a city which can take hold of that sort of a situation so promptly will find some means of accommodating the Convention of the Disciples of Christ which is to be held there in October.

The presidency of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, which was offered to Admiral Sampson, has been given to Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, who is now superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey. Although only forty-three years old, Dr. Pritchett has for nearly twenty years been well known as a scientist. He is a Missourian by birth and was for sixteen years professor of mathematics and astronomy in Washington University at St. Louis, from which position he was taken in 1897 to become head of the Coast Survey. The latter position has been fraught with special difficulties during his term, for in that period we have come into possession of a vast amount of new and only partially surveyed coast. It will not be possible for him to leave this important work for several months, but when he does it will be to become the head of one of the foremost scientific institutions in the country and in the world. His selection is a compliment to the government service, as the offer to Admiral Sampson was a compliment to the navy.

Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, who is the successor of Henry Ward Beecher and Lyman Abbott in the pastorate of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, has severed his connection with the Chicago Presbytery, of which he has been a member. This step is the immediate result of the criticism which has been passed by prominent Presbyterians upon a recent sermon by Dr. Hillis on "The Automatic Judgment-seat in Man," in which he departs from many of the Calvinistic teachings of the Confession of Faith. The Presbytery has postponed for two weeks its decision as to whether or not it will accept the resignation.

TRANSFIGURATION AND RESURRECTION.

The picture of the risen Christ which we give on our cover this week is a reproduction of Raphael's Transfiguration. It is not inappropriate in connection with the day that commemorates his resurrection. The transfiguration of Jesus was an anticipation of the resurrection. It was the glory that was within Christ, and which shone out through his body and raiment in the transfiguration scene, which afterward made possible the resurrection.

Whatever else may have been the meaning of the transfiguration, one thing which it was designed to accomplish seems to have been to give his disciples some conception of what his glory was to be and what manner of persons they themselves would be in the resurrection state. The Master Himself and his disciples were to pass through severe trials and sufferings before the kingdom of God should be established on earth. They would need the stimulus and encouragement which would come from a scene like this. The vision must have passed before their minds many times afterwards as they faced persecution and death, and as the vision of the glorified Christ rose before them they must have felt that the light afflictions which were to endure only for a moment were not to be compared with the glory that awaited them. The transfiguration was, therefore, not only an anticipation of, but a preparation for, the resurrection.

Is there not a relation likewise in the case of every Christian between transfiguration and resurrection? The process of transfiguration is a continuous and progressive one in every Christian life. An inspired apostle tells us to be not conformed to this world, but transformed, or transfigured, by the renewing of our minds. Transfiguration is a universal law in nature and in grace. The process in nature is now going on before our eyes. We are seeing the face of the earth renewed and transformed by the power of the indwelling life that is manifesting itself in so many ways. How different is the scene which nature presents now and that which we witnessed a few weeks ago! And the contrast will be still more marked as spring merges into summer. Instances could be presented of remarkable transfigurations in the insect and animal world, such as that of the butterfly, which is but a caterpillar transfigured.

These suggestions in nature ought to prepare us for the truth which the New Testament teaches—that the process of transfiguration includes man also. The whole aim of the gospel is to effect the transfiguration of man into the likeness of Christ. In so far as this process is going on in our lives we are fulfilling the purpose for which we have been called out of darkness into light. In so far as we are obstructing this process by refusing to open our minds and hearts to the transforming power of the gospel, to that extent are we in antagonism with the divine purpose and with our own highest interest. It is only as we are brought under the illuminating and life-giving rays that shine from the Sun of Righteousness that we are changed into the likeness of Christ and are made meet for the inheritance of the saints in light.

But only the risen Christ can shine upon us. It is because He triumphed over death and ascended to the right hand of God that He sheds forth the Spirit upon His followers and transforms them into His own likeness. It is the fact that we are to-day worshiping the living Christ that gives Easter its significance and glory. It is because He is risen that it ought not to be difficult for us to bear burdens, undergo trials, suffer persecutions and practice self-denials for His sake. The light that shines from the empty sepulcher in which the Savior lay should expel all darkness and despondency and fill our souls with life and light.

If Christ's resurrection means anything less to us than that our lives are to be transfigured under His risen power, it means too little. If we suppose that the fact of Christ's resurrection is not a force that is to enter into our daily lives, with power to soothe our sorrows, dry our tears, strengthen our hearts and fill them with the radiance of hope, then we have misunderstood its significance and will miss the joy and inspiration which it should afford us.

But what if Christ had not risen? A firmament without a sun. Night without morning. Struggle without reward. Life without hope. Death without a resurrection. Aspiration without fulfillment.

"But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept"—the first fruits, mind you—the pledge of the full harvest yet to be. Then fill your churches with glad hallelujah choruses, and let the beautiful lilies which Christ loved s well on earth mingle their beauty and fragrance with the incense of praise and thanksgiving that shall go up to heaven for the Savior, who has abolished death and brought life and immortality to light in the gospel.

THE EVOLUTION OF A MOTTO.

The discussion, during the Indianapolis Congress, of the motto, "In Faith, Unity; in Opinions, Liberty; in all things, Charity," makes appropriate, at this time, a brief examination of the history of this old-time motto. It is believed, too, that the motto involves a principle that is vital to our own religious reformation, and that a clear understanding of this principle is important to our future welfare and usefulness as a religious body.

The original form of this motto was somewhat different from that in which it appears on the program of the Indianapolis Congress, or at the head of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. In Dr. Philip Schaff's Ecclesiastical History (Vol. VI, p. 650,), he says: "It was during the fiercest dogmatic controversies and the horrors of the Thirty Years' War that a prophetic voice whispered to future generations the watchword of Christian peacemakers, which was unheeded in a century of tolerance, and forgotten in a century of indifference, but resounds with increased force in a century of revival and reunion: 'In Essentials, Unity; in Non-essentials, Liberty; in all things, Charity.'" This motto has sometimes been ascribed to Augustine, and oftener to Richard Baxter, who gave it currency; but it is traced by Dr. Schaff to Rupertus Meldenius, an otherwise unknown divine and author of a tract in which the sentence occurs. It is believed that this tract appeared in the year 1627 or 1628. It was a half century later that Baxter quoted it in the preface to his work on "The True and Only Way of Concord of all the Christian Churches."

Perhaps we cannot do better than to quote from the introduction to Longan's "Origin of the Disciples of Christ," written more than ten years ago, by the editor of this paper. Referring to the history which we have sketched above, and to the fact that the motto has received new attention and a better embodiment in our day, we said:

"Here, then, is an admirable illustration of the indestructible vitality of an important truth, which not only persists in living through centuries of opposition and neglect, but which manifests increased power over each succeeding generation. How few there were to recognize in this statement the germ of a great religious reformation, when it was first formulated and uttered by Rupertus Meldenius! In Baxter's day it attracted more attention as offering relief from the interminable strifes and divisions with which all pious, truth-loving souls were weary. But it was not until more than a century later that it gained practical recognition in an organized movement having for its end the unity and peace of the church.

Indeed, it is quite certain that neither Meldenius nor Baxter perceived all that was involved in this memorable motto. What they did see, evidently, was an utter lack of discrimination in the popular mind between the things which are vital and those which are incidental, and the consequent effort to enforce uniformity at the expense of unity. As a remedy for this state of things they proposed the foregoing statement, which had in it the seed of a reformation yet to be. But the seed must wait for genial soil and favorable surroundings. If either of the men named, or any of the theologians of that period who accepted this motto, had been asked to state more specifically what were the "things essential," and what the "things indifferent," their answer, doubtless, would have borne the marks and limitations of the religious thought of their times. It was for another age to develop, more clearly than was possible at that time, the right application of this principle to the religious principles upon which Christendom had divided into hostile camps.

In the early part of the present century Thomas Campbell, looking at the same evils which Meldenius, Baxter and others had seen and deplored, uttered a not less remarkable saying in the memorable words which he made the battle-cry of reform: "Where the Scriptures speak we speak, and where the Scriptures are silent we are silent." The clear import of this striking motto was: What is enjoined upon men by divine authority we shall insist on being observed; and where the Word of God has left men free we shall not bind them. The phrase "things essential" had now been interpreted to mean, the things required by the Scriptures, and the "things indifferent" were those where the silence of the Scriptures left men free to follow their best judgment. In both these mottoes there is a clear recognition of divine authority and an equally distinct rejection of human authority in matters of religious faith and practice. In each of them there is a solemn emphasis of loyalty to God on the one hand, and of freedom from the tyranny of opinion on the other. But "where the Scriptures speak" is a decided advance in the direction of clearness and definiteness beyond the "things essential."

In the progress of the Reformation as urged by the Campbells and their colaborers, another distinction of value came into vogue. The "things essential" of this 17th-century motto and the things enjoined by the Scriptures were called matters of faith, while inferences on matters where the Scriptures are "silent"—the "things indifferent"—were called matters of opinion. This distinction between faith and opinion—the one resting on divine authority and the other on men's fallible judgment—served to clear away a good deal of fog from the religious atmosphere and to enable men to go forward in the work of reform with firmer step. It was now seen that a great many things which properly belonged to the catalogue of inferential knowledge, and might be classified as such, representing the results of biblical investigation, could never be classified as belonging to the things of faith, or have any legitimate place in a creed or confession of faith. It was the clear perception of this distinction that led our reformatory fathers to reject as bonds of union and communion, all human creeds and confessions of faith. It was not that these creeds contained errors, though doubtless they did, being the results of fallible human thought, but that they contained matter which, whether true or false, had no business in a creed or confession of faith, to serve as a basis of fellowship among Christians. If true, they belong to the category of inferential knowledge, not of faith. If they suggested wise methods of organization, work or worship, they belonged to the "things indifferent," and not to "things essential."

In the historical evolution of this reformatory principle there was yet another step taken, which was essential to the application of this venerable motto to the religious questions of the age and necessary to bring the reformers clearly on to New Testament ground. It was soon perceived, in the light of New Testament teaching, that the faith which the gospel requires—the truly evangelical faith—was faith in Jesus of Nazareth as the Christ, the Son of the living God. It was not faith in dogmas, propositions or ordinances, but in a Savior, that constitutes saving faith. To believe in Him and to obey His commandments because we believe in Him—these now, it was seen, were the "essential things" in which there must be "unity." Other matters, not contravening these, were the "things indifferent," concerning which there must be "liberty." How significant, now, the saying of Paul: "There is one faith!" Many opinions there may be, but there is only one faith, having for its object the one Lord. Here, at last, was perspicuity itself. The magnificent generalization, coined by Meldenius and adopted by Baxter, when illumined thus by the light of the New Testament, became an operative principle. Only men were now needed with the courage of their convictions to test this principle in the practical work of reform. The men were not wanting. They did test it; and with what results the world knows."

Remaining true to this motto, as thus interpreted, there is before us an interminable path of progress and of unity. Turning away from it, under the specious plea of guarding the truth, to add to the divine confession of faith other matters not vital to salvation, crystallization and division will inevitably result. We would be dull students of ecclesiastical history if we did not profit by the lessons of experience afforded us in the religious reformations which have preceded us. They all began in the spirit of freedom and of independent research, but, unhappily, they all reached a point in their development when they crystallized their opinions and theologies in the form of creeds which have resulted in stagnation or division. We cannot do this if we remain true to the principle set forth in this motto.

THE REIGN OF COMMERCIALISM.

It is not difficult to determine the most dominant influence of the present age. Nor is it altogether strange that this influence should be what it is. Our physical needs are usually those that are most keenly felt. We live, first of all, in the sensuous. The Apostle Paul states a great philosophic truth when he says: "That was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterwards that which is spiritual." This statement is in perfect harmony with our own experience. Our physical wants are so urgent and so constant in their demands that there is always great danger of listening to their cry to the utter neglect of our spiritual needs. It is not remarkable, therefore, that commercialism is practically the reigning power of the present day.

But there is another reason why commercialism wields such decided influence at the present time. The great discoveries of the nineteenth century have brought the whole world into close commercial contact. Trade is no longer confined to small commercial areas, but now reaches in every direction, and to the limits of the entire earth. This fact greatly accentuates commercial intercourse and stimulates all the activities on the physical side of life. From this point of view we can easily see why commercialism has become so dominant, and at the same time why it is that a plea for a reign of the spiritual meets with such tremendous opposition. It certainly must be conceded that the spiritual forces of the present have greater potency than at any other period in the world's history. But this fact does not make the other fact, just stated, an impossibility. Evil, until conquered, is always active and vigilant in the exact ratio that good is earnest and efficient. When Christ was on earth and began to cast out devils, the whole demon world sought by every possible means to overthrow his efforts in behalf of suffering humanity.

Now that we are making strenuous efforts to give the healing gospel to all the nations, it really seems that Satan has, for the time being, actually taken possession of commercial life, with which to overthrow the reign of Christ. Everything appears to be dominated by the spirit of money making and money-getting. Our politicians especially, for the most part, measure statesmanship by the money standard. Their first question is, "Will it pay from a commercial point of view?" We are not unreasonable. There is a commercial side in statesmanship that can not be entirely ignored. As well ignore the body while seeking to benefit the spiritual man. Even religious matters cannot be properly managed without giving considerable attention to finance. But it is possible, even in the church, to make too much of money-getting. Indeed, we fear sometimes we are in danger of emphasizing the amount of money received for religious purposes more than the souls gained for Christ. At any rate, a little caution at this point cannot be amiss. The time was when there was room in the church for heroism; when men and women gave themselves to service without the hope of the slightest reward in this life. Indeed, in many cases they not only received no pecuniary benefit for their work, but in addition to this work they gave liberally of their means to support the cause in other directions. Some of these men wrought wonders in their day. We do not marvel at it. They were possessed with a spirit of heroism, and they wrought with an enthusiasm which nothing could resist. Perhaps, if we had the same conditions today as existed then, we should see some of the same kind of heroism displayed. But as the conditions are now changed, our men expect a change of treatment; and it is difficult to believe that many of them would serve at all if they were placed in the condition of our noble pioneers. The reason for this is not far to seek. We are now living under the reign of commercialism, and it is simply impossible not to feel this scepter swaying throughout every portion of human life.

What must be done? First of all, what can be done? There is strong reason to believe that against this commercialism, both in church and state, a strong reaction has already begun. There are signs which make it evident that the people are beginning to see the danger of a distinct and imperious money power. The cry against trusts and despotic corporations is symtomatic of a new order of things which is just beginning to dawn. The church ought to lead in this great movement against the unreasonable claims of commercialism. By all means give to material affairs their proper place; but we must protect both church and state from the inroads of a disproportionate interest with respect to purely commercial matters. The ways and means by which this may be accomplished are worthy of the most thoughtful consideration by every disciple of Christ.

Hour of Prayer.

FAILURE THROUGH SELF: VICTORY THROUGH GOD.

(Ex. 2:11-14; Ex. 3:7-10.)

(Uniform Midweek Prayer-meeting Topic, April 18.)

CENTRAL TRUTH: The secret of success in all great undertakings is to work with God, and not rely upon our own strength or wisdom.

The lesson finds its illustrations in certain incidents in the life of Moses. Reared in the court of Pharaoh he recognized, as he grew up, his relation with the enslaved Hebrew people and entered into sympathy with their burden and oppression. One day while he was visiting among them he saw an Egyptian smiting one of his Hebrew brethren, and looking about him and seeing no man to witness the deed he slew the Egyptian and hid him in the sand. This was murder, not unprovoked, but murder, nevertheless. There were at least two witnesses besides the Hebrew. One was the Eye that never sleeps nor slumbers, and the other was Moses himself, whose conscience could not have been easy when his passion had subsided. Allowing that his motive was to resent the injustice to his oppressed brethren, he was taking the matter in his own hands, and it was altogether too great an undertaking. On the next day he became aware that the deed was known. He fled from the wrath of Pharaoh to the land of Midian. The feeling between Hebrew and Egyptian was much strained and Pharaoh perhaps regarded this action of Moses as an attempt to lead an insurrection among his oppressed brethren and against their oppressors.

Moses had to wait forty years, leading a shepherd's life in Midian, before the time had fully come when it was God's purpose to deliver Israel from bondage. One of the striking things in the life of Jesus is the fact that he abode at Nazareth, following the carpenter's trade until he was thirty years of age, when he had come into the world on so great a mission. Yet, who will say that those years at Nazareth were wasted, or did not have an essential part to play in the preparation of Jesus for his great work? He was content to wait for God's call, which came to him in the ministry of John the Baptist. So, in the fullness of time, God appeared to Moses in the burning bush, and commissioned him to go to Egypt to deliver his people. "Come now, therefore," He said to Moses, "and I will send thee unto Pharaoh that thou mayest bring forth my people, the children of Israel, out of Egypt."

Moses had reached that period of life now at which a man does not feel his self-sufficiency to so great a degree as in earlier years. It was natural, therefore, that he should demur at so great an undertaking and ask: "Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?" The answer to this question was the charter which Moses had for his great undertaking, and the assurance of its success. God said to him: "Certainly, I will be with thee." Happy is the man who enters upon any good work with the conviction that God is with him.

Moses could now go down and face the incredulity of his brethren and the insolence of Pharaoh with all boldness, because he was not acting on his own responsibility, but under a divine commission which assured him of God's presence with him. We know the result. It was a marvelous episode in the history of a peculiar and providential people. No man, unaided by divine counsel nor reinforced by the divine resources, could have accomplished the work which Moses did in delivering his people from the cruel bondage of Egypt, leading them across the Red Sea and through the Wilderness journey to the land which the Lord had promised him.

The illustrations of this lesson are not alone in the distant past. The lesson itself is as true to-day as it was then, and the illustrations of its truth are all about us. History is full of them. It is the man who allies himself with God, bides His time and works in harmony with His purposes, who accomplishes great and beneficent enterprises. Mr. Eads, who built the St. Louis bridge and the jetties at the mouth of the Mississippi, said it was his aim to find out the laws of nature, which are the laws of God, and work in harmony with these laws, and in so far as he did that he never doubted success. The principle holds good in every department of work.

Things which we cannot accomplish ourselves can readily be accomplished in cooperation with God. Any weak church in any of our great cities can become strong by observing this simple rule. Any individual who is the victim of sin and evil habits, though helpless within himself, may readily overcome through the strength which God supplies. "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

If the church is to be a leader in redeeming the world from the bondage of strong drink or of other evils that oppress it, it must work with God and in the consciousness of divine strength which He supplies. It must recognize itself as called of God to this special mission of destroying the works of the devil, must unite its divided forces in harmony with the divine teaching and go forth in the holy war for righteousness. No political party or church can accomplish this redemption of the people in its own strength or wisdom. Victory cometh from God.

PRAYER.

O, God! we thank Thee that Thou art our Refuge in time of trouble, our Strength in time of weakness, our Safety in time of peril. We thank Thee that thou hast made it possible for us to be coworkers with Thee in our own salvation and in the salvation of the world. We recognize the truth that our sufficiency is of God; of ourselves we can do nothing. Help us, we beseech Thee, as individuals and as churches, to commit ourselves more fully to Thy leadership and to work with Thee more faithfully in carrying out all our life-plans and in seeking to benefit the world while we live in it. In the name of Christ, our Strength and our Savior. Amen!

Editor's Easy Chair.

Tardy Spring seems to have come at last, and though she is behind schedule time we cannot chide her, for she comes with smiles and tears, and with hands full of flowers, and with promise of brighter days and a robe of emerald for the glad earth. Every living thing rejoices at her coming. The brown-breasted robins hop about the lawn with an air of proprietorship. A gray squirrel has taken up its abode in the trees around Rose Hill Cottage, and has come to make himself quite at home. A few days ago he was observed on one of the trees a few feet from the ground, head downward, waving his bushy tail and chattering vigorously. This unusual behavior led to an investigation, which discovered a Maltese cat on the ground near by, watching intently his bunnyship, and evidently with no very hospitable intentions. Each perhaps regarded the other as an intruder upon his rightful domain, like many of their two-legged brothers of a higher order. As there is really no cause for rivalry between them we hope they may learn to live together in peace.

This paragraph is written on "Palm Sunday," the beginning of "Passion Week" in the life of Jesus. Why is it that one who was so popular on Sunday as to receive the homage of shouting multitudes, who sang hosannahs and spread palm branches in his way, as a king, should have been crucified on the following Friday? In Dore's gallery in London are exhibited, side by side, these two great companion pictures of the artist: Christ's Triumphant Entry into Jerusalem, and Christ Leaving the Prætorium, on his way to crucifixion. The contrast is most striking as regards the multitude, but in the face of the Master there was no undue exaltation in the one scene, and no undue depression in the other. It was the "common people," who heard Jesus gladly, and who sang hosannahs to him. It was the rulers of the people who crucified him. Why did not the "common people" rescue Him? Because the common people of those days had little opportunity of asserting themselves. Jesus was not deceived by the enthusiasm of the multitude, as he understood well the power of the forces which were working for his death. Fame is a fickle thing. "Hosannah" to day may be succeeded by "Crucify him," to-morrow. Moral: Trust in God, and do right and let fame take care of itself.

Jesus is the one Hero of the world whose fame has continued to grow through all the centuries. In the perspective of nineteen centuries of history he looms up a more colossal Figure than he seemed to be in his own age. Time, which has obliterated so many names, diminished so many reputations, discrowned so many false heroes and heaped infamy upon them, only adds to the lustre of that one Name that is above every name. Since that first Palm Sunday, when his followers cast palm branches in his way and hailed him king, he was condemned and crucified, and his enemies in all the succeeding ages have sought to undermine his rising fame and cast odium upon his fair name. But to-day, millions upon millions of loyal hearts have spread the palms of sincerest praise and devotion before Him once more, and would lay down their lives for Him, if need be. His is an enduring fame, and His kingis an everlasting kingdom. Ten thousand times ten thousand souls unite to-day in singing—

"All hail the power of Jesus' name,
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem
And crown him Lord of all."

And this, because crucifixion was followed by resurrection. He submitted to death that he might conquer it. He opened the prison-house of the grave, and showed it to be but an entrance way to life in a higher, holier sphere. By means of his death he abolished death and delivered men from bondage to the fear of death. This is the event which has its annual celebration on the Sunday following Palm Sunday, on the Lord's day called Easter. It was this great event—Christ's rising—that begot in Christ's personal followers a living hope, and that opened up to faith an unending vista of future progress and blessedness. In so far as this supreme fact has been accepted, human life has taken on new meaning and dignity, and Hope chants its notes of coming victory even in the night of sorrow and defeat.

"This is the hope, the blissful hope
Which God to us hath given,
The hope when days and years are past,
We all shall meet in heaven."

Questions and Answers.

I am asked by a number of your readers here why it is that in the department of "Current Events" you are not satisfied with a statement of facts without suggestive comments too plainly evidencing your own political complexion and sympathy? E.

The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST does not pretend to be neutral in either politics or religion, but it does claim to be nonpartisan in both. As a rule, it suffices simply to report the news without comment. Sometimes it seems to us wise to add a word of comment, but this is never done from a partisan point of view, because we occupy no such point of view. We are not to be deprived of our right as an American citizen to utter our convictions upon questions which involve the welfare of the people, though we always seek to do it as a Christian journalist and not as a partisan advocate. We may err in judgment, but when this is the case it is not the result of any partisan bias, because we have no such bias. We have long since renounced allegiance to any political party, and claim the privilege of stating what seems to us to be the truth entirely regardless of its party bearings. We shall seek in the future, as in the past, to avoid giving offense. We do not hope to be entirely successful in this, for past experience has shown us that in times of political excitement it is impossible to even report current political news without a suspicion of partisan bias. The great majority of our readers, however, understand that mere party politics occupy a very subordinate place in our thought and work.

Was the church sometimes called "New Lights" ever connected with the Christian Church? If so, when did they withdraw, and in what respect do they differ from the Christian Church? T. R. Haynes.
Lenox, Ia.

The movement of Barton W. Stone in Kentucky was designated as the "Christian Connection" by its friends and was sometimes called "New Lights." Alexander Campbell and Barton W. Stone had a conference on the subject of uniting the churches of their respective movements, and Stone himself and quite a number of the churches in Kentucky which were associated with his work, became identified with the movement inaugurated by the Campbells. The chief difference between Campbell and Stone was on the divinity or deity of Christ. Mr. Stone did not lay as much emphasis upon the divine nature of Christ as did Mr. Campbell, but he finally accepted the position occupied by Mr. Campbell and others, agreeing to accept the Bible language regarding Christ. Another difference in the churches related to baptism, both as to the design of the ordinance and as to the policy of invariably insisting upon immersion as a condition of membership. There never was any separation; there was only a partial union.

THS PHILOSOPHY OF OPINIONISM.

CHARLES LLOYD GARRISON.

(Concluded.)

What is hardly less remarkable than our love for our own mental progeny is our supercilious and belligerent attitude toward the offspring of other minds. Too often we look upon them as inconsequential, or what is far worse, as positively corruptive and deserving of immediate death. Forthwith we proceed to annihilate them. By a peculiar reflex law our zeal is augmented, our emotional nature deeply stirred and our passions inflamed. A fierce, fortifying joy attends our success. It is a fascinating and exhilarating sport compared with which snake-killing is tame. If, however, our gratuitous efforts miscarry, and these alien thought-children prove too nimble, athletic and vigorous for us, we are smitten with chagrin, melancholy, suspicion of others, misanthropy and the like. The germs of morbid delusion, nourished by mistaken zeal, spring into noxious plants which choke out the fruits of the Spirit of Christ. These are abnormal eccentricities of thought; they are cerebromiasmatic symptoms; they are hellhounds of the mind, whose peculiar province it is to bay at creative genius and truth-seeking pioneering. By how much a man stands above his fellows in originative faculty and unhandicapped loyalty, by so much will his footsteps be dogged and the trend of his thought misunderstood and misrepresented. It is a fact profoundly significant and overwhelmingly pathetic that some of the purest souls which God has sent into the world to emancipate his people and to lead them out from under the shadows of ignorance, superstition and traditionalism into the sunlight of eternal truth, have been nagged and cursed and slain of men through the natural and inevitable outworking of this deplorable principle. Not, in the last analysis, to poor, mistaken man should the blame be attributed, but to the Archfiend of our souls, who has not more clearly demonstrated his wisdom than by the insertion of this scion. From manifestations all too prevalent, it is certain that a piquant, aggressive, iconoclastic spirit is wholly compatible with a fervent, religious temperment. Of old there were those who had "a zeal for God, but not according to knowledge;" and the genus is not yet extinct. Certain causes have conspired to perpetuate it from age to age: (a) the unconscious inventiveness of prejudice; (b) inordinate love of our own opinions and a supercilious and belligerent attitude toward the opinions of others; (c) premature diagnosing of character from fragmentary and insufficient indications. Not while these principles dominate a man can he hope to see the truth or rejoice in the truth.

The so-called scientific spirit, in so far as it means anything, expresses the rational and wholesome attitude toward truth. "Science is simply a higher development of common knowledge." Beginning with special and concrete facts, it undertakes, first, to explain them, then to relate them to more general facts, of which they are instances. These more general facts, having been explained, are in turn referred to yet higher facts, and so forth. Obviously, the process is a limited one, and brings us presently to the unknown and the unknowable. But ere we reach the limit, certain laws are learned which aid us immeasurably in the acquisition and classification of knowledge. Now the scientific spirit has been greatly abused by false methods, which masquerade thereunder. Men have consciously or unconsciously acquired certain predilections which have incapacitated them for the highest scientific achievements. To reinforce some pet theory they dwell at length upon a vast array of facts, which possess evidential value on one side, while a great many facts of contrary character are slightingly dealt with or entirely suppressed, which, if accorded that prominence which they rightly deserve, would bear heavily on the theory in question, and perhaps nullify it altogether. To the man in search of truth, whether in his interpretation of natural phenomena or in his investigation of the Word of God, nothing is more subversive than predilection. If we could persuade ourselves to make a holocaust of our pet theories, and crucify our opinions, and hold our emotional nature in check until we shall have thoroughly investigated the matter and assured ourselves that our findings are true, we should be thrice armed for their defense and spared the humiliation of defeat. Indeed, to a man thus minded there can be no humiliating defeat. Avowedly his aim is truth; and everything which helps him thereto is welcomed.

Certainly, another and higher consideration should restrain him from anything approaching vindictiveness, no matter how cruelly and unjustly he be assailed. These tidal waves of reproof, accusation and misrepresentation cannot loosen the soul once firmly anchored to the truth of God; they cannot ruffle the serenity of a trustful, Christlike spirit. It may be in the providence of a needed moral discipline. Certain it is, if self be subdued and love implanted in the heart, we can endure all things through him who strengtheneth us. We can bear reproach, we can overlook affronts, we can survive the downfall of our pet theories and the explosion of our cherished notions. If rightly exercised thereby, we shall learn to accommodate ourselves even to the limitations and weaknesses of others—where the surrender of a principle is not involved—and throughout it all to maintain genial large-heartedness, self-abnegation and elasticity of spirit. This is not the least striking feature of a truly great soul, nor the least significant achievement in moral discipline. Indeed, one might almost say that its absence were indicative of weakness. No student of the life and character of the Apostle Paul can have overlooked that uniformly sane and beautiful temperament which he displayed in the midst of the bitterest and most relentless persecution. And herein our blessed Master, in whom dwelt pre-eminently all virtue, exemplified that spirit which should be the ideal of every disciple.

But prejudice, we fear, is confined neither to the old school nor to the new. One is disposed to accept the new because of its novelty, the other to cling to the old because of its oldness. Absolute freedom from prejudice none of us may attain in this life but it should be an ideal height toward which all of us should worship. Many there are, doubtless, who are dominated by it to no considerable extent; all of us fancy ourselves free from it. But at a time when we think not this deplorable principle may manifest itself; so, "let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

Prejudice is a relentless tyrant, whose reign is coextensive with the annals of man and whose realm is as broad as humanity. Early in childhood, and all unconsciously to ourselves, this crafty despot weaves amid the very subtlest fibers of our being his image and superscription, and we grow to years of maturity and remain throughout life more or less loyal to this sovereign. Our banner is bias, and the judgment where with we judge is sadly perverted. From other kindreds and tongues and tribes there come to us rays of God's eternal truth, but our eyes are closed. The works of other and distant hands appeal to us with a rich sort of eloquence, but our ears are dull of hearing. The stupefying influence of a mighty spell is upon us, and we are not unlike certain ones of antiquity, of whom it was said "Seeing, they see not; and hearing, they hear not; neither do they understand."

There is some excuse for the prejudice of olden time. It was the natural outgrowth of conditions then existing. The ancients were deprived in large measure of the teaching of history; they were unaided by the discoveries of science and the inventions of art; they were unacquainted with international assemblies; they were isolated by the very geographical features of the countries surrounding them. But with the intensified light of modern civilization disseminated by the Word of God everywhere accessible to the masses; with surroundings hitherto unparalleled in the history of man for the acquisition of the highest truth in the highest form—surely prejudice is inexcusable. Is it not the part of wisdom to suppress it, to outgrow it, to rise above it? Let us master once for all this truth: no man nor nation of men can be absolutely bad, and no philosophy or religion can be wholly wrong. In corrigibility is infinite—a bourn which no earth-born traveler has yet reached. However false and pernicious men may become there is always a vestige of good in the worst of them. Men are often mistaken as to the relative value of truths; they err frequently in their estimation of cause and effect; they are now and again betrayed by selfish interests into wrong-thinking and wrong-doing; but they cannot habitually engage in that which is wholly evil—they cannot forever speak that which is essentially false. Goodness and truth will somewhere and somewhen appear, even though they be accidents; and when they appear lo, they are for you and for me. What boots it to you that there be an admixture o error? Winnow the chaff; the wheat is none the less wholesome. Reduce the gold in the crucible of reason; no dross shall cleave to the precious metal. Among the men to whom the world is vastly indebted for light and truth may be mentioned Emerson, Carlyle, Goethe, Channing, Montaigne, Darwin, Spencer and others of the same school. That Emerson was a transcendentalist; that Carlyle and Goethe were legalists; that Channing was a Unitarian; that Montaigne was a sceptic; that Spencer and Darwin were infidels, deists, or agnostics—it is difficult to determine which—is no affair of ours. At a higher tribunal they must stand adjudged once for all. This only we know: they have gone like iron into men's blood and set them on fire with love for man and loyalty to truth. Exactly that in these men which clashes with Revealed Truth, is the weak, the false, the perishable; all else is vigorous, true, immortal. You will be amply repaid for the winnowing; your gains will be increased a thousandfold by the smelting.

In like manner egotism prevails both in the old school and the new. Sad to relate, there are those who place implicit confidence in their own opinions, right or wrong, and derive infinite satisfaction from the obtruding of them upon others. Hence, they are unteachable. Certainly. Their judgments are final; and it is a matter of surprise to them that any mortal should presume to question their correctness.

Otherwise it must ever be with the man in search of light. For the sake of truth he should be willing to sit at the feet of the humblest teacher. If he possess but a single idea and barely intelligence enough to impart it; if God has vouchsafed to him insight into a single truth and otherwise left his mind shrouded in blackest clouds of ignorance and superstition, surely it were not altogether vain to hear him. If, when he has finished, reason whispers: "Sir, that which thou hearest is verily so; it is indissolubly linked to the throne of God," gratefully acknowledge your indebtedness. As a matter of fact, many an obscure, unsung servant by dwelling nigh to Nature's heart and Nature's God has gleaned some truth else unobserved of men. From the wreckage of ruined hopes, from the furrows of a broken heart, from the depths of a humble, contrite spirit—though they dwell not in one accounted great of men—there may arise a glorified image of godliness which it were a priceless boon once to behold and an inspiration ever afterward.

By way of concluding these fragmentary remarks which, at most, touch but the hem of the garment of this suggestive theme, it may be said that the possession of the broadest creed known to Christendom carries with it special liabilities to abuse. We need fear no foes from without, for our position is impregnable; but it behooves us to look well to the foes within—those evil, seductive, disintegrating principles which, born of egotism and prejudice, develop all too speedily into intolerance, hatred, and even worse manifestations of a malevolent spirit. But even these emissaries of strife can do us no hurt if Christ dwell richly within us and work abundantly through us. So long as we shall accord to him that pre-eminence which is his due, we shall be enabled to counteract these and keep ourselves free from the taint of opinionism, thereby finding scope for the development of all that is enduring and the exercise of all that is charitable.

ALEXANDER BALMAIN BRUCE

H. L. WILLETT.

During the past few years America has been visited at frequent intervals by distinguished scholars from the Old World who have come to render service to educational or other institutions in lecture courses or public addresses, and whose advent has been the subject of comment and congratulation by Americans generally. Among these have appeared such men as Fairbairn, Smith, Gregory, Drummond, Cheyne, Budde, Stalker and Orr. These men have brought the intellectual atmosphere and standards of Europe to this side of the Atlantic and have thereby placed us under obligations to the institutions from which they have come.

One of the most inspiring and helpful of these visitors was Professor Bruce, whose stay in this country during the summer of 1895 is remembered by all who heard him at the University of Chicago and at Chautauqua. The news, therefore, of his death, last summer, filled with sadness the minds of all who had enjoyed acqaintance with him in this solitary visit to the states. No one who had the privilege of meeting him either in the classroom or in social intercourse could fail to be impressed by the largeness of his nature, his broad and solid scholarship, his deep interest in all questions connecting themselves with religion and the study of the Bible, and the kindliness of his nature, which made him seem more like a large-hearted father than a teacher of the ordinary sort. Some of the evenings spent with him at the Quadrangle Club will not soon be forgotten. In these familiar talks, either to two or three or to a roomful of guests at some reception, he spoke of his early experiences as a student and preacher, of the struggle through which Scotland went at the period of corruption, in the waves of which struggle he was himself caught, of the universities of Scotland, of the phases of Christian thought and activity in that country and of European life in general. No more delightful or familiar conversations than these held with Dr. Bruce could be imagined.

He was born in 1831 and attended the University of Edinburgh for his college course, taking later on the degree of bachelor of divinity in the Free Church College in the same city. In 1859 he began his pastoral work, and for several years spent his time as a country preacher or pastor in small towns in Scotland. This has been the experience of the great majority of those men who have laid their impress upon Scottish and English life, and proves the value of spending the first years of a pastorate in the country or in places which afford leisure for extensive reading, such as a busy pastor of a city church is rarely able to command. In 1875 Bruce was called to the chair of New Testament Exegesis and Apologetics in Free Church College in Glasgow. In this great commercial metropolis he passed the remainder of his life, amid scenes interesting to every traveler and lover of Scotland and her great men.

The college was itself the child of the disruption and one of the guardians of the Free Church movement, which played so notable a part in Scottish religious history in the middle of the century. In this institution as fellow-workers with Professor Bruce were men familiarly known on this side of the Atlantic, such as Henry Drummond, George Adam Smith, James Denney and T. M. Lindsay. The atmosphere of the institution is profoundly religious and helpful to the student life, as can be witnessed by those who have been there either as students or visitors. Professor Bruce, upon accepting this dual position, entered heartily into the work; and although the two lines of activity to which he was appointed seemed somewhat divergent, from the American educational standpoint, still he found them not unrelated and very congenial to his own type of mind. His activity in both these departments was untiring during all the years of his subsequent professorial career. The mere titles of his books, pamphlets and articles would fill more than the space at our disposal; but even a few of them will show the magnitude of his labors as an exegete and defender of the Holy Scriptures. Of his apologetic works perhaps the best known are the "Chief End of Revelation," the "Apologetics" in the International Theological Library series, "The Providential Order," and the recently issued "Moral Order." Of the more numerous New Testament writings, some of the most prominent are "The Miraculous Element in the Gospels," "The Training of the Twelve," "The Humiliation of Christ," "The Galilean Gospel," "The Parabolic Teachings of Jesus," "The Kingdom of God," "St. Paul's Conception of Christianity," "The Epistle to the Hebrews" and "The Synoptic Gospels" in the Expositors' Greek Testament. Any one familiar with all or any of these works will not need to be assured of the thoroughness and scholarly character of Professor Bruce's writings. The two works on "The Miraculous Element in the Gospels" and the "Parabolic Teachings of Jesus" have practically superseded Archbishop Trench's monumental work on the parables and miracles. The critical commentary on the Synoptic Gospels is the recently accepted standard in exposition of the Greek text, and is completed by Professor Marcus Dod's equally valuable commentary on the Greek text of the Fourth Gospel. Some of the finest work Professor Bruce has ever done appears in his "Epistle to the Hebrews," which came out only last year.

But his love ever lay in the field of the Gospels, and especially of the Synoptic Gospels. He used often to say that these were more intelligible to him and therefore more satisfactory than the Fourth Gospel, contrary to the experience of so many Bible students. For the Pauline writings also he had less appreciation, strangely enough finding greater satisfaction in the Epistle to the Hebrews. But he returned again and again to the Synoptic territory and dwelt with loving tenderness upon the portrait of Christ there presented. To him Christ was the center in all things. It was the inspiration of his apologetic, as it was the result of his study in the Gospels. The Bible was not to him an end, but the means for the discovery of Christ whom he loved, and therefore the study of the Gospels became the passion of his life. He desired only to learn of Christ and to lead others to him. This is the secret of his wonderful influence as an expounder and defender of Christianity. Christianity in his thought was identical with Christ, and the Master appeared in the Gospels as nowhere else; but all other parts of Scripture were valuable to him as pointing to Christ or bearing upon his life—the Old Testament, both in its speech and silence, and all the epistles and other writings of the New. Readers of the Biblical World will remember the singularly interesting articles contributed by Professor Bruce to that journal during the year 1896 under the title "Four Types of Christian Thought," taking up successively the teachings of Christ in the Gospels of Matthew, Mark and Luke, the Pauline Epistles, the Epistle to the Hebrews and the Fourth Gospel. A familiar friend and student of Professor Bruce has recently said of him:

"The divinity of Christ became a doctrine worthy of all acceptation. So with the perfection of Jesus; it was through his comradeship in human suffering and temptation that he was perfected. So with miracle; miracle became credible—under certain conditions even necessary—but only as an exhibition of character, only as embodying, not simply attesting, revelation. So with prophecy; prophecy was not prediction but the preaching of the divine righteousness and love. Thus it was not so much the mysterious as the moral depth and beauty in Christianity that attracted him. The Christianity he defended, like all the work he did, was instinct with character. In it there was no room for anything mechanical. Prophecy that was magical, predictive; miracle that was not integral to revelation, were as abhorent to him as deism. So he gave us back our Bible with miracle credible and prophecy intelligible and all transfigured by the kindly light of God's increasing purpose of redemption which shows in its fullness in Jesus Christ."

As a public speaker Dr. Bruce had few of the arts and none of the tricks of the pulpit or platform, but his speech was singularly pointed and persuasive because there was behind it the eloquence of personality; and in speaking to a class as well as to an audience there was the marked fervor and urgency of the evangelist. Such a man becomes a part of all who meet him. His moral ideas are communicated, his love of holiness and truth bear fruit in their lives, and beyond all that he teaches there is the somewhat that he is; and this is the abiding element in his work. The world has been enriched by the life of Professor Bruce, and the Free Church College, at Glasgow, may well be proud of the man and his memory.

The University of Chicago.

PREACHING—1860 TO 1900.

S. C. HUMPHREY.

These dates, with an antecedent memory of a few years preceding the first date, cover the time of my experience and observation in the ministry. At that time any well-informed Disciple might have known personally or by reputation about all the men who were engaged in the work of the ministry, and I might add that the services of these men were in great demand everywhere. That the supply was not greater was evidently, in part, due to the lack of financial support in the ministry, and this fact a sequel to the teaching and example of Alexander Campbell. As our churches turned to front the future in a practical way, and to consider the several questions of pastors, salaries, missionary societies, organs, and the necessity of greater emphasis being laid upon the teaching of more spirituality in the place of so much doctrine peculiar to our movement, there came gradually those modifications that have brought us to our present status—which, I say, is a change in many respects so great that if it could have come in a year would have been a revolution.

The movement of greatest significance, leading to and resulting in our present status, is that of the establishment and growth of our colleges, which were intended for, and true to their design have been, the factories of ministers. The cry of a "white field and few laborers" was loudly made, and nothing could have been more truly made, if the home and foreign fields of the world were in mind, but when this ever-increasing horde of young ministers interpreted this cry to mean calls to the best established churches at the highest possible salaries, a sequel ensued for which the colleges are not responsible or blameworthy.

Now comes Francis E. Clark, just at the right time to aid the already well-established tendency of the bringing in of the "age of the young men," and put in motion the popular wave of organized Y. P. S. C. E. societies which, when supplemented by our democratic form of church government pertaining to calls to the ministry, completed the necessary power for their crowning.

There is in this year of grace 1900 absolutely no demand in the churches for old preachers. No attainments, intellectual, moral or spiritual, can overcome the drift to young men. We may think or say, as most people do say, that this is unfortunate, unwise and wrong, all of which is but a feeble protest against an irresistible tide. We have built up and fostered powerful forces, forming combinations which are working their legitimate results. Ministers past and passing the prime of life are compelled, nolens volens, to hand over the reins to the young man; let us pass with them our blessing. Let us ask briefly, next, what effect this has or will have upon the churches. For if they are all right under the ministrations of young men, of what consequence is the old man's complaint?

As to the question of the status of the churches now and forty or fifty years ago, it must be conceded, I think, by all, that they have undergone so many changes and modifications as to have little in common when compared. We still hold the doctrinal theory of the fathers of the Reformation, but we have introduced and are discussing so many questions—critical, missionary, educational and financial—as to leave us little time (and less inclination) to preach much doctrine. Due in part to this fact, and in part to the fact of a much-changed belligerant attitude upon the part of our ministry toward the sects, has so changed the attitude of the sects toward us that we don't fight any more. The decadence of doctrinal preaching has naturally resulted in the fact that the larger part of our young people in the churches now are there for other reasons than that of doctrinal preferences. "One church is as good as another!" A generation ago every Disciple believed something and knew why he believed it. In general intelligence and knowledge of the Bible the Disciple of to-day is superior to the typical Disciple of the former time, but not in the distinctive teaching of the Disciples. On the other hand, the spirituality, activity and efficiency of our church membership is vastly better than that of a generation ago, though not better than that of the membership of other communions, and the question may still remain, "What do we more than others?" That other religious bodies have made, within the time we are considering, some substantial advances toward the position held by the Disciples of Christ, I have no doubt. That we have fallen back toward the common ground held by them, but not by us at the beginning, I am also fully convinced.

Tonawanda, N. Y.

THE SPIRITUAL SIDE OF OUR PLEA.

Without and Within—II.

A. B. JONES.

The Jewish religion was largely external. Its forms and ceremonies, beginning with circumcision and extending through an elaborate system of ablutions, sacrifices, offerings, feasts, fasts, holy days, etc., constitute a ponderous and burdensome ritual. This religion of the Old Testament, lying in great measure without, addresses itself chiefly to the physical senses, and finds a slow and difficult way through these to the spiritual understanding of the people. An apostle speaks of the law as "a yoke which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear," and exhorts his Jewish brethren not to become again "entangled with the yoke of bondage." Christ, he says, became "the end of the law," "blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to the cross."

While Judaism and Christianity are related, while the former was preparatory to the latter, and the latter was the outgrowth of the former; yet they present a striking contrast on the point we are now considering—the external and the internal elements of religion. While Christ was a Jew, born under the law, was himself circumcised and conformed to the institutions of Moses with strict fidelity, yet he was sent to lead men out of Judaism and away from its cumbersome rites and formal worship. The yoke which Paul said "neither our fathers nor we were able to bear," the Son of God replaced with his own, saying: "My yoke is easy and my burden is light." But what a mighty task was laid upon the Savior! To lift a nation above their own convictions, their own cherished ideas, their own religion, recognized, authorized and established by signs and wonders from God through Moses; to "break down the middle wall of partition" between the Jews and the Gentiles, and "of twain make one new man;" to respect and observe the religion of Moses, and yet to make men see that it was but "a figure for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices that could not make him that did the service perfect as pertaining to the conscience; which stood only in meats and drinks and divers washings and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation"—what a mighty task was shi! It was his attempt to accomplish this that brought him to the cross and the crucifixion. But this in turn became the means and the signal of victory. The religion of Christ was established. And how simple! As we read the New Testament record concerning the early church we are impressed that a remarkable revolution has been wrought.

"Then they that gladly received his Word were baptized; and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls. And they continued steadfastly in the apostles doctrine and in fellowship and in breaking of bread and in prayers."

The simplicity of Christianity is one of its attractive and striking peculiarities. The two ordinances of baptism and the Lord's Supper are all that we have in the way of specific, external forms in the Church of Christ. And each of these is a beautiful symbol of the great fundamental facts of our holy religion. "We are buried with Christ in baptism, wherein also we are risen with him through faith in the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead." And through the bread and the wine of the eucharist we "discern" his broken body and shed blood—the atoning sacrifice of the Lamb of God. The veil has been taken away. The dominant ritualism of the old national religion of the Jews has been supplanted by the dominant individualism of Christianity. The growth of religious thought and civilization brought in the "fullness of time," when the spiritual childhood of mankind was to be superseded by a more spiritual manhood; when men could read without spelling their way through the obstructing rites and ordinances of the religious primer; when "that which is within" should be in the ascendancy, and "that which is without" should be subordinate and subservient. Let us not be too sanguine, however. The passage from childhood to manhood has always been beset with weakness, temptations and difficulties. While it is delightful to contemplate the development of Christianity out of Judaism under the divine guidance of the great Master and his inspired apostles, while the transformation is made, not without a struggle for supremacy on both sides, but yet is made and stands conspicuous as the most brilliant achievement in history, still the enraptured vision is scarcely realized until the tide of the world's onward movement is arrested and begins to recede again in the direction of the supremacy of external forms in worship. The spiritual pendulum that swung out from the grosser forms of the Jewish religion into a newborn Christianity now swings back into Roman Catholicism, a form of religious thought and life but little less gross in its outward formalism and but little more spiritual in its inward nature than Judaism.

These brief sentences cover a period of fifteen hundred years of the world's history. The Reformation of the sixteenth century, inspired chiefly by Martin Luther, was a protest against the corruptions of Romanism. The materialistic, sensualistic and ritualistic elements of religion and of the church had become the dominant power with the people again. Vital Christianity as a spiritual force in the hearts of men had ceased to reign. A fearful moral and religious degeneracy spread over society and covered the world. At this junction Protestantism was born, and again the pendulum began its slow swing back toward a more spiritual and a less formal Christianity. Lutheranism, Calvinism, Episcopalianism and Methodism mark the progress of its way. With the advent of the Wesleys and Methodism came a high tide of spiritual power. A more intense spiritual life was the one great aim of John Wesley. The cold formalism of the Church of England, in his view, was but a galvanized Christianity. Without intending to cut loose from the church of his childhood, he sought to reform it, to infuse into it a larger measure of spirituality. His efforts and his enthusiasm in this direction found a response in the hearts of men; and his following became so great and so strong, that in spite of himself, Methodism became a separate and distinct organization in the religious world. So intent on the one idea of the enlargement of "the kingdom within you," he and his coadjutors failed to give attention to existing errors and partial forms of truth in the external elements of the church he was seeking to reform.

This fervid religious enthusiasm of Methodism diffused itself over other religious bodies in this country, and there followed it the same tendency to neglect the proper scriptural adjustment of "that which is without" and "that which is within," in their administration of the affairs of the kingdom of God. It is there we find epochs in religious history, epochs of extremes in one direction or the other, extremes in formalities to the neglect of spirituality, extremes in devotion to spirituality to the neglect of the sacred ordinances and appointments of God.

In the early part of the nineteenth century a plea was made before the world for a return to apostolic Christianity—for the restoration to the Church of Christ of the religion of the New Testament, in letter and in spirit, in form and in substance. Back to Christ and the apostles and primitive Christianity, pure and simple, in form and in reality, was the unique plea made before the world by the Campbells, Thomas and Alexander. Reconstruction after the divine model; a wise and scriptural adjustment of all the elements of Christianity; the externals without abatement or enlargement; the internals without increase or diminution, was the rallying cry of our fathers.

Liberty, Mo.

Iowa District Conventions.

The annual district conventions in Iowa, which always occur one after another in consecutive weeks, were held this year much earlier than usual. The state board had reasons for this, which were probably sufficient to justify it but the sentiment expressed indicates that it, will hardly be repeated.

The five districts, recognized jointly by the I. C. C. and the C. W. B. M., met in convention respectively at Adel, Albia, Leon, Rockwell City and Cedar Rapids, covering the time from Feb. 27th to March 29th. March weather in Iowa does not offer such security as is expected in the banking business. The Albia convention opened just after a bad storm, but the inconvenience was all under foot. Cedar Rapids received most of its guests dry shod, but did not allow them to go dry at all. The others had no cause of complaint in this particular. The attendance was a regular and about uniform increase until at Cedar Rapids the out-of-town enrollment was 165.

At Albia Bro. J. H. Garrison, of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, and I. N. McCash, of Des Moines, added much to the interest and profit of the occasion. At Leon D. R. Dungan delighted and benefited every one with several Bible studies and addresses. Chancellor W. B Craig, of Drake University, gave excellent educational addresses at Adel, Leon and Rockwell City.

At Cedar Rapids B B. Tyler, the versatile teacher-preacher, with about equal emphasis on each, and Knox P. Taylor were the heavy artillery, while the presence and counsel of the venerable father in our Iowa Israel, N. A. McConnell, were an inspiration and benediction. With these exceptions the conventions were conducted by the able workers in the districts, except the active participation in each of Joel Brown, of the Benevolent Association, who met with a hearty reception and liberal response. Bro. W. F. Cowden spoke of the work of our general board at the last two conventions.

At the first two all were entertained at the homes, free, throughout. The Leon ladies served dinners and suppers in a vacant storeroom and charged for them. The Rockwell people turned this matter over to the ladies of the Baptist Church, who made their church a dining hall and left our ladies free, while at Cedar Rapids the Aid Society served the meals free to all in the basement of the church. This was especially fortunate in view of the bad weather. In each case it was most bountiful and the variety affords an opportunity to study the question of entertainment.

State Secretary Denny, of the I. C. C., and Miss Newcomer, of the C. W. B. M., presented their work forcibly. The interest in all the conventions was all that could be desired, the C. W. B. M. sessions being especially enthusiastic and business-like. Each district is to have an evangelist. The Sunday school workers of the state are to meet at Marshalltown next month to devise means to push that work more actively, and the Iowa state work ought to move forward with larger strides than ever before.

S. C. SLAYTON.

Our Budget.

—All hail, glad Easter Day!

—We celebrate a Risen Christ.

—Let the earth be filled with gladness, and all the people rejoice.

—A living Savior means a living church, imparting life to others.

—Christ's victory over death was a victory for humanity.

—Christ's death was supplemented by his resurrection. "He died for our sins and rose again for our justification."

—"If ye be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God."

—Next in importance to the fact of Christ's resurrection is the fact of our own resurrection with him into newness of life. In vain did Christ rise from the dead, so far as we are concerned, if we be not risen with him.

—Behold I tell you a mystery: we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet; for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed.

—A church that believes in the resurrection of Christ from the dead ought to be a triumphant missionary church, enlarging its borders, strengthening its stakes and planning for universal conquest.

—Each Easter Day should mark a fresh consecration of the church to its great mission of subduing the world to the reign of him who was dead and who is alive again forevermore.

—If one should ask for proof of Christ's resurrection, he might well be pointed to the church universal, which, in spite of its divisions and its errors, holds fast to its faith in him, manifests, in a measure at least, his life, and is a growing and a conquering power in the world.

—But now is Christ risen from the dead, the first fruits of them that sleep. For since by man came death, by man also came the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But each man in his own order; Christ the first fruits, afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming.

—Miss Josepha Franklin has reached home from India. She came earlier than she had expected, to see her sister, who is at death's door. Ramabai pronounced Miss Franklin one of the most heroic women in India. She is now at home in Bedford, Ind.

—Now that the million-vote movement is assuming encouraging proportions, it may become a landslide. The refusal of President McKinley to reconsider the action of Attorney Griggs on the anti-canteen bill seems to have aroused the temperance workers everywhere. All the anti-saloon and liquor traffic movements are in a more active state than for years, and none seem to be growing faster than the million-vote movement. If you would know more of this movement write to Charles E. Stokes, Mexico, Mo. State superintendent of the movement for Missouri, or to W. G. Dean, 1119 Woman's Temple, Chicago. You can get pledges in blank of Mr. Stokes.

—Much of the indifference that is prevalent in regard to our Home Mission work is due to our lack of acquaintance with the facts. Our strength lies in the states of Ohio with 565 churches, Illinois with 810 churches, Indiana with 790 churches, Iowa with 560 churches, Missouri with 1,482 churches, and Kentucky with 820 churches, a total of 5,017 churches—all beyond is Home Mission ground for our plea for Christian union.

—It is time to begin preparation for our May offering. Do not neglect it nor postpone it.

—The Presbyterian Church seems to lack room within for great men. The latest departures from its ministry on account of its creed are Prof. McGiffert, successor of Dr. Briggs in Union Theological Seminary, and Dr. Hillis, successor to Lyman Abbott, Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, New York. These men have saved their church the trouble of further heresy trials by resigning.

—Now that the March collection for the Foreign Mission Society has been taken, we should look earnestly at the needs of the Home Missionary Society. It would be a pity if, this year, we should rob Peter to pay Paul. This is the silver jubilee year of the Foreign Society, and it is the aim of all its friends to raise at least $200,000 for our foreign missionary work. But while doing this we ought to increase our contributions to the Home Missionary Society. Last year was its jubilee celebration, and yet the contributions to the Foreign Society were increased rather than diminished. This year should increase the contribution to our home work. To accomplish this will require energetic and prayerful service. But this should be freely rendered. We do not doubt that it will be. We cannot believe that our home work will be allowed to suffer because of any increase of interest in our foreign work. The work of the two societies is practically one. They are the two arms that sustain the church—the body—in its efforts in behalf of world-wide missions. Let us get ready for the May collection for the Home Society, so that the response may be somewhat commensurate with the great needs of the work.

—The Christian Church in Paris, Mo., has ordered a new pipe organ of Geo. Kilgen & Son of this city, to be delivered by July first. The organ is to cost $1,500. Kilgen & Son are builders of high-grade church organs, having furnished organs for a number of churches, are fine, reliable men to deal with and their advertisement in this paper is worthy of the consideration of any church or person contemplating either a church or a parlor organ. We have just learned that the Christian Church in Madisonville, Ky., J. L. Hill pastor, has also ordered a new pipe organ of this firm at $1,350.

—We need to know the ripeness of the home field. Our Home Board organized sixty-three churches last year and received 9,996 additions into the churches, an average of over seventy-seven for each missionary employed. The next in number of additions was the Lutheran missionaries, who received nineteen additions for each missionary employed. This record speaks well for the ripeness of our great home field.

—The time for the one offering for Home Missions is the first Lord's day in May. That day is near at hand. Every congregation should begin preparation for this great offering. Make it a glad day. Decorate the church with flags and flowers, sing happy songs, make the services joyous, reach every member, and the good will be, not only in a liberal offering, but in a blessed and happy church.

—The missionary commission stands at the close and not at the beginning of the Savior's life. He must pass through all the experiences of the life of men; be tempted, burdened, reviled, rejected, sorrow, be crucified and rise again—then he could say: "All authority is given me in heaven and earth to preach the gospel to every nation." To spread this glorious gospel is the chief work of the Church of God. God uses men and nations in his great purposes, and to-day, humanly speaking, the winning of the United States to the gospel is the supremest work to be done. America for Christ, that Christ may win the world.

—The church in Sioux Falls, S. D., knows how to run a church without a pastor. They report regular services—Sunday-school, Y. P. S. C. E. and a midweek prayer-meeting—all well attended and thirteen additions since last October. However, they are arranging for a regular pastor soon.

—In New Hampshire we have not a church that is simply Christian; in Vermont we have only two churches; in Rhode Island only one; in Connecticut only three; in New Jersey only two; in Delaware, two; in New Mexico only six small churches; in Arizona, two; in Utah, two; in Nevada, none; in Wyoming, four; in Idaho but six—in these twelve states we have but thirty small churches; in the six strong states over 5,000 churches. Ye that are strong ought to bear the burdens of the weak.

—S. M. Fowler, of Kalamazoo, Mich., writes in praise of eight lectures recently delivered there by G. K. Berry, pastor of the church in Ionia, Mich., on the "Eight Greatest Christian Bodies in the World." A better knowledge of the religious bodies of the world would be helpful to the majority of our churches. This is a line of study not as familiar to the church people to-day as it should be.

—Faith is the soul's vision of things not seen by mortal eyes, yet the men of faith and they only lead the world's life. By faith our fathers made their great plea for the union of all God's people; by faith they preached the plan and platform of Christian union to be the return to God's Word as the only rule of faith and practice. By faith our missionaries go out to lay the foundations of churches that do not yet exist; but God blesses their faith. Last year our missionaries organized 63 churches and brought 9,996 persons into these churches—a work of faith and the result of faithful work. In faith our Home Board is planning larger things for the future. Let us support their work of faith and labor of love by generous offerings the first Lord's day in May.

—April 1st was a memorable day with the church in Independence, Mo. It was the 75th anniversary of the birth of Bro. Procter, who for forty years has been the pastor of that church. The interior of the church and the pulpit were beautifully decorated for the occasion and the services were peculiarly impressive. Before the sermon, by Bro. Procter, he referred to his life work in Independence in away that touched all hearts. The sermon was a beautiful presentation of the Christ-life. After the sermon Bro. A. R. Higgason spoke for the congregation in a most tender and loving way; and he in turn was followed with appropriate remarks by their new minister, R. L. Cave. Many brethren from Kansas City were present and the house could not hold the people that gathered to do honor to their beloved pastor and distinguished preacher of the gospel of Christ.

—The delay in securing the necessary reduction in railroad rates to Kansas City caused a delay in securing the great Convention Hall in that city for the use of our National Convention next October, until the hall was rented for that month. This caused some uncertainty for a time as to whether it would be better to go to Kansas City this year. It has been decided, however, that as another new hall is being built which will probably be ample to accommodate our convention, to carry out our original design of going there if the railroads do their duty, as they now seem inclined to do. This was the sentiment of the brethren who attended the Indianapolis Congress. We see that the Convention Hall has been destroyed by fire, but it is to be rebuilt by July 4 for the National Democratic Convention. The other hall also, we are assured, will be built in time for our use in October.

—The live preacher is preparing for the great Home Offering; he is preparing a great sermon on some phase of that great work. He will study and study until his heart thrills with his message, and then he will stir the fountains of the souls of the people. What a theme! "America for Christ," the ripe harvest, the world-wide influence, the victories of the plea for Christian union, the leadership of divine Providence, showing us the whole land for our inheritance. The wise preacher will plan and study to make this day one of the great days of the year—one whose inspirations and benedictions will remain in the church like sweet incense throughout the year.

—F. C. Cook, pastor of the East Broadway Church, Sedalia, Mo., in a recent letter to us says: "Bro. J. S. Myers, of Philadelphia, Pa., has been with me twenty days and has conducted a meeting, the like of which I never saw, viz., 140 accessions in that time." The meeting closed March 3. This was certainly a remarkable meeting. Bro. Myers was passing through Sedalia on his way to Ft. Worth, Texas, to which place he has been called to become pastor of the church there and stopped to see his friends, with the result stated.

—It has been the custom of many schools and churches to make an offering on Easter for the Christian Orphans' Home, and these are preparing for alike grace next Sunday. And now that the Orphans' Home is overflowing, and to this benevolent work has been added a mothers' and babies' home, the opportunity for this grace to abound has been greatly enlarged. The Benevolent Association is greatly desirous for a greatly increased offering for their work on Easter day. Read what Mrs. O. C. Shedd has to say about their work in another part of this paper and see how the Lord is enlarging this work in their hands.

—Dr. B. B. Tyler, who has been conducting one of his characteristic meetings in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, has gone to Cleveland, Ohio, where he will spend a few days with his brother, J. Z. After this visit he will go to Danbury, Conn., where he is to assist E. Jay Teagarden in a meeting beginning April 15. From there he will go to New York to attend the meeting of the International Sunday-school Lesson Committee, which meets April 25, and we presume also the great Ecumenical Conference on Missions, which will then be in session in New York City. Of the work in Iowa and of the Cedar Rapids church and its pastor Bro. Tyler speaks in very encouraging and praiseworthy terms.

—Drury College, Springfield, Mo., is to hold a Summer School for the benefit of progressive teachers who desire better to equip themselves for their work. The school will begin June 28th and last 43 days of actual recitation. Write the president, Homer T. Fuller, for particulars. Drury is so located as to accommodate many teachers who may feel the need of better preparation.

Free - - -

On receipt of postal card request we will forward our . . .

Special Catalogue No. 22

Which is just from the press.

It is a bargain list of Books at Half Price.

Christian Pub. Co., St. Louis.

—Harvard University has a Summer School of Theology from July 5th to 21st. Courses will be offered in three departments of theological study: The New Testament, Homiletics and the History Religions. No doubt many of our Western ministers could avail themselves of one of these courses with profit while becoming acquainted with the historic scenes about Cambridge and Boston.

—Mrs. W. W. Dowling, wife of the editor of our Sunday-school papers and Commentaries, was compelled recently to undergo a very critical surgical operation and has been in the hospital for two weeks. The family and friends have been exceedingly anxious concerning her. So unusual was the operation that even the surgeon could give no word of hope for a time. We are glad to report, however, that she is slowly though steadily improving, and there is good ground to hope for her recovery. Throughout this trying ordeal Sister Dowling has manifested a degree of courage and resignation worthy of the Christian heroine that she is. Our readers will join with us in the hope and prayer that she will be spared to her husband and family.

—"The Debate on the Roman Catholic Religion" continues to be a leader in our book department. The public has appreciated our offer of this great book, better known as the "Campbell-Purcell Debate," and orders are being received by scores. It contains 360 pages, is bound in cloth, and the price is $1.00, postpaid.

—Mrs. Texie Lipscombe, of Jacksonville, Fla., writes most encouragingly of Bro. J. T. Boone's work for the church in that city. Jacksonville is the key to Florida, and we are glad to learn of the good work that is being done there by Bro. Boone.

—The Christian Endeavor Society of the Mt. Cabanne Church was so successful in its missionary contest, March 4, raising over $150 thereby, that they think of renewing the effort and raising $500 for missions this year. Captains were named as for an old-fashioned spelling school and the society, divided one by one by the captains, and then these two armies started out to get each the largest list of contributors to the cause of missions. Any amount whatever enlisted a name on one or the other side of the contending armies with the result stated. There was a pleasant rivalry in this work and a stimulus about it that seemed to make it enjoyable to all as well as profitable to the cause of missions.

—On March 30 the House Committte on Insular Affairs gave a hearing on the Gillett bill, which forbids the retailing of distilled liquors in the Philippines. Amendments were asked to make the bill forbid the sale of all intoxicating liquors in all our new islands. The speakers were Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, Rev. J. B. Bunn, D. D., Rev. E. C. Dinwiddie, Hon. S. E. Nicholson, Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis and Rev. A. S. Fiske, D. D. The hearing was taken stenographically and all who want the facts should at once apply, each to his own congressman, who will have his quota for distribution. The passage of the bill, with amendments intimated above, should be urged at the same time upon all congressmen, and particularly upon the committee: Henry A. Cooper, Wisconsin; Joseph G. Cannon, Illinois; Robert R. Hitt, Illinois; Sereno E. Payne, New York; William P. Hepburn, Iowa; Eugene F. Loud, California; James A. Tawney, Minnesota; Joseph W. Babcock, Wisconsin; William H. Moody, Massachusetts; Edgar D. Crumpacker, Indiana; William A. Jones, Virginia; John W. Maddox, Georgia; James R Williams, Illinois; Robert L. Henry, Texas; Henry W. Carmack, Tennessee; Henry D. Clayton, Alabama; Joseph C. Sibley, Pennsylvania.

"Half a Loaf is Better Than No Bread."

Who would be satisfied with half-health? Whole health is possible to him who realizes and uses his knowledge. The leaven of the whole loaf of health is Hood's Sarsaparilla. There is no medicine like it for arresting and dissolving all blood impurities.

Bad Stomach — "My stomach troubled me, I was drowsy, had no energy and suffered severely from sore mouth and gatherings in my ears. Hood's Sarsaparilla has completely cured me." Louie Jeffries, New Philadelphia, Ill.

Never take any substitute when you call for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Remember

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

—Quite a number of orders are being received for "Christian Baptism," by Alexander Campbell. It is a volume of over 400 pages, bound in calf. In it Mr. Campbell has treated of the antecedents and consequents of baptism, the "form" of baptism, the design of baptism and the proper subjects for baptism. Fifty cents is a wonderfully low price for such a work.

—F. H. Lemon, of Lake City, Iowa, reports $113 for Home Missions, raised by the church there on the first Sunday in April. They are a month ahead of time on the calendar, but not before it was needed. Then besides, some churches have to be previous in order to spur up others to their duty.

—The Foreign Society has just received $2,000 from a brother and a sister on the annuity plan. This makes the annuity fund amount to over $83,000. We renew our prediction that the annuity fund of the Foreign Society will reach $100,000 before Sept. 30th.

—The friends and patrons of the Christian Publishing Company will be pleased to know that the orders for Sunday-school supplies for the second quarter of 1900 have surpassed those of any other quarter in the history of the company. Our presses have been worked to their utmost capacity to keep up with demands.

—In our English Topics this week the writer, speaking of the certainties of the near future in England, among other things says: "The landlords and nobility will also be hurled from their social supremacy and there will be a great uprising of the laboring classes to demand a larger share of the good things of this life. They are growing weary of being taught to look to the next world for comfort, for justice and for any of the things which a human has a right to aspire after." This is significant language. A few years ago it would have been called anarchistic language; but the fact which it embodies has become too prominent to be denied. Neither is this condition peculiar to England. The same trend of things may be seen in each of the European and our own nation. There is no movement growing like socialism. In our own country the two older and stronger parties are plainly diverging the one toward imperialism and the other toward socialism. There is no mistaking the signs of the times. Our brother's words above quoted are prophetic.

—"Christian Science Dissected," by A. D. Sector, is a work now in hand, which will be ready for delivery about May 1. It will be a book of about 75 pages, in paper covers, and will sell for 25 cents. There is not a dull line in the book. The author gets down to business in his first sentence and keeps things lively until the last line. He has been able to see the humor of Christian Science, as well as its folly and its wickedness, and the reader will be entertained as well as instructed.

—Briney's Monthly for April is upon our table —a neat, well-printed magazine, and, of course, ably edited. It is published at Paris, Mo., at 50 cents per year. In this last issue the editor, referring to a former critique on an article in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, on the Holy Spirit, and to the fact that we made no reply thereto, says:

Whether this silence is to be attributed to supposed insignificance on the part of the Monthly, an indisposition on the part of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST to discuss important issues for fear of being regarded as "controversial," a preference to have but one side of this vital question, or that discretion which is the better part of valor, we are unable to determine.

No disrespect to the Monthly is intended, brother, whatever force there may be in the other possible causes mentioned. We have a great demand both on our time and space, and cannot possibly discuss all the subjects which are of sufficient importance to justify it. We must, too, confess to a sort of disrelish for a controversy, conducted in the usual manner, upon so vital a question as the Holy Spirit. However, we may find time and space soon to consider the Monthly's criticisms, which we by no means regard as unanswerable.

DR. PIERCE'S Favorite
Prescription

"I am so grateful to you for your advice," says Mrs. Sidney B. Oakes, of Whitmell, Pittsylvania Co., Va. "When I commenced your medicines I had been treated by different doctors for three months or more, but would only receive partial relief for a short while and then would be worse than before. Was confined to my bed most of the time. At the time I commenced your treatment my left side was completely paralyzed. Had no desire to eat anything; bowels costive all the time. Nerves were all unstrung, so I could not bear the least noise. I also suffered from diseased ovaries and female weakness. But thanks to my Maker and you, after following your advice, I am able to do all my washing, sewing and house work in general. I haven't had a spasm in two months. Left off medicines about one month ago. Didn't think it necessary to continue them longer. I have taken about seven bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, seven of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and two vials of 'Pleasant Pellets.' I heartily recommend those medicines to all suffering as I was."

makes weak women
STRONG, sick women
WELL.

—We desire to cal the special attention of our readers to the most attractive and liberal book offers made in this issue of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST by the Christian Publishing Company. As a general rule, when a business house advertises articles at "half price," "below cost," "wonderful bargains," etc., it may be safely assumed that it is endeavoring to dispose of a lot of worthless, unsalable stuff, for which it is glad to get any price. But any one having even a slight knowledge of books can readily see that we are offering, at phenomenally low prices, standard, live books, of genuine and real value. These offers cannot continue forever. They are made subject to withdrawal at any time, and should be taken advantage of at once.

—N. J. Aylsworth's little book on "Frequency of the Lord's Supper" is a gem. I could wish that a hundred thousand copies might be read. Such beautiful writing and such deep thinking deserve a wide appreciation. GILBERT S ELLIS.

—The Ecumenical Conference on Foreign Missions which convenes in New York April 21, is to be one of the events to crown the closing century. In a letter from the general secretary, Dr. Baldwin, he says:

The delegates are a selected body of men and women who represent the intelligence and devotion of the Christian world. These are leaving home and business at a great sacrifice of time, breaking in upon important duties to attend upon a larger and more far-reaching service in extending the benefits of the work begun in Jerusalem to the uttermost part of the earth. Bankers and merchants and men in public life will leave their offices; many city pastors will temporarily vacate their pulpits; while the army of devoted, faithful workers throughout the church, both men and women, will make equal sacrifices to attend. The note of the conference will be one of triumphant faith. It will be a joyous festival to celebrate the victories of the cross, with its visions of the multiplied millions born into the kingdom during the coming century. Workers from the home land and missionaries from the field will be lifted out of the drudgery of the steady, plodding work in which they have been engaged into a vivifying atmosphere of faith and hope.

—Of the Campbell and Purcell debate A. M. Growden, of Findlay, O., says:

I wish to say that this is one of the finest works against Catholicism. For those who wish clear-cut argument and telling facts it is the thing. At $1.00 it is sold at an exceedingly low figure.

—The damage to our church building has been fully repaired, and we now have a most beautiful auditorium. Evangelist J. V. Updike begins a series of gospel services with us April 15, and we cordially invite our brethren within reach of Paris to enjoy these services with us.

W. N. BRINEY.

Paris, Mo., March 5, 1900.

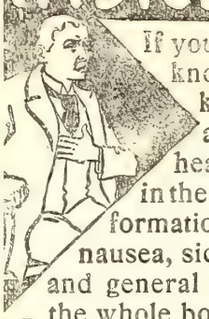
—Dr. Jesse Bowman Young, editor of the Central Christian Advocate, of this city, is having some experience that is liable to befall an editor that seeks to be true to his readers and to the advancing knowledge of the church. Another member of the Advocate family, it seems, has been charging our neighbor with "infidelity" and with "being committed to destructive biblical criticism," and so on. The Omaha Advocate, in connection with Evangelist Munhall, have worked up some feeling against the Central Christian Advocate on such charges as these, and Dr. Young comes back on them, in his issue of the 4th inst., in a way that leaves no room to doubt his opinion of his detractors and his loyalty to the essential faith. Among other things he says:

We have discriminated carefully between those who are studying the Bible to attack and overthrow it, and those on the other hand who are studying the Word in order to defend it. We have not hesitated to point out that many of the higher critics in this country and England—such as George Adam Smith, Dr. Sanday, of Oxford, and Dr. M. R. Vincent, of New York City—are constructive and loyal Christian scholars, and that their work tends to the creation of new foundations for our faith, and not to the destruction of the old ones.

So far as our own church is concerned we have protested against newspaper trials for heresy, and we have stood for the rights of Christian scholarship to investigate the origin and history of the books of the Bible without being placed under a ban therefor. . . . We have simply taken the ground that many of these great scholars who are called higher critics are doing a noble work for the church and that the massing of them all into one body and the labeling of them as "destructive" and "infidel" is a foolish piece of business. We have pointed out in detail the advantages which have accrued to the church from the methods and the work of these scholars, and have indicated our conviction that in this transitional period through which we are passing their labors have been invaluable.

—In "A Literary Curiosity," page 378, March 22, line No. 20 should be credited to Byron instead of Bryant. And in line No. 13 the word "not" should be omitted. These mistakes are pointed out to us by Mrs. Mattie Dever, of Hume, Ill.

INDIGESTION



If you have it, you know it. You know all about the heavy feeling in the stomach, the formation of gas, the nausea, sick headache, and general weakness of the whole body.

You can't have it a week without your blood being impure and your nerves all exhausted. There's just one remedy for you——

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

There's nothing new about it. Your grandparents took it. 'Twas an old Sarsaparilla before other sarsaparillas were known. It made the word "Sarsaparilla" famous over the whole world.

There's no other sarsaparilla like it. In age and power to cure it's "The leader of them all."

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

Ayer's Pills cure constipation.

"After suffering terribly I was induced to try your Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles and now feel like a new man. I would advise all my fellow creatures to try this medicine, for it has stood the test of time and its curative power cannot be excelled." I. D. GOOD,
Jan. 30, 1899. Browntown, Va.

Write the Doctor.

If you have any complaint whatever and desire the best medical advice you can possibly receive, write the doctor freely. You will receive a prompt reply, without cost. Address
DR. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.

Personal Mention.

Sumner T. Martin has begun his work in Omaha. His address in that city is 2628 Capitol Avenue. He writes encouragingly of the outlook there.

J. M. Tennison, field agent for the Benevolent Association of the Christian Church, called at this office on last Friday, on his way to Nebraska.

D. H. Patterson, of Auburn, N. Y., will spend a season in Carbondale, Kan., for rest and recuperation. His physician has refused him the privilege of preaching until his health has been recruited.

Geo. F. Hall is conducting a revival meeting in the tabernacle, Decatur, Ill., in which he is assisted by Mr. Bilhorn, a renowned singer and soloist. The meetings are attracting large crowds.

L. D. Hill, of Alma, Ill., writes that he would like to locate with a church not able to employ a man at a high salary. He has been holding meetings during the winter, but would prefer a location for the summer.

T. L. Noblitt will hold a meeting for the South Side Church, Kansas City, Kan., beginning April 15th. He says the work at Liberty and Richfield, Ill., is prospering and that both of these churches contributed to Foreign Missions. We hope that they will also contribute to Home Missions next month.

D. G. Wagner, of Lordstown, O., spent a very pleasant Lord's day, April 1st, with his parents at Mt. Morris, Ill., and while there his two nephews confessed their Savior and were baptized the same day. He has received a unanimous call to remain with the church at Lordstown another year.

W. T. Moore is able to walk with his crutches, once more. He thinks he will not suffer any permanent lameness from the painful accident which has kept him indoors so long. His friends will be glad to learn this, and to know that he hopes to be in the field soon in the interest of the Bible College.

F. M. Rains, treasurer Foreign Missionary Society, who has been suffering for several weeks with facial paralysis, has gone to Hot Springs to test the efficacy of these waters. His host of friends and the friends of our Foreign Mission work sincerely hope that he may find relief and that his illness will not interfere with his contemplated visit to our missions in foreign lands.

Baxter Waters, pastor Central Christian Church, this city, has been sojourning a fortnight at Eureka Springs, Ark., to recuperate his health. He returns much improved. Chancellor Hardy, of Christian University, filled his pulpit for him on the one Lord's day of his absence, giving good satisfaction.

L. W. Spayd closed his late pastorate at Willoughby, O., March 1st. He is now pastor at Shreve, O., having begun there March 4th. His three weeks' meeting there recently closed with nine added to the church by primary obedience. The church at Shreve numbers 400 members. Bro. Spayd and the church seem mutually pleased with their engagement.

Professor H. L. Willett, of the Disciples' Divinity House, University of Chicago, sends us a card on his return home from the Indianapolis Congress, containing a farewell salute as he starts on his tour among the English churches, where he is to lecture on the Bible. His address for the next three months will be 73 Ludgate Hill, London, care of Christian Commonwealth.

F. P. Arthur, of Grand Rapids, and G. K. Berry, of Ionia, Mich., exchanged pulpits on March 25, and both spoke to large audiences and enjoyed the day. Bro. Berry has recently delivered a course of lectures in Kalamazoo on "Greek Church," "Roman Church," "Luther," "Church of England," "Calvin," "Wesley," "The Baptists" and "The Disciples." The people took great interest in the history of these churches.

Stockport, Ohio, has just emerged from a crusade against the saloons. March 29th, R. R. Bulgin, of Scranton, Pa., was called from his meeting at Tabor, Ohio, to lead the temperance forces. Sunday, April 1st, he spoke to packed houses. The verdict of the citizens was against the saloons. Monday evening the rumsellers had the blues. On the other hand there was much rejoicing among the people of God. Bro. Bulgin will continue a meeting for the brethren of the town.

Wonderful Cures By Swamp-Root.

Deacon Pollard Finds Swamp-Root Present Help in Time of Trouble.

Among the many famous cures of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, the ones which we publish this week for the benefit of the ST. LOUIS CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST readers, speak in the highest terms of the wonderful curative properties of this great remedy.

Deacon Charles F. Pollard, a prominent Baptist deacon of Lynn, Mass., residing at 74 High Rock Street, adds his testimony to the wealth of others, as to the wonderful curative effects of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. Deacon Pollard on Jan. 2nd writes:

"For years I had kidney and bladder troubles, and was also a victim of acute rheumatism in my arms and legs. The pains from the latter affection were very hard to bear. I tried many doctors and medicines without benefit. Some time ago I commenced to take Swamp-Root. It has entirely cured my rheumatism and has greatly helped my other troubles. I should not think of keeping house without having Swamp-Root as a conspicuous feature of the housekeeping utensils.

"I can always speak in the highest praise of its health-giving properties."

C. F. POLLARD.

DEACON C. F. POLLARD.

What a Woman Says of Swamp-Root.

Mrs. H. N. Wheeler, of 268 Boston St., Lynn, Mass., writes on Dec. 11, '99: "About 18 months ago I had a very severe attack of grip. I was extremely sick for three weeks, and when I was finally able to leave my bed I was left with excruciating pains in my back. My water at times looked very like coffee. I could pass but little at a time, and then only after suffering great pain. My physical condition was such that I had no strength and was all run down. The doctors said my kidneys were not affected, but I felt certain that they were the cause of my trouble. My sister, Mrs. C. E. Littlefield, of Lynn, advised me to give Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root a trial. I procured a bottle, and inside of three days commenced to get relief. I followed up that bottle with another, and at the completion of this one found I was completely cured. My strength returned, and to-day I am as well as ever. My business is that of canvasser. I am on my feet a great deal of the time, and have to use much energy in getting around. My cure is, therefore, all the more remarkable, and is exceedingly gratifying to me."

MRS. H. N. WHEELER.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood; that is their work.

So when your kidneys are sick you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince you—and you may have a sample bottle free for the asking.

When your kidneys are not doing their work, some of the symptoms which prove it to you are pain and dull ache in the back, excess of uric acid, gravel, rheumatic pains, sediment in the urine, scanty supply, scalding irritation in passing it, obliged to go often during the day and to get up many times during the night to empty the bladder; sleeplessness, nervous irritability, dizziness, irregular heart, breathlessness, sallow, unhealthy complexion, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, loss of ambition, general weakness and debility.

Swamp-Root is used in the leading hospitals, recommended by skillful physicians in their private practice; and is taken by doctors themselves who have kidney ailments, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy that science has ever been able to compound.

Sample Bottle Free.

To prove its wonderful curative properties, send your name and address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., when you will receive free of charge a sample bottle of Swamp-Root and a valuable book by mail prepaid. This book contains many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who owe their good health, in fact, their very lives to the wonderful curative properties of this world-famous kidney remedy. Swamp-Root is so remarkably successful that our readers are advised to write for a free bottle and be sure and mention reading this generous offer in the ST. LOUIS CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles at the drug stores everywhere.

CHANGES.

C. B. Dabney, Mt. Pulaski to Milton, Ill.
R. J. Smith, Stockport to Lenox, Ia.
W. H. Hensley, Cambridge to Rock, Kan.
S. A. Cook, Shelby to Willoughby, O.
Will C. Cox, Collinsville to Edwardsville, Ill.
W. C. Hall, Chatham, N. Y., to Charlottesville, Va.
H. C. Littleton, Astoria to Harlan, Ill.
W. B Cochran, Aurora to Verona, Mo.
G. B. Van Arsdall, South Bend, Ind., to Peoria, Ill.

Correspondence.

English Topics.

THE TORY DUCK POND.

When, years ago, I lived for a time in the north of England, one of my kindest friends was the late Rev. S. M. Birrell, a famous Baptist, who preached in Liverpool as the contemporary of the equally popular Hugh Stowell Brown. The son of Mr. Birrell is to-day a noted member of Parliament. He is the author of a celebrated series of critical essays, "Obiter Dicta," which must surely be known in America. His speeches, especially on the platform outside of Parliament, are always delightful, and are read with eager attention all over the country, for their literary flavor and their genial good humor and witty dissertations. Speaking to a London audience a few days ago, Mr. Birrell dwelt at length on the political prospects, and he described Londoners generally as stagnating in the Tory duck pond. Now this duck pond of political Conservatism is a most extensive political preserve. Thousands of former progressive Liberals and Radicals are helplessly and hopelessly squatting in it. England has been, during the last 20 years, submerged under a tremendous deluge of Toryism. As long as Lord Salisbury is able to remain in active service this ascendancy is likely to continue. But as he is over 70, and can hardly bear the burden of office very much longer, there will before long be a sweeping change. That change will probably commence with the conclusion of this South African war. For many years, that is to say ever since Mr. Gladstone attempted to force on the country his Home Rule scheme for Ireland, and utterly failed to carry it, the wave of Conservative reaction has risen higher and higher. The British public were frightened into Toryism by the frightful violence of the Irish mutilators of cattle and butchers of landlords. The terrible assassination of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke, in Phœnix Park, Dublin, settled the matter. Home Rule was as good as dead after that. Mr. Gladstone had put Parnell in prison. Home Rule as a scheme flung British politics into utter chaos, and the new creation has not appeared yet. The people took refuge in reaction back to Toryism, sternly refusing to advance along the old lines of progress. But there are many signs of coming change. The old Liberal party, however, to which the people owe all their wonderful development and all their privileges, envied by the rest of Europe, is shattered forever. It will never rise into active life and strength again. We shall witness a reconstruction on entirely new party lines. Then will ensue astonishing events.

THINGS WHICH MUST HAPPEN.

Among the certainties of the near future are a few which it will be safe enough to specify. The great Church of England will be disestablished and disendowed. The Ritualist High Churchmen are alienating the good will of the nation by their traitorous complicity with Rome. The landlords and nobility will also be hurled from their social supremacy and there will be a great uprising of the laboring classes to demand a larger share of the good things of this life. They are growing weary of being taught to look to the next world for comfort, for justice and for any of the things which a human has a right to aspire after. "Otherworldliness," as Mrs. Humphrey Ward calls it, has been carried too far, and there is an extreme rebound from it in the sympathies of the common people, who have got embedded in their souls the notion that the clergy, the capitalists, the landlords and the aristocracy are all in league to monopolize in this life all that makes this earthly life happy, or even really endurable. Then there will come in like an irresistible tide that Liberal Imperialism, described so eloquently by Lord Rosebery, which I have already alluded to in these letters. That means that the British Empire is to become the greatest power on earth except only the American Republic, which will march on the same line of Imperialist Expansionism, if my American friends will allow me to make such an affirmation. When I was in America it seemed to me that America was beginning dimly to perceive her own magnificent destiny. And, of course, I detected that some did not want to see it. The American people, indeed, have not discovered how great a nation they are. They got a glimpse of the magnitude of their resources and their strength during the war with Spain, and should they be unfortunately involved at any time in a conflict with some really great power, they would astonish the world. That is what my own country is doing now. It is amazing Europe by the results of the South African war. So quick and crushing is the turn of affairs, now that our soldiers are really there. What would happen if our stupendous navy were called into play? There would be a thunderclap then that would create consternation in the hearts of England's enemies. Well, in the certainties of the near future is the fact that England will command a far larger army and a much larger fleet than ever before I speak of these matters because they are so serious. They will affect the history of the world. England has yet to face some mighty coalition of the powers which represent tyranny and repression.

THE DANGER SIGNAL.

In a few weeks there will be hosts of pleasure-seeking people hurrying across the narrow silver streak which separates this country from the Continent. Already in London great advertisements are being placarded of the Paris Exposition. Since Dreyfus was liberated the popular resolution here to boycott that Exposition has been for the most part forgotten. It will probably be a mighty success, for it will be a wonderful display, and Paris is the most fascinating spot on the earth. Frenchmen are determined to achieve a vast success, and I believe that they will do so. I trust they will do even more than they hope. England and France ought to be at eternal peace. France was once a great and gallant nation. She is a very mighty nation still, and there will be an immense awakening for those who imagine that she can be left out of the reckoning. I am grieved to say that I regard the outlook with regard to the intentions of the French people as being full of the most deadly peril. There is no doubt whatever that they are for the most part absolutely hungering and thirsting for war with this country. The feeling of Englishmen towards France is perfectly kind and friendly. We admire the great qualities of our lively and clever neighbors. But the sentiment is not reciprocated. There is something in the French temperament which necessitates intense and everlasting hatred of somebody. Formerly it was the English; then the Russians; next the Austrians; then the Germans; now it is the English again. And the average Frenchman wants to fight anybody whom he dislikes. He generally hates without the slightest cause or reason, though he is a genius at manufacturing imaginary causes of hostility. The day of mere pin-prick policy is gone. It is sad to know that throughout France the desire for war with England has taken deep root. This is the same sort of insane infatuation which brought about the awful war between France and Germany in 1870. Not an Englishman living would like to contemplate with willingness a conflict with France.There is not the slightest cause or pretext for such an unspeakable horror; but unreasoning rage against somebody is the rule in France. The French press is making it unhappily clear that France wants to keep the peace only till after the Exposition. There seems to be both a desire for war and an expectation that it will come as soon as that great Fair is over. Absit omen!

"THE TEARS AND BLOOD OF THOUSANDS."

At length England has come to the parting of the ways. Kruger and Steyn, the two most foolhardy of modern statesmen, have actually offered peace to Lord Salisbury! Think of that as a sample of superlative impertinence and assurance. They have not asked for peace, but have offered it on their own terms. They require that the independence of the two republics shall be secured as sovereign international states. They begin their overture by speaking of the tears and blood of thousands, caused by this war. It is a pity, indeed, that they did not think of such considerations before they issued their ultimatum. Of course,Lord Salisbury, with the calmness which always characterizes his diplomacy, replies to this cool demand to the effect that the British Government cannot undertake to recognize the independence of these two states. No government, indeed, which ventured to comply with Kruger's arrogant request would live a week. Never again will this nation tolerate any semi-independent military republics in South Africa. Before this war broke out no reasonable man of any party in Britain desired to deprive the republics of their internal independence. On the contrary, this country offered to guarantee the independence of the Transvaal, if Mr. Kruger would on his side grant a reasonable real measure of reform, submitting other questions in dispute partly to discussion at a friendly conference, partly to arbitration. This offer of Sept. 8 and Sept. 22 was rejected. Kruger's reply was the ultimatum, which Lord Salisbury rightly describes as "insulting" and the declaration of war at two days' notice, followed by the invasion of Natal and Cape Colony. The two presidents in their dispatch offering peace on their terms rightly describe the results of their abominable policy. It has caused "moral and economic ruin" in large portions in South Africa. Of course it has. But then these two men cared little enough for the havoc and ruin or for the blood and tears as long as their arms seemed to triumph. Nor have they seemed to think that the Almighty cared at all for the blood and tears and the varied misery and ruin, so long as he was supposed to be smiling with divine complacency on the victorious Boerarchy. But now that defeat has descended with crushing humiliation on this supercilious people, their leaders are trying what that clever French critic, M. Yves Guyot, pronounces an artful trick. He says that while professing to ask for peace, Kruger lays down obviously unacceptable conditions. Kruger acted at first as though the British were cowards. Having discovered his mistake he now seems to consider that they are fools. The miserable fact is that the Boer leaders do not show any real desire for peace. They do not ask for peace at all. They simply offer to Lord Salisbury conditions on which they are ready to restore peace. And the conditions are simply preposterous. M. Guyot thinks that the real motive is to hoodwink public opinion and to bid for foreign intervention. Such intervention could only be enforced by those rash enough to encounter the armed strength of the whole British Empire. There is only one spot where the English people are willing that peace should be signed. That spot is Pretoria.

W. DURBAN.

March 15, 1900.

43 Park Rd., South Tottenham, London.

Free Trial Lesson

n Bible course by mail. Take this course right at home. Diploma and degree when you finish. Terms only $1.00 per month. Write to Prof. C. J. Burton, Christian University, Canton, Mo.

New York Letter.

It is interesting to note the ease with which certain New York churches of differing faiths can unite or change from one name and form of doctrine to another. Negotiations are now going on between the Manhattan Congregational Church and the Bloomingdale Reformed, with a view to the amalgamation of the two. Since the resignation of the Rev. Madison C. Peters from the pastorate of the latter in order to become a Baptist minister, the Rev. Henry A. Stimson, pastor of the former, has sought the union of the two congregations. Under the ecclsiastical law governing both bodies, each will have to get the consent of their superiors. It is understood that the Manhattan Conference, the superior Congregational body, will readily consent. But since it means that the Reformed Church will become a Congregational body it is not so certain that Classis of New York will consent. If the union is effected the Manhattan church will pay off the $50,000 on the Bloomingdale church property and spend $10,000 more in improvements. Both bodies will occupy the Bloomingdale property and Dr. Stimson will be the pastor. The matter has gone so far that now it depends entirely upon the Classis of New York. If the union is effected it will be a conglomerate congregation, for Dr. Peters said he had people belonging to nine different denominations in his church when he resigned. It does look as if the financial question is uppermmost in most all these denominational exchanges and coalitions. Is not this one of the causes of the lack of influence upon the part of the church? The moment the Church of Christ becomes a financial institution her power for good is gone and justly so.

***

Bishop Henry C. Potter, having just returned from a tour of inspection through the Philippines, has given utterance to these words:

The religious situation in the Philippines is such as was to be expected in a colony of Spain. She has stamped her ecclesiastical traditions—narrow, intolerant and often corrupting—wherever she has gone, and she has gone almost everywhere among all the various islands of the archipelago, great and small. Worst of all, her religious orders, except perhaps the Jesuits, have robbed the people, wrung from them their lands and taxed the administration of the sacraments and ordinances of religion with a scale of exactions and impositions at once scandalous and outrageous.

If we are to retain these islands, and the undersigned are constrained to own, however they may differ from any of their associates as to the wisdom of orignally entering upon them, that no other course seems for the present open to the United States, these wrongs and the righting of them lie at the foundation of the whole Philippine problem. We must do justly in the Philippines, or God will have no use for us, and our presence there will inevitably redound to our national dishonor.

Yes, we should see to it that religious and educational influences are placed within reach of the 10,000,000 of benighted people of those fair islands. We are pleased that the Disciples of Christ will endeavor to do all they can toward evangelizing the archipelago of the Pacific.

***

Have you seen the statistical exhibit arranged and published by Bro. Benj. L. Smith, the secretary of the American Christian Missionary Society? Let me suggest this to every preacher among us: Study those tables carefully, have a large copy made to exhibit to your congregation, preach on "The Progress of the Pure Gospel" and illustrate it by an appeal to the chart. Read the editorial in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST of March 29th on this matter, it will start several valuable lines of thought. Then make an earnest appeal to the people to support and enlarge this glorious work of American evangelization. There is no question that the Disciples of Christ can practically take this country for Christ, our Lord and King, if only they will liberally support our splendid work of Home Missions. If each of our evangelists won on an average 77½ people to Christ when the very best any others could do was to win 19 persons (and from that down) ought we not to send two thousand men into this waiting harvest field? The time of our service will not last forever. Let us do for Christ now while we have the opportunity. Let every Disciple rally to the support of Home Missions by making a liberal offering to this work on the first Lord's day in May.

***

Dr. N. D. Hillis, pastor of the Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, has withdrawn from the Presbytery of Chicago on account of severe criticisms passed upon him by Prof. Herick Johnson and others, because of his attacks upon the doctrine of predestination set forth in the Westminster standard of faith. In his discourse Dr. Hillis said:

What! Read the story of Christ's life, love, suffering and death and then charge God with "particularly and unchangeably designing" the majority of his children to eternal torment?

I would rather shake my fist in the face of the Eternal and fling every vile epithet toward his stainless throne, where eternal mercy sits with the world's atoning Savior, than lift my hand, with that creed, toward God's throne and affirm that I taught or believed it.

Referring to it again he said with emphasis:

The Calvinistic Confession of Faith says that certain men and angels are foreordained to everlasting death, being "particularly and unchangeaably designed, and their number is so certain and definite that it cannot be either increased or diminished," and every young man who enters the Presbyterian Church has to solemnly swear to believe and teach this frightful view. And every attempt to revise and expel that statement from the creed has been successfully combated by a majority that wishes to retain the doctrine.

It would seem as if a man would prefer to be burned at the stake rather than hold or assert or charge such infinite cruelty upon the all-merciful and all-loving God. The day the scholastics wrote that chapter in the Confession of Faith they got the devil confused with God.

Upon learning that his old professors at McCormick Theological Seminary were sorely displeased at these utterances he immediately wrote to the Chicago Presbytery resigning from that body. Dr. Hillis says that one-third of the preachers and nine-tenths of the people in the Presbyterian Church do not believe these and other horrible doctrines of their Confession of Faith. Why do not our good Presbyterian brethren accept the all-sufficient standard of doctrine that needs no change? The New Testament Scriptures are good enough for the Disciples of Christ, will they not do for all?

***

Among the noble women of New York, whose hearts are in every good cause, none stand higher in the general public esteem than Miss Helen M. Gould, whose great fortune seemed to be held in trust for moral, educational and religious institutions. Her money goes into almost every good cause, and with it her sympathy and in many instances her personal efforts. The fact has just come to light that she is supporting ten chaplains in the army in the Philippines at an annual cost of $24,000. Many of the chaplains in the army refused to go to the Philippines, and had it not been for Miss Gould's generosity it is probable that the American soldiers in the army there would be almost without religious ministrations. Though she is exceptionally generous with her great wealth, she cannot begin to answer favorably one-tenth of the appeals made to her. It is stated that within one week the amount of money asked of her was above three hundred millions of dollars. These appeals certainly would annoy and confuse her did she not have her heart set upon doing good with her money. But the Lord will bless the small gift as well as the large one, if in accord wlth one's possessions.

S. T. WILLIS.

1281 Union Ave.

As Fresh as To-day's Bread and almost as indispensable. That's Uneeda Biscuit. It's not a noon-day novelty—it's an every-day necessity. You can always rely on the goodness, crispness, delicacy of

Uneeda Biscuit

Better now than ever.

Uneeda Jinjer Wafer

are baked in the same way and packed in the same unrivalled way as Uneeda Biscuit.

National Biscuit Company.

Spiritual Aspects of Baptism.

J. H. GARRISON—DEAR BROTHER: A few months ago I read in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST some chapters from a work by N. J. Aylsworth on "The Spiritual Aspects of Baptism." I was greatly impressed by them and hope that you may soon publish the book. It will surely make a notable addition to our literature. Just now I am enjoying his booklet on "Frequency of the Lord's Supper." It is a beautiful gem and deserves to be read by thousands. I have taken measures which will secure it a very general reading in the Adel church.

All Bro. Aylsworth's writings are [illegible]. They have a subtle charm of style about them and a rare power of spiritual suggestion. It is because there is so much to be gained by having the subject of baptism treated in its spiritual aspects that I am so anxious to see his book published. The chapters you gave us left a very favorable impression on my mind and I believe that the book will do great good. Yours truly,

GILBERT J. ELLIS.

Adel, Iowa, April 4, 1900.

[Referring to the above, we are glad to say that the manuscript of Brother Aylsworth's work on "The Spiritual Aspects of Baptism" is now undergoing a revision at his hands, and that it is the purpose of this company to bring out the same some time during the present year, if possible. Brother Ellis is not alone in the high esteem he places upon the articles which we have published on this subject from the pen of Brother A. Many have expressed similar sentiments and some of our preachers have read some of these articles from their pulpits. When the book is published we feel safe in saying that it will prove to be one of the most valuable contributions ever made to our religious literature.—EDITOR.]

Colorado Letter.

In my last letter I spoke of the beginning of the work of the Disciples of Christ in Colorado—that is to say, the beginning of their organized work. I have dwelt on immaterial things in these letters when speaking of the "Centennial State." But you desire to know something of the material treasures of the state. A single paragraph must answer for this purpose. A volume could be filled with a statement of facts concerning the material possibilities of Colorado. Its visible wealth is great: its invisible is greater. Just now gold is dominant. But gold is only one of the valuable metals in Colorado. Copper, lead and silver exist and abound as well as gold. I am sure you will be interested in the following statement concerning the output of gold in the Cripple Creek field. In 1891, $200,000 in gold were taken out of these now world-famous mines; in 1892 they yielded $600,000; in '93 the production was $2,500,000; in '94 it reached $4,000,000; in '95, $8,100,000; in '96, $10,000,000; in '97, $12,500,000; in '98, $15,602,000, and in '99, last year, the output reached the enormous sum of $20,346,342! The indications at present are that the yield of 1900 will be far in excess of any previous year since the discovery of gold in Cripple Creek.

The financial transactions relating to the Cripple Creek mines are carried on in Colorado Springs. These transactions are simply enormous—especially when the size of the town is considered. It is doubtful if there is another small city on earth in which such large transactions, measured by dollars, are carried on, day after day, as in Colorado Springs. The number of shares of mining stock sold on the "Colorado Springs Mining Stock Exchange," in 1898, was 65,576,029, and in '99 the number of shares sold was 238,045,750. The cash value of shares sold in '98 was $10,287,546.36, and in '99, $34,863,-425.07. If there were space to do so it would be interesting to go over the transactions month by month, and in this way show the steady increase of the business from 1891 to the close of 1899. But this is impossible in this letter. Ten years ago Colorado was known as the "Silver State." Great as is the production of gold, at the present time, the production of silver, in the mining camps of the entire state, from the beginning, not of Cripple Creek alone, has been much greater. It is no wonder that Colorado gave her vote for "free silver" in the national election of 1896. From the first Colorado has given to the world gold to the value of $227,947,110; but of silver her contribution has reached an aggregate of $349,162,788—an excess of silver over gold of $121,215,678. Do you wonder that Coloradians desired such political action as would enhance the value of their most abundant mineral product? Remember that for a number of years the value of silver, per ounce, has been comparatively small. But, notwithstanding this, the value of silver above that of gold in Colorado from the beginning is $121,215,678.

Colorado has become the leading gold-producing state since 1889, not alone because of the great discovery of new deposits of great richness, but because of the development of metallurgical science, which has in a sense created the gold, because it has made possible the recovery of the metal from low-grade ores in Colorado and elsewhere, which could not otherwise have been profitably worked. Such was formerly the only recognized guide in the search for gold. Now science is all-powerful, and luck has been relegated to the camps in a few remaining placer diggings. Instead of violent fluctuations in the production of gold, as in former years, we now have a constantly increasing output depending upon the amount of energy and capital expended in the mining industry.

See how my single paragraph has grown! A fitting illustration of the fact that when one begins to deal in the precious metals there is no knowing to what point it will carry him! Beware!

"The things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." Our interests are eternal. Let us give especial attention to them. The evangelization of men is, after all, the great work. Character endures. Building characters is far more important than building fortunes. Recall the story of "The Rich Fool," in the teaching of Jesus.

From Colorado to Iowa is no great distance. It can be passed over in a few hours and in perfect comfort. From mining in Colorado to mission work in Iowa is a great distance. But the transition has been made. I am now in Iowa—not in Colorado.

The Northeast District Missionary Convention, of the state of Iowa, was held in Cedar Rapids, March 26-29. It was a good meeting. This seemed to be a universal conviction. The attendance, for a district meeting, was large. The enrollment showed that more than a hundred and fifty persons were present. The entertainment was all that the most exacting could desire. The spiritual fellowship was most delightful. The Sunday-school work was made prominent. Knox P. Taylor, of Illinois, was present; his addresses and talks on Bible study and Bible school work were very helpful. Nor was Christian Endeavor neglected. The good women were to the front with the work of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions. Young preachers were much in evidence, as is eminently proper; and a fine company of young men they were, too. J. M. Rudy, the pastor of the Cedar Rapids congregation of Disciples of Christ, is a young man. He has been in the ministry only about ten years; but during this time he has done good work and has made a place for himself in the hearts of a multitude of good men and women. This northeast district has 56 congregations and 49 houses of worship. It has one church to every 9,186 persons in the district. Iowa is divided into five districts for convenience in evangelistic work. The growth of the Disciples in this state since 1890 has been quite encouraging. In 1890 there were 240 churches, 215 houses of worship, 153 preachers and 19,853 members. In 1899 there were 432 congregations, 379 houses of worship, 357 preachers and 50,000 members. But "there remains much land to be possessed." There are said to be 15 counties in the state in which there is not a single congregation of the Christian Church; there are 11 counties in which there is a single congregation in each county. In 39 counties we are practically unknown. There are 38 county seats in which we have no church. There remains, even in Iowa, "much land to be possessed" by the Disciples of Christ. There is a growth also of the missionary spirit. Last year 44 more congregations contributed to the support of state missions than contributed the year before. There was a similar increase in the number of Sunday-schools and Endeavor Societies contributing to this important work.

B. B. TYLER.

*In last week's Colorado Letter for Salt Lake City read Lake City.

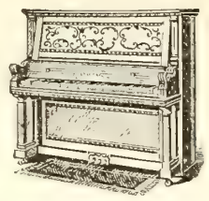
Rest and Health to Mother and Child.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over FIFTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, with PERFECT SUCCESS. It SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHŒA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" and take no other kind. Twenty-five cents a bottle.



JESSE FRENCH PIANOS

AND ORGANS HAVE BEEN RECOGNIZED AS THE MOST POPULAR INSTRUMENTS IN THE WHOLE SOUTHWEST FOR NEARLY THIRTY YEARS.

Our FACTORIES are among the LARGEST in the U. S.

CATALOGS FREE

Jesse French Piano & Organ Co.

HOME OFFICE ST. LOUIS MISSOURI

Branches, Agents & Representatives in all LARGE CITIES

Stomach Troubles

arise from many causes and often without any apparent reason. The stomach is a delicate and wonderfully important machine in the human factory, and needs the greatest care. The one cure that never fails in all stomach ailments, and that should be employed at the first symptom of digestive derangement is discovered by an old Swiss-German physician and in use over 100 years, though not extensively advertised. It regulates and strengthens the digestive organs while it purifies the blood and invigorates the system. It seldom fails to cure all diseases caused by impoverished or impure blood or from disordered stomach.

Dr. Peter's Blood Vitalizer

—The olden time remedy

No Drug-Store Medicine; is sold only by regular Vitalizer agents.

Persons living where there are no agents for Dr. Peter's Blood Vitalizer can, by sending $2.00, obtain twelve 35-cent trial bottles direct from the proprietor. This offer can be obtained only once by the same person.

Write to DR. PETER FAHRNEY,

112-114 South Hoyne Ave., Chicago.

AMERICA'S MOST POPULAR RAILROAD

CHICAGO AND ALTON RAILROAD

PERFECT PASSENGER SERVICE BETWEEN

ST. LOUIS AND CHICAGO,
ST. LOUIS AND KANSAS CITY,
ST. LOUIS AND PEORIA.
KANSAS CITY AND CHICAGO.

Direct connections at terminals and at junction points with through trains of connecting lines for

ALL POINTS NORTH, WEST AND EAST.

If you are contemplating a trip, any portion of which can be made over the Chicago & Alton, it will pay you to write to the undersigned for maps, pamphlets, rates, time tables, etc.

D. BOWES,
GEO. J. CHARLTON, General Western Passenger Agent, 216 North Broadway,
General Passenger and Ticket Agent, ST. LOUIS, MO.
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Washington (D. C.) Letter.

Richmond, Va., seems now the center of interest in our Eastern field. The dedication of the handsome Third Christian Church on March 18 was a happy consummation of years of laborious effort. In 1873, as a lad residing in Richmond, I can remember the dedication of the original church house, a small frame chapel on Twenty fifth Street, and the heroic efforts to secure a Sunday-school and congregation.

J. Z. Tyler, pastor of the Seventh St. Church, preached on Sunday afternoons and my father superintended the Sunday-school. For ten years the mission had a precarious existence. In 1885 a church was organized with sixty members and under the able ministry of W. J. Pettigrew began a remarkable career of growth and development. H. C. Garrison was pastor for fourteen months, during which time he added sixty-six to the membership and erected a brick chapel on the rear of a large lot which had been previously purchased. Your correspondent feels a special interest in the success of this congregation, for besides giving the benefit of his presence as a Sunday-school scholar he was instrumental in securing for them as pastors his college mates, H. C. Garrison and E. A. Cole. Duri .g Bro. Cole's ministry of five years the church became numerically one of the strongest in the state and a nucleus of $1,500 was raised for a building fund.

L. M. Omer continued the good work of his predecessors and for five years confirmed the faith of the disciples, added many to the saved and left them with the building fund grown to more than $3,000.

As Maryland and the District of Columbia churches had nearly a dozen Virginia men filling their pulpits they consented, in 1898, to let the Third Church take S. R. Maxwell from Rockville, Md. In sixteen months he has increased the membership from four hundred and ninety to five hundred and forty, built the new house of worship and raised $4,000 for the building fund.

The church is a handsome Gothic structure, built of brick trimmed with terra cotta. On the ground floor is a large Sunday-school room and all the conveniences of the modern church. The cost of the building and furnishing is $15,000.

The dedicatory services were held at 3:30 P. M. The house was packed and several hundred turned away. The chief interest centered in an address by Hon. J. Hoge Tyler, governor of Virginia. It is said the Governor was at his best and spoke in his happiest strain. Bros. Morgan and Minnick participated in the services and pastors of several neighborhood churches made brief congratulatory addresses. W. H. Book preached in the morning and evening. There were six confessions. The meeting so auspiciously begun continues with great interest.

***

Since Cary E. Morgan came to Richmond, in September, 1899, not only is the cause at Seventh St. Church taking on new life, but his influence is being felt throughout the state. The sad death of F. M. Anderson, state evangelist, seems a severe blow to state interests, but God will raise up another, and there are brighter times ahead for the Lord's work in the Old Dominion.

Marshall St. Church, Richmond, is also a subject for congratulation. After an acquaintance of eighteen years with Harry Minnick, their new pastor, I am sure no better man could have been found for this field. Bro. Minnick is a diligent student, an indefatigable worker and a wise and safe leader.

***

The Hagerstown (Md.) Church, under the leadership of Pastor P. A. Cave, is becoming truly an apostolic church. They are endeavoring to witness for Christ in Jerusalem, Samaria and unto the uttermost parts of the earth.

Evangelist W. H. Book and Pastor Cave held a three weeks' meeting in January in Hagerstown, the Jerusalem of the great Cumberland Valley. As a result of these meetings and the preaching since, nearly one hundred persons have been added to the First Church. During the past month Bro. Cave and his choir and leading workers have crossed the state line and conducted a three weeks' meeting in Martinsburg, W. Va. One evening several brethren chartered a car and took fifty eight over to the meeting. W. J. Cocke, of Virginia, and J. A. Hopkins, of Maryland, also rendered valuable assistance. When these efforts began to bear fruit objection was raised against the use of the courthouse by this strong sect. So the brethren decided to discontinue the meeting.

The Washington preachers have promised to keep up a weekly service until the summer, when our state tent will be pitched and a sustained effort made, which we are confident will result in the establishment of a strong church in this flourishing city. The Hagerstown church is also reaching out to the ends of the earth. Its offering for Foreign Missions was $153. It would not surprise us to hear that Hagerstown and its mother church, Beaver Creek, had become Living-Link churches and were supporting their own missionary in the foreign field.

***

The Washington churches seem to be committed to the plan of using home forces in the conduct of their protracted meetings. W. J. Wright lately closed a splendid meeting at the H St. Church, with twenty-five additions. We are now in the third week of an interesting revival at Ninth St., with more than forty added.

EDWARD B. BAGBY.

631 8th St., N. E.

The Singer No. 24.

AUTOMATIC CHAIN-STITCH.

The general advantages of this type of machine for family sewing comprise greatest ease and quietness of operation, simplicity of construction and the elasticity of the single thread seam. When needle is threaded the machine is ready, the stitch requiring neither bobbin nor shuttle. The thread is taken from one spool and is so interwoven and twisted that seam cannot rip unless its finished end be unlocked. When this is done, the entire length of thread can be quickly withdrawn without injury to the fabric.

Every genuine machine carries the trade-mark.

Sold on Instalments. You can try one Free. Old machines taken in exchange.

SINGER SEWING-MACHINES ARE MADE AND SOLD ONLY BY

THE SINGER MANUFACTURING CO.

OFFICES IN EVERY CITY IN THE WORLD.

Texas Letter.

The man who writes a strong book on a living theme makes all the world his debtor, and N. M. Ragland, pastor of the First Christian Church, Fayetteville, Ark., has done this. "Leaves From Mission Fields" is the modest title of this worthy book. It has 273 pages, is bound in cloth, is illustrated and makes a beautiful volume. The Christian Publishing Company never published a prettier book. The price is $1.00.

Bro. Ragland is an eloquent writer, and has fine command of the choicest English. He has always been an ardent friend and close student of the cause of missions, and but for feeble health would now be in the foreign field. This gives him peculiar fitness for the work in this book.

He has wisely chosen to associate the cause he pleads with fine choice spirits in the mission field, knowing that truth is always stronger when illustrated in the life of a strong personality. He gives us brief but admirable sketches of Mrs. Harriett Newell, Mrs. Ann Judson, Miss Hattie L. Judson, Mrs. Josephine Smith and Charles E. Garst. As we read these sketches we are thrilled and inspired by the courage and consecration of these saintly heroes.

The first three, belonging to the early stages of modern missions, are well known to the world. The last two are of our own number, and for that cause appeal especially to our own hearts. This book deserves a wide reading.

"The Church on Trial" is another good book. It is from the clear, forcible pen of W. K. Homan, and consists of a report of the trial of the celebrated case of the First Christian Church, McGregor, Tex. It embraces a clear statement of our teaching from F. N. Calvin, A. Clark and W. L. Harrison, with a full presentation of the law bearing upon the title to church property. Bro. Homan is a lucid writer and a fine lawyer, and this important work could not have fallen into better hands. The book fills an important niche in our literature, and it will be a standard of authority in its sphere. Bound in cloth and paper, and 148 pages.

The church at Santa Anna will build soon. A lot has been secured and the money is being raised. T. D. Secrest is always doing something of this kind.

Vineland, Collin county, held their first service in their new house on March 19. R. C. Horn, the pastor, led in this good work. G. A. Faris preached the opening sermon. Not a dollar of debt had to be provided. This is as it should be. Let us beware of debt.

Judge Anson Rainey, one of the elders of the Central Church in this city, has been appointed by Gov. Sayers to the position of Chief Justice of the Court of Civil Appeals of the Fifth District of Texas, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge Findley. The Courier, speaking of this appointment, well says: "The Governor has done himself credit and the state a valuable service in this appointment."

Our next state missionary convention, Paris, June 12-15, is not far away. The Paris people are at work and the program will soon be ready. A great meeting is anticipated.

M. M. DAVIS.

833 Live Oak St., Dallas, Tex.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Hall's Family Pills are the bes

C. W. B. M. and Consolidation.

During the discussion of the question of the consolidation of our missionary societies at the Indianapolis Congress, Mrs. O. A. Burgess, rising to speak on the subject, asked whether the scheme of consolidation proposed included the Christian Woman's Board of Missions. No one else answering, the editor of this paper, having in mind what he himself had advocated, and the resolutions which had been passed by some of our ministerial associations in the cities, answered that it did not. Bro. McLean has written us that he thinks we were mistaken, and referred to the resolution passed at the Jubilee Convention. The following note bearing on the same subject has just been received:

I beg leave to call your attention to the following clipping from the minutes of the National Convention, which indicates that the C. W. B. M. is officially included in the motion that gave rise to the appointment of a committee.

F. G. Tyrrell, of Chicago, presented the following motion:

"That a committee of two be appointed to consider the unification of our various interests, missionary, benevolent and educational work, and that the Executive Boards, F. C. M. S., and the C. W. B. M. and the B. A. A. C. be requested to appoint a similiar committee, such joint committee to report to the convention of 1900.

"This motion was carried, and the chair appointed George Darsie and Jabez Hall as said committee."

I have no doubt you will take pleasure in correcting your statement. This clipping is taken from page 101 of the minutes of the Jubilee Convention of the American Christian Missionary Society. Your brother, B. L. SMITH.

There is nothing in the foregoing resolution to conflict with our answer to Sister Burgess. It refers to unification, not to consolidation. Besides, the resolution had one single intent, namely, to get the whole subject before the next convention for consideration, and to have a committee to present the matter, after due consideration, in such form as the convention could act upon it intelligently. It did not aim to suggest how far unification was desirable. In some cases it might only mean a closer affiliation, a better understanding, or harmony of policy, as between the C. W. B. M. and F. C. M. S. In other cases it might involve the blending of two societies into one, as the A. C. M. S. and the F. C. M. S. In the case of the benevolent work, the various branches of that, as Ministerial Relief, Orphans' Home, Old Folks' Home, etc., might be brought under one management. But these are the matters which the committee was to consider and report upon to the Kansas City convention.

But our reply to the question of Sister Burgess had reference to no specific resolution, but to what was in the mind of the brethren who have expressed themselves as favorable to a closer unification of our missionary organizations and who have brought this matter before the brotherhood. We are sure we are not mistaken in saying that the consolidation of the Woman's Board with our other boards has not been seriously entertained by any considerable number of brethren. To oppose such consolidation, therefore, is to oppose a man of straw or a woman of straw, as the case may be.

Since the foregoing was written we have reread our editorial on "Consolidation of our Missionary Societies," in CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST of July 6th, 1899, and find near the close the following:

In this article we have said nothing concerning the relation of the C. W. B. M. to our other work. Their plan of raising funds is different from that of our other societies, as they rely upon their auxiliaries in the various congregations for their funds, rather than upon special collections. Besides, their work is specifically woman's work and has that apology, at least, for a separate organization.

To this no advocate of consolidation or unification ever objected, but many of them did endorse it.

The Training School Conference.

At the recent session of our Congress in Indianapolis, a conference was held for the purpose of considering the advisability of establishing a Bible or Traning School for lady assistants in the city pastoral work.

The conference was organized by selecting F. G. Tyrrell as chairman and W. R. Jinnett as secretary. The chairman made a statement relative to the work in hand as follows: "At a conference, held last December in Chicago, a committee was appointed to take up the work of organizing a Bible or Training School for pastoral helpers. This conference lasted only half a day and was attended by but few brethren outside the city of Chicago. Harvuot, of Cincinnati, and Breeden and Williams, of Des Moines, are the only names I now recall. The committee consisted of E. W. Darst, H. L. Willett, Wm. Brooks Taylor, F. G. Tyrrell, Chicago; W. F. Richardson, of Kansas City; W. H. McClain, of St. Louis; A. M. Harvuot, of Cincinnati; Geo. A. Miller, of Covington; T. E. Cramblet, of Pittsburg; Jno. E. Pounds, of Cleveland; A. B. Philputt, of Indianapolis, and two others whose names I do not recall. (The names of F. D. Power and H. O. Breeden were added to the committee by consent.)

This committee was instructed to secure a principal and promoter for the school, begin a canvass for funds, advance the work as rapidly as possible and report to another conference to be held at Indianapolis at the time of the Congress. The Chicago conference seemed to think that city the place in which to establish the school and recorded a decision to that effect.

The chairman of the committee, Bro. Tyrrell, then submitted the following report:

As chairman of the committee I have to report but little progress. No principal has been secured; no money has been raised. The Chicago members have had several meetings for consultation and the other members have been asked to be present here or send their advice by letter.

There are two or three ways in which we may proceed:

1. We can organize, if in Chicago, in connection with the Moody Institute.

2. We can co-operate with a proposed movement to form an interdenominational school in Chicago.

3. We can proceed independently, renting our own quarters, employing our own teachers and in in general "paddling our own canoe."

In my judgment this conference should, if possible,

1. Decide on the place for the school.

2. Choose a principal.

3. Provide sufficient financial support to enable the work to be pushed forward.

Mr. Tyrrell then read a further statement commending A. M. Harvuot for his enterprise in the matter and expressing himself as favoring Miss Lottie Nichols, Mr. Harvuot's helper, for principal of the proposed school.

A discussion followed, participated in by the following brethren: Geo. A. Campbell, Geo. A. Miller, L. J. Mercer, A. M. Harvuot, G. A. Hoffmann and others.

A motion by Geo. A. Campbell to the effect that the Chicago committee be continued, and that it push the work of educating the people along the line of the proposed work, and report at the convention to be held in Kansas City next fall.

A special session of the committee will be called for this purpose and the meeting will be open to all who may desire to attend.

The following resolution was read:

As secretary of the Cincinnati Ministerial Association I am requested to present the following: We hereby vote it as the sense of this body that the committee on pastoral helpers be representatives of our brotherhood. H. C. HILL, Sec.

The word representation was explained as meaning that all sections should be represented.

In conclusion I will say that any information that I can furnish in regard to the conference, not herein stated, will be gladly furnished on application, and any member of the committee will be glad to answer questions relative to the proposed work. It is a work that by all means should at once be begun and carried on to perfection. F. G. TYRRELL, Chairman,

W. R. JINNETT, Sec.

Atlanta, Ill., March 30, 1900.

Good News from the March Offering.

Comparing the receipts for Foreign Missions for the month of March with the corresponding month, 1899, shows the following:

	1899	1900	Gain
Churches,	1,702	1,602	100
Sunday-schools,	49	53	4
C. E. Societies,	95	50	Loss 45
Individual Offerings,	240	415	175
Amount,	$33,649.97	$39,848.21	$6,198.24

Comparing the receipts from different sources shows the following:

	1899	1900	Gain
Churches,	$27,523 51	$29,958.34	$2,434.83
Sunday-schools,	206.38	337.61	131.23
C. E. Societies,	472.03	285.64 Loss	186.39
Individual Offerings,	1,902.30	2,300.75	398.45
Miscellaneous,	395.75	1,252.23	856.48
Annuities.	2,100 00	5,650.00	3,550 00
Bequests,	1,050 00	63.64 Loss	986.36

Gain in Regular Receipts, $3,634.60; gain in Annuities, $3,550.00; loss in Bequests, $986.36.

Send to F. M. RAINS, Treas.

Box 884 Cincinnati, O.

The Home Offering.

Comparative statement of receipts to the American Christian Missionary Society for the month of March 1899 and 1900:

	1899	1900	Gain
Churches contributing,	22	23	6 x
C. E. S. "	17	10	7
S. S "	6	1	5 x
L. A. S. "	31	43	12
C. W. B. M. "		1	1
Individuals "	46	48	2
Other contributions,	8	6	2 x
Churches,	$ 195.66	$220.20	$ 24.54
C. E. S.,	82.11	56 11	26.00 x
S. S.,	61.24	6 50	54.74 x
L. A. S.,	136.10	144.20	8.10
C. W. B. M.,		2.00	2.00
Individuals,	222.00	941.80	710.80
Bequests,	200.00	53.63	146.37 x
Annuity,	8,000.00		8,000.00 x
Other contributions,	393.75	96.25	297.50 x
Total,	$9,200.86	$1,520.69	$7,770.17
Loss x

You will note that last year during the month of March we received an annuity of $8,000, hence the loss in the grand total; otherwise there would have been a gain of $229.83. We trust that the May offering will make up this loss.

Offering for Home Missions the first Lord's day in May. BENJ. L. SMITH, C. C. SMITH, } Cor. Secs.

Y. M. C. A. Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Magic Darner

is a household necessity; mends any garment by weaving to match original warp; marvellous.
By Mail, 35 cents.
AGENTS WANTED—CITY AND COUNTRY—MANY QUICK SELLERS. Chas. H. Till, 207a Lake Street, Chicago.

25 CTS PISO'S CURE FOR 25 CTS
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists
CONSUMPTION

Missionary.

Strategic Importance of America in the World's Civilization and Evangelization.

Men come and go, but institutions which incarnate great moral forces are enduring. The founders of such institutions die and their unfinished work is handed to their successors, but their labors, their purposes and their hopes are consecrated by the forming years, and will live and control the thought and inspire the activity of those whom our God shall call to enter their labors.

In the fifty years' history of the American Christian Missionary Society we have much upon which to congratulate the brotherhood; the great names of our people cluster around that history; the 2,321 churches she has organized; the 100,000 souls brought into Christ by her missionaries; the fact that about her have been men pure of heart and of noble services; the fact that her corresponding secretaries have all been men whose lives have been above reproach and who have served faithfully—all these are matter of congratulation to the churches.

But we cannot spend the time in congratulations; our responsibilities are so heavy that we have but a word on that side of the matter, and then we must apply our minds and our hearts to the problems and duties that lie before us in Home Missions. We believe if that long line of the thers could speak to us from their abode in the better land they would rebuke all fulsome eulogy of their lives and work, but would speak to us to inspire us to larger services and longer harvests than were permitted to them.

Our home field is so vast that it is difficult to compare it in imagination, but in area and capacity to support population the United States excells all Europe. Europe has culminated in power; America has just come into the morning of her day of influence. It would take the imagination of an archangel to tell what America is to do in the civilization and evangelization of the world in the next five hundred years.

All history shows that the religion of Christ is the only effective agency for removing moral malaria from the atmosphere of human society. The motive of patriotism, the motive of national destiny, the throb of love for the land that bore us, urges us to give new power to the American Christian Missionary Society to preach the gospel of the New Testament in North America.

"Where no vision is, the people perish." There should be enlarged visions of our splendid opportunities in this great home field. America needs the gospel, Christ needs America. America is ripe for our plea for primitive Christianity; last year the missionaries of the American Christian Missionary Society averaged 77½ additions each—a record not nearly equaled by the missionaries of any other Board of Missions. The average of our missionaries, including those of our state boards, was 50 additions for each missianary employed. The Southern Baptist missionaries averaged 4½ additions per missionary, the Presbyterian Home Missionaries averaged nine additions, those of the Congregational Church averaged 4 1-6, the Lutheran missionaries averaged 19 additions, the Regular Baptists averaged 6½ additions. while our missionaries averaged 77½ persons coming into the churches.

Oh that we might have a vision of opportunity emphasized by the past and enforced by the recognition of the supreme crisis of the ages, coming upon the church and the world!

May we be obedient to the heavenly vision. This is the subject that should be uppermost in the minds of our brethren for the next few weeks.

BENJ. L. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Cincinnati, Ohio.

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE IN HOME MISSIONS IN 1899.

RELIGIOUS BODIES.	Receipts for Home Missions—1899.	Number Churches Organized by Missionary Effort—1899.	Number Additions to Churches by Missionary Effort.	Number Additions per Missionary.	Average per Member Amounts Annual Offering for Home Missions.
					Cents.
Methodist Episcopal	$471,773.00	*	*	*	21
Baptist, Regular	461,831.77	57	7,355	6 1-2	15 1-2
Congregational	516,245.17	34	7,794	4 1-6	82 1-2
Protestant Episcopal	270,086.36	26	*	*	39 4-5
Lutheran, General Synod	98,032.41	16	3,565	19	51 9-10
Presbyterian, North	582,251.27	47	11,683	9	60 3-10
Southern Baptist	65,818.81	194	2,983	4 1-2	5 1-3
Methodist Episcopal (South)	156,204.00	*	*	*	10 2-3
Disciples of Christ (General Board)	100,550.99	63	9,996	77 1-2	9 1-5
Disciples of Christ (Gen'l and State Board)	365,550.99	224	19,617	50	33 1-3

*Not reported.

The Outlook.

The outlook for Home Missions is the outlook for Christianity in this country. The situation furnishes a new leverage for the enthusiastic prosecution of this work.

The growth of our Home Mission work in the last five years from debt to prosperity and success is but a forefruit of what can be expected in this great home field.

Last year 9,996 persons were brought into the churches by the missionaries of the General Home Society, an average of 77½ additions for each missionary employed; 63 new churches were organized, more than a church each week. The next highest number was 19 additions by the missionaries of the Lutheran Churches. The result shows that the outlook is toward a great, ripe harvest field. America is certainly the ripest field in all the world for the great plea of the Disciples of Christ.

Our general board has been helping 32 state boards, and these have been quickened into larger service and more fruitful work by the help of the general board. The outlook is bright for the growth of our cause in the frontier parts of the land, and we must remember that we have missionary frontier in all four directions.

The outlook is toward a great revival of religious life among the American people. When Moody was dying he spoke of a great revival coming which should win thousands to the service of the Lord. The Methodist Bishops have called the church to fasting and prayer before God. Our Jubilee Convention inaugurated a movement of missionary protracted meetings which give large promise of good results, and back of all "sitteth God within the shadows, keeping watch above his own."

We are on the eve of greater things; the inspiration of the new century, the world's outlook and hope for greater things, our own desires for larger growth—all will conspire to make us plan large things for God and expect great things from God. It is with this hopeful spirit that we urge upon our churches liberal plans for our offering for Home Missions the first Lord's day in May.

BENJ. L. AND C. C. SMITH.

Cincinnati, O.

The Iron Mountain Shortens its Time to Texas.

Train No. 51 now leaves St. Louis 2:21 P. M., daily, shortens the time by several hours from St. Louis to Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio, Houston and Galveston. Through Pullman Buffet Sleeping Cars will be operated on this train from St. Louis to San Antonio, and reclining chair car service to Dallas and Fort Worth. A delightful feature of this train is the daylight ride along the Mississippi and through the beautiful Arcadia Valley. Time of other trains remains the same excepting train No. 57 for Delta, Columbus, Cairo and Shreveport which now leaves at 8:00 A. M.

State Mission Notes.

The blanks for statistics are going out of the office; will the preachers see that their churches make report promptly? Very, very much depends on the gathering of these figures. I hope the ministers will make it a matter of conscience to report as soon as possible. When you come to that part of the blank which pertains to State Missions don't leave it blank; if nothing has been sent send it at once. We have the promise of several preachers to send in state money soon, but they have not been redeemed. Let not the enthusiasm for state work pass away; we need every dollar the churches can possibly send. Unless this is done we must recall some of our field force, and not a single man can be spared.

In the death of Col. Estill and his noble wife the cause of Christ in Missouri, and especially the church at New Franklin, has lost the presence and help of two of God's chosen ones.

The sickness of the secretary has hindered the publication of the April Magazine; we trust to have it out before the close of the month.

T. A. ABBOTT.

Kanaas City, 1123 Oak Street.

Mason & Hamlin
Church, Chapel, Lodge, ORGANS School and Home.
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD.
Catalog free. 146 Boylston St., Boston, Mass.

...The...
Standard Dictionary.

We have for sale a number of sets of the Standard Dictionary, in two volumes, bound in full morocco, thumb index, etc. This is undoubtedly the completest and best dictionary of the English language ever published. The regular price of the set, in this binding, is Twenty-six Dollars. We offer the set, spick, span and new for Thirteen Dollars.

At this price, the purchaser pays express charges. Cash must accompany order. We have only a few sets, and when these are exhausted can supply no more at the same rate.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.
St. Louis, Mo.

Evangelistic.

NEW YORK.

Buffalo.—Seven accessions Sunday evening, April 1st, at Forest Ave. Church; five by baptism. —JAY A. EGBERT.

WASHINGTON.

Garfield, March 25.—Our meeting closed at Pullman with 11 additions; eight confessions, three reclaimed. Three more at Silver Creek to-day. —STIVERS AND WEBB AND WIFE, evangelists.

OREGON.

Elgin, March 17.—Baptized four on Monday and received one from the U. B.'s. Our Junior Y. P. S. C. E. numbers 103 and our Young People 60 members.—W. B. ROSE.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Altoona, April 5.—Carrying out the recommendation of the Cincinnati convention in regard to holding missionary protracted meetings, I began at Rohrsburg, Pa., March 13. The meetings continued 18 nights, resulting in 17 additions; one by letter, four by statement and reclamation and 12 baptisms. The suggestion was a good one and should be carried out by every preacher who is situated so that he can hold such a meeting.—E. E. MANLEY.

IOWA.

Weldon, April 3.—Closed a short meeting last week with two added. Seeding time now holds attention with many. Our audiences grow perceptibly, as many as the entire population of the town in attendance at once. Since my taking the work here, four weeks ago, there has not been a single drawback, but everything is in good working order. The only other church here—Methodist, of course—is not flouring, so we have an excellent field, and look for a properous year's work.—I. W. CAMERON.

VIRGINIA.

Richmond, April 4.—Meeting with Third Christian Church closed last night, three weeks in progress. Nearly 100 took their stand for Christ. Most of them came from the world, a large number came from the denominations; 26 came forward at last service. S. R. Maxwell is the pastor, and he is a great preacher and a wise general. His people love him.—W. H. BOOK.

Petersburg, April 3.—Church restored to activity after a long struggle, and most of former membership restored with seven new additions since first of February last; three added last Lord's day. The Lord pity us in our late loss in the excellent personage of Bro. F. M. Anderson, whose life was taken so suddenly from us.—J. PRESTON LEWIS.

INDIANA.

Kendallville, April 5.—Since our work began here, about three months ago, there have been 15 additions, one of these an energetic business man. Last fall I held a meeting at Nameless Creek Church in Hancock County, Ind., with good interest and 12 additions, and two others, not previously reported. The work here is in a prosperous condition, and a good year's work is anticipated.—E. S. CONNER.

Tipton, March 8.—Closed my pastoral work of three and a half years' duration with a fine meeting. Bro. G. W. Henry, of Warsaw, has few equals for his years, in the pulpit. There were 32 baptisms and 16 otherwise. May God bless the grand, good people of Tipton.—E. A. COLE.

Martinsville, March 30.—Began my pastorate here March 11. Closed the first two and a half weeks' work with 20 accessions; 18 by baptism. Outlook hopeful. I. N. Grisso, my predecessor, did a magnificent work, and we hope and pray to lead on in the same way and work of the Lord to greater things.—E. A. COLE, pastor.

Bloomfield, April 6.—Our meeting here closed to-day with 37 additions; 30 by baptism. We begin to-morrow at Odon. I am now ready to make dates for summer and fall meetings. Address me at Muncie, Ind.—A. MARTIN.

Peru, April 7.—Just closed a fine meeting at this place, with 33 added—had just begun to reap the harvest but could not stay longer. Bro. Neal and family are worthy of all praise for their faithful work and hearty co-operation. I shall hold them in grateful remembrance. At the close of my lecture to men only, on "Man's Weakness and Strength," over 150 came forward and pledged themselves to purer lives. Some quit whiskey, some tobacco and some immoral lives. I am now at Edwardsport. Go to Akron, Parker and Waldron, Mich., in June.—H. C. PATTERSON.

NEBRASKA.

Plattsmouth, April 2.—Just returned from Exeter, where I held a four weeks' meeting with 30 added; 23 by baptism. A union meeting failed to injure us, and a 10-cent show for a whole week did not detract from the interest in the gospel.—R. M. DUNGAN.

Harvard, April 6.—Three added at regular services. Everything on the onward move.—SAM'L GREGG, pastor.

KANSAS.

Pawnee Rock, April 3.—Meeting doing well. Four added to date.—M. INGELS.

Parsons, April 2.—B. E. H. Warren, who has been a prominent minister in the Methodist Church (South), united with us here yesterday. Bro. Warren had withdrawn from the Methodist brethren because he could no longer accept their doctrine and discipline. He comes to us because we represent his views of the New Testament church and its teachings. Bro. W. is a preacher of wide experience, and is worthy of our confidence. He is ready to work anywhere. Present address, Blue Mound, Kan.—W. W. BURKS.

Elk, April 2.—We are here in another good meeting, one week old yesterday, with 14 additions to date. People are doing much talking, and mostly say: "It sounds and looks like the Bible reads."—MISS G. CUMMINGS AND PEARL WILRY, evangelists.

Hutchinson, April 3.—D. Y. Donaldson, the pastor of the church at Hutchinson, began a meeting Sunday, April 1. The meeting starts off well. Three additions. Bro. Donaldson has lately come to our state from Kentucky, and is a valuable addition to our ministerial forces.—ERNEST W. KERR, singer.

MISSOURI.

Cowgill, April 4.—We made our first visit to Breckenridge last Lord's day, began on Wednesday night and preached seven sermons, with 10 additions; six by confession, four by relation. The future seems bright for the church there.—W. E. BATES.

Barnard, April 3.—Three additions at this place by letter and statement since last report, also two at Salem Church and two by confession at Palestine Church.—F. E. BLANCHARD.

Springfield, April 2.—Twelve added to the Washington Ave. Church since last report.—F. S. HALTOM.

Nevada, April 2.—One addition at Walker yesterday, two at this point since last report. My work at all points is in good shape, and he cause generally in this section is on the up grade.—S. MAGEE.

Grant City, April 2.—Four additions at morning service yesterday. Good meeting.—W. H. HARRIS.

Glasgow, April 2.—I began a meeting here yesterday. One addition by letter last night. Bro. E. M. Smith, of Centralia, is to arrive to-day to assist me. Good prospects for success.—K. W. WHITE.

Hastain, April 7.—Eld. S. O. Burks, our evangelist, is holding a successful meeting here. At the close of it we are going to organize a Sunday-school and a C. E. Have already organized a church.—MISS EDITH BURKS.

Stanberry, April 3.—First quarterly report of the Christian Church, Stanberry: Sermons, 24; accessions, four; funerals, three; marriages, four; raised for dis rict work, $20; for state, $10.75; foreign, $13.75; Orphans' Home, St. Louis, $14; C. W. B. M., $10.60; old debt, $250. All indebtedness paid to date. We now owe no man anything but to love one another.—G. E. SHANKLIN, pastor.

Unionville, April 2.—I closed a two weeks' meeting in Harris last Saturday, wish 13 additions. Several officers were elected. They gave us $40, which we in turn gave to our ladies in our congregation here to apply on church debt. The Harris congregation gave me a pressing invitation to preach for them Thursdays and Fridays of the second and fourth weeks in each month. I accepted. Dr. Wing, an M. E. brother, expressed his appreciation of our work in a substantial way, by offering five per cent. of his income to pay me or purchase chairs for the church. I gladly declined in favor of the chairs. We hope to accomplish a good work in Harris, even as we have here and at Lemenville, where we have labored so long. One addition here last night.—R. J. L. PRUNTY.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE TABLETS. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. GROVE'S signature on each box. 25c.

MACBETH'S "pearl top" and "pearl glass" lamp-chimneys do not break from heat, not one in a hundred.

They are made of tough clear glass, clear as crystal.

They fit the lamps they are made for. Shape controls the draft. Draft contributes to proper combustion; that makes light; they improve the light of a lamp.

Our "Index" describes all lamps and their proper chimneys. With it you can always order the right size and shape of chimney for any lamp. We mail it FREE to any one who writes for it.

Address MACBETH, Pittsburgh, Pa.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

Miscellaneous wants and notices will be inserted in this department at the rate of one cent a word, each insertion, all words, large or small, to be counted, and two initials stand for one word. Please accompany notice with corresponding remittance, to save bookkeeping

FOR SALE: A good building lot 25x147 feet, near Beulah Christian Church, and also ten shares of Standard Adding Machine stock. Apply to "W. W." this office.

WANTED: President with $2,000 to crowd Fraternal Insurance Association. We have the most equitable reserve plan and a proposition that is a winner, and doing a good business. Address, "Wanted President," care The Christian-Evangelist, St. Louis.

THE LADIES' AID SOCIETY of the Christian Church at Harriman, Tenn., have on hand a few hundred of their splendid Cook Books, recently published, which they will furnish to any Aid Society, or Church, at a greatly reduced price for a short time only. These books retail at 25 cents each and have given general satisfaction. For special reduced rates write to Mrs. Gertrude Cassell, Sec., Harriman, Tenn.

FOR SALE: Expecting to spend several months in Geamany this summer, I will sell my splendid stereopticon outfit at a bargain. For particulars address, J. G. M., care Christian Evangelist, 1522 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

SEEKING the Old Paths and other Sermons, R. Moffett, 715 Logan Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. By mail, $1.35.

THE ACME SMELTING AND REFINING COMPANY, of Phœnix, Ariz., is controlled by Christian business men and offers for a short time excellent opportunities for either large or small investments. Write for full information. A thorough investigation is desired by the company.

A SINGER of seven years' experience would like to make engagements for the spring and summer months. Terms: traveling expenses, entertainment and free will offerings. Effie M. Wright, singing evangelist, Hillsboro, Ohio.

MYSTERY OF THE GOLDEN CLOTH. The greatest book ever written on John's Revelation. Price, $1.50. Also Seer of Patmos, or John's Place in the Christian Economy. Price, 25cts. Address J. S. HUGHES, Station O, CHICAGO.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR BUSINESS MAN.

A business man with from $4,000 to $6,000 to invest in a Publishing Company with good job office and religious newspaper in the best city west of St. Louis, and who could become business manager of the company, can learn particulars by addressing "Business Man," this office.

New Booklets.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway is issuing a series of booklets regarding points of interest along its lines, and if you are interested in the western country, or contemplating a trip, write GEO. H. HEAFFORD, General Passenger Agent, Chicago, Ill., for the special publication desired, enclosing four cents in stamps for postage for each one.

No. 1. The Pioneer Limited.
No. 2. The Land of Bread and Butter.
No. 3. The Fox Lake Country.
No. 4. Fishing in the Great North Woods.
No. 5. The Lake Superior Country.
No. 6. Cape Nome Gold Diggings.
No. 8. Summer Days in the Lake Country.
No. 9. Summer Homes, 1900.
No. 11. The Game of Skat.
No. 12. Milwaukee—The Convention City.
No. 13. A Farm in the Timber Country.
No. 14. Stock Raising in the Sunshine State.
No. 15. Hunting and Fishing.

ILLINOIS.

Lilly April 2.—Closed here last night; 47 added. Will locate a pastor for half time.—S. S. LAPPIN, state evangelist.

Detroit, April 2.—Meeting at Ripley closed Sunday with 39 added; 24 baptized and 15 otherwise. Pledged to locate a man half time. Will co operate with Hazel Dell.—W. E. SPICER.

El Dara, April 2.—At our regular morning service yesterday, April 1, we had nine additions; six by confession and baptism and three by letter. —J. D. DABNEY.

Fulton, April 2.—We closed our meeting here last night after five weeks of rain, sleet and snow, with 30 additions; 26 by baptism, 14 of them heads of families and the same number from other religious bodies.—EVANS & LOVEALL.

Galesburg, March 29.—Seven added here Sunday. I closed my first year with this church last Sunday. There were 121 additions to the church. Twenty four were dismissed by letter and death, leaving 97 as net increase.—C. H. WHITE.

Manchester, April 4.—Ten sermons and 13 added to the church; nine by baptism, one from the Baptist, and two by letter. Bro. Ivan W. Agee is doing good work. I would like to engage with some evangelist or pastor for a meeting in May or June. Address me here or at my permanent address, 915 Aubert Ave., St. Louis, Mo.—GUY B. WILLIAMSON, singing evangelist.

Watseka, April 5.—Two added here March 18; also two last Lord's day and one to-night. This is a greater field than I thought it was. Already 90 have been added to our number since the new year began.—BENJ. S. TERRALL.

OHIO.

Findlay, March 30.—Three added here Sunday, 25th. Church work prosperous.—G.

Toledo, April 4.—The Wilson-Huston meeting at the Central Christian Church closed last Thursday evening. It was indeed a great meeting from every point of view. Brother Wilson is truly a great preacher and teacher of the simple unadulterated gospel of Jesus Christ. As a personal worker I have never met his superior. He was very ably assisted by Brother F. Huston. As a soloist and leader of song Brother Huston is among the best in the brotherhood. Early in the meeting we had the grestest storm in the history of the city. This was followed by many days of extremely cold weather. But notwithstanding these hindrances, the multitudes continued to come night after night during the six weeks of our meeting. Many hundreds for the time heard the plea for a return to apostolic teaching and practice. The results of this meeting cannot be measured by the members added. Our plea has been placed before the public in a way that will bear fruit for years to come. The immediate results are 174 persons added. Of these 121 were confessions, 40 were baptized believers, many coming from Baptist Churches, three by letter and 10 restored, 49 were males and 71 were heads of families. Every department of our church work has been greatly strengthened. I am sure the brethren who helped save the Central Church building will rejoice with us in this great victory. Our outlook is brighter than ever before. I trust we may always prove ourselves worthy of the confidence of the brethren. Pray for us that we may yet win great victories for the Master.—C. W. HUFFER.

Findlay, April 6.—Three added March 25th, two added April 1st. Large audiences and deep interest. We are moving on in the good work.—A M. GROWDEN.

I. J. Spencer, of Lexington, Ky., held a meeting for the church at Bellaire, O., closing Mar. 18th, with 74 additions, the majority of whom were adults and came into the church upon their confessions and baptisms. It was in this church Mr. Spencer began his public ministry, twenty-five years ago, and the meeting was delightful, therefore, in reminiscences. W. L. Fisher, the worthy young minister of the church, says that all departments of the church were much strengthened by the meeting. The Central Christian Church in Lexington, Ky., of which I. J. Spencer is the regular minister began a protracted meeting on last Sunday, April 8, with A. P. Cobb as preacher. The prospect is bright for an excellent meeting. The Sunday-school, with an enrollment of 600, seems ripe for the harvest.

Bellfontain, April 3.—Just closed a great meeting at the Central Christian Church in Toledo. Many of our readers are familiar with the struggles and trials of this church. None save those most intimately acquainted with the place know the sacrifices that have been made. They have given until almost everything was gone and then given again. I have not known greater sacrifice anywhere. They rejoice now in the fact that the debt has been so reduced that they are able to carry it. The man who above all others deserves credit for their present condition is the pastor, C. W. Huffer. No one sacrificed more than he. None had faith so great as he. He went on "hoping when hope there was none." I have never worked with a man of sweeter spirit. He had the field ready for a meeting Bro. F. C. Huston and I began there Feb. 18th. Bro. Huston is master of his profession. The members of his chorus love him and do anything for him. He is a fine personnl worker. The great snowstorm hindered us, but the interest was too intense for it to kill the meeting. In five and one-half weeks there were 174 additions. Central faces the future with a new life.—ALLEN WILSON, evangelist.

Millersburg, March 31.—We closed a three weeks' meeting March 18th with 26 additions; 21 baptisms and five by letter. The preaching was done by our pastor, R.H.Welshimer, excepting three evening services, at which times Bro. J. W. Kerns, of Akron, lent his assistance. Two others united with the church on Lord's day, March 25th, which together with 18 others heretofore unreported, makes a total of 44 since last report.—LOUIS MILEY, clerk.

"Prevention is the best bridle." You can prevent sickness and cure that tired feeling and all blood humors by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Lord & Thomas' Directory for 1900.

The regular annual edition of the Pocket Directory of the American Press for 1900, issued by the well-known advertising agency of Lord & Thomas, Chicago and New York, has made its appearance and it is filled from cover to cover with valuable data of great importance to all who are interested in the subject of newspaper or magazine advertising. The material therein contained is entirely up to date and compiled with the cooperation of publishers by a staff of experts on newspapers. The Pocket Directory enjoys a well-deserved reputation for reliability and supplements it with an exceedingly convenient form for ready reference at the expense of the least possible amount of effort. An excellent index materially facilitates consultation.

Special Rates to New York via B. and O. S-W. R. R.

For Ecumenical Conference of Missions, held April 21st to May 1st, rate of $28.10 for the round trip from St. Louis. Three Daily Through Trains, Sleeping and Dining Cars. Stop-over at Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia. Rate open to all persons attending the meeting. Full particulars by addressing

JNO. P. ROGERMAN, T. P. A., B. & O. S-W. R. R., Dallas, Tex.

A. C. GOODRICH, T. P. A., B. & O. S-W. R. R., Kansas City, Mo.

G. B. WARFEL, A. G. P. A., B. & O. S-W. R. R., St. Louis, Mo.

MARCH AND APRIL

Are the most disagreeable months of the year in the North.

In the South they are the pleasantest and most agreeable. The trees and shrubs put forth their buds and flowers; early vegetables and fruits are ready for eating, and in fact, all nature seems to have awakened from its winter sleep. The Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company reaches the Garden Spots of the South, and will on the first and third Tuesdays of March and April sell round-trip tickets to all principal points in Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia and West Florida at about half rates. Write for particulars of excursions to P. Sid Jones, D. P. A., in charge of Immigration, Birmingham, Ala.

An All-Year Resort.

The Crescent Hotel, Eureka Springs, Ark., opens March 1, 1900. A most desirable, attractive and convenient resort for health and pleasure-seekers. Ideal climate, pure, sparkling water, best accommodations. Through Sleepers via Frisco Line. Write for particulars to Manager Hotel or to any representative of Frisco Line.

Do You Suffer With PILES

Send us your name and address, and let us mail you our Booklet—"FACTS," about MERTANNO the only specific for the non-surgical treatment of PILES.

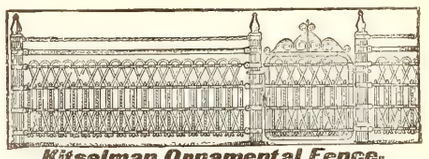
Our Guarantee: We will refund the price paid for this remedy in any case of Piles it fails to relieve or cure.

MERTANNO PHARMACAL CO., 416 Scott Street, Covington, Ky., U. S. A.

After June 1, 1900, the regular price of $1.00 will prevail.



Kitselman Ornamental Fence.

Excels in strength, beauty and durability. Made of steel and iron. Cheaper than wood. 50 Designs. Catalog free. KITSELMAN BROS, Box 163 Ridgeville, Ind.

Church, Peal and Chime Bells. Best Metal. BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY, THE E.W. VAN DUZEN CO. Cincinnati, O.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS. UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY. Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

500 BICYCLES all makes, good as new, $3 to $10

NEW 1900 Models, $11 to $20

'98 & '99 Models, high grade, $8 to $13

Great factory sale, direct to rider. We ship anywhere on approval, send us an order.

EARN A BICYCLE distributing Catalogues for us. We will give one Rider Agent in each town FREE USE of sample wheel to ride and exhibit.

WRITE AT ONCE for Bargain List and our SPECIAL OFFER. Address Dept. 165 H

MEAD CYCLE CO., Chicago.

Illinois Central R.R.

ANNOUNCEMENT FOR

WINTER TOURISTS.

The Illinois Central desires to call attention to the unexcelled service that is offered by its lines to the South for the season of 1899-1900.

CALIFORNIA via NEW ORLEANS

Pullman Tourist Sleeping Car

FROM CHICAGO EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING

Personally conducted. Runs through to Los Angeles and San Francisco, via New Orleans in connection with the Southern Pacific, leaving Chicago on the Central's fast "New Orleans Special;" connection also made by this train with daily trains out of New Orleans for the Pacific Coast. The Limited, from Chicago every evening, connects on Mondays and Thursdays at New Orleans (after December 18, 1899) with the

SUNSET LIMITED

of the Southern Pacific, giving special through service to San Francisco.

FLORIDA via NASHVILE and ATLANTA

THROUGH SERVICE FROM ST. LOUIS.

Double daily service is maintained out of St. Louis via the Illinois Central and connecting lines to Nashville, Chattanooga and Atlanta, through sleeping car to Jacksonville, Fla., being carried on the leaving St. Louis every evening. This train, as well as the Day Express leaving St. Louis in the morning, are both solid trains to Nashville, having through coaches and sleeping cars, running via Martin, Tenn., and the N. C. & St. L. Ry Connection via this line for all principal points in the Southeast, such as Charleston, Wilmington, Aiken and Savannah, and for all points in Florida.

DIXIE FLYER

TWO SOLID FAST VESTIBULE TRAINS DAILY FROM CHICAGO TO MEMPHIS AND NEW ORLEANS.

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS to certain points in the South on the lines of the Illinois Central and Y. & M. V. Railroads will be run on the first and third Tuesday of each month during the winter season.

Full particulars concerning all of the above can be had of agents of the Illinois Central, or by addressing A. H. Hanson, G. P A., Chicago.

Notes and News.

The Mothers' and Babies' Home of the Christian Church.

Because we outgrew our Orphans' Home and had not the room or the convenience for the real little folks, what we call our Mothers' and Babies' Home was started June 1, 1899. A furnished house was rented, and Dec. 1 a larger one, where we take children under two years of age and where unemployed women can stay for a day or two till they find work. We have cared for 100 babies, found employment for 30 women and given shelter to 40. We also take babies given us, and have placed 15 in excellent homes. Within the past month five little babes have been sent us from Illinois, Iowa, Kansas and different parts of Missouri, and we have sent babies to families in three of these states. I wish you could see all my pictures of babies of ours now in excellent homes. Because the Orphans' Home Board ladies had their hands more than full it was deemed best to have a different board of managers for each of the other Homes. The Orphans' Home is now so full I think we will have to swarm again and overflow onto a farm or build another addition. We have been able to do much good, and have aided and encouraged many a needy, discouraged mother. We are hoping that our Easter offering will be so generous that during the coming year we can do more and more for the Master and his little ones.

MRS. O. C. SHEDD.

Added in China.

The work in the Chu Cheo district, Central China, is enjoying a season of encouraging prosperity. For long waiting years the seed has been sown in this very needy Chinese field. Some of those whom God honored in sowing the precious life-seed here have not been permitted to see the ingathering.

Since our return to this great field we have been privileged to receive into the church by obedience some fifty-two persons to date. Hundreds are asking the way of life. God is answering the prayers of his own people at home in our behalf. Are not these but the droppings of a might shower? Pray and praise.

W. R. HUNT.

Chu Cheo, Feb. 26.

A Library of Our Literature.

Butler Bible College has begun the work of collecting as full a library as possible of books written by the leaders of the Reformation begun by the Campbells and of works bearing upon the movement. The importance of such a library, not to the institution alone, but to all who are interested in the study of religious history, can hardly be overestimated. Any readers of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST who have copies, especially of our earlier publications, can do a good service by contributing them to this collection. The ministers going out from such schools as Butler Bible College, and our other institutions, should be familiar with the literature and history of the Disciples. A book placed in one of these college libraries will increase its value indefinitely. All who have books to contribute for this purpose are requested to write to either C. B. Coleman, or Dean Jabez Hall, Irvington, Ind.

Atchison, Kansas.

Began the third year of the second term with this church yesterday. In the past two years $1,000 of the mortgage debt has been paid, the interest of the remainder reduced from eight to six and a half per cent., $500 spent on improving the building. The pastor has preached 276 sermons, married 34 couples, conducted 51 funeral services, baptized 52 persons, received 43 others into fellowship, preached every Sunday afternoon at the Orphans' Home, as chaplain delivered a score of addresses, and in other ways made himself useful. Have served this church four years and a half. The outlook is most encouraging. The more than 500 members of the church are perfectly harmonious, and it is one of the most spiritual churches I have ever served. All our missionary days are observed with ever-increasing offerings.

W. S. PRIEST.

Missouri Bible-school Notes.

Harrisonville, where Geo. F. Duffy is doing such acceptable work, now has the banner of the county, and will likely have one of their own after the California convention. J. H. Jones proposes, if possible, to hold the county banner for another year, but in this great state there are others.

The conferences at our coming convention will satisfy the most exacting, as the committee deem them the more instructive than the addresses, giving the different workers an opportunity to tell us of the good things they know and are using, and of the results following their use.

Bowling Green, on the spur, can do things just right, as was very evident when it came to preparing for a rally in one week, and a rally, too, that interested all classes, all peoples and all the preachers. S. W. Marr and J. M. Campbell and W. F. Mayhall did it with their planning, working and printing, so that unfavorable as the morning was the audience was good, that afternoon better, and that night fine. The school averages four cents to the pupil, what few schools in the state can say, and with all the good audiences and good interest nothing was said about money, only to thank them. That is my first experience of the kind this year, but the part taken by the other superintendents and schools did your servants much good and tended toward the closer unity of all Christian workers, while the rally puts Bowling Green on the list of Missouri banner schools, and they deserve it, too; $25 cash.

John Giddens reports four new Bible-schools for March, while T. A. Hedges put in the time at LaGrange, with a very general quickening of all departments of the church, as well as the reorganization of the Bible-school. If April is favorable we mean to put in twenty new schools if possible.

We are compelled to ask the superintendents to see that our statistical reports just going out are filled, as it will be necessary in making the banner awards. Send one of the reports to this office, the other to your county Bible-school superintendent, remembering that one of the nine points in securing a banner is, you have co-operated with your county superintendent.

Yes, we have an abundance of rally-day programs, and will gladly furnish one to those requesting the same, and you must hold the rally before June, or if you have since last June, all right. If not, get at it now.

Laddonia reports the best quarter in seven years, ending March 31st, but J. C. DeLaporte says there are to be several better in the next seven. Good.

The "assistant" reports over $1,000 due this office right now, saying: "They ought to be ashamed of themselves!" Hear that? Now what will you do?

Harmon Munyon is one of the Canton boys; Lewistown is where he preaches. He read them my letter to the ministers. They paid all this year's apportionment, all of next year's apportionment and two dollars more! Harmon is one of the friends of this work, and I can but wish all the others were, too, for see what it would do for us, for the children and for the cause of Christ.

H. F. DAVIS.

Commercial Bldg., St. Louis.

Emporia, Kansas.

Emporia is in the heart of the best agricultural and commercial section. It is a substantial, growing city of ten thousand. Besides its institutions of local fame it is the seat of the College of Emporia, a thriving and worthy school of the Presbyterians. It has recently become one of the beneficiaries of Mr. Carnegie. The Kansas State Normal is here. It has an annual enrollment of two thousand.

Emporia has a congregation of believers who are Christians only. They give Christ the preeminence. It is a privilege to worship with them, and to direct their thoughts. The church has a worthy history. Sixteen years ago it put on its working clothes, erected a substantial house, and since then has been a power in the community. R. L. Lotz was the minister. Since that time A. M. Harvuot, Geo. F. Hall, Robt. F. Swartz, J. P. Lucas and L. E. Sellers, have ministered. The members have grown in grace and knowledge. Their numbers have steadily increased. For the past few years the church building has been inadequate. The need for improvement is generally recognized.

The State Ministerial Institute convenes in Emporia, April 17-19. D. R. Dungan, whose bishopric is in St. Louis, will be the presiding pontiff. The usual pronouncement of bulls is expected. Though Bro. Dungan makes bulls, he rarely makes blunders. Besides his happy treatment of many choice topics, there are other men of special ability. Send in your name!

The church at Lawrence has just suffered the loss of its minister, Chas. M. Sharpe. He goes to pursue advanced work in the University of Chicago. His training will enhance the value of his already splendid abilities. May his successor succeed!

The passing days are serving to endear this people to us. Their reception of the Word is glad, rejoicing the heart. Prior to our coming they enjoyed the rare privilege of a week's Bible instruction by Bro. G. P. Coler. His deeply spiritual teaching, with his lofty righteousness, have impressed the congregation, and stimulated their hunger and thirst for knowing and doing. The missionary offerings evince a healthful increase of information and zeal. The future is full of promise.

W. A. PARKER.

Happy Family,

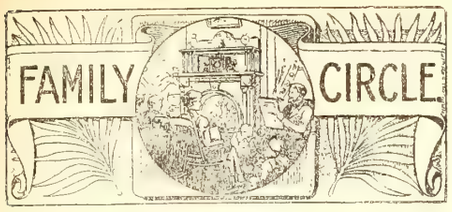
WHEN THEY GOT RID OF THE COFFEE HABIT.

A little woman out in Oswego, Ill., tells about her husband having determined to see if he could not make her quit coffee drinking, which he believed to be the cause of her constant neuralgia and general nervousness, brought home several packages of Postum Food Coffee which he had discovered, by trying elsewhere, to be good.

She says: "What in the world he brought home five packages for, I could not understand; nevertheless, I quit coffee and started in on Postum Food Coffee. I did not have much faith in the change doing me any good, but was astonished to discover that my neuralgia left me almost at once, and the nervous troubles kept getting less and less.

"Little daughter at that time had been ill and could eat little or nothing. She was pale and thin. As soon as I discovered how Postum treated me, I began to give it to her. She liked it very much, and would drink it when she would take nothing else. She began to pick up rapidly and got plump and round and rosy.

"I don't care what sort of food there is in Postum so long as it treats me as it has. It is plain enough the food contained in Postum Coffee is good, and that's all we want to know. I am rid of neuralgia and nervousness, and am a healthy woman. Husband has also been improveed, and daughter is well and happy, as I stated above." With best wishes, Mrs. Nellie Treman.



Resurrection.

HORACE E. HAND.

O'er vale and hill the whitened cloak of winter
Wraps in its folds the flower's budless stems;
No sign of life within the stalk or branches
Gives promise of the springtime's beauteous gems.

King Frost encircles bush and tree; each grass-blade
Is seared and withered in his brittle grasp;
The streams no longer quench all natures's thirsting,
Their rippling murmur bound in icy clasp.

But death and desolation seem triumphant,
And yet, their sway will not alway remain,
For soon from bough and twig and stiffened branches
Fresh buds will burst and nature wake again.

With fragrant blossoms hill and vale resplendent
Will take again their life from earth and stream,
And winter's seeming death will be supplanted
And flowers mature 'neath summer's warming beam.

So, like the flowers, our life sometimes seems ended
When death in chilling grasp enfolds our forms,
But we, from them, can glean the sweet assurance
That there is life beyond, with added charms.

Our Lord has burst the bands that seem to hold us;
He overcame the grave and all earth's pain;
Unto our hearts he gives a precious promise:
"Believe on me and ye shall live again."

St. Louis.

The Lost Emigrants.

BY R. H. JOHNSON.

CHAPTER XXIV.

One day, while Pat and Tony were at the base of the bluff beneath the village, they observed some fresh footprints. These they followed until they were lost amid the stones that had crumbled from the overhanging cliff. While searching for the lost footprints they found, concealed by a thicket, a narrow entrance into the bluff; going in a few feet they found the footprints again in the moist earth.

Going back to the wharf, they called Tom Snell and John Gyer, who were fishing. After preparing torches the party of four entered the aperture in the wall, and followed what seemed to be the cavernous bed of a sunken stream, now dry. The width and height varied from six to twenty feet, and the ascent was very marked, and at times the party ran abruptly against a precipice. Where, however, to their surprise, they found a rude ladder on which they climbed to the next landing. Thus they slowly went onward and upward through this labyrinth until, ascending a ladder, they came upon an opening of many feet in diameter, and apparently of a dozen feet altitude. Here, with some apprehension of danger from a concealed foe, they scanned the room, feebly lit by their torches. Presently Tony cried in alarm: "Look yonder!" All eyes were turned, and sure enough a dimly outlined mysterious form, giant-like, seemed to stand in a niche at the farther end of the hall. A superstitious alarm, which came near producing a panic, fell upon the party, and might have resulted in a headlong retreat and broken necks, had not Pat, recovering, said as he crossed himself: "Sint Pathric and all the howly sints, help craithurs in need! B'ys, we'll find out what it is if it's the ould divil. And we'll carry back the wor-r d before night if we die this minit." So saying he advanced and threw the glare of his torch upon the monster, and in an instant, the giant, disenchanted, assumed the form of a pile of boxes.

"God be thankit!" devoutly said Pat. "They be wooden boxes, as sure as our heads be made iv the same!"

Though the alarm was gone, the wonder of all was excited as to how these boxes—empty as it appeared—got into the heart of the earth.

And it increased until it became a stupefied amazement, when in the midst of the pile they found the missing safe, the door blown off and the contents gone.

Presently it was observed that the boxes were so piled as to form a sort of stairway. Snell ascended these steps and disappeared from view. One by one the others followed, and climbing through a hole which was covered by a bundle of sail cloth, found themselves in a rear corner of the warehouse behind the piles of ship's stores.

There was excitement in the village when some one was heard pounding on the inside of the locked doors of the warehouse. There was consternation when they told of their discoveries. There was satisfaction, on reflection, at the solving of the mystery that had hung like a cloud over the village, and at the certainty now that we could head off the pillagers.

It was now evident that the Blackbirds had discovered the cavern and had followed it up while living at the harbor near the village. That either seeing light through a crevice, or hearing noises above, they had been tempted to open a passage; and on so doing had found a way into the rear part of the warehouse. Knowing the building to be carefully watched at night, they had robbed it in the day time, it being then unguarded and seldom entered. They had pilfered chiefly from the rear, and behind a pile of stores so high as to screen them should some one enter the door. Finding the safe near the rear they had made a way for it through the boxes and parcels, and having dropped it down the hole, by returning the boxes, etc., they had hidden the trail of the safe as well as their foottracks.

It was decided forthwith to block up the passage that had been so effectually used to plunder our stores; and so at once a party went on the cliff over the entrance to the cave, and by the use of drills and powder and crowbars, detached large masses of rock, effectually closing the entrance with stones so large that only a titanic force could remove them.

SOUPS
OFTEN LACK RICHNESS AND A DELICACY OF FLAVOR. A FAULT EASILY REMEDIED BY USING
LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE
THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.
It has more imitations than any other brand ever produced.
John Duncan's Sons, Ag'ts., New York.

A few days after this a party of our men met some of the Birds, and charged the thefts upon them, which led to a quarrel, and the latter went away in apparently a very angry and revengeful mood.

Because of the depredations made upon the vegetables near the west side of the island a small two-room cottage had been built and two or three men were accustomed to stay there day and night.

One rainy evening Tony, who was at the station with two others, came to inform Dr. Andral that one of the men was very sick. Now it is a well-known fact that in the southern hemisphere, which is chiefly given over to the seas, the rainfall is excessive, in some parts amounting to many feet per annum.

The island of our story was not exceptional in this respect. At times the floodgates of heaven seemed to be opened and the waters were poured in a mighty deluge. The evening on which Tony went and brought the Doctor was one of frequent deluges of rain, with intervals between the showers. Having performed his errand, Tony soon retired to the rear room, and lulled by the rain, fell asleep.

Presently, he partially awakens; or is he dreaming? The rain no longer falls, though he hears the roar of the swollen stream some distance away; and mingled with it the sound of suppressed voices outside, near his window. A few words he catches: "Yes, he's inside, workin' over Tom. Spring the trap—floodgates, footbridge—when the door opens—fool; by the light." Then all was still, and Tony was by this time wide enough awake. Was it a dream? He did not know. At any rate he had a deep conviction that the Doctor was in danger.

ALL STEEL UP-TO-DATE LAWN FENCE.
50 DESIGNS.
CHEAPER THAN WOOD.
OUR PRICE IS ALWAYS RIGHT.
SPECIAL PRICE TO CHURCHES AND CEMETERIES.
ADDRESS UP-TO-DATE M F G. CO.,
937 N. 10th ST., TERRE HAUTE, IND., U.S.A.
CATALOG FREE. WRITE US TO-DAY.

There was a meaning in the broken speech he had heard. His foes could see when the Doctor left the station by the light thrown from the opened door. They could open the floodgates of the dam, and thereby greatly increase the fury of the torrent that would bear down on the footbridge, over which he must pass to get to the village.

What should he do? Go to the Doctor? He would laugh at his warnings and think him a fool. And he would rather have the Doctor's good opinion than of any one in the world. No, he would go out at the door; they would think it the Doctor.

He would hasten to the footbridge, and if intact, cross it and wait and watch; and if no harm came to the Doctor he should never know.

No sooner were the plans laid than he proceeds to their execution. He glides out at the door, and as soon as his eyes grow accustomed to the darkness he cautiously proceeds past the upper dam, whose turbulent waters roar and rage. On he goes by the bank of the swollen stream. Now he is opposite the village, as he can see by the lights. He is at the footbridge. Thank heaven, it is not gone! Cautiously he mounts it, he is half way across the rushing flood of inky blackness that tosses its billows to his feet and makes the frail plank quiver like an aspen leaf.

Now the end of a log, driven like a catapult by the fury of the stream, strikes the frail plank under his feet and carries it away. He grasps for the safety rope that spanned the stream. He falls and collides violently with the passing log. One arm has become useless. He is in the unpitying torrent, a few moments and he will be swept from cataract to cataract down the rocky descent, and then a mangled corpse will be tossed out upon the great sea.

Such were the thoughts that came swift as a lightning flash the moment he felt the giant grasp of the waters. He flings out his uninjured arm; he grasped something. It is the safety rope that spanned the stream. He clings to it with a tenacity that recognizes the issue of life or death. One end of the rope is torn from its fastenings. The other holds fast on the village side of the stream, and he is borne to that bank.

But the current is swift and the bank is steep, and the torrent claims him as its prey. The waters are chill, and oh, how weary the hand that clings to the rope. One thing nerves him, and most earnestly he prays that the good Father may help his poor benumbed fingers to hold until the Doctor comes. The clouds are lifting; it is getting lighter.

The pent-up waters of the upper dam are run out. The fury of the stream is spent, but the poor benumbed Tony is powerless to escape. Is it the chilling touch of death that is on him? His ear catches the sound of a footfall. He utters a warning shriek and sinks into unconsciousness.

The Doctor cautiously advances on the broken bridge. He comes to the black and yawning chasm. As he peers into the swollen waters he catches a momentary glimpse of a corpse-like face as it is borne away. A moment more and he is buffeting the torrent and grasping a limp and powerless body. It must be a quick and sharp fight, for the precipice is near, and momently nearer. He is near the bank, he clutches something; it is a willow; he is saved! Bearing the unconscious form, he hastens toward his office. Then he hesitates a moment and says: "It is nearer; it is better."

His meaning is soon manifest, for he hastens to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gray. Here willing and tender hands are soon energetically using every available appliance for warming and resuscitating Tony; and after awhile the fervent "thank God!" and tearful eyes of Mrs. Gray, reveal the fact that the soul that had lingered on the borderland has returned to dwell with kindred spirits here once more.

The next day Dr. Andral said to the pale and feeble Tony, with the broken arm: "Tony, why did you almost fling away your life for me?" As a feeble flush mounted his ashen cheeks Tony answered: "Doctor, I did you a great injury once. I wanted to wipe that out. Besides, you are needed here and I am not. Then Jesus did a thousand times as much for me and I want to be like him, even if I give my poor life for others."

The reader probably asks: Was it a dream of Tony's, or were Dr. Andral's enemies really engaged in a plot to destroy him that night?

I can only answer: I do not know. No evidence was ever found to establish the latter theory; or to support the former, for that matter.

Don't Tell Mother.

It is a sorrowful day in the life of any boy or girl when he or she has done something that mother must not know. Many a downward career, many a life ended in sin and sorrow, many a bad beginning, can be traced to the first deed that mother or that father must not know. When strong confidence between a boy and his mother ends, something wrong begins.

A young man hardly out of his teens was sentenced to the penitentiary for ten years for assisting in a bank robbery. His first words after the sentence was pronounced were:

"Don't tell mother—don't! don't!"

There had been a time when there was nothing in his life that mother might not know without shame to him or to her. How many, many things there were now that he would not have her know!

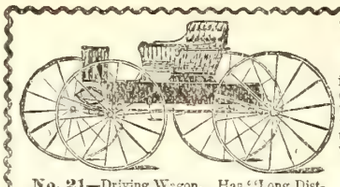
A young woman who had led a wayward life was brought to a hospital to die. She refused to give her real name.

"Mother might find out about me," she said, "and I don't want her to know. I don't want mother to know."

Don't shut mother out of your confidence. It is certain to be the beginning of a career that may end in your crying out in the utmost bitterness of spirit and the keenest sorrow. "Don't tell mother! Don't tell mother!"—Union Gospel News.

A Great Volunteer Army.

Volunteer service is always the best service. A drafted soldier has no heart in his work. A soldier who is prompted by a genuine love of country is worth forty soldiers who are fighting for pay. The largest volunteer army of soldiers in the world are those who are wielding the sword of the Spirit, commonly known as the Word of God. It is not generally known that one million three hundred thousand men and women go out every Sunday with Bible under arm to teach the children of our great country the principles of morality and the Golden Rule. If this vast army would be paid the mere pittance of one dollar per week for their services, it would amount to nearly one hundred millions of dollars annually, and yet without pay they go forth, week after week, in storm and sunshine to teach your children and mine how to be better citizens. These figures are furnished to us by the International Sunday-school Convention, which has a fostering care over all the Sunday-schools of the country. This organization gives us the International Lesson System, and is the mother of all Sunday-school improvement. B. F. Jacobs, Atwood Building, Chicago, is the chairman of the committee having this great work in charge.



No. 21—Driving Wagon. Has "Long Distance" axles, open rubber head springs, Bradley shaft couplers and Bailey loops. Price with shafts, $60. Same as others sell for $40 to $50 more than our price.

You Pay Double the Money

in many cases when you buy vehicles and harness from the agent or dealer. We do without these people and reduce the price of our goods to you to the extent of their commissions. We make 178 styles of vehicles and 65 styles of harness and sell them to the consumer direct from our factory at wholesale prices.

WE HAVE NO AGENTS

You pay a profit to nobody except our manufacturing profit, and you get positively the best goods which a given amount of money will buy. In a factory of the size of ours you get the best possible selection. Our large illustrated Catalogue contains cuts of everything we make. Remember that we ship our vehicles and harness anywhere for examination and guarantee safe delivery and warrant everything.

No. 65—Single Buggy Harness. Price with rubber trimmings, $10. Goods as retails for $22.

SEND FOR LARGE FREE ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

Elkhart Carriage and Harness Mfg. Co., W. B. Pratt, Secy, Elkhart, Indiana.

A Way to Change Your Work

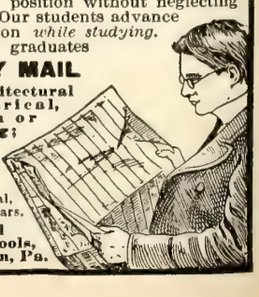
Prepare for a better position without neglecting your present work. Our students advance in salary and position while studying. 150,000 students and graduates

TAUGHT BY MAIL

Mechanical or Architectural Draughting; Electrical, Mechanical, Steam or Civil Engineering; Architecture; Surveying; Bookkeeping; Stenography, &c.

Established 1891. Capital, $1,500,000. Write for circulars.

The International Correspondence Schools, Box 1248, Scranton, Pa.



Resurrection.

W. T. MOORE.

Cold winter's blasts are hushed in songs
Of birds which come from sunlit climes;
Thus will love's music hush all wrongs
That now make discord in our chimes.

All nature blooms with new-born life,
Her resurrection day is here;
And sun's warm rays will end the strife
Of spring and winter for the year.

These hints of nature lessons bring,
Which we should heed, if we are wise;
The sweetest note of all the spring
Is that which bids the dead arise.

But what is death? Whose tongue can tell?
We tremble at life's sad decay;
But after all we know quite well
All's right on resurrection day.

There is no death; we only sleep—
We dream—and then new life is given;
We wake, where nevermore we'll weep,
For all is happiness in heaven.

Columbia, Mo.

Keepers at Home.

No holier trust has ever been committed to the hands of woman than that she should be a keeper at home. This implies at once sanctity of the marriage relation, the sacredness of motherhood, faithfulness to duty and an influence as far-reaching as eternity. From the beginning to the end of time must the Apostle Paul have seen what was her grandest work, her noblest opportunity and her sweetest pleasure, when he admonished her to be a keeper at home.

To the loyal wife there is no spot so sacred as the home her husband provides for her; every day but adds to its holy charms, and to the divine right of a queen is hers who loves and appreciates her home. It need not be a mansion fair, nor even a well-appointed house; the humble cottage can be made a home if but the right spirit prevails and rules within its walls.

What are some of the characteristics which make up the true home and which weave that subtle net about it which time nor distance can efface?

The main one is the warm, true love which welcomes the children who come to bless its hearthstone. The patience which leads and guides them through childhood's years, never faltering for one day, no matter how heavy the burden. With each added year comes sweetness, gentleness and strength of character and wisdom, which seems almost divine, so true and helpful and judicious does it appear. There must be firmness, and no laxity of will when it comes to obedience. There never was a happy home, there never will be well raised children where obedience is not taught. If parents only realized the value of this one great formative power of character their children would not be allowed to grow up to disregard their wishes, to show no respect for their commands. Obedience can be taught in the same gentle way that any other lesson is taught, and the little hands that are clasped on your knee as "Now I lay me down to sleep" is murmured will fold over your own when growing cold in death and say: "God bless these dear hands that led me in the path of duty."

Parents in the home make daily sacrifices for the good of the children, and it works out only wholesome character where the children are taught to sacrifice, to work and to control their whims and appetites.

The mother in the home has the most earnest and apt of pupils; no lecturer on the stage can teach temperance and morality as can the mother, who trains her boys and girls by precept and example. She can bring them into the church—their earliest refuge from sin and temptation. A mother may never have wine on her table nor liquor in the sauce for a pudding, and yet have a son who will drink, if she neglects to fortify her boy by making a Christian man of him. Here lies the strength which will, not only enable him to resist temptations, but will build him up into an honorable manhood in every direction. She can influence her children to love and admire her friends—to be helpful to one another and to others, to read her favorite books and cherish her same sweet flowers and momentoes. It falls naturally into her life to train her daughters to habits of personal neatness, housekeeping and home-making. She can teach her boys to be loyal to political convictions, to vote intelligently and as a matter of conscience; she can inculcate principles and instill just and right motives never to be swerved from. She can read with them and interest them in the great questions of government, temperance and reforms. Talk about a woman's sphere! She has the grandest God-given rights in her home, with husband and children, that can be vouchsafed to mortal being. Let her awake to her privileges and train the statesmen and reformers and moral giants of the nation around her own fireside! The lesson she can teach, the influence she can exert, the power she can give to uplifting humanity has never yet been realized; eternity alone can measure it. The keeper at home, be it wife or mother, who with tender, gentle love can draw your heart from thousands of miles back to the spot where you lived in childhood, who comes to you in dreams and the morning seems brighter and the cross lighter for the sweet vision.

You wander away in search of health, wealth or work, but never for one single day is there absent from your inmost soul the memory of the sacred home and all its tender influences. The man who has been away for years is going back home; he did not realize how sweet the dear old place was until he thought of returning and gave himself up to the luxury of recalling its charm . What an humble little home it is—six rooms at most—sweet and clean and one to be all his own, with easy chair, soft rugs and table with books and papers and shaded lamp. He can see mother now as she ties up the tender vines which shaded windows and porch; ever and anon going into the tidy kitchen to watch the light rolls, of which he is so fond, or sitting down to stem the fine strawberries which father has brought in from the patch; he can see the bent form and white hair of the latter as he seats himself in the doorway to be the first one to see the "boy" who is coming.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better, it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary great benefit.

A Buffalo physician, in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in the stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation. yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets.

He sees his dear sister, gentle and refined, sitting on the porch and from the low, sweet strings of her guitar comes in fancy the music, "Nearer my God to thee," and the response is: "Yes, draw nearer and get nearer to thee, oh! my God, through this home and dear keeper thou didst give to me."

Whatever of sadness or sorrow, disappointment or trouble the passing years may hold, the old home will remain the same cherished spot, and ever, even to the utmost end of the earth, will the heart cry out: "Be it ever so humble, there is no place like home." MOTHER.

Warrensburg, Mo., March, 1900.

Deeds of Yesterday.

BY MILTON H. H. LEE.

I cannot sing to-day, tho' friends are near
To gladden me with songs of peace and rest.
Without regret to vex how richly blest
To-day had been with joys around me here:
(Oh, how regret can rob life of its cheer!)
But yesterday at peace. To-day—opprest;
For pleading Mercy made, for Love, request
Of me, and to her cry I closed my ear.
And now I sigh: Before me I can see
Sad Mercy turn with weeping Love away,—
And turn with weeping: Tears are falling free.
And, listening, I can hear my Master say:
"Forsaking these, thou thoughtest not of me,
And yet my child forsook me yesterday!"

Rest and Health to Mother and Child.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over FIFTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, with PERFECT SUCCESS. It SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHŒA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" and take no other kind. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

..Standard Books at Half Price..

THE LIFE OF CHRIST.

By Canon Farrar.

Of all the lives of Christ which have been written, this work by Canon Farrar stands in the front rank. By many students and scholars it is considered the very best. We are offering no cheap edition, but a magnificently printed and bound volume, containing 530 pages and 63 illustrations. The book was never before offered so cheapy.

ORIGINAL PRICE, $2.75; OUR PRICE, $1.40.

THE LIFE OF PAUL.

By Canon Farrar.

This book holds undisputed place as the best of all the many biographies of the great Apostle to the Gentiles. It is a graphic narrative of the earnest, eventful, strenuous life of Saul of Tarsus, known in his later life as Paul. Among the characters which figure in the New Testament, Paul is second only to Jesus. He is the heroic actor in the first decades of the history of the church. We are offering a splendid edition of this great work at half price. 645 pages, 160 illustrations.

ORIGINAL PRICE, $2.75; OUR PRICE, $1.40.

MEMOIRS OF GEN. W. T. SHERMAN.

This is the original, standard work, published by the Chas. L. Webster Company and extensively sold by them for $2.00. It is an autobiographical work. In it Gen. Sherman not only gives an official history of his part in the civil war, but devotes several chapters to a most interesting account of his experiences in California from 1845 to 1858. The book contains over 500 pages, is printed on superfine book paper, and is handsomely and substantially bound in cloth. We secured a number of volumes in a bankrupt stock, at a nominal figure, and are offering them for less than the actual cost of production.

ORIGINAL PRICE, $2.00; OUR PRICE, 75 cts.

HENRY WARD BEECHER.

By Lyman Abbott.

This is not a book of Beecher's sermons, but a book about Beecher. There are given many extracts from speeches and sermons, as illustrating points of his character and of his doctrine, and there are some lectures and addresses given entire. The volume contains 660 pages, and is bound in half morocco and cloth, with many illustrations. It is the standard work on Beecher, and should be in every preachers library. Our price is phenomenally low.

ORIGINAL PRICE, $2.50; OUR PRICE, $1.00.

THE MIRACLES OF JESUS.

By A. A. Willits.

A magnificent volume of 528 pages, printed on finest paper. There are 130 illustrations. The book is bound in cloth and gilt, with gilt edges. The contents of the volume are of a high order. The author, the Rev. Dr. Willits, has written a beautiful, detailed account of each of the wonderful works of our Lord. This is a book valuable to old and young. We are selling the book for less than half price.

ORIGINAL PRICE, $3.00; OUR PRICE, $1.20.

AMERICAN HOME AND FARM CYCLOPEDIA.

By H. R. Allen.

A compendium of useful information. 1100 pages, and over 2000 illustrations, many in colors. This is a work of most decided practical value. If you want to know how to make a rat-trap, plant a garden, put a broken leg in splints, make asparagus soup, dig a well, hive bees, judge the points of a dog or do any one of ten thousand other things, this book will serve you. Dr. Allen spent many years in the preparation of the work, and many eminent specialists were employed to write for its pages.

ORIGINAL PRICE, $5.00; OUR PRICE, $2.50.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO., 1522 Locust St., ST. LOUIS.

The Red Box Clew.

J. BRECKENRIDGE ELLIS.

CHAPTER XXI.

As Mr. Douglas and his wife stood before the cottage door, waiting for their knock to be answered, and wondering how their long-lost daughter would look, Mrs. Douglas pulled her heavy veil completely over her face. She did this to hide her agitation, for she was very white, both from joy and fear. It seemed almost impossible that after so many bitter years only a door stood between her and the desire of her heart. She feared that Mrs. Dew might answer the knock with the fearful news that Frank was gone, that she had vanished in the night. That dreadful "Nance" was still at liberty; what might she not do to satisfy her vengeful and mercenary disposition? She began to tremble violently. Then the door opened. There stood before them a girl of about thirteen years of age. Nature had not taken her by the hair and pulled her out long and thin and bony, but had leisurely smoothed her form here and there, till it was one of compactness, curves and softness. Her limbs and body were rounded with that yielding smoothness that reminds one of dimples; and the cheeks did not seem cut off by horizontal planes from the throat, but merged into it with full, delicate waves of satin skin. Dark-blue eyes, from which a steady and genial light shone out upon the world; a little heaven of blue that had two stars of its own, to dance with its own thoughts and happiness; a mouth that smiled when there was a cause, but was grave and contented when there was none; hair that had once been the brightest of gold, but had since grown darker, so it could wear better in this dusty old world; yet, the gleam of gold was still to be seen shining against the dark space of an ill-lighted hallway, like golden thread heaped upon velvet—this was Frank Douglas. Mrs. Douglas had not seen her since she was a baby, yet she knew this was her daughter. And how? As she gazed upon the child through her thick veil, she seemed to be looking at herself when she was a child in old Kentucky. She had looked that way; those eyes, that hair, those very curves had been her own, long before she had thought of marrying and leaving her dear parents. Her impulse was to catch up the child in her arms. But she remembered her agreement with her husband. The daughter must be prepared for the shock. So she waited for Mr. Douglas to speak.

"Is this where Mrs. Dew lives?" inquired the gentleman in a casual voice. Men are so strange! had her life depended upon it, Mrs. Douglas could not have spoken so.

"Yes, sir," answered Frank, looking thoughtfully at the gentleman, as if she were trying to remember where she had seen him before. "But she is not at home now. Will you come in?"

"Thank you. After all, you are the one I wish to see, if you are Frank Douglas." Frank bowed and gave a troubled smile. Where had she seen this man before? She led the way through the dark hall into a sparely furnished sitting room that also served for a parlor. What could these people want with her? As soon as they were seated the gentleman said: "It seems almost impossible, but I am forced to believe from direct proofs, that you are one of the authors of a Latin Grammar that was sent to a Chicago house in the manuscript. The superscription ran this way: 'By'—well, it was by a Mr. West—I forget the initials, 'and Frank Douglas.'"

Frank blushed and smiled, while her eyes shone. "Oh, do you come from that house?" she cried. "And are they going to print it? It was written by a dear friend of mine—Mr. West—but I helped him in copying and collecting words and arranging them alphabetically. So he would put my name on the title-page! Of course I could never have written any of it. He sent it to New York before he died, but they said it was unavailable. And after I went to Creekville I sent it to a Chicago house, more for Mr. West's sake than for anything else. I knew how glad he would be. That was why. And besides, if it was worth anything—well, I need the money, too!" And all the time the child spoke, Mrs. Douglas, paying little heed to the words, was drinking in the mellow charm of the voice; as one loves to return to the home of one's happy childhood and hear the same musical flow of the brook or splash of the waterfall, that charmed so long ago. For the child's voice was what the mother's voice had been before it learned the subdued note of experience and the minor flow of sorrow.

"I live in Kentucky," said the gentleman, "but I am a reader for that publishing house. They sent me the grammar, and it was so superior, I could not understand why the list of deponent verbs was defective. Your list was all right down to the letter 'S,' and there it stopped. I recommended the book for publication, however, on the condition that you complete the list. I thought possibly you had mislaid one of the pages."

"Yes, yes, that must have been it," said Frank, eagerly. "I remember, oh, very well, that the list went clear on past 'S.' I remember 'Sequor'—yes, and 'Vereor,' too. I will run and see if that lost page isn't somewhere among my things."

"Not yet," interposed the gentleman. "There is another matter of even more importance I wish to speak of. In Kentucky lives a very dear friend of mine, a lady, who lost her little girl nearly thirteen years ago. She was stolen from her by a wicked nurse. The name of this lady is Mrs. Douglas. When I saw your name, Frank Douglas, on the Latin Grammar I wondered if you were any kin to her husband For her husband had a brother named Frank Douglas, who was killed in the war, and who was engaged to a Miss West."

"Oh, I was named for that brave and handsome soldier!" cried Frank, jumping up in her excitement and coming to the gentleman's side. "Miss West named me for him. and I don't know who my parents were. May be I am the daughter of that Kentucky lady! Miss West came from Kentucky. Do you think I could be her daughter?"

"I am sure of it," he answered abruptly. "I can prove it!"

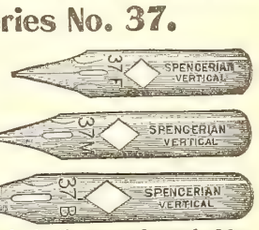
ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR, ECKSTEIN } Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC, BRADLEY, BROOKLYN, JEWETT, ULSTER, UNION } New York.
SOUTHERN, SHIPMAN } Chicago.
COLLIER, MISSOURI, RED SEAL, SOUTHERN } St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

THE brands of White Lead named in margin are genuine. They are and have been the standard for years. They are manufactured by the "old Dutch process," and by a company which is responsible. Unlike the so-called White Leads (mixtures of Zinc, Barytes, etc.), these brands correctly represent the contents of the packages.

FREE For colors use National Lead Company's Pure White Lead Tinting Colors. Any shade desired is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving full information and showing samples of Colors, also pamphlet entitled "Uncle Sam's Experience With Paints" forwarded upon application.

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

Spencerian Pens
New Series No. 37.
See That Hole?



Insert a pencil to jerk the pen from holder. Prevents ink flowing back and soiling fingers. Samples on receipt of return postage. Ask for 37.
SPENCERIAN PEN CO., New York, N. Y.

Sunday - School.

W. F. RICHARDSON.

THE CENTURION'S SERVANT HEALED.*

With the present lesson we probably return to the chronological order of Jesus' ministry, from which the last lesson was a wide departure, the raising of Jairus' daughter having occurred at a later date than the miracle we are now to study. The order given by Luke is here the correct one, as we believe, and hence this miracle followed immediately the sermon on the mount.

Capernaum was a city of sufficient size and importance to require the presence of a Roman garrison, which numbered at least a hundred soldiers, or a "century"—a c mpany, as we would term it. The officer in charge, whom we would designate captain, they called "centurion." While it is likely that many of these officers would be unfriendly to the people over whom they were sent to rule, there were some who learned to honor the Jewish nation and reverence their God. Cornelius, the noble centurion in Cæsarea, holds a conspicuous place in the history of the early church. He was devout, sincere and benevolent, and gave to the gospel a ready welcome, when preached by Peter, as recorded in the tenth chapter of Acts. The centurion of our lesson seems to have been a man of kindred spirit. There is much to draw us toward him, and rejoice in the blessing the Master bestowed upon him.

First, he was a believer in the true God. At least this is very nearly certain. He had built a synagogue for the Jews of Capernaum, and this he would hardly have done unless he had already abandoned the gods of Rome. The elders of the Jews, who came to intercede in his behalf, said of him: "He loveth our nation, and himself built us our synagogue." The ruins of a splendid synagogue are yet seen on the site of Capernaum, and it is believed to be the same one here referred to. This Roman soldier had penetrated beneath the surface of Jewish formalism and pride, and recognized the vital truth of their religion.

Second, he was a man of noble character and kindly spirit. "He is worthy," was the testimony of the Jewish elders. His moral life must have been commendable. But his character as a master gives us the most beautiful touch of description. He was appealing in behalf of his servant, or "slave," as the word signifies, and we are told that he loved this slave. It was a time when slavery existed in its most dreadful form throughout the Roman Empire. It differed from the slavery of our own time in that the slaves were captives of war, and their descendants, and often included the most intelligent and virtuous of earth. Horace was the son of a freed slave, and the philosopher, Epicteus, was himself a member of this unfortunate class. By so much as these slaves belonged to a higher class than those of our own day, so they suffered more cruel treatment at the hands of their masters. Mommsen, in his Roman history, says that all the miseries of negro slavery were a drop to the ocean compared to those of the slaves of antiquity. Even so noble a Greek as Aristotle argues for humane treatment of the slave chiefly on the ground of the profit accruing to the master from such treatment. He says: "The instrument receives just so much care from its master as will keep it in proper condition for the exercise of its functions." With such ideas ruling the public mind, it speaks volumes for this centurion that he had a personal regard for his servant.

Third, he was a believer in the power of Jesus to heal. He had perhaps heard at the time of the wonderful cure wrought by Jesus upon the nobleman's son, as recorded in the 4th chapter of John's Gospel. The Master had proven his power to heal at a distance as well as by direct touch. Hence, when the centurion learns that Jesus is on his way to the house, he sends additional messengers to assure him that he will not ask the unusual favor of a personal visit. "Say the word, and my servant will be healed." He had proved repeatedly the power of his own word to direct other men, as he had felt the power of superior authority to work through him. He is assured that this worker of wonders has within his hands a divine might that can overcome difficulties and accomplish such beneficent results as he may desire, and he simply asks that this power shall be exercised in his behalf, in the simplest and least noticeable manner possible.

Fourth, he was humble. "He is worthy," said the Jewish elders. He himself said, "I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof." Both were right. Compared with the glory of the Lord of life, this poor Roman soldier was unworthy of such high company and exalted favor. But the humble heart is the kindly heart, before God. "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." God delights to set up his throne in such a soul, and this humble Gentile might put to shame all the pride of the Herods and the self-righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees.

The answer to such faith as this could be nothing less than the granting of its prayer. Matthew tells us that Jesus said to the centurion, or rather to the friends who had come from his home: "Go thy way: as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee." Returning, they found the servant well. It must have been with much confusion of spirit that the unbelieving Jews heard the rebuke of the Master: "I have not found so great faith; no, not in Israel." How sad the heart of Jesus must have been when he remembered that the welcome accorded him in Samaria had been denied him in his own city of Nazareth; that a poor woman of Sidon would with persistent trust crave the crumbs of divine mercy while his own people would turn away from the banquet spread for their enjoyment. This sharp contrast between the chosen nation and the Gentile captain drew from Jesus' lips a stern rebuke, for whose record we are indebted to Matthew: "I say unto you that many shall come from the east and the west, and shall sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of heaven; but the sons of the kingdom shall be cast forth into the outer darkness: there shall be the weeping and gnashing of teeth." Favors spurned transmute themselves into curses. The saddest sounds to greet the ears of the lost will be the echoes of joys once offered them, but wantonly refused. The sweetest dellghts will be theirs who have promptly responded to the divine approach by a loving faith and glad obedience.

*Lesson for April 22—Luke 7:1-10. Parallel passage—Matt 8:5-13.

Echoes from the Field.

Connecticut.—It requires 185 copies of OUR YOUNG FOLKS to supply our school this year, and then we are often short. We have taken it from the beginning, and could not do without it. Superintendent.

Pennsylvania.—Our school believes in having the best of everything without reference to cost, and therefore we always have an abundant supply of OUR YOUNG FOLKS and pronounce it the best published. Superintendent.

Michigan.—We are delighted with every feature of OUR YOUNG FOLKS which is now taken in our school and Endeavor Society. The sketches of Our Pioneers and Great Reformers are particularly attractive to the older people. Pastor.

Ohio.—OUR YOUNG FOLKS is regarded as a "gem of purest ray serene" in our church. We follow its Mid-week Prayer-Meeting Topics; our teachers rely on it as their principal aid in the preparation of the Sunday-school lesson, and our Endeavorers would be lost without it. Pastor.

Iowa.—We have never had in our school any other paper that has so completely satisfied us as OUR YOUNG FOLKS. Its exposition of the Lessons and Practical Suggestions to teachers, are particularly helpful. I should think that every Christian Sunday-school in America would be among your patrons. Superintendent.

Nebraska.—Our school has made free use of OUR YOUNG FOLKS in past years, but the demand has so increased that we must double our order for this year. It gives our teachers just such help as they need; helps to keep the big boys and girls in the school and keeps us all posted in methods of work. Superintendent.

Indiana.—Our school was a little late in introducing OUR YOUNG FOLKS among its teachers and young people, but it came at last and it is now there to stay. "No half-price offers," or offers of free copies of worn-out singing books, will be likely very soon to tempt us to exchange it for something else. Secretary.

Illinois.—Our Sunday-school has almost doubled in the six months we have been using OUR YOUNG FOLKS, and we should be very sorry to dispense with it. The Schools of our people, this country over, need just such a stimulus as this Weekly affords, and I truly believe that its introduction would be a profitable investment for all concerned. Superintendent.

Missouri.—At the beginning of the year an agent from another publishing house induced our Committee on Sunday-school Supplies, by marvelous discounts and free books, to substitute another paper for OUR YOUNG FOLKS. The change is so unsatisfactory, that though the other is paid for for the year, we have made up a club for our old favorite. We shall be wiser next time. "Experience teaches a dear school," etc. Pastor.

St. Louis.—In this city, where Sunday-school workers have an opportunity to examine and make themselves familiar with the best helps and appliances published, and where they come in contact more or less with the foremost Sunday-school people of the age, OUR YOUNG FOLKS is the principal paper distributed and used by the teachers and older pupils in ten of our foremost Christian Schools, and circulates more or less in all others.

ESTEY PIANOS AND ORGANS
Excel in Superior Tone, Perfect Construction and Great Durability.
THE ESTEY CO., 916 OLIVE ST., ST. LOUIS, MO

Christian Endeavor.

By Burris A. Jenkins.

TOPIC FOR APRIL 22.

SERVING GOD JOYOUSLY.

(Matt. 22:1-14.)

Young people often hesitate to become Christians because they fear a grayer and more melancholy tinge to life. Young men pause on the threshold of the ministry because they fear they may not live the healthy, exuberant life they otherwise might. Shall it never be thundered convincingly into our ears that what is wrong is wrong, and what is right is right; what a Christian ought not to do, neither ought others; and what a minister ought not, neither ought others? Grant that there is, of course, a responsibility upon one who assumes the name of Christ's follower and servant; but that responsibility rests upon all alike, and the moral law is absolute.

But a day is dawning now, as it has often dawned before, at times, when it is felt that the fullest, richest, most joyous life is the most Christian. If we are not joyous in our work for Him we are not serving God. We are noting to-day that Jesus attended social assemblies, and often made his parables from feasts.

Joyousness the heart must have or it will be sicklied o'er with the pale cast of unhealthy thought. While we brood the fire burns; but while we joyously work the windows of the soul take in and give out light. None are so happy as the well-employed; but the very busy need relaxation, recreation.

Hence, amusements have their place, and perhaps no problem is greater for the sociologist, regarding our overworked cities, towns and farms, than that of wholesome amusement. Farmers' wives, e. g., with their never-ending work and weary monotony, furnish the largest percentage of inmates for our insane hospitals of any class of our population. It is due to lack of amusement. The men find relief in horses, dogs, guns, and, latterly, bicycles; the wives none. In our cities our laboring men say they would die of their dreary round if they did not go to the saloon for conversation, recreation, amusement. No other place is open to them. Is the church blameworthy here? Yea, and she shall hear the Word: "Inasmuch as ye did it not—depart from me!"

A Presbyteriam minister, of this city, left his comfortable salary and home, donned a suit of overalls, and for a year or so has been working to support his family, as a laborer in our smaller Indiana cities. Recently he preached (in his overalls) in this city. He declares that the dead, dreary round of monotony nearly drives him, himself, to seek company, light and cheer in the saloon. Will none else but the saloonkeeper open doors of invitation for the poor?

Work must be relieved with recreation. Note that in Jesus' parable the men who refuse to come to this feast both plead the excuse of business, and one turns to his merchandise, the other to his farm. Note also that Martha was careful and busy about serving when she should have been at Jesus' feet. So, is it not possible that we are often cumbered with business cares, household cares, or even church drudgery, when we should be either sitting at Jesus' feet in meditation or going into the country or to a feast?

Let the blood course, then, let laughter overflow, let hearts bound, or ever the evil days come when we shall say: "I have no pleasure in them." Work, and joyous work; play, and joyous play—these make up the activities of a wholesome Christian life.

VITALITY low, debilitated or exhausted, cured by Dr. Kline's Invigorating Tonic. FREE $1. Trial Bottle containing 2 weeks' treatment. Dr. Kline's Institute, 931 Arch Street, Philadelphia. Founded 1871.

$1000 IN GOLD FREE

FOR BRAINY PEOPLE

14	5	23	25	15	18	11
20	1	19	8	9	14	7	20	15	14
9	8	9	3	1	7	15

FOR BRAINY PEOPLE

Each one of the above three lines of figures spells the name of a great city in the United States. This is a brand new puzzle and can be solved with a little study, as follows: There are twenty-six letters in the alphabet, and we have used figures in spelling the cities instead of letters. Letter A is number 1, B number 2, C number 3, etc., throughout the entire alphabet. IF YOU CAN SPELL OUT THESE THREE CITIES YOU MAY SHARE IN THE DISTRIBUTION OF $1,000 WHICH WE ARE GIVING AWAY for doing a little work for us. This you can do in less than one hour of your time. This and other most liberal offers are made to introduce one of the very best New York magazines into every home in the United States and Canada. WE DO NOT WANT ONE CENT OF YOUR MONEY. When you have made out the names of these three cities, write them plainly on a postal card and send it to us, and you will hear from us promptly BY RETURN MAIL. It may take an entire evening to solve the three names, but STICK TO IT AND TRY TO GET YOUR SHARE OF THE $1,000. A copy of this high-class ONE DOLLAR MAGAZINE WILL BE SENT FREE to everyone answering this advertisement. Do not delay. Send your answer immediately. Address ROBINSON PUBLISHING CO., 24 North William Street, New York City.

A Trinity of Devotional Books

THE HEAVENWARD WAY

A popular book addressed to young Christians, containing incentives and suggestions for spiritual growth, leading the young in the "Way of Life." Lately revised. 100 pages. Bound in cloth. 75 cents: morocco, $1.25.

ALONE WITH GOD

A manual of devotions, containing forms of prayer suitable for private devotions, family worship and special occasions. It is adapted to the wants of Christian Endeavorers. 244 pages. Cloth, 75 cents; morocco, $1.25.

HALF-HOUR STUDIES AT THE CROSS

A series of devotional studies on the Death of Christ, designed to be helpful to those who preside at the Lord's Table, and a means of spiritual preparation for all who participate. 275 pages. Cloth, 75 cents; morocco, $1.25.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, 1522 Locust St, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Sunday School Supplies

Quarterly Helps.

THE PRIMARY QUARTERLY.

A Lesson Magazine for the Youngest Classes. It contains Lesson Stories, Lesson Questions, Lesson Thoughts and Lesson Pictures, and never fails to interest the little ones.

TERMS.

Single copy, per quarter, 5 cents.
10 copies, per quarter,	$ .20;	per year,	$ .75
25 copies,	" .40;	"	1.50
50 "	" .75;	"	3.00

THE YOUTH'S QUARTERLY.

A Lesson Magazine for the Junior Classes. The Scripture Text is printed in full, but an interesting Lesson Story takes the place of the usual explanatory notes.

TERMS—Single copy, per quarter, 5 cents; ten copies or more to one address, 2 1-2 cents each per quarter.

THE SCHOLAR'S QUARTERLY.

A Lesson Magazine for the Senior Classes. This Quarterly contains every help needed by the senior classes. Its popularity is shown by its immense circulation.

TERMS.

Single copy, per quarter,	$ .10;	per year,	$ .30
10 copies,	" .40;	"	1.25
25 "	" .90;	"	3.00
50 "	" 1.60;	"	6.00
100 "	" 3.00;	"	12.00

THE BIBLE STUDENT.

A Lesson Magazine for the Advanced Classes, containing the Scripture Text in both the Common and Revised Versions, with Explanatory Notes, Helpful Readings, Practical Lessons. Maps, etc.

TERMS.

Single copy, per quarter,	$ .10;	per year,	$ .40
10 copies,	" .70;	"	2.50
25 "	" 1.60;	"	6.00
50 "	" 3.00;	"	10.50
100 "	" 5.50;	"	20.00

BIBLE LESSON PICTURE ROLL.

Printed in 8 colors. Each leaf, 26 by 37 inches, contains a picture illustrating one lesson. 13 leaves in a set. Price per set—one quarter—reduced to 75 cents.

CHRISTIAN PICTURE LESSON CARDS.

A reduced fac-simile of the large Bible Lesson Pictures, 13 cards in set, one for each Sunday in quarter. Price reduced to 2 1-2 cents per set.

Monthly.

CHRISTIAN BIBLE LESSON LEAVES.

These Lesson Leaves are especially for the use of Sunday-schools that may not be able to fully supply themselves with the Lesson Books or Quarterlies.

TERMS.

10 copies,	1 mo.,	$ .15;	3 mos.,	$ .30;	1 yr.,	$1.00
25 "	"	.25;	"	.60;	"	2.40
50 "	"	.45;	"	1.20;	"	4.00
100 "	"	.75;	"	2.10;	"	8.00

Weekly.

THE LITTLE ONES.

Printed in Colors.

This is a Weekly for the Primary Department in the Sunday-school and the Little Ones at Home, full of Charming Little Stories, Sweet Poems, Merry Rhymes and Jingles, Beautiful Pictures and Simple Lesson Talks. It is printed on fine tinted paper, and no pains or expense is spared to make it the prettiest and best of all papers for the very little people.

TERMS—Weekly, in clubs of not less than five copies to one address, 25 cents a copy per year.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL EVANGELIST.

This is a Weekly for the Sunday-school and Family, of varied and attractive contents, embracing Serial and Shorter Stories; Sketches; Incidents of Travel; Poetry; Field Notes; Lesson Talks, and Letters from the Children. Printed from clear type, on fine calendered paper, and profusely illustrated with new and beautiful engravings.

TERMS—Weekly, in clubs of not less than ten copies to one address, 30 cents a copy per year, or 8 cents per quarter.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS.

A Large Illustrated Weekly Magazine, devoted to the welfare and work of Our Young People, giving special attention to the Sunday-school and Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor. It contains wood-cuts and biographical sketches of prominent workers, Notes on the Sunday-school Lessons, and Endeavor Prayer-meeting Topics for each week, Outlines of Work, etc. This Magazine has called forth more commendatory notices than any other periodical ever issued by our people. The Sunday-school pupil or teacher who has this publication will need no other lesson help, and will be able to keep fully "abreast of the times" in the Sunday-school and Y. P. S. C. E. work.

TERMS—One copy, per year, 75 cents; in clubs of ten, 60 cents each; in packages of ten or more to one name and address, only 50 cents each. Send for Sample.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, St. Louis, Mo.

Literature.

To our individual mind, the richest thing in the Atlantic Monthly this month is the article on "The Perplexities of a College President," by "One of the Guild." Any one who has any acquaintance with the educational problem or any sympathy with it, will detect at a glance that the author, whoever he is, has an appreciative grasp of some of the real needs of the situation. The principal thesis maintained is that the college president ought to be given more power to control the institution over which he presides; that he ought to have as much authority in the college as the manager of a commercial enterprise has in the office or factory. The president is the man to choose the faculty. The writer's idea as to what sort of men ought to constitute a college faculty may be seen from the following letter which he says he once addressed to an educational friend: "I am looking for a first-class man for our work in history. It is not his technical preparation that I am so anxious about—that will probably be complete enough; he would scarcely dare to apply without this. But I wish to get a man who is large-minded, generous by nature, built on a large pattern, wide between the eyes, a born winner of men; who can grapple young men as with hooks of steel, and make them love and revere him; who can go out to some of our smaller cities and towns for an evening's address and come back with a whole beltful of scalps; who can immediately secure the confidence of those in charge of secondary schools, and turn them and their pupils toward us; who will be a power in the university, and in the community, and in the state."

Henry Van Dyke's story, "The Light that Failed Not," in the April Scribner's, deals with people and scenes on the Canadian Coast, and the character which the author has created of the young girl who kept the lighthouse under difficulties, although perfect as it stands and admirably adapted for use in a short story, could well be made the central character for a full-grown novel. It is far removed from the commonplace story of lighthouse heroism. Mr. Ernest Seton-Thompson writes of the kangaroo rat with the same affectionate regard, the same evidence of careful observation and the same contagious enthusiasm with which he has written about grizzly bears and buffaloes and white-tail deer.

The Century has done notable service to American lovers of art and lovers of American art for many years by publishing the work of the best American engravers. There is more difference than some realize, perhaps, between an engraving by an artist and a photographic half-tone. The series of engravings of the works of the old English masters, by Timothy Cole, which is now appearing in this magazine, is worthy of careful study. Richard Whiteing writes of Fashionable Paris, and Castaigne's pictures which accompany the article are unusually good, even for Castaigne. As an illustrator of Parisian life he has yet to find a superior. The memoirs of Napolean at St. Helena still continue.

The North American Review presents an unusually imposing list of contributors. The leading article is by Emile Zola on "War." Senator Foraker writes on "The United States and Puerto Rico;" D. B. Woodward, Assistant Commissioner-General of the United States, on "The Paris Exposition;" Charles Waldstein, whose little book on "The Work of John Ruskin" will live as a classic, writes on Ruskin; and Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, on "An Obligation of Empire." Among the other contributors to this number are Thomas B. Shearman, Senator Mason and Rev. Minot J. Savage.

The American Monthly Review of Reviews contains, besides its usual elaborate record of the events of the past month, illustrated articles on the Hampton Normal and Agricultural Institute, and the great steelmakers of Pittsburg in connection with the recently settled Frick-Carnegie suit. Prof. Harry Pratt Judson, Professor of Political Science in the University of Chicago, writes on the "The Constitution and the Territories."

Tudor Jenks writes a story of the domestic life of a scaly green dragon for the St. Nicholas which will please many children, both young and old. Sydney Reid's animal story, "Josey and the Chipmunk," which has been running since November, is a wholesome piece of nonsense, and the number contains plenty of other things which the grown folks will enjoy reading to the children and the children will enjoy having read to them.

Considering the age and infirmity of Pope Leo XIII. and the possibility of his passing away suddenly almost at any time, it is interesting to know the process by which his successor will be elected. An article in Frank Leslie's describes the curious process of a papal election and tells of some of the elections in the past. There is a story of the Wild West by Stephen Crane and a short article about the Klondike by Joaquin Miller.

The Coming Age continues the publication of the articles on "Applied Psychology; or, Hypno-Suggestive Therapeutics," by Henrik G. Petersen, and "The Poems of Emerson," by Charles Malloy. A series of four papers by Prof. Nathaniel Schmidt of Cornell, on "The Hebrew Philosophers" begins in this number, with an article on "Job—the philosopher as Poet;" other articles will deal with the philosopher as Critic, as Allegorist, and as Mystic.

The Biblical World contains a helpful symposium by several prominent men on "The Main Purpose of the Sunday-school" (see Current Religious Thought next week for extracts). There is an illustrated article on "Social Customs in Palestine," by Dr. Waterman, of Jerusalem. Prof. Burton has an article on the "Purpose and Plan of the Gospel of Mark," and the "Constructive Studies in the Life of Christ," by Profs. Burton and Matthews, are continued.

The proximity of the Ecumenical Foreign Missionary Conference, which is to be held in New York during the last ten days of the present month, gives exceptional interest to the current number of the Missionary Review of the World. The article on the personnel of the Conference is well illustrated with portraits, and there is an illustrated article on Puerto Rico under the United States.

The Treasury of Religious Thought contains, naturally, a considerable amount of material appropriate to Easter, including an Easter sermon by Alexander Maclaren. The many lines of activity pursued by Grace Church, New York City, are described in an illustrated article entitled, "An Educating Church."

The articles which D. L. Pierson is writing for the Record of Christian Work on the "Progress of Foreign Missions During the Nineteenth Century," of which the second installment appears in the current number of that magazine, give a trustworthy and convenient survey of the missionary activity of this century.

FITS Permanently Cured. No fits or nervousness after first day's use of Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. Send for FREE $2.00 trial bottle and treatise. DR. R. H. KLINE, Ltd., 931 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

DRUNKENNESS CURED.

An eminent St. Louis physician has given a positive answer to the oft asked question, is drunkenness a disease, or is it simply a temptation that cannot be resisted by a vast number of the human race? The physician in question is Dr. Ozias Paquin, who for years has been a practicing physician in the City of St. Louis. He has answered this question by taking five of the worst drunkards that could be found and cured them of all further appetite for intoxicating drinks. The five cases were all beyond middle age and they had sunk into the deepest pit of drunkenness, with the odor of drink about them so obnoxious that it was almost impossible to stand within speaking distance. He not only cured them of all desire for intoxicating drink, but at the same time placed upon their cheek the flush of health and into their eyes the light of happiness, and took from their person the odor of whiskey. It was almost a miracle, for he had raised five cases from degradation into the sunshine of health and happiness. Dr. Paquin has cured hundreds of patients who were relapses from other treatments, and in every instance he cured these patients, and they have remained cured for months and years. It can therefore be said that the Paquin Treatment is a permanent cure, and not a temporary one, for the patient never relapses to his former condition. We know of no more humane work being done at the present time than that which Dr. Paquin is doing, and it is the duty of every reader to assist Dr. Ozias Paquin in his noble work, and if any reader has brother, sister, husband, father or friend in whose system lurks the disease of drunkenness, he should at once send their name to Dr. Paquin or see that they either visit or place themselves in communication with the Ozias Paquin Immune Co., Suite 1113 Chemical Bldg., St. Louis. The reader that does this will certainly be doing a christian act, for no matter how hopeless the case may seem, and no matter how many other treatments have unsuccessfully been tried, the method known as Ozias Paquin Treatment will perfect a cure dispelling all desire for drink, and at the same time will place the constitution in a robust and healthy condition.

B. & O. S-W.

"ROYAL BLUE SERVICE."

ST. LOUIS,
CINCINNATI,
LOUISVILLE,
COLUMBUS,
PITTSBURG,
WASHINGTON,
BALTIMORE,
PHILADELPHIA,
NEW YORK.

BEST LINE BETWEEN THE EAST AND WEST.

Luxurious Vestibuled Trains, Palatial Ladies' Coaches.
Pullman Drawing Room, Sleeping and Observation Cars.
B. & O. S-W. DINING CARS. Meals Served a la carte at POPULAR PRICES.

For Rates, Maps, Time-Tables or Sleeping Car Space—Call on any Ticket Agent or address

O. P. McCARTY, General Passenger Agt., Cincinnati, Ohio.
G. B. WARFEL, Asst. Gen'l Pass. Ag't, St. Louis, Mo.

High Comfort at Low Cost

Is the advantage offered by the personally conducted excursions to California over the Santa Fe Route.
Second-class tickets are accepted for the full privileges of this economical and enjoyable way of visiting the Pacific Coast.
Inquiries promptly answered.

T. A. GRADY,
Manager California Tourist Service,
The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway,
109 ADAMS STREET, CHICAGO.

Marriages.

BARRETT—DICKEY.—Married, at the residence of the bride's mother, on March 28, 1900, Mr. Osborn Barrett and Miss Mary E. Dickey, both of Jewell County, Kan.; G. D. Sellers, officiating.

GRITTON—JONES.—In Paris, Mo., March 28, 1900, Mr. Tandy F. Gritton, of Tulip, Mo., to Miss Mary L Jones, of Victor, Mo.; C. H. Strawn, officiating.

Obituaries.

HARVEY.

In full, ripe age Elijah D. Harvey, of Meadville, Mo., passed from the scenes of time to the realms of life immortal. His departure was radiant with the glorious hope of the gospel, because his life was rich in deeds of loving kindess and Christian graces. He was a splendid representative of that sturdy Christian manhood that grew up and matured mid the trials and privations of frontier life in our Western country. Mr. Harvey was born in what is now Howard County, on August 22, 1827, when this country was primeval forest and virgin soil, inhabited by plenty of game, wild beasts and savage Indians. He grew up among conditions which would naturally cultivate a rugged heroism and a sturdy independence. Necessity compelled him to subdue the earth and have dominion over all the beasts, and most joyfully did he undertake the task. His early days were characterized by those noble qualities of determination and perseverance that always insures success and prosperity. His education was not neglected, though it would be considered scant at the present day. His book knowledge and mental training was received at the winter terms of subscription schools. At the age of 20 he left his father's home in Howard County and went to Meadville, in Linn County, to teach a subscription school in Judge Botts' house. From this time on he took a deep interest in educational work and the building up of our public school system. He helped with his own hands to build the first schoolhouse in Meadville, and afterwards donated it to the district, thus laying with his own hands, head and heart the foundation of public education, which meant a good deal in that day. In 1849 Mr. Harvey was married to Miss Elmira Thompson. The same year he purchased a farm adjoining Meadville. Here he reared a happy, thrifty Christian home. While he was for 16 years a school-teacher by profession, he was also a farmer by practice. He brought his large farm to a high state of cultivation. While teaching school and managing his farm he found time to devote to the moral and spiritual and political interests of his community. He, in company with two other citizens, built the first church in Meadville; he became a member of the church in the later fifties and served in the several offices from janitor to elder. He did not content himself with a formal, nominal or churchly Christian life, but was a warm and active supporter of temperance and of communal decency. He joined the old Washingtonian Temperance Society when a boy; he organized the first good temperance society in Meadville and was at his death an active honorary member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. He was a Mason and a charter member of the A. O. U. Mr. Harvey was active in political circles. He was elected to the legislature in 1880, was public administrator for a term of years, and held various city and township offices. He administered numerous estates, and had been the trusted and honored counselor of the people for over 40 years. No one sought his advice in vain. He was a "blessed" peacemaker; he was loved by the people; he was in touch and sympathy with all; he loved little children, who familiarly called him "Uncle Dick." The morning after his death a beautiful little child knocked at the door of his dwelling and with tears in her eyes requested see "Uncle Dick." The school children were excused from school to see the blessed face of their beloved benefactor and warm-hearted friend. The tribute of a child's love is the sweetest incense offered to the praise of a noble and affectionate heart. Mr. Harvey was stricken with apoplexy on Friday, March 16, and died the following day. The writer was called to conduct the funeral services, which were attended by a very large concourse of people from all over the county. On June 12, 1889, Mr. Harvey was married to Mrs. Mary Garrett (nee Dinwiddie), of Boone County, who survives him. Three daughters are also left to mourn the father's death. Who does not crave such a life, and such a death? By the expressed judgment of his peers, his spotless soul is most worthy the royal robes of the redeemed

LAWRENCE F. MCCRAY.

HUGHS.

A. J. Hughs was born in Brown County, O. He moved with his mother to Atchison County, Mo, in 1848, and was married to Caroline Harris in 1857. He has been a member of the Christian Church (Newlight) for 35 years. Died at his home two and a half miles northwest of Rockport, Mo., March 19, 1900. He leaves a wife, two daughters and seven sons to mourn for him. Funeral services at Pleasant Grove Church, two and a half miles northwest of Rockport, conducted by the writer.

G. HALLECK ROWE.

ESTILL.

Col. J. R. Estill was born in Madison County, Ky., Jan. 30, 1819, and died at his home, near Estill, Howard County, March 11, 1900, having reached the age of 81 years, one month and 11 days. In early manhood he came to this state. Shortly after coming to the West he was married to Miss Mary Turner, of Glagow, Mo., who at this writing survives him. It may be said this union was in every respect an ideal one. Soon after this marriage he became a Christian, and to the day of his death he maintained his standing as a Christian man. There were born to this couple 10 children. Only three of these are now living—Wallace Estill, of Estill, Mo., Mrs. Felix T. and Mrs. Butler Laforce, of Kansas City, Mo. These and a host of kindred and friends were present at the obsequies. Col. Estill had figured prominently in educational and religious interests in this state. For years he was one of the curators of the State University of Columbia, Mo., and was also a trustee of Christian College, of Columbia, and the Christian Orphan School, of Fulton, Mo. He had given largely to the Orphan School and was a friend to it from the beginning. He had great private business interests, but with it all he had time and means and inclination to help the Lord's kingdom. He was frequently in consultation with those who were prominent in church work. His counsel was sought and valued by those upon whom the burden of the work rested. The writer of these words was associated with him for several years in his home church, at New Franklin, Mo., and knew him in his home life. He was the mainstay of his home church, and for years in a financial way had met the deficiencies of this character. In appearance he was a kingly person, and in that body carried a great heart that beat in sympathy with all the great purposes of those who were leaders in Zion; courteous and dignified, but, with all his temporal success, meeting with Christian kindness the lowliest of God's children. To me, while we were opposite in many characteristics, he had been as a father, and I prized his friendships and confidence, not because of his earthly possessions, but because of the inner man of the heart. Even now, when I think of his graces of person and life, I know not where to look for his equal. At one o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, March 18, 1900, I conducted the funeral service, at his late home, in the presence of multitudes of those who knew him best, and on that account loved him most. All seemed to realize that a prince in Israel had fallen, and each one that a personal friend had gone home. We spoke mostly of God's comfort in Jesus Christ, for worldly splendor does not bind up broken hearts, and it all ends in the grave. In Mt. Pleasant Cemetery, not far from his late home, and where his loved dead had been placed, we laid his body, in the Christian hope of life to come. In the Father's house, where no sickness, sorrow, pain or death will ever come, God in infinite love will wipe all tears from human eyes. May God raise up successors to carry on the work and enlarge what has been a beginning in the education of the orphans and extend his kingdom until in every heart its interests are supreme.

W. T. HENSON.

Lathrop, Mo.

ESTILL.

Mrs. Mary Anna Estill, widow of the late J. R. Estill, died Monday afternoon, March 19, in her 74th year. Only two weeks before came the sad intelligence that Colonel Estill was dead and many hearts were made sorrowful at the loss. Now again hearts have been filled with sorrow by this doubled loss. They had beautiful Christian lives. Mrs Estill was deeply interested in all beneficent causes and the Orphan School mourns for the loss of one of its truest and best friends. Her life shed a beautiful influence over her home, her church, the community in which she lived, and over all the people with whom she came in contact. Life to her meant "intensely and meant good," and the highest eulogy that can be pronounced upon her work is that the world is better for her having lived in it, and humanity has been uplifted through her gracious adminstrations. The orphan girl has special cause to bless her name, for she was a true friend, and two scholarships in this school are monuments to her interest and that of her husband in the grand work of educating those who cannot afford to educate themselves. Many shall rise up and call her blessed, and her name shall be uttered in loving and grateful remembrance by those who shall in years to come be the beneficiaries of her Christian charity.

W. T. HENSON

Lathrop, Mo.

UNDERWOOD.

Matilda, wife of Jacob Underwood, was born Aug. 12, 1826, in Mercer County, W. Va. Was married March 20, 1855, in Hamilton County, O. United with the church when 18 years of age and has lived a faithful Christian life. Died at her home near Rockport, March 25, 1900. She leaves a husband, a daughter and three sons to mourn her loss. Funeral at Church of Christ in Rockport, Mo., by the writer.

G. HALLECK ROWE.

A Reason for It.

There is Only One Pile Cure That Has Reached a National Popularity and Reputation.

There are many popular medicines that are known in every household in America.

There are blood purifiers, nerve tonics, headache remedies, dyspepsia cures, and cough cures, which are sold in every drug store in the nation and beyond.

But all of these must divide their popularity with many rivals, no one remedy has the field to itself, with the single exception of pile cures, for it is a singular fact that there is but one pile cure that can be considered as having a national reputation, without a rival and the referred to is the Pyramid Pile Cure which for seven years has steadily worked into the public favor by reason of its extraordinary merit, until it is known from Maine to California and from Manitoba to the gulf.

It is true there are many pile remedies having a small local reputation for a year or two but the Pyramid Pile Cure has rapidly supplanted them all and really has the field to itself when anything like national popularity is considered.

The explanation is simple. It is because piles is in no sense an imaginary trouble that a bread pill or a simple salve or ointment will cure, but an obstinate, painful and often dangerous trouble and a remedy to give satisfaction must possess positive and very apparent merit. A person suffering from piles will not experiment for months with a remedy; it must give relief and a cure in short order or it is condemned.

The worst cases of piles are relieved on the first application of the Pyramid and a cure will result in a reasonable time from its regular use.

Medical men use it in preference to operations because it is safer, is perfectly painless and the cost to patient is a mere trifle as all druggists sell the Pyramid Pile Cure at 50 cts and as it is used at night, it cures without interfering with regular occupation.

If suffering from any form of piles, bleeding, itching or protruding, a trial of the Pyramid will cure you and add another to its thousands of friends.

"Difficulties Give Way to diligence," and all blood humors disappear when Hood's Sarsaparilla is taken. It purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, cures that tired feeling, and tones up the whole system. Take it now.

The non-irritating cathartic—Hood's Pills.

"HOW TO ADVERTISE."

This is the title of a pamphlet published by The Procter & Collier Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, general advertising agents. In this pamphlet they aim to tell the successive steps which must be taken by the the advertiser to insure success. A number of pages are filled with specimen advertisements. The Procter & Collier Company place such well-known advertisements as Old English Floor Wax, Coke Dandruff Cure, Puritan Oil Stoves, Kornlet, Baldwin Piano, Fireside Games, Odorless Refrigerators, Rookwood Pottery, U. S. Playing Cards, Pillsbury Vitos, Ivory Soap and many more besides. The pamphlet is nearly free, as a copy will be sent to any address if a two-cent stamp be enclosed with the request to The Procter & Collier Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

A PURE GRAPE CREAM OF TARTAR POWDER
NO ALUM - NO AMMONIA

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

Superior to all others in purity, richness and leavening strength.
Highest Honors, World's Fair
Gold Medal, Midwinter Fair

Tourist Agencies.

It may appear hardly proper for one who has not used an agency to write concerning them, but inasmuch as they industriously advertise themselves it may serve a good purpose to look at them from an outside standpoint.

1. The difficulties of sight-seeing and getting about in Oriental countries are intentionally or otherwise exaggerated by these agencies. Strange peoples, strange customs, strange means of transportation, strange languages and strange moneys certainly have a tendency to bewilder and to be carried through them easily and quickly, and on your part ignorantly, might at first appear to you desirable. You are told that you will get lost, get swindled, perhaps set upon and beaten. You can not find the places of interest, it is an absolute necessity you must have a guide. This s dinged in your ears incessantly. You heard it before you left home through the printed matter or personal visit from the tourist agency, all in a polite manner. You hear it when you get into the strange country. Believe it not.

That there are difficulties of course is true. I am convinced from experience and observation that they have been constantly and insistently exaggerated. The tourist agencies are no little to blame.

2. Again, the cost of independent traveling (without agency help) has been exaggerated. These tourist agencies would have you believe that it is very expensive. You must have somebody along to help you save your money; an agent to attend to the touring business for you—they will buy your tickets, secure hotels, pay all fees and dues, etc., etc. (excepting wines, a great saving clause,), and it won't cost you much—O no, not much—only $8 to $10 a day; and only think what an enormous expense the trip would be if you were to trust to your ignorance and try to go it alone, ignoring the in-it-for-your-benefit agency. As a matter of fact, if you were to trust to your own ignorance and your own ability to conserve your funds you would be able to get along at the enormous expense of $4 or $5 a day.

3. The exactions of their prearranged program take away your independence and make your life miserable. No allowance is made for the state of the weather. No allowance is made for the state of your health. No allowance is made for objects or places especially interesting to you. This is the good path, now walk therein, and if perchance you get out of the traces—having paid in advance, a long way in advance—you are liable to suffer no inconsiderable financial loss. Your are tired, hands and feet, tired from the first and for the entire period. You are a victim!

Look at the hotel exactions for which you pay $2 or $3 a day. "Breakfast, 8:00 A. M. Lunch, 1:00 P. M. Dinner, 7:00 P. M. Guests, please be prompt." The dinner takes two hours to eat, many places dress suits are required. Is not this all very fine for those who travel to study?

I may be reminded that only the rich travel, and they for pleasure, not for study; and that the tourist agencies have as good a right to their funds, perhaps, as they—the rich people—themselves have.

Well, there is something in that, but this article is for those who may travel, belonging to the honest—not rich—but industrious class, who would go to the interesting, historic, Oriental lands not bent on selfish pleasure.

In conclusion, get the best guidebook, latest edition, and paddle your own canoe. Literally, carry your own "grip." E. H. KELLAR.

David St., Jerusalem, March 5, 1900.

The Benevolent Association.

This good work of the church needs to be better understood by our brotherhood. After an experience of more than a year in connection with the association, I am satisfied that a great many of our people have little or no conception of the condition of this association and of hundreds of children in our own enlightened and Christianized state. I am certain that there is a sufficient amount of destitution to demand a hundred per cent. more liberality than has yet been manifested. I am equally certain that we are abundantly able to do it.

Last week I delivered to the Home three children from Southeast Missouri. One an infant three months old, and two girls, four and eleven years. The oldest girl had never seen inside of a church or a Sunday-school and had been to school only one month. In another section of Southeast Missouri I found a family in extreme destitution. They had been kept from starving by small contributions from the citizens of the town. The man died the day before I saw them. The mother was left with five small children, with absolutely nothing. These are only two instances among many that might be mentioned.

What are we going to do for these destitute and helpless children? Shall they be saved from ignorance, degradation, vice and crime? Shall we help them by preparing them to help themselves? We ought this year to raise at least $10,000 in addition to ordinary contributions to this work. We are coming to be a missionary people. This is right. We ought to be tenfold more missionary. We hear often about the heathens at home—there are a great many of them, and I have much sympathy for these destitute, helpless ones. Why should we allow them to grow up in ignorance, vice and crime, and then spend thousands of dollars in a fruitless attempt to reform them in our courts, jails and penitentiaries? The best time to reform is before degrading and vicious habits have been formed. This benevolent association recognizes this fact and this is the work in which they are engaged. Help them willingly, liberally and now. Send large and small contributions to Mrs. J. K. Hansbrough, 5018 Cabanne Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

I frequently hear that "charity begins at home." This is not true. Selfishness begins at home. I frequently hear, "We have orphans at home." Wrong again! If those who make this excuse could see one-half the destitution that I see I know they would be disgusted with themselves for ever having thought such a thing.

Brethren, remember the orphans; remember them now, and God will bless you.

J. D. DILLARD.

Fredericktown, Mo., March 31, 1900.

BORDEN'S EAGLE BRAND CONDENSED MILK

40 YEARS THE WORLDS FAVORITE

SEND FOR "BABIES" A BOOK FOR MOTHERS

BORDEN'S CONDENSED MILK CO., NEW YORK.

THE MILLION DOLLAR POTATO

Most talked of potato on earth! Our Catalog tells—so also about Salzer's Earliest Six Weeks' Potato. Largest farm and vegetable seed growers in U.S. Potatoes, $1.20 and up a bbl. Send this notice and 5c. stamp for Big Catalog. F309

JOHN A. SALZER SEED CO. LA CROSSE, WIS.

Burpee,
Philadelphia.

A postal card, addressed as above, with your own address plainly written on the other side, will bring, by return mail, entirely without cost, a copy of

BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL FOR 1900.

This is a bright book, full of faithful illustrations and true descriptions of the BEST SEEDS that Grow,—which are sold direct to the planter without any middleman's profit. Interesting and instructive new features for 1900.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Cures scalp diseases & hair falling. 50c, and $1.00 at Druggists

WATCH AND CHAIN FOR ONE DAY'S WORK.

Boys and Girls can get a Nickel-Plated Watch, also a Chain and Charm for selling 1½ doz. Packages of Bluine at 10 cents each. Send your full address by return mail and we will forward the Bluine, post-paid, and a large Premium List. No money required.
BLUINE CO. Box 3, Concord Junction, Mass.

AULT & WIBORG COMPANY
Manufacturers of Printing Inks.
CINCINNATI. NEW YORK.
CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.
This Paper printed with Ault & Wiborg Ink

Is Your Brain Tired?
Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

"DR. Y. S. TROYER, Memphis, Tenn., says: "It recommends brain and enables one to think and exertion easy.

APRIL 19,
1900
THE
CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST
HOME MISSION NUMBER AS GOES AMERICA
SO GOES THE WORLD

THE
Christian - Evangelist.

J. H. GARRISON, Editor.
W. W. HOPKINS, W. E. GARRISON,
Assistant Editors.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTIONS:

Single subscriptions, new or old.....$1.50 each
Ministers.....1.00 "

CLUB RATES.

25 or more copies.....$1.00 each

All subscriptions payable in advance. Label shows the month up to the first day of which your subscription is paid. If an earlier date than the present is shown, you are in arrears. Paper will be discontinued at end of time paid for if express orders to that effect accompany payment of subscription. Arrears should be paid when discontinuance is ordered.

ADDRESS, CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.,
1522 Locust St. St. Louis, Mo.

SPECIAL SUBSCRIPTION ....OFFER....

A Cloth Bound Copy of

"In His Steps"

free with a year's subscription to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST at $1.50.

Conditions Which Must be Observed.

1. New Subscribers send $1.50.
2. Old Subscribers pay arrears to April 1st, 1900, and $1.50 for a year in advance.
3. Subscribers already paid in advance send $1.50 for another year's credit.

SUBSCRIPTION ITEMS.

The subscription tide still flows.

Our offer of a cloth-bound copy of In His Steps (see conditions in first column) is recognized as the most generous we have yet made. You and your friends may avail themselves of it if too much delay is not indulged in.

The best cause deserves the best advocate. Help us to make the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST what it ought to be.

The attention of the subscribers who are neglecting to pay promptly their subscriptions to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is called to the following extract from a letter received from a subscriber in Indiana who was guilty of the same failing. But first, be it known to you, O, readers! that he paid his arrears in the same letter.

"I am ashamed to think of neglecting this matter so long and fully realize how unkind and unjust I have been; for if all subscribers were to do as I have done I am afraid you would have to quit publishing the paper."

And, verily, he spoke the truth. If you want to make us happy, renew your subscription at once. If you desire to make us positively joyous, send a new subscription with your own.

Rejoice with us! Last month was one of the most encouraging in the matter of subscriptions that the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has ever experienced. The encouragement of our friends did not confine itself to words, but was shown in deeds. In the words of somebody or other: "That's the way to do it." Even a brief mention of all deserving such by reason of their assistance is out of the question. Among the churches sending us large lists of subscribers were Cedar Rapids, Ia., Jewell City, Kan., Louisiana, Mo., Kenton, O., Marion, Ia., Memphis, Tenn., Kansas City, Mo., Vinton, Ia., Coffeyville, Kan., Lawson, Mo., Waterloo, Ia., Crestline, Kan., and California, Mo.

How about that club of twenty-five which you were forming in your congregation? Remember, we have extended the time on our club offer. Complete your club; and do it now.

Bro. E. A. Orr, Harvey, Ill., declares from the fullness of his heart, concerning the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST: "It is the coming paper among us. Its fairness and sweetness of spirit will tell; God bless the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST and its editor." If we can truly merit the praise of our brother we must believe that the blessing he invokes will surely be granted.

Bro. W. F. Turner, pastor at Joplin, Mo., expresses himself as follows: "Permit me to say that our Bible school is highly pleased with your supplies and think them unexcelled. So think I. The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST gives universal satisfaction. I think it is now better than at any past time; and my opinion is that it stands at the head of religious journalism. The paper on which it is printed is good, the typographical work is excellent, its contents are well arranged, its tone is spiritual and dignified and its matter meritorious. It is not to be expected that we all agree with everything it contains. For that reason we like it the better, so long as a judicious censorship is exercised over the matter admitted. It is a pleasure for me to work in its behalf."

The facts stated are submitted for your careful consideration; and may you find pleasure in the way pointed out by Bro. Turner!

Permit me to concur in the expressions of approval of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. It is indispensible to our cause. It was my first instructor in the gospel. It has kept my growing needs supplied. I read the other prominent papers of our people. I study the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. It would be a poor tribute to say that I agree with all its opinions. But it comes to my study with the air of a firm but fair-minded friend. I am better for communing with its spirit.

Emporia, Kan. W. A. PARKER.

MISSIONARY ADDRESSES.

BY A. MCLEAN.

As our contribution to the Jubilee of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society we have reduced the price of this work from One Dollar to Sixty Cents.

'Missionary Addresses" is a volume of 298 pages, printed on good book paper, well bound in cloth, and illustrated with fourteen full page half-tone plates, including pictures of seventy six missionary workers

No man in America, we believe, has a fuller knowledge of foreign missionary work than Archibald McLean, Corresponding Secretary of our Foreign Christian Missionary Society. His life has been devoted to the work. The fourteen addresses in this volume glow with missionary fire. The reading of them will quicken the zeal of every Christian. The preacher will find in them material for a score of missionary sermons. This is a book that should be circulated by tens of thousands. To insure it a wider reading than it has yet had we have made this great reduction in price. We pay postage.

PRICE, SIXTY CENTS.

MOODY'S SERMONS.

While other publishing houses are merrily quarreling over the several "only authorized" biographies of the great revivalist and evangelist, we are offering a splendid volume of the Sermons of Mr. Moody. Just think of it! A volume of 782 pages, illustrated, bound in calf, for only One Dollar. The book contains over one hundred sermons and talks by Mr. Moody, and, in addition, brief biographies of Moody, Sankey, Bliss, Whipple, Cook and Miss Willard.

It is undoubtedly true that some of Mr. Moody's theology was rather imperfect, and that there were some things he never rightly understood or taught. But the world is the better for his teaching concerning sin and its consequences and the necessity of repentence. Much that he said deserves to live and will live.

This volume was originally sold for Two Dollars and Fifty Cents. It is one of our "bankrupt sale bargains," and we are offering it for less than half the original price.

PRICE, ONE DOLLAR.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, 1522 Locust Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.

THE
CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST

"IN FAITH, UNITY; IN OPINION AND METHODS, LIBERTY; IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY."

Vol. xxxvii. St. Louis, Mo., Thursday, April 19, 1900. No. 16.

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
- Current Events....483
- An Interview With the Genius of Missions...484
- Dr. Hillis' Resignation....485
- The Strongest Appeal for Home Missions....485
- Our Home Work....486
- Fishers of Men....486
- Editor's Easy Chair....487
- Questions and Answers....487

HOME MISSIONS:
- Our Country, 'Tis of Thee....488
- Our Inheritance....488
- Reaching America....489
- The Fruit Test....489
- Mormonism....490
- Foreign Populations....490

CORRESPONDENCE:
- Chicago Letter....496
- St. Louis Letter....496
- B. B. Tyler's Letter....497
- Open Letter to H. L. Willett....498
- Ann Arbor Letter....498
- Central Illinois Ministerial Institute....499
- About Eating Too Much....499

FAMILY CIRCLE:
- Life (poem)....504
- The Lost Emigrants....504
- An Honest Million....505
- Ad Viatorem (poem)....506

MISCELLANEOUS:
- Our Budget....492
- Personal Mention....494
- Notes and News....500
- Missionary....502
- Evangelistic....503
- With the Children....507
- Sunday-school....508
- Christian Endeavor....509
- Bethany Reading Course....509
- Marriages and Obituaries....511

CURRENT EVENTS.

The Puerto Rican Tariff and Government Bill passed the house in its amended form, by a vote of 161 to 153, nine Republicans joining with the Democrats in voting against the measure. No measure before Congress for many years has excited deeper interest than this bill. The measure, as originally passed by the House, was a simple bill, imposing 15 per cent. of the Dingley rates on goods going into Puerto Rico from the United States, and coming from that island into this country. But as amended by the Senate and passed by the House, finally, all restrictions on goods coming into the United States are stricken out, while certain food stuffs and other articles which heretofore have gone into Puerto Rico free by Executive order are excluded from the operation of the 15 per cent. duty imposed on goods entering the island from the United States. The limit of this tariff measure, which goes into effect May 1st, is two years, but it may be discontinued at any time as soon as the local government of the island, which is provided for in the bill, provides a system of internal taxation that will raise sufficient funds to meet the expenses of its government. Whether the tariff of 15 per cent. of the Dingley law will continue two years or only a few months will depend, therefore, upon the action of the local government in providing a plan of internal taxation. It is further provided that all the money raised by this tariff goes to the benefit of the island. The bill as thus amended is far less objectionable than the original measure, but we still adhere to our opinion that it is both a mistaken policy and a violation of good faith with the Puerto Rican Island to impose even this nominal tariff for a limited time upon the Puerto Ricans.

The bill also provides for a Civil Government for the Island of Puerto Rico. The Island is to have a Governor, appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. His term of office is four years; his salary is $8,000 a year. San Juan is to be the capital, as heretofore, and the Governor is to occupy the buildings heretofore used by the Chief Executive of the island. The Governor is to have power to grant pardons, reprieves, remit fines and forfeitures for offenses against the laws of Puerto Rico, and respites for offenses against the laws of the United States, until the decision of the President can be ascertained. He shall have all the power of Governors of territories of the United States, that are not locally inapplicable, and is to make annual reports to the President, through the Secretary of State, of the operations of the government in the island. There is to be an Executive Council, consisting of eleven persons, to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, for terms of four years. At least five of the eleven shall be native inhabitants of Puerto Rico. Six of the eleven also hold offices and draw salaries as follows: Secretary, $4,000; Attorney General, $4,000; Treasurer, $5,000; Auditor, $4,000; Commissioner of the Interior, $4,000; Commissioner of Education, $3,000. Besides this there is to be a Legislature of Puerto Rico, composed of thirty-five Representatives, who will be elected every two years by the qualified voters of the island. The island is to be divided into seven districts, on the basis of population, and each district is to have five members of this House of Delegates. The two Houses thus constituted are designated, "The Legislative Assembly of Puerto Rico." The regulations for the first election are to be made by the Executive Council, and "all citizens shall be allowed to vote who have been bona fide residents for one year, and who possess the other qualifications of voters under the laws and military orders in force on the last day of March, 1900, subject to such modification and additional qualifications and such regulations and restrictions as to registration as may be prescribed by the Executive Council.

As regards the judiciary, the measure follows very closely the territorial forms. Puerto Rico is made a judicial district of the United States. The President appoints a district judge, a district attorney and a marshal. Subordinate officials and assistants and commissioners are appointed by the court. In addition to the district court, there is established a territorial supreme court, conforming to the supreme court of the territories. The presidential appointees to the two courts are subject to confirmation by the Senate, and their salaries are as follows: Chief justice of the supreme court, $5,000; associate justices of the supreme court, each $4,000; marshal of the supreme court, $3,000; United States district judge, $5,000; United States district attorney, $4,000; United States district marshal, $3,500. The law provides that the court proceedings will be in the English language, but provision will be made for official interpreters. While the measure does not provide for any member of Congress from the island, it does provide for "a resident commissioner to the United States, who shall be entitled to official recognition as such by the departments upon presentation to the Department of State of the certificate of election of the governor of Puerto Rico, and who shall be entitled to a salary, payable monthly by the United States, at the rate of $5,000 per annum. This commissioner must be a bona fide citizen of Puerto Rico." He must be at least 30 years of age, and able to read and write the English language. In reference to the currency of Puerto Rico, this government has dealt very generously. The measure provides that it is to be changed to that of the United States within three months after the passage of the act. The Puerto Rico peso contains 40 cents' worth of silver, according to the present bullion value. The law provides that this government shall redeem all of the pesos and all other silver and copper of Puerto Rico coin with United States money, on the basis of 60 cents, American money, for the pesos and the fractional Puerto Rico coin. The Puerto Rico money must be presented for exchange within three months.

The Paris Exposition was officially opened on last Saturday and publicly opened on last Sunday. The gates were thrown open at eight o'clock on Sunday morning and the invasion of the public began at ten. The Exposition is far from a completed condition, many of the buildings even not being completed, but this did not delay the opening. It is thought, however, that everything will be completed and in order by the first of May. Although the sight-seeing on the opening day was mostly of the perspective and general kind, it is said there was a common expression of admiration on the part of the people. While the Es planade des Invalides, the Rue des Nations and the Champ des Mars were crowded with sight-seers, the most popular feature in the whole Exposition, as yet at least, iss the moving sidewalk by which the various sections of the Exposition ground can be visited. The Exposition ground is almost within the heart of Paris, on either side of the River Seine, and contains less than four hundred acres. The buildings on the ground cover about two hundred and sixty acres. The buildings are all on a magnificent scale and everything seems to point to the greatest Exposition the world has yet seen. And as all nations will want to visit Paris this summer there can be no estimate made of the value of this Exposition as a preventive of wars, for a season at least. All nations are represented in buildings on the ground, and that of our own nation, with its rich installments, is said to stand next to France herself. Americans who visit Paris this summer need have no fear of humiliation because of our national exhibit at the great Paris Exposition.

The matter of chief interest now in political circles seems to be the selection of candidates for Vice-President in the two leading political parties. Admiral Dewey's candidacy does not seem to have seriously affected the situation, so far as the nomination for President is concerned. There is considerable talk now, however, that the Admiral may be persuaded to accept the nomination for the Vice-Presidency on the Democratic ticket. If Admiral Dewey is willing to accept that position and to announce himself satisfactorily to the Democrats on his political platform, it is probable that he would add material strength to that ticket. He has, however, gone to record on some questions which are destined to figure quite largely in the next presidential campaign, in a way that would handicap him, perhaps, but in spite of that fact, we are inclined to think that while the brave Admiral would commit a great blunder in permitting himself to be nominated by any political party, for any political position, he would, nevertheless, add no little strength to any ticket with which he might be associated. Several leading Republicans have been mentioned for the Vice-Presidency on the Republican ticket, but at the present writing, Secretary Long, of the Navy, seems to be the favorite of those who have been mentioned. Gov. Roosevelt's positive refusal to permit his name to be used in that connection takes him out of the field of possible candidates. There are many considerations to be reckoned with in the nomination of even a Vice-President, and there is likely to be a prolonged search before the right man is found. One thing may be counted upon as certain, that no candidate will be selected for either of the national tickets who is not a man of approved character and ability. This much, at least, has been gained in the direction of purer politics in this country.

The news from South Africa has been rather meager for the past few days. Enough is known, however, to make it apparent that Lord Roberts' army is about ready to resume active operations after a month's delay at Bloemfontein. It is pretty clear, too, that the seige by the Boers at Wepener has been abandoned, and that the several detachments of the Boer army, which had made a raid into the Free State, south of Bloemfontein, are now trekking northward with their supply train to load which with food stuffs, is now alleged to have been their chief aim in this invasion of the Free State.

AN INTERVIEW WITH THE GENIUS OF MISSIONS.

On our first page this week we present a picture in which the Genius of Missions, in the form of a woman, is descending to our globe, looking down upon it and significantly lighting upon that part of our sphere designated North America. We have been permitted to have an interview with this Genius of Missions as to the meaning of her pose and of her attitude to the globe and to the American continent, and we present the following outline of the same:

Christian-Evangelist: "Madam, will you kindly explain to our readers the meaning of this picture in which you present yourself on our first page, in connection with the globe?"

Genius of Missions: "With great pleasure. In the first place, as the Genius of Missions, I present myself in connection with the entire globe, as my mission has to do with the whole round earth. It is my aim, as the Spirit of Missions, to extend the kingdom of Christ around the whole earth, and no picture representing simply a part of the globe would express the whole of my aim and mission."

Christian-Evangelist: "That is good. Your mission is world-wide. The Spirit of Missions knows no limitations. But in the picture I see that the continent of North America seems to loom up into prominence, and your attitude seems to indicate that you have a special interest just now in the evangelization of this part of the globe. What are your reasons, may I ask, for the special interest you manifest in this Western world?"

Genius of Missions: "You are right in supposing that I feel a special interest in the evangelization of America, and particularly of the United States, and my reasons for this special interest in your country are as follows:

"1. The United States is now the wealthiest country in the world. Wealth is a vast power for good when it is rightly used, and a great peril when not so used. If this wealth can be consecrated to the work of missions, the whole world will be benefited thereby. If not, I fear the worst.

"2. The United States is the best illustration of a free, self-governed republic which the world has ever seen. This fact gives it an influence on the world which no other nation possesses Recent developments have enhanced the power and prestige of the United States as a great factor in the problem of the world's civilization.

"3. The American people are the dominant branch of the Anglo-Saxon race, whose language and civilization are destined to be the dominant factors in the world's future. Hence my special interest in its evangelization."

Christian-Evangelist: "These, it must be confessed, are weighty reasons for the evangelization of the United States. May I ask, however, if you discover anything in the character of the religious influences going out from this country that is likely to give the missionary impulse from this land a prominent place in the world's evangelization?"

Genius of Missions: "I have noted with great pleasure the movement for Christian union which has had such wonderful growth in the United States, beginning early in the century. This movement for the union of Christian forces, based on the return to the original Christianity of Christ, is vitally related to the success of missions, and since it has its chief strength and power in the United States, having been born on American soil and in your free atmosphere, that is an added reason why America is destined to hold an important place in the Christianization of the world. If the people who stand as advocates of this movement for Christian union will continue to extend its power and influence all over your great country, they will not only best fulfill the mission which has been given to them, but will also contribute mightily to the triumph of missions throughout the world."

Christian-Evangelist: "Thank you, Madam, for the courtesy of this interview and for your weighty words, which I shall convey to my readers with the hope that they may profit thereby, and that they may be stirred by them to greater energy and self-sacrifice in behalf of Home Missions."

DR. HILLIS' RESIGNATION.

Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, the brilliant pastor of the Plymouth Church in Brooklyn, preached a sermon on March 25th on "The Automatic Judgment Seat in Man," which has created no little stir in Presbyterian ranks. Dr. Hillis has submitted his resignation to the Chicago Presbyterian ministry. This event was wholly unanticipated by Dr. Hillis when he delivered his sermon. He was greatly surprised at the storm which the sermon raised.

The sermon, from what we have seen of it, was a powerful appeal to the conscience, and contained a very solemn warning against the wages of sin. The point was that man should not become careless because the judgment day was postponed until after death, because God had set up a throne of judgment in the conscience of every man. "Go where man will, he always carries with him the full court of justice. Every day is also a judgment day. Every night conscience ascends her throne. The soul stands forth as one accused. Memory offers the testimony. Reason interprets the law. Judgment gives its decision. And when conscience has sent the soul to the left, she waves her flaming sword and stands at the gate of the Lost Paradise. Contrariwise, he who does right, obeys the law of God—giving a cup of cold water only to one of Christ's little ones—for him the reward is not postponed until the far-off judgment day. For those who have eyes to see, God's angels are ever on the wing, bringing Christ's reward."

In looking for the basis of that judgment, Dr. Hillis could not find it in the doctrine of election and predestination, and was led to repudiate this part of the Confession of Faith in the most fiery rhetoric. It was this that provoked the storm of criticism which followed. He does not seem to have apprehended that his repudiation of this doctrine would create the stir that it did. He says: "I have said the same things a score of times in my work in the Central Music Hall, nor did I dream there would be such an upheaval. Plainly, the time has come for me to withdraw."

The following are the clauses of the Confession which Dr. Hillis repudiated with such vehemence. They are sections 3 and 4 of chapter 3 of the Confession of Faith:

III. By the decree of God, for the manifestation of his glory, some men and angels are predestinated unto everlasting life, and others foreordained to everlasting death.

IV. These angels and men, thus predestinated and foreordained, are particularly and unchangeably designed; and their number is so certain and definite that it cannot be increased or diminished.

Concerning the above clauses Dr. Hillis says:

For years, in common with many other preachers, I have been apologizing for our Creed, and saying that while our Confession of Faith says that "some men and angels are foreordained to everlasting death," that nobody believed it. Nevertheless, during these years I have been disturbed by the thought that nothing lowers the moral sense of the community like the keeping on statute books laws that are daily disobeyed and laughed at; and what shall be said of the injury to our children and youth of preserving intact a creed that is accepted by our clerical instructors one day and denied by our ministers the next? During years past I labored in season and out of season, with voice and pen, to secure a revision of the Confession that we might be clear before the world. But it now seems that some teachers in our theological seminaries hold to the doctrine of reprobation, teach it, love it, count it an integral part of our system, and urge that if I cannot accept it I must withdraw from the church.

Few if any of our readers will fail to sympathize with Dr. Hillis in his rejection of this awful doctrine. That it should be necessary for him to resign from the Presbyterian Church because of such rejection is only possible because, for some strange reason, the Confession has not been revised, and this odious clause omitted. Nothing could more forcibly illustrate the unwisdom of making human dogmas, which must necessarily be changeable, a part of the essential faith.

Dr. Hillis is no unbeliever. He is not seeking an emasculated gospel. He believes in the great verities of religion. It is this aspersion upon the divine character which he repudiates. In a fine passage, worth quoting here, he expresses his adhesion to the old faith as follows:

In going out from you, lest some misunderstand my action I wish to reaffirm my faith in what is called the great fundamental principles of Christianity. As never before I believe in God the Father, Maker of heaven and earth, and in his loving providence; in his all-helpful, all comforting, all-guiding and regenerating Spirit; in Jesus Christ, the world's Savior and Redeemer, and our Way and Truth and Life; in man made in the image of God, and despite his sinfulness and ignorance he is sincerely and truthfully invited to come into the likeness of the Father. I believe that what Christ was and did and suffered for a few men through three and thirty years, God is and does and suffers for all men, in all worlds, through all ages. If the new scholarship has destroyed my old view of the Bible, as never before I believe the Bible to be the Word of God, a light to my feet and a lamp to my path. After years of mental conflict and doubt I have bought these faiths at a great price. Nothing can wrest them from me. For me the principles of evangelical Christianity seem as firmly fixed as mountains and stars. So far, also, from loving the Christian church and the Christian ministry less, these views have strengthened my love until it has become an all-consuming passion. There are hours when I look out upon the multitudes going stumbling, blundering, weeping, falling, sinning and dying, when it seems to me I would die a thousand deaths to be permitted to give a cup of cold water only to one of Christ's little ones, or light one beacon fire to guide the pilgrim host struggling through the desert. And when I think of the poor in our tenement houses, of the prodigal sons and daughters in the streets of our great cities, upon men whose business it is to degrade their fellows, I see that what I had once hoped might be done for my fellows through schemes of social reform and philanthropy can only be done by the influence of Jesus Christ and his Spirit manifested in his disciples who bear the burdens and sorrows of the people. For there is no dynamic in reform save the cross of Jesus Christ.

A little more of that kind of heresy injected into the ministry of the whole church universal would not be amiss.

THE STRONGEST APPEAL FOR HOME MISSIONS.

If we should ask our secretaries to name the strongest appeal for Home Missions, they would probaby say that it is that America is the base of supplies for all our movements.

Used, as they are, to marshal the churches like a general marshals his army, they are constantly looking to the regions beyond and planning to enter new fields. The fact that it is from the American home and the American church we must get our young men and young women who will go out to the conquest of the world makes this a mighty plea, and notwithstanding that, we can add with truth that all our missionary work must prosper as the Home Field is enlarged, yet we do not believe that the argument that America is the base of supplies for all our advanced work is the strongest that can be made for Home Missions.

***

If we should ask the Home Missionary on the Home Field what is the strongest argument for Home Missions, he would probably answer: Because America is the ripest mission field in the world to-day. This is strong, we know. Our Home Missionaries averaged 77½ additions each, last year, a record without a parallel, the nearest approach to it by any other religious body being by the Lutheran Home Missionaries, who averaged 19 additions for each missionary. It is a demonstration that America is ripe for our great plea and should cause us to pay and pray the Lord to send forth laborers into the white harvest; but even that is not the strongest argument for Home Missions.

***

If we asked an older preacher, he would probably say that the greatest argument is for the sake of our plea; that we have a two-fold message, one to the world, to persuade every man to be reconciled to God through the simple terms of the gospel of the New Testament, and a second message to the divided church of God, that they may all be one; to present to this divided church the plan and platform of Christian union by a restoration of primitive Christianity and the Bible alone as the rule of faith and practice.

He would say that every reason that justifies our separate existence as a people pleads for the spreading of our plea over this good land; that if ever this plea was worthy to be made in Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Illinois, Iowa and Missouri until we should become a mighty people in these states, then it is equally worthy of being made over the remaining three-fourths of the United States that is dependent upon our General Home Board. The same reasons plead for our Home Mission work that plead for and justified our separate existence as a religious people. That is strong, but not the strongest argument for Home Missions.

***

The Christian statesman would say the strongest argument for Home Missions is the plea of Christian patriotism. As we love our flag, our country, our civil and religious liberties, our freedom in law, so we should strive to win this good land to be Immanuel's land. That Christ is the Savior of nations as well as individuals, and Christ is the only statesman who can solve the problems that are before the American people. Christian patriotism makes a mighty appeal for Home Missions—that we try to win "Home and Native Land" for God; but it is not the strongest appeal that can be made.

* * *

What is the greatest, the strongest appeal? It is the appeal of love—"the love of Christ constraineth us." This is the highest motive for all mission work in whatever field, and it is especially strong in its relation to American missions, because of the relation America sustains to the rest of the world. Love is the greatest thing in the world, the strongest motive to mold and control our lives. Love sends the father to daily toil, the mother to heavy burdens for the home they love so well. Love brings to us services money will not buy. Love prompts us to toil for that which money cannot compensate. Love gave the world the great missionary, Jesus. Love sent His mighty apostle over the known world, in the face of perils uncountable, to win that sin-weary world to Christ.

So Home Missions comes and makes this all-embracing and holy appeal of love—love for Christ to advance his cause and honor His name; love for the great plea to see it going forth conquering and to conquer; love for souls, that we may bring them that great blessing which does them only good.

When love inspires the church, burdens will seem easy and obstacles will vanish in victory. We present our Home Mission appeal. The love of Christ constraineth us to do this for his name's sake.

OUR HOME WORK.

If we apply the test commended by the the Lord—"By their fruits ye shall know them"—our work of Home Missions will win the award of a good and faithful servant.

It is safe to say that nearly one-half our present churches have been organized by missionary societies. Over one hundred thousand souls have been brought to Christ by the work of our home missionaries; weak churches have been strengthened and saved from discouragement and dissolution; in times of trouble they have been aided in settling their difficulties; preachers have been put to work; evangelists have been sustained; a missionary atmosphere has been created and a missionary conscience has been trained; the cause of God has been furthered and His name honored—thus our home missionary work has been of untold value to us.

Last year, as we indicated a few weeks since, our 129 home missionaries and teachers organized 63 churches and brought 9,996 persons into the churches—a result without parallel in the missionary work of any religious body. Such a work rightly claims our approval and our support. If we cannot support our Home Board in the work it is now doing—helping thirty-three of our weaker State Boards, supporting more missionaries than ever before and these missionaries more successful by many-fold than those of any other religious people—if we will not support such a work, what will we support?

The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST would urge every preacher to study this work of Home Missions; the ripe field, the harvest already overripe, the great opportunity, the fitness of the primitive gospel we are trying to preach, the blessing of God upon this preaching, the leadings of Providence toward larger victories still to come, until he is enthused and, like Saul of Tarsus, has a vision of what God has in store for His gospel in this great land.

Our hearts should be full of this great work for Home Missions. It should stand before us like a burning bush, and as we draw near to see what the sight means, we should thrill with enthusiasm as we note the manifest presence of the blessing of God and His divine approval so given to the great work.

We should see the pillar that goes before us—a cloud by day, a fire by night—and that every reason which justified our fathers in making this great plea for Christian union, still urges us to send it all over this great country. Every reason that urged us and inspired us and helped us to become strong in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Iowa and Missouri, pleads for us to become strong all over this land. Every reason which justifies our existence at all pleads for our Home Mission work.

Hour of Prayer.

FISHERS OF MEN.

(Matt. 4:18-25.)

(Uniform Midweek Prayer-meeting Topic, April 25.)

CENTRAL TRUTH: It was Christ's purpose while on earth to call and prepare chosen men and train them in winning men from the power of sin to the love and service of God, and He is still doing this work through His church.

One day as Jesus was walking along the shore of the Sea of Galilee, charmed, no doubt, by the gentle murmur of its waves and by the beauty of its blue waters, He came across two brothers, Peter and Andrew, who were fishermen, and who were casting their net into the sea. It was not the first time He had met them; they had been attracted to Him down in Judea, near where John was baptizing, and had come under the spell of his influence. He, too, had noticed the interest they had manifested in Him and His message when they had first been introduced to Him. This mutual knowledge of each other gave rise to the call on the one hand and its acceptance on the other.

"Come ye after me," said Jesus, "and I will make you fishers of men." This is His one promise to them, and it relates to what He will make of them, with nothing about salary or other earthly reward. On the strength of it "they straightway left their nets and followed Him." There was something in the personality of Jesus, in His message and in the work to which He called them that irresistibly attracted them.

Going on a little further along the shore, He came across two other brothers, James and John, sons of Zebedee, who were in a boat with their father, mending their nets. He called them, also, and "They straightway left the boat and their father and followed Him." They felt the same influence that had attracted the other two, and in like manner yielded to it to follow one whom they had already come to look upon as having a divine mission in the world.

What is it to be "fishers of men?" These fishermen could hardly have misunderstood the meaning of the words. They gathered the meaning of Jesus, doubtless, to be that He would teach them how to bring men into the kingdom of God. They had already learned, both from John the Baptist and from Jesus, that the kingdom was at hand, and to bring men under its power and induce them to become citizens of it seemed to them a vocation worth their while, and they forsook their nets and fishing-boats to become learners of Jesus.

If this be the meaning of the call, and if in truth the understanding of its meaning entered into the minds of these fishermen, it is not to be wondered at that they were willing to forsake their earthly calling and devote themselves to the new vocation of winning men from the service of sin to the love and service of God. The more we think about it, the clearer it becomes that there is no work in all the world to be compared in importance to the work of extending the reign of Christ over the hearts and lives of men. This was the blessed work to which these Galilean fishermen were called.

Jesus found these men industriously engaged in their vocation and He called them to a higher work. It is the man who is doing faithfully the work which he finds to do that is generally called to more important work. The idlers are passed by when men are being sought for positions of responsibility and trust.

It is worth while, too, to note the fact that Jesus believed that these disciples would be better qualified for the work which He desired them to do, by a course of special training, and hence He asked them to leave their business and become learners of Him. To be fishers of men is a divine art, and no one can do it efficiently until he has studied under the great Master. How successful some of these men became as "fishers of men," the New Testament record shows. As we once heard Mr. Spurgeon say: "The first time Peter cast the gospel net he drew in three thousand souls." It is not given to every one to be so successful. Peter not only had a special training, but it was a special occasion—the birthday of the church.

The work which Christ carried on personally, while He was here, in training men to preach His gospel and to become "fishers of men," has to be carried on to-day by the church. There is the same need to-day for special preparation in order to the most effective work that there was in the days of the Savior. That work the church is doing chiefly through her colleges, but it must be confessed that she has often neglected it, and the work of the kingdom has suffered as a consequence.

It is not to be understood, however, that only those who have been especially called and trained to be fishers of men are to engage in this work. Every disciple of Christ is expected to be a fisher of men, according to the measure of his ability and opportunity. Some of the most successful soul-winners have been among those who have had no special training in schools, but they have been trained by the Master, and have rendered most effective service in recruiting for the kingdom of God. The church can never be the triumphant power in the world that it ought to be until each member feels his responsibility, in this respect, and seeks conscientiously to discharge it.

But this implies genuine conversion to Christ, love for our fellowmen and an intelligent understanding of the gospel of Christ. One of the things needed in every strong church is more special training of men and women in the art of winning others from the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of light. Sunday-schools and Endeavor Societies should be filled with this evangelistic spirit, and even the young should know how to persuade others of their age to accept Christ and His salvation.

PRAYER.

O Lord, we thank Thee that Thou hast called us by Thy gospel into fellowship with Thyself, and into partnership with Thee in the work of saving others. We thank Thee that it is our privilege, not only to receive this great salvation at Thy hand, but that Thou hast permitted us also to invite others to share with us its blessings and benefits. So fill us with Thy Spirit, and guide us by Thy truth, that we may be successful in winning our fellowmen from the ways of sin and death to the way of truth and righteousness, for Thy name's sake. Amen!

Editor's Easy Chair.

"Let the principle be once admitted that there are to be absolutely no trials for heresies, and the church is helpless to cast out any false doctrine." This remark from one of our esteemed contemporaries of the Presbyterian faith serves to show how far religious denominations have drifted away from the spirit and methods of the primitive, apostolic church. Let the word heresy here be understood, not in its New Testament meaning, but in its modern sense of doctrinal departure from a human creed, and we have a situation for which we have no precedent in the early church. There were no standards of doctrine other than the inspired writings, and the word heresy referred to division or schism in the body of Christ. Why is it, that in the absence of an ecclesiastical court to conduct a heresy trial, there is no remedy for "false doctrine?" What has become of reason and truth and persuasion? Are these obsolete forces? If Dr. McGiffert has propagated false doctrines, is it not possible for some equally learned man to point out their falsity? When a false doctrine is shown to be false, then it is indeed "cast out." But a heresy trial scatters rather than casts out a false doctrine. It may cast the man out of that particular denomination, but not out of the church of Christ, and he goes right on teaching as before. Truth is the only remedy for error. Ecclesiastical authority settles nothing. How long it has taken the church to find that out!

The apostolic church was a body of men who believed in Jesus Christ, and who loved Him and one another, and who sought to bring others under His leadership. Their bond of union was their faith in and love for a common Savior and Lord. They had no doctrinal formulations to defend, no standards of doctrine other than the inspired writings, and wasted no time in conducting heresy trials. No wonder the church grew mightily and prospered in those early days. If the Disciples of Christ have grown with a rapidity unknown, perhaps, since the apostolic age, it is chiefly because they have endeavored to restore the simplicity of the ancient church, and, having discarded all human standards as of any binding authority, have declared that the one bond of union is faith in Christ as the Son of God and loyalty to Him. Wearing His name, bowing to His authority, and seeking only to build up His church on the foundation which He laid, they have met with a response which shows that the world was weary with controversies and strifes over doctrinal refinements, and was longing for a return to the Man of Galilee and to the humble, Spirit-filled men who sat at His feet, learned His doctrine and transmitted it to future generations. In so far as we are able to maintain this attitude of disciples of Jesus, learning of Him, following Him and seeking to extend, not a set of doctrines, but the knowledge of Him and of salvation through Him to all men, we shall doubtless continue to receive manifestations of divine favor and blessing.

It is in the light of such considerations as these that we are enabled to realize the peculiar responsibility that rests upon us, and rise to anything like a full performance of our duties and obligations. It is under the influence of such motives as these that we should enter upon the work of our annual offering for Home Missions. Because the plea we have made for a return to Christ and to the freedom and simplicity of the gospel has met with such tokens of divine favor, we are under the most sacred obligations to redouble our efforts in urging forward this work which has been committed to our hands. Whether we would have it so or not, our annual offering for extending the knowledge and influence of this Reformation throughout this great homeland, stretching from ocean to ocean and from the lakes to the gulf, and now reaching out to distant islands of the sea, is the measure of our appreciation of the truth with which we are entrusted. Let our ministry and churches see to it that there is no looking backward in this stupendous enterprise of evangelizing America and making it the basis of operations for world-wide missions. "As goes America, so goes the world," has enough truth in it to make us zealous for a pure religion here, which will at least compare with our civil liberty and free institutions, which have been the admiration and wonder of the world.

It is becoming more apparent all the while that only the religion of Jesus Christ can save this nation and perpetuate its blessings to future generations. "There is no dynamic in reform save the cross of Jesus Christ," says Dr. Hillis, and the saying is worthy of all acceptation. If that dynamic does not lift our cities, our states and the nation out of the dominion of commercialism, of Mammon worship, of political corruption and moral uncleanness, this great Republic of the West, whose mission among other nations is symbolized by the statue in New York harbor of "Liberty Enlightening the World," will go the way of all the nations that forget God. Patriotism, therefore, as well as religion, should make us zealous advocates and supporters of Home Missions. Once a year we have the opportunity, in our May Offering, to express our appreciation of the simple gospel as a remedy for our national disorders, and to exhibit a patriotism that is founded in truth and righteousness. Let us make the most of it.

Current Religious Thought.

The following clear-cut statements are made in a contribution by Addison P. Foster to a symposium in the Biblical World on the function of the Sunday-school:

The Sunday-school has a distinctive place of its own, filled by no other church service. Every church has three distinctive functions, which it should seek to meet—evangelization, instruction and worship; evangelization, to win the soul to God; instruction, to furnish knowledge of divine truth; worship, to promote communion with God. Evangelization is best done by appeals from the pulpit and from friend with friend. Worship is best promoted by family prayer, by social meetings, and by public Sabbath exercises planned to arouse the holiest emotions. But instruction is the special office of the Sunday-school. The Sunday-school requires study, stimulates individual thought, and by its method of questioning requires definite views to be clearly expressed in answers.

To the same symposium Professor Graham Taylor, of Chicago Commons and Chicago Theological Seminary, makes the following contribution, which gives an excellent classification of the agencies to be employed by the church in Christian nurture and the peculiar function which each is fitted to perform:

The following classification and co-ordination of nurture agencies, in accordance with their predominant aim and efficiency, are suggested to show the place which the Sunday-school should occupy among them: (1) For the first, most constant and affirmative influence—the family. (2) For training children in observation and discipline, rudimentary knowledge and experience, industrial habits, and religious practices—the kindergarten classes, conducted by pastors or others, industrial schools, organizations for little boys and girls. (3) For graded teaching—the Sunday-school. (4) For fellowship in the exercise of the gifts, graces, and service of the Christian life—leagues and unions, brotherhoods, etc. (5) For pre-occupying and prepossessing youth, principally through a Christian environment—the Young Men's and the Young Women's Christian Associations. (6) For preventive agencies against the specific vices of intemperance, impurity, and cruelty—Bands of Hope, White Cross League, Bands of Mercy. (7) For reformatory and restorative purposes—schools for the defective, dependent and delinquent. (8) For edification—pulpit and pastoral nurture, university-extension and Chautauqua circles.

OUR COUNTRY, 'TIS OF THEE.

D. R. DUNGAN.

Of course, we believe in expansion. But whether the world will be blessed or cursed by it depends upon what is expanded. The Chinaman feels that he is quite Americanized when he can get seablind drunk and swear like zigzag lightning, because that is what he sees and hears in this country. He knows but little of the better class of our people. As he believes this to be a Christian nation, naturally he regards the bad lives of many of our people as the legitimate results of our religion. Our reasoning is about the same with China. A tree is to be known by its fruits. We think of their condition, physically, mentally, morally and politically, largely, as the output of their religion and philosophy. So we are exhorting the Chinaman, as he understands it, to become honest, unselfish, pure, pious and sober, like Americans—such Americans as they see. He is expected to abandon the opium den for the saloon, to change his form of social iniquity for the more gilded and devilish sort, practiced by law in this land of liberty. Many of them hire wives by the year; but we will teach them to marry with the privilege of a divorce following the first quarrel, or for any want of affinity. I am glad the Chinaman has not yet fallen down to the level of the divorce system imposed upon us.

We have turned liberty into license until our laws are violated with impunity. Laws in Turkey, Japan and China are, many of them, bad, but the people are loyal and our people are not. I am not a pessimist, nor will I portray or betray our many enormities. When I think of them, and remember that God is just, I tremble for my nation. A man tries for one whole week to edit a daily in a Christian manner and the country has to be flooded with slime-blooded reportorial filth from Dan to Beersheba, as the knights of the quill sling buckets of Chicago sewage at the one man who tried to introduce the custom of editorial decency.

Where are we? What must we do? What can we do? Our abominations smell to heaven. The man in the moon is now holding his nose as he passes over large American cities. Yes, I see,we can send our civilization abroad. We can send five missionaries to the Philippines and ten shiploads of rum and fill the half-heathen too full of the spirit to attend the bullfights. Of all the world the Anglo-Saxon race leads in influence. The great energy and possibilities of that race are in America. It was once said: "As goes France, so goes the other nations of Europe." Largely, this was true, not so much because of the influence and leadership of the French people, but because they were more explosive and soonest to act in any given cause; hence they were in the lead because they were first to move. But in a larger sense it may be said of this country: "As goes America, so goes the nations of the earth." We will stand or fall, not alone for ourselves or by ourselves, but for other peoples as well.

They will copy our eccentricities and follies much more readily than our excellencies. So that our care for those of other lands should first lead us in a warfare against our own sins, against the lawful iniquities of the age and nation.

America is at this time the largest factor in the ruin or the salvation of the world. The truth and the life must reach the world through us, or not at all. But we cannot send to the nations what we do not possess. You cannot pour water out of a jug which contains only kerosene. The physician ought to save himself.

We can save this country only by the gospel. The gospel must be believed and lived to exert its saving power. It must be heard, and we must preach it that it may be heard. In the state of Missouri we have one hundred and sixty-six thousand Disciples, and yet two thirds of the people of the state have never heard the simple story as we present it. In the city of St. Louis,with three-fourths of a million of people,there are not four thousand Disciples in our churches. In the Eastern states we are almost unknown. "There is much land yet to possess." What shall we do? The answer is easy: preach the gospel to the people of our own land. Don't slacken the hand that drives for Foreign Missions, but we should do four times as much for missionary work in our own land as we have ever done before.

A Ringing Letter.

This work of Home Missions is a greater thing than any of us have yet realized. Every advantage should be taken of the turn in its favor just now. You have changed the current of interest, now never let up. I wish it were so that I could work six months for this society. Our mountain feuds; the negro shut out from voting in some of the Southern states because of his lack of intelligence; the backward movement of the rural districts in the Eastern states, like Vermont and others; the increase of iniquity in our large cities, and the apathy of the churches all over the land on the subject—all these and many other reasons ought to be spread like fire until all our people are blazing with zeal for "America for Christ."

WM. ROSS LLOYD.

Richmond, Ky.

OUR INHERITANCE.

C. W. HENRY.

Twenty-five years ago it sounded like boasting to say that this was the greatest and best country of the world. If these words seemed exaggeration then, they are now quite within the limits of fact. We look at our agricultural statistics and are surprised; our surprise grows as we look at the value of horses, cattle and other live stock. We find the coal and iron in immense extent and of untold value. The manufacturer astonishes us with the millions invested in mills and factories; the transportation companies give us the figures representative of their business, and each particular line is said to be in its infancy and must be very much greater in the near future. We believe them, and in our pride we say: "This is God's country;" and so it is.

There is something, however, greater than all this wealth of land with its resources. It is the people who live upon it and develop it. Seventy millions of the most intelligent and energetic people of the earth. No wonder the earth yields her treasures to such a people! Who are these people? They are of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues;" but here they are all Americans. Here they are prospered as they have been nowhere else. All are rapidly coming to speak and understand the same language, and are attaining a common understanding of social and political institutions. They all hold firmly to their rights, to their freedom. Independence is indelibly stamped on every brow.

Still higher and more important than all else are the religious opportunities and privileges of the people of this great land. In the very heart of the country are to be found one million Disciples of Christ, properly spelled with a big D or a little d. It is only three quarters of a century since the movement took shape in this country; today it includes one-seventieth of the population and is making wonderful strides. It is one of the most active and positive organizations among the religious bodies; its percentage of increase is greater than that of any other. Its plea is marvelous for its simplicity and its power, and it comes home quickly to honest, earnest souls seeking the way unto salvation. What weapons we have! What opportunities! The open doors are everywhere. The calls for help from every direction are many and loud. Our ability to enter and possess the land is without question. Shall we do it? The need of the hour is men and money. There are many men willing to do this work, but they cannot go at their own charges. Every disciple of the Christ should have a share in preaching the Word in his own land. If "as America goes, so goes the world," each may have a part in evangelization of the distant nations by evangelizing America. The first Lord's day in May is set apart for Home Missions that we may all help answer those cries for help. What a grand thing it would be if every one of the million Disciples of Christ would on that day give something for this work into the treasury of the Lord and would thereafter remember to beseech God's blessing upon the labor and the laborers! Many more than a million would rejoice on earth beside the countless hosts of heaven. May the Lord help every Disciple to feel his responsibility in this work and to realize that in this way we are indeed co-workers together with God.

REACHING AMERICA.

W. W. SNIFF.

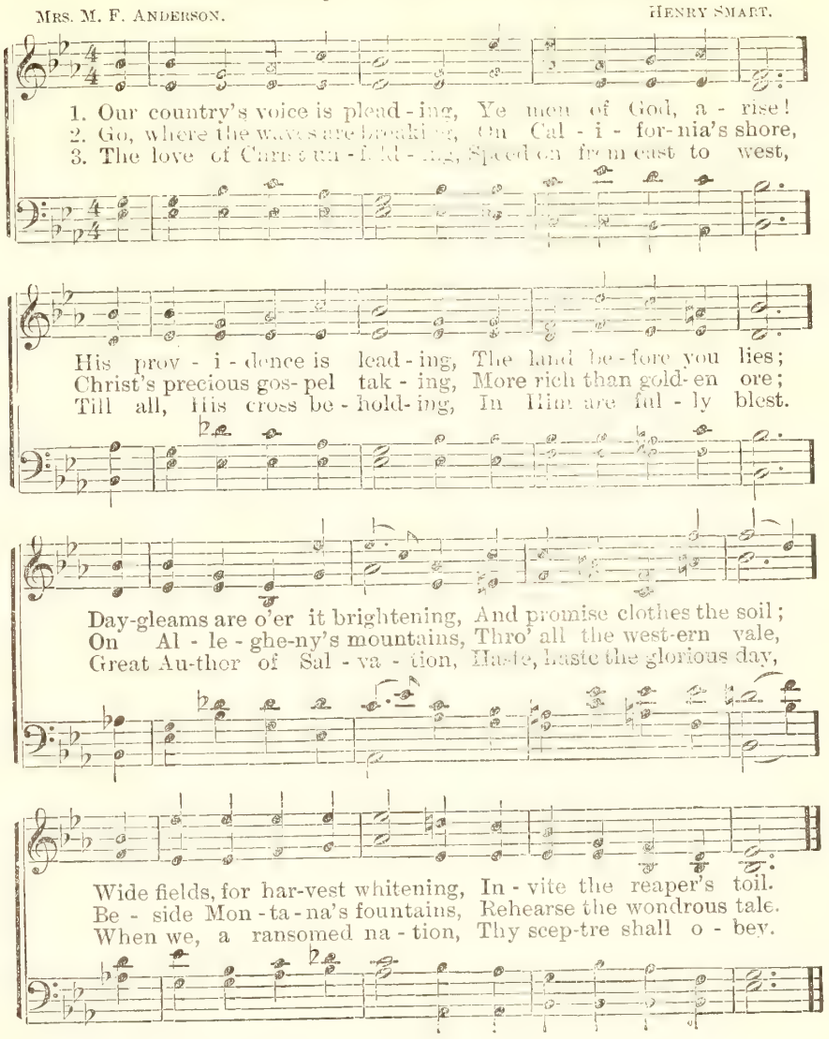
We have spoken much of the reflex influence of Foreign Missions. We have insisted that those who were most interested in contributing for the salvation of souls on the other side of the globe were those who most appreciated the value of souls near at hand. We have been saying, The way to reach America is by way of the heathen world. All this has been very true, and we have witnessed the greatest zeal for world-wide evangelism accompanied by the largest earnestness in preaching the gospel at home. But if the shortest route to the home field is by way of the heathen world, it is surely about time we were reaching America. Not that we have done enough abroad, but we have at least learned by limited explorations and the establishing of outposts how great is the work of saving the world; and with an appreciation of the greatness of the undertaking we are prepared to understand as not before the importance of strengthening the base of supplies. We can neglect the home field only at the peril of the work across the seas. No one who understands the condition of our home churches can doubt that the mightiest agency for spiritual advancement among them has been the work of reaching out toward "the uttermost parts." But how great is the need of work in needy fields near at hand, both for the sake of our own land and for the sake of enlarged base of supplies for more extended labors beyond.

From several view-points has the route to our own country been by way of distant lands, and many considerations are now uniting to show us the importance of reaching America with as much haste as possible. The stupendous undertaking of saving the world, judged by the little already done, pleads eloquently for the saving of America for the world's sake. The raising of our flag over ten millions of people in the Orient has led us to reflect that our own so-called civilization is scarcely fit to carry to the heathen world, surcharged as that boasted civilization is with Mammonism, rum and immorality. Lest even the heathen shall attempt to reproach us, saying: "Physician, heal thyself," let us not neglect the vigorous prosecution of gospel work in our own land. The study we have been compelled to make in late years of ourselves in our relations to the present and future of the world has been teaching us the paramount importance of spreading Christianity in our own land that we shall not fail to discharge the mission which God seems to have given us in the conquest of the world for Christ, and the bringing in of the kingdom. Prompted by loyalty to Christ, love of native land, and desire for world-wide evangelism, let us make haste to reach America.

Cleveland, Ohio.

91 Our Country's Voice is Pleading.

MRS. M. F. ANDERSON. HENRY SMART.



1. Our country's voice is plead - ing, Ye men of God, a - rise!
2. Go, where the waves are breaki - ng, On Cal - i - for-nia's shore,
3. The love of Christ is ral - ly - ing, Speed on from east to west,
His prov - i - dence is lead - ing, The land be - fore you lies;
Christ's precious gos- pel tak - ing, More rich than gold-en ore;
Till all, His cross be - hold- ing, In Him are ful - ly blest.
Day-gleams are o'er it brightening, And promise clothes the soil;
On Al - le - ghe-ny's mountains, Thro' all the west-ern vale,
Great Au-thor of Sal - va - tion, Haste, haste the glorious day,
Wide fields, for har-vest whitening, In - vite the reaper's toil.
Be - side Mon - ta - na's fountains, Rehearse the wondrous tale.
When we, a ransomed na - tion, Thy scep-tre shall o - bey.

THE FRUIT TEST.

J. W. JENKINS.

The growth of the missionary spirit among the Churches of Christ is as gratifying as it is interesting. The deeper joy, the spirit of evangelism, the comprehensive view of God's plans and purposes and the abounding love which rises above all barriers of caste, race and national prejudice is related to missions as cause to effect. Many of our churches have learned by experience the blessedness of giving, and a few know something of a twofold blessedness; first, of receiving when their very existence depended upon it, and second of giving that the life of other churches might be perpetuated.

In this Western country, where we are yet but pioneers, and where there is so little consecrated wealth and so many homeless congregations, the wisdom of the brotherhood in strongly supporting the Home Board is frequently seen.

The board came to the support of the churches for which I was preaching at a time when it was impossible to continue the work without their aid. The church at Heppner was worshiping in an expensive hall and seriously debating the question whether to attempt to build or disband. Stimulated by the promise of aid from the National Board, with a faith bordering on the supernatural, they built one of the best churches in the county. They have a small debt which they are constantly reducing, and they are now planning for aggressive work.

At Hood River the church was encouraged to continue its work and buy from the Congregationalists a good, substantial building. To-day they are free from debt and are paying for preaching half time. In addition to this work I have organized two churches, baptized seventy-six persons and gathered seventy-seven from other sources. I have done much work at Wasco, and the house of worship has been improved to the extent of one hundred and fifty dollars. Rufus, Mosier and Carson have been visited with a view to holding the churches together until they can support a preacher a portion of the time.

These churches are growing in numbers, character and influence, and they are contributing to the various missionary enterprises of the brotherhood to the extent of their ability. The missionary money spent in this district has greatly strengthened the churches, and they are looking hopefully into the future.

Hood River, Oregon.

A Good Word About Porto Rico.

BENJ. L. SMITH, Corresponding Secretary:

I am not a member of the Christian Church, but I have recently visited Porto Rico and investigated the Christian work being done there. The work of your missionary, J. A. Erwin, is the most successful work done in Porto Rico to-day. His school, the reading room, the church services are all well attended and patronized. I congratulate you on the work you are doing in Porto Rico.

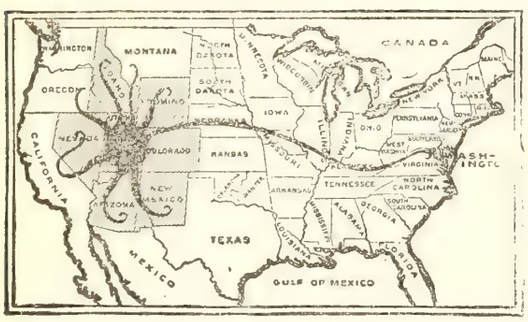
MRS. D. YATES.

Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mormonism.

It is useless to rail against Mormonism. The only thing it fears is the light of intelligence. If we would save America from this pagan blight we must preach the gospel.

R. B. Neal, our veteran Mormon fighter, of Grayson County, Kentucky, did not begin his work any too soon. The growth of the Mormon Church in this country is alarming, and there is a great deal of indignation on account of Mormon elders operating in the different states. Not a great while ago, at Lemon Springs, N. C., three Mormon elders were tarred, feathered and ridden out of town on a rail. Error should be met with truth, and not with force, unless the law is violated. What we need is more men like R. B. Neal, to make an aggressive fight on Mormonism, but to do it in the name of justice and truth, and not to try to exterminate them by force.



Mormonism is trying to secure political control of the Rocky Mountain states. Mormonism has twenty-five hundred missionaries at work in various parts of the United States—more than any other Protestant body. There are thirty Mormon missionaries in Chicago, ten in Cincinnati, five hundred in the mountain regions of Tennessee and Kentucky.

Foreign Populations.

In later years the home field has turned back upon itself and found new opportunities and new obligations in the foreign population. Sixteen million of our population are of foreign birth; we have almost criminally neglected these people. There are thirty different nationalities in every city in America having a population above 250,000. We have never touched this great work.

These foreign populations, instead of being distributed throughout the country where they might in a few years be absorbed in the general population congregate in the cities and aim to reproduce the cities of the Old World, or they colonize certain sections of the country and reproduce the language, customs and institutions of their old lands; these communities may become hotbeds of anarchy and fall an easy prey to the scheming demagogue. Thoughtful men have already sounded the alarm. We should not be behind others in the effort to stem the tide of irreligion and Romanism which menaces the future of Christian institutions in this land, which above all others should be Immanuel's land.

In Chicago are forty thousand Poles, half as many Hungarians and as many Bohemians, gathered in solid masses, in ignorance and squalor, having no sympathy or concern for American institutions save a general hostile one; no religious attention save that which is rendered oppressive by superstition; these are grounds for grave apprehension for the future.

We have 300,000 Italians untouched by Protestant Christianity. In Texas twenty counties are dominated by Germans, an excellent class. There are 300,000 Scandinavians in Minnesota, 1,000,000 in Wisconsin, 100,000 in communities throughout the Dakotas, Kansas and Montana; they need the American church, for the second generation will not go to the church where the services are in their fathers' native tongue, that is rapidly becoming a foreign tongue to them. If they are not saved by the American type of Christianity they become convivial in their habits and drift into infidelity.

The figures show that there are 9,000,000 people in the United States who are unable to worship God with profit in the English tongue; the work of reaching these people is simply tremendous and will so continue if America is to be saved and held to Christ.

In these masses of foreign populations lie the problem of foreign-Home Missions. These masses are practically indigestible material if past methods are the most effective that can be employed for their evangelization.

Twenty per cent. of our immigrants are under fifteen years of age and half are under twenty-five years. If we were only able to take them at this impressible age and Americanize and evangelize them, an element of danger would be eliminated.

BENJ. L. SMITH.

Cincinnati, Ohio.

Lincoln, Neb.

Lincoln is the capital and chief educational center of Nebraska. It has numerous schools and colleges. The State University, whose annual enrollment of students from all parts of the world is now over 2,000, is located here. Cotner University, a school for our own people, which has exerted and will continue to exert a potent influence for good in the field of intellectual endeavor in preparing young men for the ministry, is near at hand. There should be a strong church here to influence this strong current of young blood and brain in the direction of primitive Christianity. Moreover, the splendid building which we lost can now be purchased, free from incumbrance, for $18,000. It cost over $50,000.

In these times, when our brethren are learning the proper use of money, and are entering into the spirit of larger things for the great body of the people, I beg to direct the attention of consecrated means to the most promising field in the great West. Nebraska, with more than a million of people, has only 12,000 to 15,000 Disciples. All of the live blood of the state flows through Lincoln as the heart. The eyes of the brotherhood of Nebraska and beyond are turned to Lincoln and the First Church. No greater work could be accomplished in any single home field than can be done here bo providing a home for the First Christian Church. Last year, as will be seen by the report of the Home Board, we received some help from that board, and this year will receive a similar amount. The Nebraska board is helping also. This is well. And we are grateful for the help received.

J. T. THOMPSON, Missionary Pastor.

A View of Symmetrical Education and Duty.

Many circles of service surround us. The one of smallest diameter is the one drawn around on feet; it is necessary; to neglect the duties lying within that circle would be suicidal; to confine ourselves to that little circle of duty would be base selfishness.

In church life we have a circle of duties surrounding the local church; these duties are essential; to neglect means suicide, but to confine ourselves to that local church work is selfishness.

Beyond the local church the circles of missionary work begin; to this field of duty the voice of God through his Son our Lord; the love of the church; the love of souls; the desire for longer growth, all call us in earnest, pleading tones; to go is victory at home and abroad; to refuse is death at home and nothing abroad.

To be apostolic is to be missionary; to be Christian is missionary; to be anti-missionary or non-missionary is to be neither apostolic nor Christian.

6. FOREIGN MISSIONS.
5. GENERAL HOME MISSIONS
4. CHURCH EXTENSION & MINISTERIAL RELIEF.
3. DISTRICT & STATE MISSIONS.
2. LOCAL CHURCH WORK.
1. SELF.

To be symmetrically educated and active one must enter into the work of each one of the above circles, because they are all necessary to the obedience of the divine command: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

If you are doing state or district work, that does not relieve you from the call to general Home Missions or Foreign Missions; if you are doing foreign work, that does not relieve you from the obligation of general home work. The divine and natural order are both alike and proceed from the center outward—"first in Jerusalem, then in Judea, then in Samaria and then in the uttermost parts of the earth."

A symmetrical missionary education will certainly not neglect the work of the American Christian Missionary Society, reaching out as it does to America, the ripest mission field in the world for our great plea for Christian union. BENJ. L. SMITH.

Four Years' Mission Work in Arkansas.

It has been about four years since the American Christian Missionary Society and the Christian Woman's Board of Missions began to extend help to the mission fields of Arkansas. None of this has been intentionally expended where work could have been carried on without it. The result, in part, is as follows:

Days' work, 6,581, or a little more than 18 years; sermons, 4,850; baptisms, 756; other additions, 1,220; total, 1,976; churches organized (or reorganized where work had ceased), 33; Sunday-schools, 35; Y. P. S. C. E.s, 12; Auxiliary to C. W. B. M., organized and revived, 9; houses built, 28; houses at present arranging for, 6 (three of these have applied for and received promise of aid from the Church Extension Fund); churches in important towns of from 3,000 to 18,000 population aided to support preaching, 5; number of preachers receiving aid (for the last two years an average of 8—began with one), 9.

The churches of Arkansas that are engaged in heroic effort to convert sinners and encourage saints are under many and lasting obligations to the American Christian Missionary Society and all the contributors represented by them for their timely help in this work. We ask you and all who are interested in such questions to give the above a careful consideration, and if you think the Lord has blessed your counties in this state increase them if possible; if you cannot, pray for us, and that God will put it into the hearts of some who can to co-operate in the Lord's work of saving Arkansas. Every month makes the work more difficult. Between Little Rock and the western line of the state are not less than ten thriving towns on the line of the Choctaw Road where the Disciples ought to have congregations and houses of worship. One dollar now will do more than ten would do in five years from now. I do not think it at all chimerical to say that every dollar discreetly used now, provided there is enough to make it practical, will be the means in God's hands of consecrating one hundred dollars hence. May God open all our eyes to our opportunities.

E. C. Browning.

Little Rock.

Christian Endeavorers.

To all C. E. Societies among the Disciples:

Dearly Beloved—We have a message for you. The first Lord's day in May is the day set apart for the annual offering to Home Missions, under the auspices of the American Christian Missionary Society. This is the oldest of our missionary societies, and is the nourishing mother of all our boards. It is doing a most important work; its present needs are great.

Last year 9,996 persons were added to our churches by the missionaries of the American Christian Missionary Society, each missionary averaging 77½ additions; this record is without an equal anywhere. The Congregationalists averaged 4½ additions for each home misionary; the Baptist home missionary equaled 6½ additions; the Presbyterians averaged 9 additions for each home missionary employed; the Lutherans reached 19 per missionary, while our own home missionaries reached the high average of 77½ each.

This means that America is the ripest mission field in the world; it means that our plea meets the needs of this great land, and that this is our day of opportunity, and that as we lift up our eyes we ought to see the fields white unto the harvest and we should pray the Lord of the harvest that he send forth laborers into the harvest.

What can we do? We can begin at once to plan for the May offering. Consult your pastor and the official board of your church. Bring this matter before your society at its next meeting. The case is urgent. Plan to have the entire membership of your church canvassed by your society. Have notices given so that all may be prepared to contribute promptly and liberally. Ask your pastor to preach upon the work and its claims upon us. In brief, do all you can to make the offering worthy of the cause we plead, and the importance of the work. Let no society among us fail of its duty in this crisis. It is a magnificent opportunity to show that we stand "for Christ and his church."

Benj. L. Smith.

Y. M. C. A. Bl'd'g, Cincinnati, O.

Home Missions by Counties.

Since 1851, with only one exception, Steuben county, Ind., has had its "yearly meeting," and a vast fund of precious memories as to "big preaching" and delightful fellowship abides in the hearts of the older people among us.

Just last summer, however, a movement was set on foot that promises to enrich coming yearly meetings beyond anything known before. There will be reports of something accomplished in the name of the Lord.

In co-operation with the American Christian Missionary Society, the Home Board, upon our request for an evangelist, recommended Bro. J. K. Hester, who came to the field in late November. We asked for a good man and obtained one. Bro. Hester's work deserves the highest commendation. He has thus far held three meetings. Two of the points would not have thought it possible to hold a meeting with a man whose services cost so much. The help received and the moral support given the work would not have been undertaken at all. Yet, at these two country points—hard fields both of them—as well as at Metz, where the last meeting was held, all expenses were raised on the ground and the appropriation has not been reduced one dollar! In the three meetings there were seventy-nine additions and the work in all departments blessed abundantly.

It is the parable of the loaves and fishes repeated. One hundred and twenty-five dollars appropriation to begin with. Three months' work of faith and love by an evangelist teaching the things of Christ. Sixty-six confessions of the name of the Lord, thirteen reclaimed from lives of carelessness or open sin, or brought from denominational life into the glad light of the gospel only. Churches strengthened in every department. Errors beaten down. Truth exalted. One hundred and twenty-five dollars on hand at the close.

God grant that this message may do good. May hearts of individuals and congregations be thrilled to "send forth laborers."

The above experience may be duplicated in countless sections, where our work is weak, if the Home Board is but given money to back the work. In new fields of course entire support will not be obtained at first, but anywhere and everywhere so little is required to do so much! "The fields are white" and the Word proclaimed "will not return void." Let the treasury of the Lord be filled by a great May offering for Home Missions.

Chas. S. Medbury, Treas.
J. H. Ladd, Sec.

GRANULATED SORE EYES.

Cured by a New Method.

Extract from an article in the Medical Brief, written by Dr. J. Harvey Moore, of St. Louis.

In a private conversation with one of our religious editors, who has been a physician as well, he said to me: "Granulated sore eyes is the reproach of the medical profession." I replied: "True, it has always been, and is yet, to the profession in general, but I have a treatment which never fails to cure." This I proved to his entire satisfaction a little later. There are two reasons why this disease is a reproach to the profession. First, because they fail to cure a large per cent. of them, and secondly, because of the barbarous treatment they inflict upon them. They have persistently worked upon a wrong hypothesis. In their mad endeavors to destroy the granulations they destroy many eyes or permanently impair their usefulness. In comparing works on the eye, published fifty years ago, with those fresh from the press, we find the treatment of granulations practically the same, with the addition of some instruments of torture, which modern ingenuity has devised, making the treatment even more barbarous than formerly. The application of caustics, such as nitrate of silver and blue stone, set up a violent inflammation which frequently results in loss of the eye. Crushing out the granulations with steel forceps is even more barbarous. All this is done by oculists of high standing, who are looked upon as authorities, yet it is none the less worthy of condemnation. The worst of it all is, this plan of treatment is a failure. Even those who are claimed to be cured are left with drooping lids or opacities (white spots) on the cornea, which seriously interferes with the sight. I saw this same plan of treatment carried out during several years while I was in the hospitals of New York and Philadelphia, with the same bad results. I have developed a plan of local and internal treatment which invariably proves successful in my hands. It removes the granulations by absorption and at the same time removes the opacities (scums) from the eyes and restores the sight. Another point of great importance about my treatment is that it cures quickly. I have seen many cases in the hospitals of New York and Philadelphia and in private practice, who had been treated by eminent oculists for ten or fifteen years or longer and were still in a pitiable condition. Many of these cases have come to me totally blind and returned home able to read a newspaper in four weeks. This seems incredible, but I can cite numerous cases to prove it. Still another point of great importance is that the cures are permanent. We have never seen a retnrn of the disease in a single case we have treated for the last ten years.

648 Century Building.

Our Budget.

—"Home Missions to the Front!"

—Remember the set time—May 6th.

—Glorious Easter services in all the St. Louis churches, last Lord's day, with a large attendance in spite of weeping skies.

—This ought to mean a large and liberal offering for Home Missions on the first Lord's day in May, provided there be a real connection between a living Christ and a living church.

—We call attention to the excellent articles in this number bearing on the subject of the May offering for Home Missions. They are pertinent, pointed and practical. Read them carefully.

—Our first-page design represents the Angel of Home Missions planting her foot firmly on American soil. We must gain and hold America for Christ, if the world is to be evangelized.

—The great Ecumenical Conference on Foreign Missions, which convenes in New York next week, will give inspiration and perhaps direction as well, to all missionary work. It will probably be the greatest missionary gathering ever held in the world. The editor of this paper hopes to be there to see, to learn and to report to our readers. It will be a council of war for the conquest of the earth for Christ.

—Our readers, we are sure, will approve of our policy in giving so large a part of our space this week to the subject of Home Missions, in view of the immense issues which are at stake in this country. The purification of our politics, the Christianization of our industrial life, the consecration of our growing wealth to higher and holier uses—these great ends can only be accomplished by the triumph of Christianity in its purest form.

—Easter Sunday, though somewhat rainy, was a fine day with our people for results. Compton Heights, Central and Mt. Cabanne raised in the neighorhood of $100 each for the Orphans' Home and other of the churches raised lesser amounts for the same purpose. Beulah raised $83, their quarterly offering for missions. Compton Heights raised about $700 in pledges on their church debt. The Second Church had twenty additions and raised over $60 for house repairs. About all the churches had special Bible-school services at night, with crowded houses. There was a well-attended and profitable union communion service at the Central Church at four P. M. There was much visiting during the day and some pulpit changes. T. A. Abbott was in the city and preached at Tuxedo in the morning and at Compton Heights at night. Bro. Marshall preached in the Beulah Church Sunday night. A number of brethren were at the Second Church at night from the other churches. W. W. Hopkins preached in the Fourth Church Sunday morning, Bro. McFarland being unwell and also having scarlet fever in his home. The preachers' meeting on Monday was well-attended and the reports were full of encouragment, especially Bro. Abbott's account of the growth of interest in the state work. On the last Sunday in this month our churches are to have a missionary rally at the First Church, at three o'clock in the afternoon. On last Monday F. O. Fannon reported four additions and D. R. Dungan seven baptisms on Easter Sunday.

—We are glad to say our Home Board is doing more work than ever before. We are supporting 109 missionaries and 20 teachers and preachers among the colored people by our May offering; it ought to be a great offering this year.

—J. O. Davis, who recently accepted the work at Waterville, Wash., for three months, has decided to not remain longer than that time. This leaves Waterville in need of a pastor. They can pay a salary of 700 or $800, and have a good four-roomed parsonage partially furnished. The field will be open about June 17th, or the present incumbent will give way a month earlier if convenient. The man who takes this work must be indorsed by the A. C. M. S. Address JOSEPHUS OGLE, Waterville, Washington.

—The Central China Christian, Frank Garrett editor, is published by the Central China Christian Mission Monthly, from the Nankin Christian College Press, in the English language. No space is lost by advertisements. We have seen much larger papers with less news than this paper contains. It should receive a large patronage from the home field and friends.

—The work of Home Missions demands and should have for its own sake the support of every lover of our country and our Lord. No appeal can be made more important nor more imperative than that of carrying the gospel to the needy places of our own land. Upon the aggressive prosecution of our Home Mission work our prosperity depends. The character of the coming American citizen, the growth and efficiency of our brotherhood, the winning and holding a leading place in our cities, the extension of the kingdom of our Lord, are all involved in this great enterprise.

—For many long years the old brick church in the grove in Franklin County, Mo., known as Pleasant Hill Church, has stood as the typical country church. It reaches back to the time when many of the pioneer preachers among us were living, and a number of them preached the old gospel within its walls. For a number of years, however, steady encroachments have been made upon the neighborhood by a foreign element, which seemed destined to close the history of this useful church which has kept the light shining for so long a period. We learn, however, through a letter from Mrs. C. W. Wood, of Boles, Mo., one of the most faithful members of that old historic church, that they are now planning to build a new church at Villa Ridge, on the railroad running from this city to Union, where the church will have a new lease of life, and we trust a new era of usefulness. The church is not strong in members or in wealth, and would greatly appreciate any assistance which any of their friends may be able to render in the building of the new house. We bespeak for this little band the sympathy and co-operation of those who have been blessed directly or indirectly through its kindly ministry in the past. Let the old Pleasant Hill Church be perpetuated at Villa Ridge, and continue to sound out the gospel which has been preached so long in the old building that is now torn down.

—"The Care of all the Churches," by Thos. Munnell, is another book which the Christian Publishing Company has reduced in price. This is a volume which should be in the possession of every preacher and church officer. The regular price is $1.25. This is now reduced to seventy-five cents.

—"Watcher, Jr.," who recently had an article in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST on the needs of our cause in Missouri, in a personal letter just received says: "I am sorry to note the kind of criticism called out by my little article, and especially since all that has appeared in the Register-Review seems directed against Baxter Waters. This is an injustice to him that I think should not be allowed." We had not noticed these criticisms of the article of "Watcher, Jr.," nor the efforts of his critics to identify him with Bro. Waters. It may encourage these critics to know that they are within a thousand miles of the right man, and that if they persevere they may succeed in guessing him. Meanwhile, it might not be amiss to give a little consideration to what he says. Does Missouri really need a better educated ministry? If so, let us labor to that end. If not, let our colleges adjourn, sine die.

—The 169th St. Church of Christ, New York City, of which our correspondent, S. T. Willis, is the pastor, will give a reception to visiting members of the brotherhood in attendance on the Ecumenical Conference on Foreign Missions, on Tuesday evening the 24th inst. This will give an opportunity for members from different sections of the country, who may be there, to meet and form each other's acquaintance.

—The article in our Family Circle this week on "An Honest Million" is worthy of very considerable attention. Dr. Taylor puts this matter in a very striking way, but it takes hard striking to arouse the consciences of some people. The point in the article that particularly needs emphasis is that which refers to the obligation of millionaires to the public from whence came their wealth It is the selfish use and the abuse of wealth that is creating the opposition to it or the cry against it from the people more than anything else. And while the article may not give sufficient credit to other means of accumulating wealth it ought at least to increase sympathy for the day laborer.

—The church in Harrison, Ark., is in need of a preacher. Want a good man. A married man with a small family preferred. Can pay about $50 per month at present. Outlook for the church and town good. Address W. I. Terry, Harrison, Ark.

—St. Louis is now using funeral cars for the convenience of families when their dead are to bury. The first one was used on last Thursday. This seems like an abrupt innovation on old-time ways, but as far as such cars can be utilized we heartily endorse the plan and hope that it has come to stay. It will not only be a great saving of money to those who too often are least able to conform to the system of a carriage procession, but we trust that it will do away with that abominible custom of stopping at the wayside saloon for drinks on returning from the burial. Even should liquors be carried in the car it would hardly be as bad as the wayside saloon, for innocent parties would not then be delayed as they now often are, but it is to be hoped that the buffet idea will never be attached to the funeral car.

—Sunday April 1st, marked the beginning of the second year of the pastorate of C. H. White for the church in Galesburg, Ill. In the anniversary sermon which was reported in the Republican-Register, of that city, it is stated that on only two Sundays during the year were no new members added to the church. This is certainly an encouraging record. There were 121 additions during the year and over $5,300 raised for all purposes. Of this amount about $4,000 was used to pay off the church building indebtedness. The entire record for the year is one of success and commendation.

—A paragraph in this department a few weeks ago led a few people to believe that W. E. M. Hackleman, of Indianapolis, had sold out his music-book business to the Christian Pub. Co. Mr. Hackleman is still doing business at the old stand. The Christian Pub. Co. and the Hackleman Music Co. are co-publishers of the Gospel Call, Silver and Gold and Tidings of Salvation.

—Our Current Events department this week suffers curtailment, as many of the other departments do, in favor of the presentation of the claims for Home Missions. This is the great business in hand, just now, and has the right of way over every other general interest. We sincerely hope that more churches and more individuals will contribute to the cause of Home Missions this year than in any previous year, and that the amount per capita will be in advance of any previous offering.

—One of the most delightful meetings held in St. Louis for many years was the union communion service of our churches in this city, held at the Central Christian Church on last Lord's day afternoon at 4 o'clock. The house was filled despite the threatening weather, and very appropriate and tender addresses were made by Brethren Dungan and Fannon. A special musical program had been prepared by the Central choir, which added materially to the enjoyment of the occasion. It was a meeting purely for worship and for emphasizing the unity of our congregations in the city. It is hoped that these meetings will be held quarterly, or frequently at least, in the future.

—We learn from the Pacific Christian of the death of W. A. Gardner, one of the most widely known, most useful and highly esteemed ministers on the Pacific Coast. Bro. Gardner passed away on the 5th inst. in Watsonville, Cal., and his body was cremated in Cypress Lawn Cemetery, San Francisco, on Saturday the 14th. Bro. Gardner went from this city to California many years ago and preached for several years at Woodland. Afterwards he moved to San Francisco, where he organized and built up the West Side Church of that city, one of the best congregations we have in that state. After a severe illness about a year ago he resigned his position there and went to Honolulu, where he remained for some time, returning to California a few weeks before his death. He was a loveable man, consecrated to his Master's work and will be greatly missed by the brotherhood on the Coast. We knew him well and cherished a strong affection for him. We tender to his wife and bereaved family our sincerest sympathy in their loss. It can be said of Bro. Gardner as it was said of Barnabas: "He was a good man, full of faith and of the Holy Spirit."

The Campbell-Owen Debate.

A companion book to the Campbell-Purcell Debate. Alexander Campbell met Robert Owen in a discussion on the Evidences of Christianity. The debate was stenographically reported, and is given entire in this book. It makes a volume of 465 pages bound in cloth. This book should be in the library of every Christian minister and every intelligent Disciple. It is valuable as a handbook on Christian evidences.

Our recent reduction in price of the Campbell-Purcell Debate met with such a hearty response from our patrons that we have decided to make a similar offer on the Campbell-Owen Debate. The regular price is $1.50. This we have reduced to One Dollar, postpaid.

—"Special Catalogue No. 22," just issued by the Christian Publishing Company, can hardly fail to interest every one. It is a list of valuable standard books which are offered at prices averaging less than half the regular prices. This catalogue may be had for the asking. Send your request on a postal card. You will almost certainly find something you want, offered at a wonderfully low price.

—Home Missions needs expansion—wide expansion. It should be enlarged now and without delay. The love of Christ constraineth us, the needs of the church impel, the fields call us to larger and better things than we have ever done before, the expectation of Christ waiting to see the travail of his soul and to be satisfied—all these summon us to deeper sacrifice and larger service.

—Congressman Littlefield, of Maine, whose speeches in Congress during the present session have attracted wide attention, has been expressing himself recently upon the subject of prohibition in a fashion quite *un*fashionable among politicians "out West." He said:

I believe in prohibition, and I am always willing to enlist in its cause There is no good American citizen who does not believe the liquor traffic must in some way be regulated or prohibited, but there is a wide difference of opinion as to the best method to be pursued. Some believe in moral suasion and some believe in legal suasion. I believe in legal suasion. I have seen its operations in my native state, and I know it succeeds. It is not sufficient for those who oppose the Maine method to point out that liquor is yet sold in Maine. We admit that it is. But, because the law against murder and theft do not absolutely prevent the commission of those crimes, would you set aside the laws? The laws are good; they reduce crime to the minimum and punish the criminals. That is just what the Maine prohibition laws do, and wherever they are honestly administered they are unqualifiedly a success.

—The Owenton Herald, of Owenton, Ky., in a very courteous editorial, criticises the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST for its recent statement concerning the reported arrest of John S. Sweeney in connection with theGoebel assassination. We said: "It will take more than $100,000 to break down the reputation of John S. Sweeney or to hire enough perjurers to convict him of any dishonorable act," etc. After explaining that the report probably grew out of the fact that another man by the name of Sweeney had been mentioned in connection with the affair, the Herald says: "The broad intimation that a reward of $100,000 had been offered as a bribe to convict innocent persons of the murder of Mr. Goebel is wholly gratuitous, and we are satisfied would not have been made by our esteemed colaborer had he been in possession of the facts in the case." Our language may be capable of the interpretation suggested, but we have never believed that the intention of the $100,000 appropriation was to bribe men to testify falsely. It might, however, have that effect upon an unprincipled man. The report of Mr. Sweeney's arrest on the strength of a "confession" made it easy to believe that such had been the case, and the words were written under the sting of that report involving the honor and reputation of a friend and a brother. The Herald properly interprets our feeling in the matter when it says: "We are quite sure the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST will join us in wishing that the perpetrators of the damnable deed may be brought to justice." Most assuredly we do. It is due to social order and political stability, as well as to justice, that this cowardly and dastardly crime be promptly punished when the guilty party or parties are known. And while the people of Kentucky are about it, they should remove the cause of all this agitation and disorder, culminating in assassination, that the good name of the state may not be permanently tarnished. We trust that the Herald will join us in this sentiment.

"Many a Slip 'Twixt Cup and Lip."

The cup of happiness is filled with health, which overflows in drops of cheerfulness. Some sad people never get it to their lips. Impure blood makes them nervous, irritable, full of pain. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a genuine nectar of health to those who place it to their lips. It cleanses the blood as nothing else can.

Nervous Prostration—"Sitting up with my sick mother brought on nervous prostration. I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The first dose did me good and three bottles restored me." Mrs. Cora Duncan, 74 Maple St., Jersey City, N. J.

Never take any substitute when you call for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Remember

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills, the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

—All money for Home Missions to be sent to Benj. L. Smith, Y. M. C. A. Building, Cincinnati, Ohio. Send by check, draft, postal order, express order, registered letter. Send small sums in two-cent postage stamps. Don't send money loose in an envelope without registering it.

—Special dispatch to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST from Allen Wilson, Bellefontaine, O., dated April 15th, says: "Our meeting is 15 days old, with 49 added; 14 added to-day. House packed. Interest intense. Whole town aroused." A. R. Davis is the song leader in this meeting.

—Clinton S. Lockhart, it is reported, has resigned the presidency of Christian University, Canton, Mo., to accept the Bible Chair in Drake University. This is a good move for Drake, but how about Christian University? We have not yet heard who is to be Bro. Lockhart's successor.

—The new church building at La Crosse, Ill., will be dedicated next Sunday, April 22nd. Judge C. J. Schofield, of Carthage, Ill., will preach the dedicatory sermon. All neighboring congregations and their pastors are invited to attend. Services at 11 A. M. and 7:30 P. M.

—The editorial office of The Messenger has been removed from Lexington to Midway, Ky. The Messenger is edited by Geo. W. Kemper, and is worthy of a wide circulation.

—One effect of Dr. Hillis' resignation will be a fresh agitation over the question of the Revision of the Westminster Confession. Already one Presbytery has voted for such revision and many ministers have so expressed themselves. As Dr. Gray, of the Interior, well says:

If all Presbyterians who refuse to accept the clause in the Confession which has so suddenly emerged into conspicuity should find it necessary to depart from the orchard, the meadow, the deep tangled wild-wood, and besides these all the loved spots which their ecclesiastical infancy knew, what a procession of brains, culture and charity that would be! The ships to carry them would exceed in number and excel in impressiveness the naval parade on Dewey day. The blue flags would fly to the fore, the crimson flags at the peaks, and shimmering silken white banners of peace would flutter everywhere. Before we were ready to weigh anchor the rest of the church would come hurrying up the gangplank. We might have to send a launch back after the reluctant professors—come to think of it we will commission Hillis as commander of that launch, and how we will wave handkerchiefs and cheer as they come aboard!

—The following words from the Central Christian Advocate on the kindly offices of the waste-basket to some people is worthy of special consideration. An editor often saves a contributor to journalism from doing himself personal injury by withholding his contribution from the public:

There is a considerable class of persons to whom the editorial waste-basket is a real friend. This is none the less true because they think otherwise. Among those who should be everlastingly grateful for the service the waste-basket has rendered them are immature correspondents, extremists who would "tear up things by the roots," men who write foolish and unkind things during the heat of the moment, and would-be poets, who would be made ridiculous in the eyes of the world if their rhyming effusions found their way into print. To the contributions of persons of these and other classes the waste-basket, with a charity that covers a multitude of sins, furnishes a kindly oblivion. It has saved many a heartache and much deep humiliation. Not a few persons would be to-day less influential and esteemed than they are had not the basket considerately made room within itself for certain unwise productions from their pens. It is a mistake, however, to think that everything that goes into the waste-basket is commonplace, if not worthless. Within its deep recesses is many an exquisite bit of unconscious humor, in comparision with which most of the Irish bulls which appear in the papers seem tame; while it is not lacking in real pathos. Some one who has a genius for selection will make a great hit some day by publishing in book form many of the gems which lie hidden away in the waste-basket.

—The Christian Index, of Des Moines, Ia., referring to a statement of ours in reference to the encouraging growth of the circulation of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST in that state, comments as follows:

Our people are a reading people. They like to know all that is going on. They are also a generous people and are ready to lend a helping hand to forward the good cause, even in the cities above named. To this splendid condition of things the Christian Index has been and is a contributor, and, we think, of no insignificant consequence either. It seems to us, therefore, that it is an appropriate time now for our contemporaries, especially the first-named, to recognize the Index as a workman in the field not to be despised, even though it grows in the field where they want to forage for subsistence.

It may be that in the rush of our busy life we do not stop to lift our hat to fellow-journalists, toiling in the same great field, as often as we should. We think this is true, but there is no intentional discourtesy. If there is any doubt in the mind of our esteemed contemporary, of Iowa, about our recognizing it as "a workman in the filed not to be despised," we wish to remove that doubt here and now. Though we may not have said so, we have, from the beginning of the Index, recognized it as a worthy colaborer and have rejoiced in its success and admired its brave struggle. We love its editor, and believe thoroughly in his goodness and his unselfish devotion to the cause. The brethren in Iowa ought to sustain the Christian Index.

—The short note from Emma Kirtley, Hot Springs, S. Dak., which we published some time ago, describing the religious destitution of that country, she says was not intended for publication. This was overlooked by us. However, it is important testimony on the need for an enlargement of our Home Mission work and ought to impress upon more favored communities the urgent need for larger offerings, that such fields might be reached. It is exceedingly difficult for brethren who have known the truth when circumstantially thrown into large fields in which we have no church, as is the case with Sister Kirtley and thousands of others, to satisfy their souls with the teaching of other churches, and often they feel that they are literally starving for the bread of life. This is not saying that other churches have no truth in them, but simply that the soul is longing for the clearer light of a full and free gospel, and they rightful y look to the stronger churches, through their missionary societies, to send them the truth.

—The Standard Dictionary in full morocco for $13 (regular price $26) is a genuine bargain. No such offer has ever been made before. If you wish to take advantage of it, address the Christian Publishing Company at once.

—"Christian Science Dissected," by A. D. Sector, will be ready for delivery in a few days. Orders may be sent us at any time. They will be filled the day the book is issued. Price, twenty-five cents.

—The Worker, Pittsburg, Pa., for April 6th, contains an excellent notice of Brother N. M. Ragland's book, recently from our press, entitled "Leaves from Mission Fields," by W. J. Lhamon. After speaking of the nature of the book he says:

It is impossible to read the story of such lives without being enriched and inspired by them, and Bro. Ragland has done us all a favor in gathering up so much of rare human merit and consecration in one neat volume. We feel also that he has put our brotherhood under obligations to him by showing us that our own missionary annals are beginning to be enriched by the names and the lives of such as Miss Judson and Mrs. Smith and Mr. Garst.

—The Indiana Christian Ministerial Association, the State Missionary Society and the State Sunday-school Association will convene at Valparaiso, Ind., May 15-18, 1900. J. H. MCNEILL, Pres.

Muncie, Ind., April 13, 1900.

Personal Mention.

Wm. Drummet reports $50 for Shelbyville, Ill., for Foreign Missions, or twice as much as was given last year. We hope Shelbyville will do as well for Home Missions next month.

W. D. Dewesse, of Kankakee, Ill., has prepared a very neat baptismal certificate, followed with suitable instructions to one who has just entered upon the new life, all in good form.

Elder Devol's lecture on "The Battle Over the Empty Grave," recently delivered in the opera-house, Coon Rapids, Ia., was heard by a full house. It was a vindication of the divinity of Christ.

After one year's rest Wilford Field returns again to West Salem, Ill., where he will preach one-half time. The rest of his time will be divided between Shiloh and Deiterich. His residence will be in West Salem.

Elder K. C. Ventress, who for over seven years has been the pastor of the church in La Harpe, Ill., has resigned. In this time Bro. V. has done a good work both in and about La Harpe. He has held thirteen protracted meetings, restored three churches and built three new churches, adding to them 260 members. Bro. Ventress expects to engage in evangelistic work.

J. A. Carpenter, of Mansfield, Ohio, says: "John T. Martin, a young minister, 33 years old, a graduate and author, a good musician, an excellent speaker and pastor, a married man, whose wife is also an accomplished musician and worker, desires to change location. No church will regret having employed him. Salary, per year, $800. Address him at Youngstown, Ohio."

In a letter from A. M. Hootman, of Tonawanda, N. Y., dated April 9th, he says: "I spoke twice in Buffalo yesterday. In the morning at the Jefferson Street Church, of which Bro. J. C. Lichtenberger is pastor. He is doing good work and it is showing its good effects. In the evening I spoke at the Richmond Ave. Church. They are now without a minister, but are pushing forward in their usual active manner. The Tonawanda Church more than doubled its missionary offering this year. We are all hopeful and happy."

In a letter from E. W. Darst, of recent date, he says: "I was compelled to give up the meeting at Houston, Tex. My lungs troubled me. I am now at Ballinger, in the parsonage; the people of the church are very kind. This place has all the good qualities of the health resorts. I hope a man has been found to take up my work at Chicago until I get well enough to return to it. I am too sick to write as I wish I could on Home Missions; I fear I must fail to help you as I would like to do. I pray for a large offering for that greatest work.

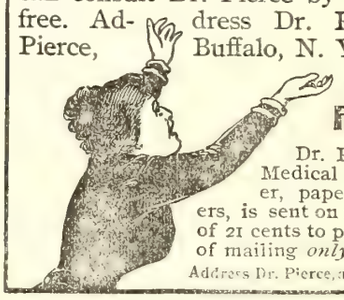
YOUR CHILD IS IN DANGER

From many diseases. Children who are well nourished successfully resist disease to which an ill-nourished child succumbs. Your child has enough food. Does the food make flesh? If not there is something wrong with the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. That wrong can be quickly righted by the use of

• DR. PIERCE'S •

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

In ninety-eight cases out of every hundred it completely cures indigestion and other diseases of the digestive and nutritive system in both young and old. You can consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.



FREE!

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, paper covers, is sent on receipt of 21 cents to pay cost of mailing only.

Address Dr. Pierce, as above.

POSITIONS GUARANTEED under reasonable conditions; car fare paid; board, $10-$11; catalog free; no vacation.

DRAUGHON'S PRACTICAL BUS. Colleges.

St. Louis; Nashville, Tenn.; Savannah, Ga.; Montgomery, Ala.; Galveston, Tex.; Fort Worth, Tex.; Little Rock, Ark.; Shreveport, La. Indorsed by merchants and bankers. Best patronized in South. Bookkeeping, Shorthand, etc., taught by mail. Begin any time. Address (at either place) Draughon's College.

Torpid Livers

are dangerous to health. Indigestion, jaundice, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, and many other irregularities of the human system follow such a condition. There can be no health where the liver is out of order. To cure all liver troubles promptly and without danger use —The tried and true remedy.

Dr. Peter's Blood Vitalizer

It is a 100-year-old Swiss-German preparation—the discovery of a wise old physician of great skill. Made of pure roots and herbs and nothing else.

It is not a violent catarthic. It gently regulates the bowels, strengthens the digestive organs, and by purifying the blood gives tone and vigor to the entire system.

No Drug-Store Medicine; is sold only by regular Vitalizer agents.

Persons living where there are no agents for Dr. Peter's Blood Vitalizer can, by sending $2.00, obtain twelve 35-cent trial bottles direct from the proprietor. This offer can be obtained only once by the same person.

Write to DR. PETER FAHRNEY,

112-114 South Hoyne Ave., Chicago.

J. B. White has accepted a unanimous call to serve the church at Wakefield, Mich., for the second year. The work is said to be in fine condition.

A. P. Cobb has been engaged to assist I. J Spencer, of Lexington, Ky., in a protracted meeting. C. E. Millard, singing evangelist, of Maysvillle, Mo., has recovered from his recent sickness and is now engaged with J. S. Myers in a protracted meeting in Ft. Worth, Texas.

We wish to call the attention of our readers to the professional card of Dr. J. Harvey Moore, the oculist, in this issue. We also publish an extract of an article from the Medical Brief, written by Dr. Moore. We know the Doctor personally, and have seen proof of his superior skill in the case of Bro. F. N. Calvin, lately pastor of the Church Christ in Milwaukee, but has gone to Colorado Springs. Bro. Calvin had serious trouble with his eyes for many years, as a result of granulations, and had failed to obtain relief from some of the most eminent oculists of the country. He informed us that Dr. Moore cured him in a very short time.

CHANGES.

Clark Braden, Alma, Ill., to Harrisonville, Mo.
F. M. Branic, Colchester to Loami, Ill.
C. H. Berry, Kinmundy to Alvan, Ill.
W. D. Van Voorhis, the U. of C. to Lowell, Ind.
J. P. Rowlison, Des Moines to Patterson, Ia.
W. P. Shamhart, Villisca, Ia., to Champaign, Ill.
J.G. Slick, Litchfield, Minn., to Golden City, Kan.
E. C. Whitaker, Hampton to Bradshaw, Neb.
E. E. Pierce, Columbus, O., to Beaver Falls, Pa.
J. F. Callahan, Cleveland to Noble, Ohio.
L. W. Spayd, Willoughby to Shreve, Ohio.
Otto Spayd, Willoughby to Shreve, Ohio.
L. C. Haulman, Tekoa to Rosalia, Wash.
John Mullen, Hillsdale, Mich., to Oak Harbor, O.
Chas. E. Powell, Ocala, Fla., to Shelby City, Ky.
J. J. Finley, Petosky to Kalkaska, Mich.
W. D. Ryan, Lenox, Ia., to Morgantown, W. Va.
E. A. Cole, Tipton to Martinsville, Ind.
J. R. Perkins, Des Moines to Packwood, Ia.
Lloyd Darsie, Buffalo, N. Y., to Paris, Ky.
M. J. Maxwell, Greenwich to Bucyrus, O.
F. F. Cook, Fayette to Bays, O.
J. Fuller, Downs to Jewell City, Kan.
W. A. Hennegar, Francesville to Lafayette, Ind.
D. H. Patterson, Auburn N. Y., to Carbondale, Kan.
O. D. Maple, Springfield to Greenfield, Ill.

Wanted: President with $2,000 to crowd Fraternal Insurance Association. We have the most equitable reserve plan and a proposition that is a winner, and doing a good business. Address, "Wanted, President," care THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, St. Louis.

To Churches Having no Minister.

We submit the following program as a suggestion. Write to Benj. L. Smith, Y. M. C. A. Building, Cincinnati, Ohio, for help on the proposed topics and for envelopes in which to make a good offering. Advertise your meeting well; tell the people you will have a good program and a good meeting.

PROGRAM FOR HOME MISSIONS.

Hymn, "My Country 'Tis of Thee."
Scripture lesson.
Prayer for Home Missions.
Hymn, "Ho, Reapers of Life's Harvest!"
Address (seven minutes), "Our Work in America."
Hymn, "I Love to tell the Story."
Address (seven minutes), "What our Home Board is doing in the United States."
Hymn, "Shout the Tidings of Salvation!"
Address (seven minutes), "Relation of Home Missions to our Work."
Hymn, "I Gave My Life for Thee."
Address (five minutes), "Our Duty Towards Home Missions."
Offering for Home Missions.
Lord's Supper.
Hymn. Benediction.

BENJ. L. SMITH.

FITS Permanently Cured. No fits or nervousness after first day's use of Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. Send for FREE $2.00 trial bottle and treatise. DR. R. H. KLINE, Ltd., 931 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

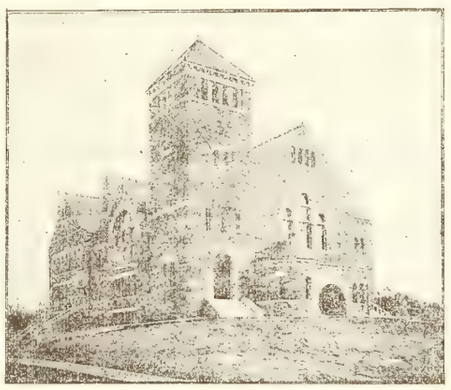
Our Young Folks is the paper above all others that should circulate among the young people of the Church of Christ, and among those, also, who, though old in years, are yet young in heart The leading features of this department are the following:

1. THE PRAYER-MEETING TOPICS.—Each week a column or two is devoted to an exposition of the Uniform Topic for the Mid-week Prayer-Meeting selected by the Committee appointed at the National Christian Convention and used in all of our largest and best churches, and these expositions are such as are found in no other paper.



2. BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.—OUR YOUNG FOLKS has made a special feature of Biographical Sketches of Great Reformers and Eminent Christian Pioneers, such as John Wycliffe, Martin Luther, John Calvin, John Wesley, Alexander Campbell, Walter Scott, B. W. Stone, John Smith, Isaac Errett, B. W. Johnson and O. A. Burgess; and in nearly every issue will be found a picture of some Minister, Editor, Teacher, Endeavorer or other earnest Christian worker.

3. DOCTRINE AND DUTIES.—OUR YOUNG FOLKS contains short, pointed articles on First Principles and Practical Duties, giving instruction in the Scriptures, as understood and interpreted by the Disciples of Christ, and calculated to make young disciples familiar with the work and principles of the religious body with which they are connected, and "root and ground" them in the faith.

How Can The Apportionment Be Raised?

1. Have the whole church understand clearly the special object for which it is asked to contribute.

2. Give the church definite information as to the number of missionaries on the field, the fields occupied and the new work proposed. Give the people information, then they will act.

3. The best way is to make a personal canvass of the whole membership and ask each member for a definite amount.

4. If this is not done and you are a preacher, send a Pastoral Letter, together with a March Offering Envelope, to each member of the church, with the request for a definite amount. Ask each member to write his or her name and the amount on the envelope. If you are not a preacher make the best possible use of the envelopes.

5. Make a special point to secure an offering from every member of the church.

6. Push the One Dollar Crusade. That is, aim to secure at least $1 from each member of the church.

7. Let the whole day, March 4th, be given up to raising the apportionment. Make an earnest and enthusiastic appeal, as you would do if dedicating a church or raising money for any local enterprise.

8. If the full amount or more is not raised at the morning service continue the appeal at the evening service.

9. If you are still short of the apportionment on Monday morning visit any absent members and make a special personal appeal for increased contributions and close the matter up.

10. From the first have the church much in the spirit of prayer. Be determined to reach your apportionment. Feel that the church will be humiliated if the amount is not raised. A church is never any nearer the Lord than when it is making an offering to preach the gospel to the whole wide world.

Last year 884 churches reached their full apportionment. We are confidently depending upon 1,000 churches this year. Every church that reaches its full apportionment will help to constitute the Roll of Honor. We believe that not less than 1,000 churches will reach their full apportionment. The signs point that way with unmistakable clearness. This will be a great victory if it can be done. The strong points of the apportionment plan may be tabulated as follows:

1. It inspires the church to effort.
2. It is equitable and successful.
3. It is businesslike.
4. It is scriptural.
5. It is up to date.
6. Easy for the churches to understand.
7. Gives the church a sense of responsibility to the work.
8. It gives the church an idea of its ability.
9. It helps us to see ourselves as others see us.
10. There is nothing compulsory about it; only advisory.
11. It reduces missionary giving to a system.
12. It is definite. B. L. & C. C. SMITH.

The Topical Leaflet contains the complete list of the subjects of the Midweek Prayer-Meeting for 1900, as selected by the Committee appointed at the National Convention. Price, 25 cents per hundred. Christian Publishing Co., St. Louis.

Correspondence.

Chicago Letter.

And now come the learned and progressive Christian Scientists to the Chicago school board to protest against the teaching of physiology in the high schools. This is queer, or rather, it would be queer from any other source. Think of scientists objecting to the teaching of science! If it is poorly taught, if the course is lacking in thoroughness, why not direct the effort to secure better teaching? But this is not the point of their objection: according to their high priestess, the Rev. Mary Baker Glover Eddy, there is no sickness, no pain, and in fact, no body! So why compel the deluded children to study that which has no existence? "By their fruits ye shall know them." It is not strange, after all, that these faddists are developing as apostles and advocates of ignorance, for this is really a fundamental characteristic of their teaching. It is found in their absurd "denial" of pain, disease, etc.

The fight between the Labor Unions and the building contractors still continues. "A non-union plasterer was beaten into insensibility yesterday morning in the basement of the Marshall Field Building by union pickets, despite the fact that the building was filled with special police in anticipation of trouble."—Times-Herald, April 11. Nothing whatever is said of the apprehension and punishment of the brutes who did the beating. And so day after day, not only property, but human life is imperiled.

The Building Commissioner has started an investigation of unsafe tenements. If any building is found more than 60 per cent. damaged or decayed he will condemn it and order it torn down. The Health Commissioner co-operates in this work. The time has surely come when the crowding of human beings into decaying, vermin-infested buildings should cease. There is but one way to right this grievous wrong, and that is through the proper channels of government. A stringent sanitary law rigidly enforced would furnish one illustration at least of righteous conduct secured by legislation.

What will the churches do for the May offering? There can be no question whatever as to the merit of the cause. "Home Missions" is a phrase to conjure wit. esing for every church to go into this matter historically and see what it has done in the years gone by. Then the resolve should be made to surpass all former offerings. There are children by the hundred thousand in this country that have no Sunday-school privileges. Think of what that means! For the vast majority of them it means absolutely no moral or religious culture. In the deadlock which other churches have come upon there is an opportunity for us by greater efforts than ever before to demonstrate the superiority of our plea for New Testament Christianity.

This is presidential year, a year that business men dislike—a year that is unfavorable to religious work; but multiplied diffidulties never daunt a true soldier—they serve but to quicken his pulse and put vigor into his arm. With a growing knowledge of the truth, an awakening sense of the nation's need, and a deepening sympathy with the unchurched and unfriended masses, may we not look for an offering far in excess of last year?

Mrs. J. H. O. Smith has been quite sick, but is recovering. Chas. Clayton Morrison, of the Monroe Street Church, has been conducting Lenten services. Geo. A. Campbell, the efficient editor of the Christian Century, recently visited Buffalo, New York. Chas. A. Young spent a few days in Chicago after the Congress. B. B. Tyler, at the Preachers' Meeting on the 9th inst., announced that sixty years ago that day an event occurred in Illinois of great moment to the nation. The "event" passed through the city on his way to the Ecumenical Missionary Conference, and the meeting of the Lesson Committee. He will spend several months in New England, beginning his work with the Danbury Church.

FRANK G. TYRRELL.

3211 Prairie Avenue.

St. Louis Letter.

We are writing now on the need of a more effective propaganda of the faith in our cities—everywhere. The evidence of this want exists in the present indifferent and inactive attitude of the church toward sin in high places. What is needed is a deeper conviction of sound doctrine on sin and righteousness, and this can be wrought only through the preaching of the WORD. It is readily admitted that alarming evils are abroad in the land, but how to remedy them, they say, is the question. Or, fall back upon a very familiar statement, that the only remedy for these evils is the gospel. Now there is a sense in which this is true, and another in which it is not.

Preaching the gospel to some minds is simply preaching men into the church, and then in a general way telling them to live right. In the first instance, the preaching is of the most definite and particular sort; but in the latter, of the most loose and general character. About the only effort at insistence upon the application of Christianity to life, from the pulpit, is to a few things in a personal way. The obligation of a Christian to his fellowmen, to society, to governments, to the ballot, to righteousness in all his business methods, is seldom discussed, much less insisted upon, as a part of Christianity. That he should be concerned only with his soul and the welfare of the church, leaving society, governments, industries, commerce and wealth to the dictates of the devil And just so long as we fail to understand that preaching the gospel means preaching righteousness everywhere and at all times we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us.

To evade responsibility in present conditions and toward economic questions we often hear it said, even by preachers, "The poor ye have with you alway." And yet these same believers in the Bible, when predicting the victories of the cross, tell of the good time to come when righteousness shall cover the earth, etc. Now how can these things be? If poverty is to abound alway because the conditions of poverty are to remain alway, then is the prophecy a lie and the gospel a failure! We insist that the church has no right to cover up its inexcusable indifference toward social and industrial conditions by such flimsy, sickly arguments. If pauperism and crime are to abound in society alway, then will the earth never be redeemed, and if the earth be not redeemed, then is the gospel a failure.

Or, to say that poverty is most largely due to intemperance, and then to refuse, as the church is doing to remove intemperance factories, is nothing short of self-incrimination. And the same may be said of many other apologies made by the church for its lassitude toward confessed national evils. To say that Christianity begins with the individual is all right; but stopping there defeats the whole law. The church is supposed to be a collective body of redeemed men and women with the love of God in their hearts and the flaming sword of the Spirit in their hands defending the entrance to every essential institution in society and the destruction of every abomination that destroys society.

Our social and industrial problems to-day are not suffering for remedies, as some suppose. For a long while our railway trains were not provided with self-coupling devices. The general supposition was that no practical coupling device had yet been invented, and inventors went on racking their brains to discover one. The trouble was not with the devices, but with the railroad corporations. They were indisposed. But, bless your life, as soon as the law took hold of the matter and declared that all trains must be equipped with self-couplers, the railroad companies soon found a practical device. The same is true of the church and the times. The lack is not the want of practical remedies of the evils of which we complain, but the indisposition of the church to use such as we have.

What we need, therefore, is a compulsory power behind the church. And this we happily have. Not in physical or in legal enactments, but in the power of righteousness and public sentiment. A proper propaganda of the gospel of Christ would soon make it so hot for the church that she would soon find a practical remedy for some of the evils of which we complain, and this is our insistence. Righteousness needs to be burned into the souls of men.

There are two themes that the pulpit has as yet but lightly touched, and these are, the love of God and the righteousness of God. At least the church has a very inadequate conception of these great fundamental themes, and she will never rise to the grandeur of her missions until she sees these themes in a higher, broader and deeper sense than she has yet seen them. It is a very narrow conception of righteousness to think of it simply as a religious rite or ceremony, a long face, or worse still, as long prayers. Righteousness between men in business and in business methods is just as right and holy as in the most gorgeous religious temple or ceremony. And righteousness in society is just as much the will of God as righteousness in the churches. Nothing wrong within the church can be right without. The church is expected to leaven the world, but if it becomes like the world it cannot do this. Our claim is that the church is not preaching righteousness upon as broad a platform as it is her privilege and her duty to do.

W. W. H.

Coffee Argument.

NEW EVIDENCE OF THE EFFECT.

A South Dakota man, W. A. Dawley, Sturgis, explains the condition some men get into from coffee drinking. Let it be understood that coffee seems to agree with some people well enough, but when a person finds it does not agree, it is better to leave it off. He says: "I used coffee about twenty years, and quit it September 30, 1898. I had become almost a complete wreck, thin in flesh and emaciated, dyspepsia and indigestion of the worst order, nerves shattered, no appetite, slept very little, and my blood was so thin that the slightest breeze chilled me through.

"Medicines gave no relief; I had about given up when I finally concluded to investigate and see if it was really true, as I had read in a number of your statements that coffee acted like a poison to some people. It was an easy matter to leave off coffee when I took Postum Food Coffee, for the food coffee tasted as good as the other, and to my surprise, it set good on my weak stomach.

"I have been buying the Postum through my grocer, Mr. Jas. Meyer, and always have followed directions carefully. I liked it from the first and have drank Postum three times a day ever since. Have gained twenty pounds in weight, my appetite is better than ever before, my sleep perfect, dyspepsia is a thing of the past and my nerves are what they should be. I can vouch for the statement that Postum Food Coffee 'makes red blood' and plenty of it. My son, Amos Dawley, of this city, has been completely cured of dyspepsia in three months by quitting coffee and using Postum Food Coffee. This is given to you as an honest testimonial of the priceless value of your (to me) life-saving food drink. You are welcome to use my name if you want." Respectfully.

B. B. Tyler's Letter.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., is a flourishing town of, it is said, more than 25,000 people. It possesses, judging by the appearance and behavior of the people, the style of their homes, the condition of the streets and the magnitude of the business houses, more than an average amount of wealth and culture. It is, in a word, a fine little city.

A feature that I did not remember to have seen in any other place is the location of the principal houses of worship in a single neighborhood. One can see at once the First Congregational, the First Presbyterian, the St. Paul's Methodist and the First Christian Churches. The buildings are situated close to each other, and the people, who are members of these churches, live in harmony.

J. M. Rudy is the pastor of the First Christian Church. He is a good man and is doing an excellent work. He is supported by some of the best men in the town. There is room here for the names of P. C. Frick, B. H. Witwer, F. H. Kaupke, E. M. Sefton, S. F. Seely, I. H. Shaver, J. M. Jordan, H. E. Witwer, F. N. Carter, Aquila Miller, James Forbes, J. J. Witwer, G. W. Reaugh, Eugene Allen and W. H. Frick, as men who are ready for every good work. This church sent in more than its apportionment for Foreign Missiong, i. e., something more than three hundred dollars. The name of the Cedar Rapids Christian Church belongs on the "Roll of Honor" in the effort to "make disciples of all the nations," according to the commandment of our Lord.

This is the home of N. A. McConnell. The name of Bro. McConnell, when written in full—NELSON ANTRIM MCCONNELL—suggests his ancestry. His grandfathers belonged to the county Antrim, in Ireland. Both of his grandmothers, however, were American women, one a native of Virginia and the other of New Jersey. Bro. McConnell claims also to have Scotch blood in his veins, and those who know him best cannot doubt for a moment the validity of this claim. N. A. McConnell has convictions. He believes definitely. He knows what he believes and why he believes. One of the richest treats that I have had in many a day was the privilege of hearing this old hero deliver an address on "How to Preach the Gospel." It had the old-time ring. There was dignity, solemity and intellectual clearness in every sentence.

Bro. McConnell was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, near New Lisbon, January 23rd, 1824. His father was a native of Maryland. N. A. McConnell's parents were members of the Friends' Church. Upon his first attempt to obey the Christ in baptism his father prevented him. Said the boy, who was sixteen years old, did not know what he was doing. But the boy understood his duty and was determined to do it. He was baptized December 12th, 1839, at night, in a stream of water in the midst of a snow storm. He began to preach October 1st, 1848. It will be fifty-two years next October since he publicly began to make known "the good news." His first preaching was done in Ohio, in his native county. J. E. Gaston, with whom he became acquainted in 1844, encouraged him to give himself to the ministry of the Word. A co-operation, composed of eight congregations, was formed in Columbiana county. The sum of $800 was raised to be used in sounding out the Word. Israel Belton was employed at a salary of $600. N. A. McConnell was engaged to do the work of an evangelist for the remaining $200. Certainly he did not enter the ministry for the financial remuneration that he saw in it. The love of the Christ was the constraining power. When asked about his early educational advantages, he replied that he had "about twenty months, in all, in the common schools" of that time; "but," he said, "do not say anything about that. I don't want the people to know how little I know!" This, however, is too good to keep. If you wish to know how ignorant Nelson Antrim McConnell is, sit down and engage in conversation with him. He knows more than he will admit. During all these years he has been a student. It has been an important part of the business of his life to accumulate information. He is now a student. The Bible has been and is his daily companion. College and university men can get points from him as to the doctrine of Holy Writ.

Bro. McConnell came to Iowa in 1849—fifty years ago last November. He stopped in Davenport. There were at that time probably two thousand Disciples in the state; there are now fifty thousand.

Bro. McConnell was personally acquainted with Walter Scott, Alexander Campbell, A. S. Hayden and his brother William, John Henry, Cyrus and Marcus Bosworth—names familiar to those who know our early history. He first met Isaac Errett in July, 1841. By these mighty men he was instructed in the principles of the gospel. With them he associated in the beginning of his ministry. What a privilege now to converse with such a man! May the days of the years of his life be greatly prolonged!

Of course, he engaged in public debate. Who did not in those early days? But of his experiences in theological pugilism Bro. McConnell is not especially proud. To be true to "the plea" he was compelled, now and again, to engage in public discussion. He was and is pre-eminently a teacher.

He gave me some interesting points as to the pedigree of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. The Western Evangelist began to be published at Mt. Pleasant, Ia., in January, 1850. Daniel Bates was the editor; Aaron Chatterton and Arthur Miller were associate editors. The name was changed to the Evangelist. The editors were first, Daniel Bates, then Daniel Bates and D. P. Henderson, later Daniel Bates and Aaron Chatterton. Upon the occasion of the death of Aaron Chatterton the paper was discontinued for five or six months. It was revived in Oskaloosa, Ia., in 1864. N. A. McConnell, G. T. Carrenter, W. J. Carpenter, James Brown, Jonas Hartzell and J. E. Gaston were the agents who were instrumental in bringing the paper to life. Out of this enterprise came, by-and-by, the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

The Christian Church in Cedar Rapids, Ia., was organized by Bro. MoConnell in August, 1875, in the United Presbyterian Church. The following named brethren have served this congregation in the ministry of the Word: N. A. McConnell, R. E. Swartz, B. O. Aylesworth, Levi Marshall, C. C. Robison and J. M. Rudy.

E. M. Sefton, superintendent of the Sunday-school in the Cedar Rapids Church, is the author and publisher of the "Bible Student's Chart." "The Bible, or, the Great Religious Library," are the words at the head of the chart. The key-word of the Bible is the word "Salvation." The key-word of the Old Testament is "Preparation;" of the New Testament, "Fulfillment." The sixty-six volumes composing this "Library" are represented as standing on a shelf. There are five volumes of "The Law," twelve volumes of "History," five of books of "Poetry," the "Major Prophets," five volumes, and the "Minor Prophets," twelve; there are four volumes on "What to Believe," one on "First Steps," twenty-one books on "How to Live," and one on the great "Consummation." A key-word and a key-verse to each of the books of the Bible is given. In connection with each book are the questions: "When?" "Where?" "Who?" "What?" "Why?" "Wherefore?" with suggested answers.

This is, for the average Bible student, a remarkable chart. Write to E. M. Sefton, Cedar Rapids, Ia., about terms, etc. B. B. T.

OVERWORK

You know all about it. The rush, the worry, the exhaustion. You go about with a great weight resting upon you. You can't throw off this feeling. You are a slave to your work. Sleep fails, and you are on the verge of nervous exhaustion.

What is to be done? Take

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

For fifty years it has been lifting up the discouraged, giving rest to the overworked, and bringing refreshing sleep to the depressed.

No other Sarsaparilla approaches it. In age and in cures, "Ayer's" is "the leader of them all." It was old before other sarsaparillas were born.

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

Ayer's Pills aid the action of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. They cure biliousness. 25 cts. a box.

"I have used Ayer's medicines for more than 40 years and have said from the very start that you made the best medicines in the world. I am sure your Sarsaparilla saved my life when I first took it 40 years ago. I am now past 70 and am never without your medicines."

FRANK THOMAS, P. M.,
Jan. 24, 1899. Enon, Kansas.

Write the Doctor.

If you have any complaint whatever and desire the best medical advice you can possibly receive, write the doctor freely. You will receive a prompt reply, without cost. Address,

DR. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.

SPENCERIAN

ARE THE BEST

Sold by STATIONERS Everywhere

Samples for trial of the leading numbers for correspondents and accountants, will be sent on receipt of return postage.

SPENCERIAN PEN CO., 349 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

Open Letter to Dr. H. L. Willett.

MY DEAR BROTHER:—I read with very great interest your notice of the death of Dr. Green, of Princeton, and especially your remarks in reference to his literary labors in the department of biblical criticism. It was, indeed, a beautiful and generous tribute to a very great man, but in this notice you intimate pretty clearly your convictions that Dr. Green was the last of his kind—that no great scholar is left who occupies the conservative position which distinguished him.

You also affirm that on the position held and advocated by the conservative critics, of whom Dr. Green is easily first, the existing theology is based, and that with the passing of this great man is to pass the interpretations and the theology which have dominated the evangelical church of the closing century, and that a new theology and new interpretations are to come, based on the conclusions of the higher criticism.

Now I have stated in general terms the conclusions to which your article on Dr. Green have led me. I am not in a controversial mood, and I have not the slightest inclination, in this writing, to dispute a single passage in your paper, but for my own sake and for the sake of many anxious seekers after the truth I desire to prefer the following request: Will you state distinctly what you regard as the especial interpretations and the especial theology which, with the death of Dr. Green, must pass away; and what the new interpretations and the new theology are or are to be in the light of the new scholarship which characterizes the higher criticism? I know of no one, in our ranks at least, who is more competent to this task. I feel quite sure that such a statement is demanded, and would do great good.

Nothing is more common than to hear good men say: "If I must give up any part of the Book as inspired and authentic, then I must give up the whole." Nor are these illiterate men, however much misguided. A distinguished ex-governor said recently: "I must hold on to all that is in the old Book or I must hold to none of it." The real difficulty is that many preachers and a host of laymen are so ignorant as to the actual accepted results of "Higher Criticism" they do not know what are the "things that remain"—or, indeed, if anything remains. I feel quite sure that you will understand the feeling which prompts this request and reply at your earliest convenience. Most fraternally,

T. P. HALEY.

Kansas City, Mo.

[On reading Bro. Willett's article on Dr. Green, feeling sure that he did not mean that the venerable professor of Princeton was the last of the conservative critics, but that he had in mind a particular class or order, we wrote him calling his attention to this point and indicating the need of a further word of explanation. Our letter reached him when he was hurried with the preparation of leaving for England, where he now is. We are glad that Bro. Haley has written this "Open Letter" in the kind, courteous and truth-loving spirit which it manifests. We forward it on to Bro. Willett, through the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, and we are sure he will take time, in the midst of his busy labors in England, to respond to it in the same spirit. While waiting for Bro. Willett's reply it will not be out of place to say that those who heard Prof. Willett's able paper at the Indianapolis Congress, whether accepting all his conclusions or not, will bear witness to the splendid tribute he paid to the Word of God, which he said would endure when all schools and theories of criticism have done their work and have passed away. Much of the theology now formulated in creeds will doubtless pass away under this ordeal of criticism, as Prof. Willett intimates, but the faith—the great fundamental facts and truths of the gospel—these will abide. Those who have built on these fundamentals have nothing to fear.—EDITOR.]

Ann Arbor Letter.

The Bible Chairs are not well underslood. Their purpose and methods have been explained many times in our papers, but still the great majority our people have no clear conception of them,as any one can learn by a brief tour among the churches.

The following brief statements, if carefully noted, may help some to a better understanding of this work: The Ann Arbor Bible Chairs constitute a free Bible School for the benefit of the students of the University of Michigan. This school is located opposite the main building of the university. Its instruction is given chiefly in the form of lectures, which are delivered at times when students can attend. It has no official connection with the university.

Sunday morning, March 25, a notable address was delivered in University Hall. The occasion was the anniversary of the Students' Christian Association. The speaker was President Faunce, of Brown University. The theme was: "How a Modern Student Should Regard that Collection of Writings Which We Call the Bible."

He spoke with special reference to the Old Testament. He declared that modern textual and literary criticism had compelled a readjustment of thought regarding the Old Testament and that this readjusted thought makes those writings more practical and precious than ever. He also declared that whatever conclusions criticism may come to regarding the process of making the Old Testament, it can never destroy the faith that God was in some way the maker.

He then proceeded to show in vigorous language the attitude of Jesus towards the Old Testament. With an ideal intellectual grasp of the book he did not think it necessary to even touch the questions of criticism. On the other hand, with an ideal heart—specialist in spiritual matters—he lived on the Old Testament. The book saturated his very life; it was the human agency which operated to shape his career. To-day he who would attain to any spirituality worthy of note can no more afford to neglect the Old Testament than the would-be artists and musicians can afford to neglect the old masters. He showed also that the Old Testament had been the inspiration of all the great reformations, and that it has ever been the veritable text-book of civil liberty.

He raised strong objection to the statement of Prof. Goldwin Smith, that "the Old Testament is the millstone about the neck of Christianity." He insisted that the world could not afford to slight or neglect a book that had done so much for its welfare, and had entered so largely into the only perfect life ever lived on earth. He said we have gotten passed the day of scoffing at the Bible and have come to the time when to be educated in the truest sense one must know Isaiah as well as Homer, and Jeremiah as well as Plato. He declared that any college which does not to day make provision for its young men and women to gain a thorough knowledge of the Bible is behind the times and wofully derelict in its duty.

It was a very timely address for this place. There are a few men about this university who in their attitude towards the Bible keep in advance of even the most radical of the critics. This address was therefore opportune. It was delivered with the glow of conviction and made a deep impression.

Bro. Forrest closed his pastorate here last Lord's day, March 25. He had been here nearly four years. He did a good work of the most substantial kind. His methods are entirely free from claptrap and sensationalism. He is a good thinker—thinks logically, clearly and soundly, and preaches like he thinks. He took high rank as a preacher here and improved it as time went on. He has few equals as a preacher. The church here is very sorry to lose him as a pastor, but at the same time believes him to be fitted for the work to which he has been called in Calcutta, India.

Bro. Forrest will sail for India next October. Between now and then he will pursue some special studies in Chicago University.

T. W. Grafton, of Rock Island, Ill., will preach for the church here April 1. Perhaps this church may capture him for its next pastor.

March 29, 1900. H. D. WILLIAMS.

Those wishing reduced rates to the Hagerstown Conference, May 16 18, will please write me at once (inclosing stamp) saying how many card orders you wish from your station and over what railroad lines you will travel on the trip. This must be done in order to get the reduction allowed.

S. T WILLIS,
1281 Union Avenue, New York.

DISEASED EYES
—AND—IMPAIRED VISION
. . . ALSO . . .
Deafness and Head Noises
CURED BY DR. ONEAL'S
NEW METHOD TREATMENT

L. L. CARPENTER
And Other Well Known Ministers of the Christian Church Commend Dr. Oneal.

If you have any trouble whatever with your Eyes or Ears you should write to Dr. Oneal. He removes Cataracts, Scums, Films and White Spots on the Eyes Without the Knife. Weak, Watery or Sore Eyes, Granulated Lids, Deafness and Head Noises cured by Mild Medicines.

L. L. CARPENTER, of Wabash, Indiana, who has probably dedicated more churches than any other Christian minister, writes as follows:

"After a long and intimate acquaintance with Bro. Oren Oneal, it affords me great pleasure to say that he is an honorable gentleman and a very successful oculist.

"Along the lines of his special work he has had great success, and I most cheerfully commend him and recommend him to any needing treatment."

L. L. CARPENTER.
Wabash, Ind.

Dr. Oneal's book on Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat will be found of special interest to any who are seeking cure for the above troubles. It is sent free. Write, explaining your symptoms as best you can, and he will advise you fully as to the possibility of cure, cost of treatment, etc.

DR. OREN ONEAL,
SUITES, 52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

Rest and Health to Mother and Child.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over FIFTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, with PERFECT SUCCESS. It SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHŒA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" and take no other kind. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Central Illinois Ministerial Institute.

The eighteenth session of this annual gathering met at Mason City, Ill., April 10-12. The attendance was large and the entertainment everything that the most exacting could desire. Brother Armstrong, the new pastor, and the church deserve great praise for the warm reception and kind hospitality given the ministers present.

There were about fifty preachers in attendance. The one most remarkable thing about those present was that they were men either in middle life or just entering upon the strength of manhood. The programme was an exceedingly practical one and presented those practical things so needful to the pastor and the scriptural evangelist in the salvation of souls. It is not often that we are permitted to attend a gathering of any kind that is so helpful to the work of the ministry as this. Then in addition every speaker manifested a desire to be true to the Word of God. The echo constantly resounded that the true man of God must walk with God and preach Christ and him crucified.

There were two principal subjects and a number of others not related to either. The first of the main subjects was the Symposium on the Holy Spirit. J. H. Hardin, recently of Eureka College, but now pastor of the church at Liberty, Mo., was to state this subject and conduct the symposium. In his absence G. A. Hoffmann was called upon to take his place. The parties who spoke on this subject were W. H. Cannon, on the Personality of the Spirit; A. M. Hale, the Spirit and the Alien; O. L. Smith, the Spirit and the Christian; A. C. Roach, How are Men Now Guided by the Spirit? C. C. Redgrave, What Instruction do the Churches Need About the Holy Spirit? These were short, pointed and stirring papers.

The discussion that followed was exceedingly interesting and an indication that there was a diversity of opinion on this very important subject.

The other important subject was the Preacher and his Work. This subject was presented under the following divisions of the subject and by the brethren named: Winning Souls, J. T. Alsup; Traing Young Disciples, W. B. Taylor; Why Some Fail, J. W. Kilborn; Elements of Success, R. F. Thrapp; Care of the Flock, W. H. McGinnis; Ministerial Standing, W. W. Weedon; Illustration, John I. Given. Quite a profitable discussion followed. We then had two book reviews; one by J. T. Stivers, Making and Unmaking of the Preacher, and the other by N. S. Hayens, Men and Books. These brethren showed that they had mastered these books, and in the course of twenty minutes gave a clear conception of their contents.

In addition to these addresses we had in the beginning of the Institute, Public and Private Prayer, by Marion Stevenson, the first night; Capital and Labor, by F. G. Tyrrell, and on the last night the Gospel in the Present, by J. H. Gilliland. These addresses were well received and elicited many hearty endorsements. Bro. Gilliland's, which was the night address, especially received the hearty applause from all who heard it.

NOTES.

J. G. Waggoner made a dignified presiding officer.

Marion Stevenson is the president-elect for the coming year.

The next meeting goes to Hoopston and will be held in April next.

Eureka College was much in evidence in the ministerial force present. Eureka is doing a great work for the churches of Illinois.

It has not been our habit of thinking that N. S. Haynes, G. M. Goode, W. H. McGinnis and J. G. Waggoner were old men, and they are not, but in this institute, although only in the prime of life they represented the older and most experienced class of the Institute.

We never have attended a gathering of any kind where there was such a large proportion of the ministers present just in the years when we expect the most vigorous work from them.

Taking the institute all in all, it was good-natured, happy, well-pleased and grateful; a strong vein of piety and spiritual, practical, cultured, true to the Word of God and always exalting Christ. G. A. H.

ARMSTRONG & McELVY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR, ECKSTEIN } Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC, BRADLEY, BROOKLYN, JEWETT, ULSTER, UNION } New York.
SOUTHERN, SHIPMAN } Chicago.
COLLIER, MISSOURI, RED SEAL, SOUTHERN } St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

OUR interests influence our opinions. The manufacturers of Mixed Paints and so-called White Leads may believe their mixtures are the best because it is greatly to their interest to do so. We believe that Pure White Lead is the best Paint and our belief is confirmed by hundreds of years of use, and the experience of practical painters everywhere.

FREE For colors use National Lead Company's Pure White Lead Tinting Colors. Any shade desired is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving full information and showing samples of Colors, also pamphlet entitled "Uncle Sam's Experience With Paints" forwarded upon application.

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

Christian Cleanliness

Why do you permit a custom at the communion table which you would not tolerate in your own home? Would you like to know where individual Communion Cups are used? Send for our free book — it tells all about it. A trial outfit sent free.

SANITARY COMMUNION OUTFIT COMPANY, Dept. 35, Rochester, N. Y

About Eating Too Much.

MY DEAR BRO. GARRISON:—I congratulate you upon your new discovery. That thing about going to sleep is a phantom. But this thing about eating too much and too often is a very real obstacle in the way of clear thinking and spiritual living. No one can be really spiritual who devotes too much time to the question of eating. Big eaters "wax gross" and their "ears are dull of hearing" —the ears that should be given to the "things of the Spirit." Fasting is a means of grace. For some time—two years—I have found breakfast to be a useless meal. It is a real joy not to be bothered with breakfast. One usually does not feel like eating breakfast, and to force food where it is not wanted is a cruel thing to one's delicate stomach. A certain physician—I forget his name —has a book on the subject of eating no breakfast, which he claims as a remedy for all things. I think he is about right—in the main. It is a wonderful saving to housekeepers—of time I mean —not to have the trouble with breakfast. But certainly any one who tries to live right—even in eating—will have his battle to fight. I have really had to fight for a living, i. e., to live a simple life in eating. Many preachers are victims of the table. I happened to pass by and preach for a church in the summer of 1898. They were looking for a pastor, but I was not applying. In discussing the possibilities of the situation one brother said he did not think my health sufficient for the work of the pastorate. Why? He had been at a convention where I was and saw that I could eat only a little fruit and a cup of hot water for breakfast! Thus! ye.

P. B. HALL.

Ebensburg, Pa., March 31, 1900.

$100.00 A Month and Expenses This Summer.

Trustworthy men and women who are honest and industrious should write and engage with The World Mfg. Co., World B'ld'g, a reliable firm and one of the largest concerns in Cincinnati, Ohio, who offer splendid inducements to sell their Quaker Bath Cabinet and appoint good agents in unoccupied territory. Experience not necessary, for the firm furnish everything and teach you the business.

This is a splendid chance to make money and the books of this Company prove that they paid their agents for last month's work $46,834.00.

The demand for this remarkable Cabinet is something enormous, as there are millions of families all over this country who have no bathing facilities. Those who have bath tubs have discarded them since the invention of this Cabinet, for it is so much superior in every way, as it opens the millions of pores all over the body, steams out the poisons that cause disease, and gives the most cleansing, refreshing, invigorating Turkish, hot air, and hot vapor baths at home for three cents each. It is the best blood cleanser and system purifier known, far superior to poisonous drugs, sarsaparillas, tonics, etc. It is a regular hot springs at your home, and not only cures the most obstinate diseases, but also kills the germs, eradicates them from the system and prevents disease. A good position is offered those who mention this paper and write them at once, giving age, references and experience.

MARCH AND APRIL
Are the most disagreeable months of the year in the North.

In the South they are the pleasantest and most agreeable. The trees and shrubs put forth their buds and flowers; early vegetables and fruits are ready for eating, and in fact, all nature seems to have awakened from its winter sleep. The Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company reaches the Garden Spots of the South, and will on the first and third Tuesdays of March and April sell round-trip tickets to all principal points in Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia and West Florida at about half rates. Write for particulars of excursions to P. Sid Jones, D. P. A., in charge of Immigration, Birmingham, Ala.

An All-Year Resort.

The Crescent Hotel, Eureka Springs, Ark. opens March 1, 1900. A most desirable, attractive and convenient resort for health and pleasure-seekers. Ideal climate, pure, sparkling water, best accommodations. Through Sleepers via Frisco Line. Write for particulars to Manager Hotel or to any representative of Frisco Line.

Missionary.

Sample Reports of Work Done.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

We are grateful for your appropriation to work in our state. We are hopeful that the cause in South Dakota may be revived by your assistance, and our brethren may be strengthened beyond anything we have ever known. A. H. SEYMOUR.

Arlington.

HUNTINGTON, VA.

The church at Huntington, W. Va., is very grateful to the board for its support. We are planning to take our missionary offerings, but we will not take them both at the same time, however, as sufficient unto the day is the proper taking of one missionary offering.

A. E. ZEIGLER.

NEW YORK.

Our board is very grateful to you for the help you have given in New York missions. But for your help our state would be far behind what it is to-day. You have not only assisted us in the amount of money, but by the inspiration of your help we have been able to raise very much more money on the local field and in building it up.

C. M. KREIDLER, Cor. Sec.

North Tonawanda.

OREGON.

Your appropriation to the Oregon board has resulted in fifty meetings being held, with more than 300 additions. We have built up our state work in every element of its power. We have new churches at Elgin, Ashland and Lostile. Baker City has been made very much stronger, and will become a center of religious influence in all Eastern Oregon. Your help gives us great hope and rejoicing. We have, by that help, new zeal. We have advanced in every way since 1897, when you began to help us, and covet a continuance.

Eugene. J. B. LISTER, Sec.

ST. PAUL, MINN.

The Home Board came to the assistance of the little church in St. Paul, and inspired our courage and our hope. We have gathered 70 during the past year into the fellowship of the church, and we have doubled every department of church work. We have paid the mortgage debt of $4,500 on our lot, and are now on the point of building. Without the fostering care of our Home Board this work would never have been done and inspired. We feel ourselves indebted to our foster-mother—the Home Missionary Society—and we can say, from our experience in St. Paul, that Home Missions pays. A. D. HARMON.

PINE BLUFF, ARK.

Ours is the only church in Jefferson County, and I the only preacher of the Disciples. But for our general board this stirrring city of 20,000 people would still be without a house, if not without this organization. Many had come and gone in with other peoples, others had gone back to the world, and even some who came in with us have not fully recovered from the coldness incident to long residence with no church privileges. We have a church membership of 70. I am in my second year, during which time I have baptized 13. And we have added in other ways 15. Yet, the removals and dropping out of such as always gather in with charter members, but who will not continue faithful, leaves us but little stronger than when we dedicated the house. I have been able to strengthen three other points at odd times: Morrell, Davis and Dumas. At the latter place we organized a church. We are grateful for the help given by the general board.

S. W. CRUTCHER.

WISCONSIN.

Wisconsin could not possibly maintain a state missionary work without the aid of the General Home Board. We made eight different attempts and they all failed within one year. Since we began, under the support of the General Home Board, we have dedicated three new churches within one year, all of which received help from us. The Baptists spent $10,000 in home missionary work in Wisconsin last year. We spent $1,000, exactly one-tenth as much money as they did, and we had over one-half as many additions. They had $10,000 and 153 additions, and we had only $1,000 and 89 additions. Much other work was also done, and it pays. Wisconsin is a ripe mission field. C. G. MCNEILL.

Milwaukee

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

Our people at Morgantown have waited a long time for help, and now by your assistance it has come to us, and it awakens in us a deep sense of our obligations to God and to our brethren. We feel that we must do more and more to send the good news to our neighbors round about us. The gift of the Home Society helped our collection for Foreign Missions to-day. We manifested our gratitude in a larger offering than was asked for and exceeded our apportionment. We are glad that your help comes to us. We need pastoral work so much, and a strong church should be built up in Morgantown. The church sends you a hearty vote of thanks, and we believe your assistance to the church at Morgantown has not been misplaced. L. C. WOOLERY.

NEW ENGLAND.

You may well feel proud of the results of your contributions to New England, and I assure you it is fully appreciated, as you can see by the generous contributions to the work of the American Christian Missionary Society. Your visit and that of Bro. C. C. Smith has done wonders for us in reviving our New England work. By your help we have aided in the employment of eight missionary pastors. Men whose consecration and devotion to the work, and self-sacrifice in that work, has rarely been equaled. We are grateful for your help, and our prayer is that our brethren everywhere, all over the land, will give more and more to the American Christian Missionary Society, that the day will be hastened when all America will be evangelized, and all God's people be made one. S. M. HUNT.

Springfield, Mass.

INDIAN TERRITORY.

I feel that now is the golden opportunity for our cause in this region. All the railroads are building branch lines, and new towns are springing up everywhere. On one line from Guthrie to Carney there will be a dozen towns or more of less importance. We should get in on the ground floor. If we do not enter these fields now and establish our cause while society is in a formative state, we will suffer great loss. In after years, when the people will have become attached to their church homes and settled in their methods of living, we will be compelled to do battle against entrenched sectarianism, as we are now compelled to do in older communities. We who are here feel that this is a crisis for our plea in this section. Can our brethren be made to realize it? I hope so. May God bless you in the home offering, that you may come to our help.

VERNON J. ROSE.

Purcell.

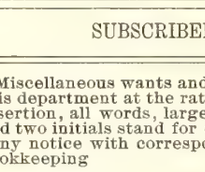
The Magic Darner

is a household necessity; mends any garment by weaving to match original warp; marvellous.
By Mail, 35 cents.
AGENTS WANTED—CITY AND COUNTRY—MANY QUICK SELLERS. Chas. H. Till, 207a Lake Street Chicago.

IF YOU HAVE Rheumatism

and drugs and doctors fail to cure you write to me, and I will send you free a trial package of a simple remedy, which cured me and thousands of others, among them cases of over 50 years' standing. This is no humbug or deception but an honest remedy that you can test without spending a cent. It recently cured a lady who had been an invalid for 52 years. Address JOHN A. SMITH, 627 GermaniaBldg., Milwaukee, Wis

ONE HUNDRED



copies of a letter, piece of music, drawing, or any writing can be made on a Lawton Simplex Printer. No washing. No wetting of paper Send for circulars and samples of work. Agents wanted.

LAWTON & CO., 30 Vesey St., New York. 59 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

Miscellaneous wants and notices will be inserted in this department at the rate of one cent a word, each insertion, all words, large or small, to be counted and two initials stand for one word. Please accompany notice with corresponding remittance, to save bookkeeping

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING. The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Standard Adding Machine Co., for the election of directors and the transaction of such other business as may come before it will be held at the office of the Company in St. Louis Mo., on Tuesday, May 1, 1900. Polls open at 9 o'clock A.M. F. M. CALL, President.
JOHN Q. MCCANNE, Sec'y.

LIFE OF MOODY," cloth, 318 pages, 25 cents, post paid, of C. F. Howard, Windfall, Ind.

DAILY BREAD," cloth, 192 pages, 25 cents, post paid, of C. F. Howard, Windfall, Ind.

VEST POCKET DICTIONARY, etc., Morocco, gold edges, alphabetic. 192 pages, 25 cents, postpaid of C. F. Howard, Windfall, Ind.

A FOREMAN for the Southern Christian Institute printing office is wanted. A consecrated young man with a plain knowledge of plain printing is wanted. Address J. B. Lehman, Edwards, Miss.

FOR SALE: Expecting to spend several months in Geamany this summer, I will sell my splendid stereopticon outfit at a bargain. For particulars address, J. G. M., care Christian Evangelist, 1522 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

STRANGLED LIBERTY" or "ROME and RUIN" is a new book. It unmasks the McKINLEY ADMINISTRATION and shows how McKINLEY has catered to Catholicism for votes 92,000 copies sold the first 30 days, 256 pages. Price only 50c., stamps taken Address, COLUMBIA BOOK CONCERN, 108 Vine St., St. Louis, Mo.

FOR SALE: A good building lot 25x147 feet, near Beulah Christian Chure also ten shares of Standard Adding Machine stock. Apply to "W. W." this office.

SEEKING the Old Paths and other Sermons, R. Moffett, 715 Logan Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. By mail, $1.35.

THE ACME SMELTING AND REFINING COMPANY, of Phœnix, Ariz., is controlled by Christian business men and offers for a short time excellent opportunities for either large or small investments Write for full information. A thorough investigation is desired by the company.

MYSTERY OF THE GOLDEN CLOTH. The greatest book ever written on John's Revelation. Price $1.50. Also Seer of Patmos, or John's Place in the Christian Economy. Price, 25cts. Address J. S. HUGHES, Station O, CHICAGO.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR BUSINESS MAN.

A business man with from $4,000 to $6,000 to invest in a Publishing Company with good job office and religious newspaper in the best city west of St. Louis, and who could become business manager of the company, can learn particulars by addressing "Business Man," this office.

THE EXILED PROPHET, or John on the Island of Patmos, has an introductory chapter on Daniel, by D. R. Dungan, that will be of especial interest to Bible students now while our Lessons are in the Old Testament. $1.00 per copy. Christian Publishing Company, St Louis, Mo.

Daily Double Train Service to Portland,

Commencing April 22, Union Pacific Railroad Company, will run two daily trains from Chicago Omaha, and Kansas City to Portland, Ore. These trains will be equipped with Buffet, Smoking Library, and Dining Cars; Standard Sleepers, Ordinary Sleepers or Tourist Cars. Time from St. Louis to Portland via Omaha, 68 hours; from Chicago, 68 hours; from Omaha, 55 hours; from Kansas City, 68 hours. For particulars address E. L. Lomax, G. P. A., Omaha, or J. F. Aglar, Gen. Agt., 905 Century Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Lincoln, Nebraska, as a Missionary Field.

The First Christian Church, of Lincoln, was organized in 1869. In 1888 the church erected a magnificent building, at a cost of over $50,000, near the state capitol. By unwise management this great structure was lost by foreclosure of the mortgage; and by some outside speculations by those who managed the business of the church, additional debts were incurred. Besides all this, in April, 1898, about fifty members, including those who had previously conducted the affairs of the church, withdrew from the church and organized another congregation. The separation seems to be permanent as far as the leaders are concerned. For the remainder of the year 1898 the church was unable to employ a regular minister, Elder Hawley doing some very effective work, however, till the close of the year.

On Jan. 1, 1899, the writer came to Lincoln to take charge of the work and gather together the scattered forces. The outlook was not the brightest in the world, but I found an earnest band of men and women (especially the latter) meeting in a hall, at the corner of M and Twelfth Streets. We preached the Word, prayed and labored earnestly throughout the year, "the Lord workiug with us," with the following results:

The several departments raised the following amounts: Bible-school, $146.22; Union Circle, $148.13; Ladies' Missionary Society, $116.72, Y. P. S. C. E., $29.62; church proper received from all sources $1,663.91, making a total of over $2,100. We paid all our missionary apportionments, and in some cases exceeded them. We also purchased new song books for the church, and paid all current expenses.

During the year there were three baptisms, two reclaimed and 51 additions to the congregation by letter, making a total of 56. There has been a general awakening, so that our audiences are now practically double those of one year ago. The total membership Jan. 1, 1900, was 343.

The Bible-school practically doubled during the year also. The last quarter's average attendance was a little over 132. The first three Sundays of this year we have had an averege attendance of over 160.

Our Young People's Society is also in good condition, and the work in all departments is in such a condition that we are greatly encouraged.

But what has all this to do with Lincoln as a missionary field? Much every way. It shows the promising character of the field. I wish to urge the following in addition: Lincoln is the capital and chief educational center, the State University having over 2,000 students annually enrolled. Secondly, the splendid building which we lost can now be purchased for $18,000. It cost over $50,000. Our debts, which we never contracted nor received any benefit from, may be settled for a nominal sum, our creditors realizing that we were not the responsible parties.

In these times, when our brethren are learning the use of money, and are entering into the spirit of larger things for the great body of the people, I beg to direct the attention of consecrated capital to the most promising field in the great West. Nebraska, with a million of people, has only 12,000 to 15,000 Disciples. All the live blood of the state flows through Lincoln, as the heart. The eyes of the brotherhood of Nebraska and beyond are turned to Lincoln and the First Church.

There could be no greater work accomplished in any single home field than can be accomplished in Lincoln by providing a suitable home for this congregation—the First Christian Church. The church is able to do much, as is evidenced by the foregoing report, but it cannot acquire a home without the assistance of the brotherhood. Last year the A. C. M. S. gave us $100 toward current expenses. We get a similar amount this year. Why not help the cause in a larger way?

Those desiring further information of any character may address the undersigned pastor.

T. J. THOMPSON.

1726 K Street, Lincoln, Neb.

VALUABLE PAMPHLETS . . . . . ON LIVING THEMES

LIFE OF ALEXANDER CAMPBELL	C. V. SEGER.
CONTRADICTIONS OF ORTHODOXY	A. M. COLLINS.
SABBATH OR LORD'S DAY	D. R. DUNGAN.
THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC	S. W. CRUTCHER.
LETTERS TO BISHOP MORRIS	J. W. MATHES.
FREQUENCY OF THE LORD'S SUPPER	N. J. AYLSWORTH.
GOOD SHEPHERDS	B. E. DAWSON.
CHRISTIAN SCIENCE DISSECTED	A. D. SECTOR.

PRICE, TWENTY-FIVE CENTS EACH.

Any Five Will be Sent to One Address for One Dollar.

We have tracts and pamphlets on all subjects, and at all prices, from 40 cents each down to 25 cents per hundred. Write us for what you need.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO, - ST. LOUIS.

A Foo'ish Fisherman.

A man went fishing with a substantial pole of local church, a weak line of Home Missions and a heavy bait of Foreign Missions. The first throw into the water the weight of the bait broke the line, Foreign Missions was soon swallowed up, Home Missions crippled and the local church rendered unserviceable.

Many churches are using a very frail line and making great efforts to get a large amount of bait on the hook. We must have good bait and plenty of it if we would catch the souls of men, but if the line of Home Missions is ignored it will break, Foreign Missions be lost and the church left helpless.

Therefore let us strengthen this line of Home Missions with a liberal offering in May.

Oakland, Cal. GUY W. SMITH.

PEOPLE YOU LIKE TO MEET

Are found on the personally conducted California excursions via Santa Fe Route.

If you need assurance of this, send for books and circulars which fully explain an agreeable and economical way of touring the West.

T. A. GRADY,
Manager California Tourist Service,
The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway,
109 ADAMS STREET, CHICAGO.

DR. J. HARVEY MOORE,

EYE, EAR, NOSE and THROAT....

648-649 CENTURY BUILDING,

HOURS: 10 to 3. SAINT LOUIS.

TIDINGS ...of... SALVATION.

The very latest book of hymns! Published at prices within the reach of the weakest churches and Sunday-schools. One Hundred and Seventeen Choice Songs by the best hymn-writers, including such favorites, as:

Shout the tidings of Salvation.
Yield not to temptation.
The Comforter has come.
Blessed be the Name.
Take me as I am.
Rescue the perishing.
Just as I am.
Whiter than snow.
Leaning on the Everlasting Arm.
Blessed Assurance, Jesus is mine.
There's a great day coming.

Over One Hundred other splendid hymns. The book is compiled by Howard, John S. and L. O. Brown, of Indianapolis.

PRICE LIST.

	Per copy. Postpaid.	Per dozen. Not prepaid.	Per hundred. Not prepaid.
Manila,	$ .15	$1.20	$10.00
Limp Cloth,	.20	1.50	12.00
Boards,	.25	2.00	15.00

HACKLEMAN MUSIC CO., Indianapolis

Notes and News.

Milligan College.

Commencement and reunion, with series of lectures, will be held June 1-9 inclusive.

Many former students are expected to be present. Able speakers will deliver lectures. The largest senior class in the history of the school will go out. Baccalaureate sermon Sunday, June 3; Senior day, June 6; alumni day, June 7. Full programme will be published later.

J. HOPWOOD.

Milligan, Tenn.

News Worth Telling.

The saloon element here in Macomb, Ill., petitioned the city council to allow a vote to be taken at our spring election for and against license, with the understanding that if for license got a majority the council would grant license.

But we had an example of Christian union at work. Every Protestant church in town and every pastor and the entire membership stood solidly against licensing the iniquitous saloon.

Result: The saloon was snowed under by a majority of 529 ballots in a vote of about 1,200. "In union there is strength." Men of both political parties cast their ballots for the right, for morality, for the purity of the home.

There are two Democratic and two weekly Republican papers and one literary weekly published in the city, besides one daily. These all made common cause for peace and sobriety.

I do not think the saloonists will be likely to try it again very soon. There has not been a licensed saloon in Macomb for fifteen years. I do not now expect to live to see one. God forbid that we should ever be divided and thus let the devil get in his work!

J. C. REYNOLDS.

[This is an illustration of what could be done in any state and in the whole nation, if the Christian, moral and order-loving people would stand together against the saloon. The question is, How can this united action be secured?—EDITOR.]

The Convention of 1900.

A brief statement concerning the coming convention at Kansas City will be in place, no doubt, and of interest to our brethren generally. It will be remembered that the Jubilee Convention at Cincinnati, last October, voted to hold the next convention in this city, provided that the Western Passenger Association would grant the rate of one fare for the round trip; otherwise, it was to be taken to some city within the bounds of the Central Association. The secretaries of the American Christian Missionary Society at once began their efforts to secure this rate, and have left no stone unturned to this end. Despite their faithful endeavors, the Association has refused the rate; but has granted to the convention the rate of one fare plus two dollars, beyond the limit of two hundred miles from Kansas City. Within that limit, a rate of one and a third fare. This is the best that can be secured. The Acting Board at Cincinnati feel that it would be unwise at this late date to change the place of meeting, and have notified us that the convention will be held here October 12th to 18th. Owing to the uncertainty as to the coming of the convention, our Committee of Arrangements here was, of course, prevented from entering into contract for our great Convention Hall, and it is now too late to secure it, as it is rented for the whole month of October. But we have other auditoriums which will serve, we believe, the needs of the convention, and we hope to have a great and inspiring gathering. We will welcome to our city all who come in the name of the Lord.

W. F. RICHARDSON.

Seattle Note.

There were ten accessions to the First Church here yesterday, making twenty-two in all since I came here, Feb. 11. The church is united in its efforts to redeem our cause in Seattle. Our greatest need at present is a property of our own. We are worshiping in a rented house at Eighth and Bell Streets; quite a distance from the central part of the city, which puts us at a great disadvantage. Real estate has rapidly increased in price in the last two years and there is no immediate prospect of it getting any cheaper. Cape Nome and other mining centers in the Northwest, along with the opening up of Oriental trade, is making Seattle a great center of attraction at present. Multitudes are coming and many will make this their permanent home. This makes Seattle one of the greatest mission fields in the country.

I wish persons in the East, knowing of friends who are either members of the Christian Church or in any way related to it coming to Seattle, would inform me, giving name and address. I am sure many are lost to Christ and the church for lack of proper attention when first coming to our great cities. B. H. LINGENFELTER, Pastor.

309 Clay St., Seattle, Wash., March 26, 1900.

Omaha, Nebraska.

We have just closed a four weeks' meeting at the Grant Street Church. The preaching was done by the pastor. During the meeting we had zero weather, snow and slush, but the work went on and 40 were added. This makes 67 in four months. The prospect for Grant Street is quite encouraging. The attendance has increased until our seating capacity is taxed to its utmost limit.

We recently suffered a severe loss in the death of Bro. H. O. Daniels. Bro. Daniels has frequently been spoken of as the backbone of the Grant Street Church. He carried the interests of this church on his heart and nothing that he had was too good for it. It was through him that I was led to accept the work here, but he was never at church after I came. He was superintendent of the Grant Street Bible-school, and also of the Bible-school work of the state. His loss to Omaha and the state of Nebraska seems almost irreparable and we all are asking, Who can take up his work and carry it on? His good wife said to the writer, "I must do Mr. Daniels' work and my own as well."

We are anxiously waiting for Bro. Sumner T. Martin to take up the work at the First Church. He will be with us April 1. The Disciples are comparatively weak in this great city, but the opportunities before us are without limit. Instead of two small churches in Omaha we should have a dozen.

I want to second the motion of Bro. Combs for a campaign of education in the principles for which we stand. It has been said that we need no longer preach on first principles, for our position is well understood. This is not true. Our position is not understood. The ignorance, even of a large part of our membership, concerning the ground we occupy is alarming. I have heard our own members, in this city and elsewhere, say that one church is as good as another. They talk as if we were only a denomination among denominations and would justify our existence upon the same ground that other religious bodies justify their existence. We must preach and preach and preach the old Jerusalem gospel.

The clergymen of Omaha have been perplexed with that much-mooted problem, "Why do we not reach more people?" "How can we account for the scant attendance at our churches?" This question is easily answered. These men are not preaching the gospel. They are trying to catch the popular ear with something flashy. Here are some of the subjects recently preached upon in Omaha: "The Personals in the Omaha Newspapers," "Epochs and Epoch-makers—Voltaire," "The Redemption of Jean Valjian: a Study of Hugo's Les Miserables," "An Evening with Sir Joseph Barnby," "A Study of Hawthorne's Scarlet Letter," "The Influence of Washington." If these men will get their sermons out of the old Book they will reach the people.

Are you coming to Omaha? Write me and I will help you get a home near one of our churches. There are plenty of desirable homes near our churches. You need not live in districts where we have no church. Have you friends who are coming to Omaha? Write me about them.

W. T. HILTON.

2519 Charles Street.

$1000 FREE
Can you arrange these fourteen jumbled letters so that they will form a title to one of the best story papers in the land? IF SO YOU MAY SHARE IN THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE $1000 WHICH WE ARE GIVING AWAY for doing a little work for us. In arranging the letters use them only as many times as they appear and no letter can be used which does not appear. This and other most liberal offers are made to introduce one of the best NEW YORK STORY MAGAZINES into every home in the United States and Canada. WE DO NOT WANT ONE CENT OF YOUR MONEY. Send your solution to us plainly written on a postal card with your address in full and you will hear from us by RETURN MAIL. STICK TO IT AND TRY AND GET YOUR SHARE OF THE $1000. A copy of this celebrated NEW YORK MONTHLY MAGAZINE WILL BE SENT FREE to every one answering this advertisement. Do not delay. Send your answer immediately. Address THE PARAGON PUBLISHING CO., 22 North William Street, New York City.

Our Young Folks for 1899, substantially bound in boards, in two semi-annual volumes. Price per volume, 75 cents. Address Christian Publishing Co., St. Louis.

....A Trinity of Devotional Books....

Uniform in Size and Binding.

THE HEAVENWARD WAY.
A popular book addressed to young Christians, containing incentives and suggestions for spiritual growth, leading the young in the "Way of Life." Lately revised. 100 pages. Bound in cloth.

ALONE WITH GOD.
A manual of devotions, containing forms of prayer suitable for private devotions, family worship and special occasions. It is adapted to the wants of Christian Endeavorers. The book contains 244 pages.

HALF-HOUR STUDIES AT THE CROSS
A series of devotional studies on the Death of Christ, designed to be helpful to those who preside at the Lord's Table, and a means of spiritual preparation for all who participate. 275 pages.

Price, per copy, cloth.....$ .75
" " morocco..... 1.25

Price, per set, cloth.....$2.00
" " morocco..... 3.25

Twenty-Five Thousand Copies Sold.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, -:- ST. LOUIS.

Evangelistic.

MICHIGAN.

St. Louis, April 9.—Two additions yesterday at our regular services.—J. L. SMITH.

WASHINGTON.

Tekoa, April 7.—Closed our meeting with nine additions; five by confession, four by relation. Good interest.—E. A. LADOW.

CALIFORNIA.

Artesia, April 5.—Two confessions last Sunday at regular services; audiences never so large since the church was organized.—N. B. MCGHEE.

WISCONSIN.

Everett.—Three additions since last report. Have begun second year's work. We raised our apportionment for Foreign Missions.—JOHN YOUNG.

FLORIDA.

Jacksonville.—Two additions to the Adams Street Christian Church. Our Sunday-school and Junior Endeavor Society are rapidly developing. We celebrate our second anniversary in June. —T. H. BLENUS, pastor.

OHIO.

Mineral Ridge, April 10.—One addition last Lord's day. The clerk's quarterly report shows the average attendance to be 25 per cent. greater than for the corresponding year. We were unanimously called to remain another year.—L. J. AND ELLA P. MCCONNELL.

INDIANA.

Terre Haute, April 8.—I am assisting T. J. Freed in a meeting here, with 13 additions to date. —J. M. CANFIELD.

Irvington, April 12.—Preached at Edwardsport, Ind., last Lord's day. There were two confessions and baptisms. Begin at Akron on the 16th. —H. C. PATTERSON.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Pittsburg, April 8.—Twelve added to-day. The three churches come together for closing service to-morrow night. "Thine is the kingdom," and 664 have come into it. "Thine is the power" that has so stirred these two cities, and "thine is the glory forever."—CHAS. REIGN SCOVILLE.

ALABAMA.

Anniston, April 7.—Two additions on Sunday morning, April 1.—EUGENE R. CLARKSON.

Birmingham.—C. P. Williamson has just closed a two weeks' meeting for us at the First Church, in which there were 14 additions. Brother Williamson dwelt largely upon the spiritual development of the membership and has been a wonderful blessing to us all.—O. P. SPIEGEL.

NEBRASKA.

Table Rock, April 11.—Our meeting at Chester closed with 20 added; 16 by baptisms. Dr. Encill put forth his best effort in this work. A good pastor will be secured.—F. HOWARD SWEETMAN.

Waterloo, April 9.—One baptism at prayer meeting March 28th. One young lady made the good confession yesterday morning. The sisters have organized themselves into a society of Willing Workers and are doing good work. The C. E. and S. S. are growing. Will organize a Junior C. E. on next Lord's day afternoon.—A. O. SWARTWOOD.

KANSAS.

Eureka, April 9.—One confession yesterday; six since we took the work, three weeks ago.—J. D. FORSYTH.

Clay Center, April 9.—One addition by letter at Millanvale April 1st. A splendid prayer-meeting was organized at Clay Center last week, and a Y. P. S. C. E. on the following Sunday evening, with 31 charter members.—J. M. HARRIS.

Columbus, April 10.—Began my second year with this church April 1st. During my first year there have been 71 additions and 17 away from home—88 altogether, and about 60 by baptism. Of the 71 added at Columbus 48 were added at regular services and 43 by baptism. During the first quarter of 1900, which was the last quarter of the pastoral year, there have been 24 additions; 20 by baptism at home and 17 in my meeting with my son at Modale, Iowa. The Columbus church has raised during the year for all purposes $1,575, of which nearly $100 was for missions.—M. MCFARLAND, pastor.

IOWA.

Weldon, April 9.—One added by confession last night; three since my taking the work in March. —I. W. CAMERON.

Oro Dell, April 1.—Two baptized here to-day.—O. E. HAMILTON.

Meighton, April 9.—One added last night from the Methodists. Eleven added here since Feb. 12th.—O. E. HAMILTON.

Woodward, April 9.—Two added here yesterday. I close my work with this church the last Lord's day in this month, having accepted a call from the church at Perry.—ROY CALDWELL.

Keota, April 11.—The Keota Church raised 30 cents more than four times their apportionment for the March offering. We are now planning for State and Home Missions. The Bible-school took an egg offering last Lord's day for the Orphans' Home. Raised 42 dozen. Will try and reach two cases before we quit; 20 added here and seven at Kinross in the past six months. Am trying for 25 subscribers to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.—GEO. C. RITCHEY.

MISSOURI.

Hastain, April 9.—We arrived here three weeks ago and found this a destitute field. After teaching them "the way of the Lord more perfectly," we organized a church with 12 members and a Sunday-school with an enrollment of 49. We intend to organize a Y. P. S. C. E. to-night. We recommended to them the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST and the literature of the Christian Publishing Co. Among those baptized was a Methodist lady 69 years old. Lord's day several Missionary Baptists partook of the emblems with us. God bless the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST and its devoted editor. To-morrow we shall drive to Clinton and take the train for our home at Miami, I. T.—S. O. BURKS AND WIFE.

Carthage, April 9.—Baptized one at Jasper yesterday. Have had a number of additions by conversion and by letter since work began there last October. Church is growing in all departments and will soon be counted among the strong churches in Southwest Missouri.—M. S. JOHNSON.

Kirksville, April 2.—Had four additions here yesterday.—H. A. Northcutt.

Lebanon, April 9.—Four confessions yesterday; nine during the 10 weeks, also six added to the congregation by letter.—A. A. BEERY.

Shelbina, April 8.—Three additions at Shelbina; two at Shelbyville, and one at Fairview.—J. H. WOOD.

St. Louis, April 8.—First Christian Church, two additions.—F. O. FANNON.

ILLINOIS.

Lynnville, April 10.—One addition by baptism last Sunday.—A. R. ADAMS, pastor.

Rockford, April 9.—Eight additions by baptism and two by relation to the church here in the past two weeks.—D. R. LUCAS.

Carrollton, April 9.—One added here yesterday by primary obedience and one added a week ago not reported.—SEYMOUR SMITH, pastor.

Dalton City, April 9.—Had large audiences at my regular appointment Sunday; one confession at night.—MRS. E. W. BRICKERT.

Sullivan, April 9.—Large audiences yesterday and three confessions. Have them every week.—E. W. BRICKERT, pastor.

Olney, April 4.—A new combination has been formed for the evangelistic field by N. J. Wright, the pastor at this place, and his brother, S. Ellis, of Lynn, Ind. They have just closed a meeting at Robinson, Ill., with six additions and the church much revived. Walter Kline, of Clay City, has been called as pastor.—N. J. W.

Manchester, April 10.—Our meeting at this place, with Ivan W. Ager, of Chapin, preaching, closed Monday night with 15 additions; 11 by obedience, three by letter and one from the Baptists. They will probably engage Bro. Ager for for half his time. My next meeting is with Bro. McColley, Cairo, in May. I would like to make engagements for June and July. Address me at 915 Aubert Ave., St. Louis, Mo.—GUY B. WILLIAMSON, singing evangelist.

Columbus, April 12.—The church at this place is in a prosperous condition. Five additions recently by confession. The Sunday-school is in a very prosperous condition.—G. F. BOOTH, pastor.

For Indigestion

Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. GREGORY DOYLE, Syracruse, N. Y., says: "I have frequently prescribed it in cases of indigestion and nervous prostration, and find the result so satisfactory that I shall continue it."

Prominent Citizens

Of Crete, Nebraska, Heartily Indorse the Combination Oil Cure for Cancer.

Mr. Malichi Yant, of Crete, Neb., 77 years old, cured of a most malignant cancer in the temporal region. The cancer measured 2½x3 inches in diameter. Read what is said of this wonderful cure:

CRETE, NEB., P. O. BOX 333.

Dr. Bye—Kind Sir: I must say that you have performed one of the most miraculous cures I ever heard of, or saw, in the case of Mr. Yant, for he had one of the worst looking cancers on his left eye and temple. It was thought incurable by our physicians and friends and neighbors. But, thank God, you have restored him to perfect health. He is now looking and feeling well, and the neighbors say he looks five years younger than he did when he began treatment. He is 77 years old and can do a good day's work yet. I must say I never saw anything to equal your Cancer Cure to effect a cure with so little pain. May your years be many and your success be great and everlasting, is the wish of your friends.

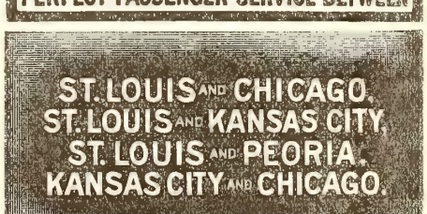
We, the undersigned, are eye witnesses of the fact related above. We saw Mr. Yant almost every day during the time he used the oils, and we think it the grandest remedy in the world, and we would advise all who suffer with cancer to use this remedy.

MR. and MRS. YANT,
MRS. JAMES ILER,
MRS. A. M. FIKE,
MR. and MRS. J. C. TALLY,
MRS. J. T. JOHNSON,
MRS. ALTA PEVIT,
MRS. ANNA BIENHOFF,
F. H. YANT,
H. W. M. BELL.

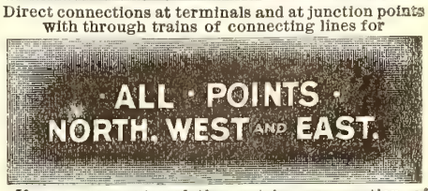
All of Crete, Neb., December 30, 1899.

P. S.—I will answer all letters pertaining to this case when stamped envelope accompanies the letter. Mrs. M. Yant.

For free illustrated book, call or address Dr. Bye, Room 109, 9th and Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.



Direct connections at terminals and at junction points with through trains of connecting lines for



If you are contemplating a trip, any portion of which can be made over the Chicago & Alton, it will pay you to write to the undersigned for maps, pamphlets, rates, time tables, etc.

D. BOWES,
GEO. J. CHARLTON, General Western Passenger Agent, 216 North Broadway,
General Passenger and Ticket Agent, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS. ST. LOUIS, MO.

Life.

J. ORVILLE WALTON.

Life is a river. Its onward flow
Is marked by the ripples of joy and woe.
The ripples now gleam in the sun's bright ray,
And gaily they dance in their elfish play;
The mantle of fortune is o'er them cast,
And, ah, might their beauty forever last!
But sunbeams of joy soon are lost from sight,
A dark cloud of sorrow dispels the light,
No longer the ripples leap blithe and gay,
When sunlight forever seems passed away,
But we learn to sigh, as we onward flee,
For rest in the ocean—eternity.

The Lost Emigrants.

BY R. H. JOHNSON.

CHAPTER XXV.

Up to the present we had not been very regular or orderly in our celebration of the Lord's Supper. It was also evident that there was quite a diversity of views as to the purpose, the manner of observing, as well as the frequency of recurrence of the feast. It was, therefore, deemed wise to give a week to study of the subject, and at our meeting get the results of the united wisdom of the church.

Without entering into detail the conclusions may be summarized as follows:

We decided to discard the use of the word sacrament, as it not only is never used to designate the Lord's Supper, but is not found anywhere in the Bible Besides, it means an oath, particularly that of the soldier to his general and country, which is foreign to the significance of this ordinance.

It is a memorial service. "This do in remembrance of me" (1 Cor. 11:24).

It is called "the Lord's Supper" in the 20th verse of the same chapter. It was thus to be a memorial and a declaration of the faith of his followers in the value of his atoning sacrifice. As the blood of the paschal lamb redeemed the Israelites in Egypt from the sword of the destroying angel, so in the Lord's Supper, instituted at the close of the feast of the Passover, was signified the value of his blood, shed for the remission of sins, to redeem from the dominion of darkness and death. It is, therefore, a perpetual testimony of the value of the atonement; a memorial of his love and sacrifice; a fellowship and communion with the Savior and each other.

To me, however, who from earliest years had been educated into the view, only less gross than the Catholic theory of transubstantiation, that in some inexplicable way the real body and blood of Christ was present with the bread and wine of the supper, it was hard to come to the simple, touching and beautiful view of this supper as now presented. But, when it was shown how the Savior rejected this literalism, I could not but discard it also.

I had cited his language: "Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath eternal life" (John 6:54). But I was called to the fact that his disciples murmured at it; that Jesus knew this and said: "Doth this offend you? It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." I saw at once that to feast upon his physical flesh would profit me nothing. That it was the spirit and not the flesh that must quicken or give life to the soul, and that it operated through his words; for "they are spirit and they are life."

It was thought best to use a simple unleavened cake. Unleavened, because our Savior set the example—there being no leaven in all Israel during the week of the Passover. A single cake or loaf, because there is one body (1 Cor. 12:17). This loaf to be broken before all, as Jesus took the loaf and broke it, making it emblematic of his broken body. This may not be imperatively necessary, but there is a significance about it that is wanting where no loaf is seen and no bread is broken.

In regard to posture, however, as our Savior and the twelve were in the customary table position of their day, it seemed eminently fitting that we employ the posture of the ordinary meal.

Kneeling at the feast was objected to on the ground that it was never introduced into the church until the dogma of transubstantiation was promulgated and men were taught to worship the "host" as the real body and blood of Christ.

Regarding the times of recurrence of the Lord's Supper, Mr. Burton said: "There being no specific command fixing the periods of communion, we find great diversity of practice in the religious world. But our authority is not the practice of the religious world, but the teaching of Christ and the apostles. In the absence of express command we ought to follow inspired example as nearly as possible.

"When Jesus instituted this ordinance he said: 'This do in remembrance of me. For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup ye do show forth the Lord's death till he come' (1 Cor. 11:24, 25).

"It would then seem that this memorial service ought to be 'often.'

"We find in Acts 20 that a party of eminent disciples, including Paul and Timothy and Luke, came from Greece to Troas in Asia. There they remained seven days: 'And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow.' Here are two important statements. The day of the week of breaking the loaf, and the primary purpose of the assembly. Paul had tarried for seven days, but would depart on the morrow. Why had he tarried? I conclude, to be present at the meeting. What was the specific purpose of the meeting? To hear a sermon from one of the distinguished visiting evangelists? No; that was only incidental. 'They came together to break the loaf.' If we follow the inspired example in coming together on the first day of the week, ought we not to follow it in coming together to break bread?

"So far as the testimony of history goes, it is a unit in certifying to the weekly celebration of the Lord's Supper for the first three hundred years. Pliny, proprætor of Bythinia, Justin Martyr, Tertullian, and all who refer to the frequency, agree in this. Fisher, professor of Ecclesiastical History in Yale University, says: 'The ordinary practice was for communion to be received on Sunday of each week' (History of the Christian Church, p. 68). The recently discovered manuscript, Teaching of the Twelve Apostles, written, doubtless, in the second century, testifies to the regular weekly observance of the Lord's Supper as follows: 'Coming together on the Lord's day, break bread and give thanks, confessing your transgressions, that your sacrifice may be pure.' This assertion, the Congregationalist says, confirms the custom of the breaking of bread by the disciples every first day of the week.

"In the fourth century the Latin Church changed this custom, but was opposed in this by several councils. In 506 A. D., the council of Agatha decreed the observance of this ordinance three times a year. This prevailed in the Roman church until the year 1215 A. D., when the fourth council of Lateran sanctioned the dogma of transubstantiation and communion at Easter. Thus communion once a year, which Calvin called 'a contrivance of the devil,' came about. It must then be apparent that just as apostasy came in, and the love of Jesus became less ardent, there came in a departure from the frequency of the observance of this ordinance. And when Christians return to the simplicity and purity and zeal of the early church, they will no doubt resume the weekly commemoration of the Savior's dying love."

Mr. Smithson: "As a Baptist I want to add that the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge, edited by J. Newton Brown, of our church, says: 'Some have been for keeping it [the Lord's Supper] every day in the week; others four times a week; some every Lord's day, which many think is nearest the apostolic practice—a practice which was long kept up in antiquity, and only deviated from when the love of Christians began to wax cold.'"

Mr. McGregor: "As a Presbyterian, permit me to say, the Rev. John Mason, one of our foremost men, in his letters on communion, says: 'Communion every Lord's day was universal, and was preserved in the Greek Church till the seventh century'.

Pearline
Save time ~ Not dirt

John Calvin says: 'Every week at least the table of the Lord should be spread for Christian assemblies'" (Inst., Book VI, chap. 18).

Mr. White: "As a Methodist, I will add that John Wesley, in his letters to America, among the excellent things suggested, says: 'I also advise the elders to administer the supper of the Lord on every Lord's day.' It seems evident, therefore, that in returning to the practice of weekly communion we are in excellent company."

By a preconcerted arrangement the congregation met the following Sunday with fasting and prayer and selected Prof. Fergus, Mr. White and Jack Burton as elders, and Messrs. Gray and Smithson as deacons, and these were in due time formally set apart to their work.

Jack Burton having shown an aptness to teach, and being esteemed morally worthy to "feed the flock," was selected to labor in word and doctrine.

So fortunate were we in our officers, that though some years have elapsed, we have never had reason to regret out selection, nor to doubt the wisdom of our choice.

An Honest Million.

I have never been so impressed by a place where there was so little to see as by Nazareth, once the home of the One whose gentle life and wise teachings have so remarkably influenced the civilized world. The place is not particularly impressive, but one's thoughts are thronged with memories of teachings which began at mother's knee, then continued in the Sunday-school, church, etc., and connected with every sacred relation, as christenings, weddings and funerals. And here was his home! We are treading the very streets that he trod. The views that meet our eyes in every direction are scenes once familiar to him. Yonder plain of Esdraelon, which we crossed in coming here, was well known to him. Yonder mountain is practically the same now as it was when it was a familiar figure in his daily landscape. I went to bed that night with an impressive realization that I was to sleep in the town which was once his home. And when leaving next day I often turned my horse about to look again and again at the little town and its surrounding hills and valleys—scenes of his daily life.

In the last few years, during which the industrial question has assumed such great importance in our country, my mind has often gone back to those scenes in Galilee. I have thought of the principal actor, not as a teacher, but as a workingman—the Carpenter of Galilee. Millionaires and multimillionaires have become numerous in our country, bringing in their wake an army of unemployed, many of whom, by force of conditions, degenerate into tramps and vagabonds. Both these classes, the millionaires and tramps, are a detriment to the best interests of our country. I have made a calculation bearing upon the honesty of these millions in private coffers, and to help us to realize what a sum a million dollars is, and and what it is to actually earn a million dollars. All will agree that when a workingman can save $1 every working day in the year he is doing well.

Our era begins with the birth of this Carpenter of Galilee. Let us suppose that he was able to begin work on the day of his birth, and that each working day he was able to save $1 above his living expenses. Let us suppose that he never loses a day by sickness or bad weather, and that his life and health and strength are miraculously prolonged until he shall earn one million dollars by saving $1 for every working day. Then we will be able to realize what an honest million is.

We will trace our workman who began work on the day of his birth. At the historic time of his death, at the age of 33, what would he be worth? The calculation is easy: 365 days, minus 52 Sundays, equals 313 working days in each year. Multiply that by 33 years and we have 10,329 days; but we must add eight days for eight leap years. This would make 10,337—and $1 per day saved would equal as many dollars—$10,337. Far from a million, yet labor began at birth and never a holiday nor a day lost by sickness! Let us suppose that he had lived the allotted 70 years: then how would the account stand? Only $21,927! Our workman has a long and weary task before him to earn so large an amount as a million dollars. Our Hero must trudge along through summer's heat and winter's storms. Years and decades come and go, until they grow into centuries, and still he works on, for his task is only begun. He sees kingdoms and empires rise and fall, but still he labors on, for the greater part of his task is still before him.

Christians are persecuted in various countries, the Roman Empire disappears, the dark ages come, and still he labors on, his task not yet completed. The crusades are fought, America is discovered, modern science awakens the world from its shroud of darkness, and still he labors on. The stirring events of modern history transpire and bring us down to the present moment and—would you believe it?—our Carpenter is still laboring on, not yet having missed a single working day from sickness or any other cause in all these centuries. Let us see how his task would stand at this time. We are not counting interest, but purely the earnings of labor. We have seen that his savings would be $313 per year; this would be $31,300 per century, but adding 25 days for 25 leap years per century, it would be $31-325 per century. To determine how this account would stand multiply $31,325 by 19, and the result is $595,175. So the task at the present time would be only a little more than half done. Let us in imagination bring him before us. Here he comes, time-scarred, storm-scarred, labor-scarred. We ask him questions. He tells us interesting stories of how he has builded homes for princes and peasants in many countries, of how he worked on the Coliseum, the Alhambra and St. Peter's. He mentions familiarly such masters as Michael Angelo. He praises his good fortune in having steady employment during all these centuries, and that his wages are always promptly paid, and that he was allowed to make up the time lost by going from one job to another by night work—but suddenly he says: "I must not tarry. I am the drudge of the ages, with the task of earning a million dollars. I must get it honestly, therefore I must earn it. My task will require many, many years, even centuries yet, so adieu!" With this he leaves us. But does he not leave many reflections concerning our millionaires and their millions? What shall we say to those who obtain not only one million, but many millions in the few years of the adult period of a single life?

It is plain that no man can earn a million dollars in a brief human life, however hard he may work. But many have become millionaires, and while it is impossible to do so honestly, in a strictly ethical sense, we will admit that some have done so legally. This shows that these men have been enabled to do this only by the many advantages of the institutions of this country, and aided by the protection of the law. Then, do these men owe nothing to the country and to the law? Indeed, they owe much. But as a rule they systematically "dodge" taxes during life, and at death are permitted to make any disposition of their vast possessions that they may desire to order in their will, without any contribution to the government that made possible the accumulation of their vast fortunes. Is it not just and fair that a percentage should go to the government? The people of other countries think so, but we, as usual, are behind.—Dr. C. F. Taylor, in the Medical World.

No. 3084 Buggy. Price $38.30 with leather quarter top.

Deal with the Makers

When you buy a carriage, buggy or harness. Choose from the biggest stock and fullest assortment, and pay only the cost of making, with but one moderate profit added. Our plan of selling direct from the factory insures satisfaction—your money back if you're dissatisfied with your purchase—and enables you to save the dealer's profit.

Our complete illustrated catalogue, showing many styles of high grade vehicles, harness, robes, blankets and horse equipments, with detailed descriptions of each, mailed free. Write for it and learn how cheaply you can buy when the jobber's and dealer's profits are cut off.

THE COLUMBUS CARRIAGE AND HARNESS CO., Columbus, O.

No. 240 Single Strap Buggy Harness. Price $8.15.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O

Sold by Druggists, 75c.
Hall's Family Pills are the bes

Ad Viatorem.

The golden glory of an ideal day
Shines in the East and spreads her mantle toward
The West. Tell me, ye sparkling beams, and ye,
Oh, gentle winds, dost smile as sweetly and
As softly sing, o'er yonder mountain tops,
To cheer the traveler's onward way?
How keen
The inner sight and how far-reaching, thought!
And how in silences, the spirit's ear
Can catch the remotest sounds! I see the bold
Sierras, fixed and eternal as the Cosmic universe; hill upon hill, like
Ossa on Pelion piled; serrated
Crag and mountain pass; white-crested peaks that Pierce the arching heavens; and vales as green as Tawasentha, nestling in their shelt'ring
Arms; and over all, the charm of ever
Varying light and shade.
I hear the cascade's
Furious dash down craggy slopes; the rivulet
Murmuring in dewy dells; the wind's weird
Melody in tasselled pines, now soft and Plaintive as Æolian airs; anon, light as Euterpe's in Hellenic bowers; again,
Resounding through the forest deeps, like
Solemn diapasons in cathedral
Aisles.
Oh, wondrous scene! divinely grand—
Grandly divine! From humblest flower, hid in
The crevice of the rock, to loftiest
Mountain peak, great Nature's God pervades and Animates the whoel. Lowly we bow in Presence of the Infinite!
Vive Viator.

METTIE CRANE NEWTON.

New York City.

Rings and Their Meaning.

It is doubtful whether the origin of the custom of wearing a ring as a symbol of an engagement or marriage has ever been established beyond dispute. It is certain, however, that the custom is an ancient one, for in the Bible may be found several references to rings, and the Christians used the ring as a symbol of marriage in 800.

Regarding the custom of wearing the wedding ring on the most useless finger of the left hand—the third finger—the explanation has been made that the helplessness of that finger is a protection to the ring, as on the weakest finger it is preserved from rough usage. Another reason given is that on the third finger there is a vein leading from the heart, hence the same excuse as that given for shaking hands with the left hand, "nearer the heart."

In olden times, kings and others in authority wore on the ring a seal or image that indicated power, and in the time of Moses the priests wore rings as symbols of office. In the British Museum quaint rings, made of porcelain, which once adorned the poorer class in Egypt, may be seen.

Among the Jews the ring is an important factor in the marriage ceremony, and in Germany the husband and wife exchange wedding rings. The husband is expected to wear his marriage ring constantly. In fact, it would be a difficult matter for a man to re-establish harmony in his home were he discovered to have removed the symbol of marriage from his finger, the inference being that he had been trying to conceal the fact of his marriage.

Queen Victoria possesses many rings, but three of these have a special value, in view of the history connected with them. One is her wedding ring—a narrow gold band. The second is her betrothal ring, a snake made of emeralds, and the third is a diamond ring given to her by Prince Albert when she was a young girl.

Queen Elizabeth, who was noted for her love of jewelry, wore many rings. The Emperor of Germany is another royal personage who has displayed a liking for rings. It is said that on all important occasions the Kaiser will be seen to wear on his left hand a massive gold ring, set with a large, dark stone. The ring is credited with being an heirloom of the Hohenzollern family, and came into the possession of Margraf of Ulrich 'way back in the thirteenth century. After a series of adventures and mishaps the ring became the property of the Kaiser who, although not a superstitious man, is never seen on occasions of state and importance without the ring.

Rings have been fashioned from every material of sufficient strength to be put to such use, including gold, silver, steel, brass, iron, bronze, ivory, jet, earthenware and wire.

Curious instances have been cited where makeshift substitutes for the conventional wedding ring have been utilized during the marriage ceremony. One such instance occurred some time ago in a near-by town, when the ring was missing. Nothing better being available as a substitute, a curtain ring was used, and on still another occasion the ring handle of the church key was utilized. A couple in this state used in such an emergency a ring formed from the outer edge of a coin, and which had been carried by some one present as a curiosity.

A gallant "best man" came to the rescue at a recent wedding, when the ring was not forthcoming at the right time. He drew from his tie the slender stickpin that had been adorning it, and bending the wire into ring shape, handed the improvised wedding ring to the distracted groom.

A horseshoe nail bent to the shape of a ring is said to bring a great deal of luck to the owner, and the lead cramp ring worn six centuries ago has given place to various rings now worn to prevent and cure rheumatism.

Teeth were at one time fashionable for adorning rings, but such grewsome ornaments are no longer sought after. The fashionable women of to-day prefer the more costly jewels.—St. Louis Republic.

"Persevere and prosper." If you take Hood's Sarsaparilla faithfully for scrofula, salt rheum, boils, eruptions, dyspepsia, it will cure you.

The Iron Mountain Shortens its Time to Texas.

Train No. 51 now leaves St. Louis 2:21 P. M., daily, shortens the time by several hours from St. Louis to Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio, Houston and Galveston. Through Pullman Buffet Sleeping Cars will be operated on this train from St. Louis to San Antonio, and reclining chair car service to Dallas and Fort Worth. A delightful feature of this train is the daylight ride along the Mississippi and through the beautiful Arcadia Valley. Time of other trains remains the same excepting train No. 57 for Delta, Columbus, Cairo and Shreveport which now leaves at 8:00 A. M.

ESTEY PIANOS AND ORGANS

Excel in Superior Tone, Perfect Construction and Great Durability.

THE ESTEY CO., 916 OLIVE ST., ST. LOUIS, MO

The Standard of Excellence

The average woman cannot discriminate justly between machines, so far as their mechanical construction is concerned, but she can always wisely judge their work.

ALL THE ESSENTIAL QUALITIES OF A FAMILY SEWING-MACHINE ARE MOST PERFECTLY COMBINED IN . . .

SIMPLICITY— so it can be easily adjusted, and won't get out of order.

STABILITY— so that it will wear the longest with the least repairs.

SPEED— so that it will do the most work with the least effort.

STYLE— so that it will be an ornament to the home.

SINGER WORK IS ALWAYS GOOD WORK.

This is why Singer Machines maintain their supremacy all over the world, making the Singer trade-mark a reliable guarantee of perfection. . . . . .

THE SINGER MANUFACTURING CO.

OFFICES IN EVERY CITY IN THE WORLD.

The Red Box Clew.

J. BRECKENRIDGE ELLIS.

"And my mother is living?" cried Frank, grasping the gentleman's arm, "and you know her?"

"I know her very well."

"Oh, have you come to take me to her?" faltered Frank. "Did God send you here?"

"Yes, little one, he sent us here."

"You have not told me your name, sir; what shall I call you?"

"No matter, child."

"No matter? But oh, yes, it matters everything! I want to know the name of the person who comes to tell me of my mother; I want to know his name so I can remember it forever, and love it next to my mother's name! And you know her? How does she look? Is she —" Frank broke off vaguely; but he understood her.

"You look like her, my dear."

"Do I?" cried Frank, putting her arm about his neck without knowing that she did so. "Oh, do I? And she is good, I know. I have often dreampt of her and always as if she were a queen."

"That's what she is, child; the best woman in the world; the bravest and the tenderest; one of Kentucky's true queens, and I thank God from the depths of my heart that I have found her child, a little princess!" And then both of Frank's arms were about his neck. At this the lady with the heavy veil rose unsteadily to her feet. And she broke into uncontrollable sobs. Mr. Douglas rose abruptly. Frank looked at the strange lady with eyes in which wild, daring thoughts began to gather, and then at the gentleman who looked so strange. "Oh, who are you?" she whispered, as if she were afraid. "Why will you not tell me what I may call yon?" And Mr. Douglas answered in a husky voice, "Call me father!"

At that Frank gave a loud cry, as if she had been struck a blow, and it flashed upon her, as in a brilliant, blinding light, that the lady that he had described as her mother was his wife. "Father! father!" she cried, wildly, as she held out her arms, and though she had never spoken that word before, in addressing any one, it seemed to her the sweetest and most natural word her tongue could pronounce. He made a step toward her, while his eyes burned with impatient love through their gathering tears. But the next moment he stepped back—how much it cost him Frank never knew—and he said, "Your mother first!"

CHAPTER XXII.

And after that—well, neither Frank nor her father or mother could have told just what happened. What did happen seemed to come about all at once, and as if they had nothing to do with it, except to let themselves be moved by a mighty current of joy and love. For Frank was in her mother's arms, and in her father's arms, and on her lap and on his, all at the same time, as it appeared; and they got so entangled that sometimes Frank didn't know which one of them was kissing her till she felt the whiskers. And their tears were mingled together as well as the broken sound of their laughter. When the first ecstasy of their joy had merged into a serene happiness they sank upon their knees with Frank between them, all at the same time, and as if they had agreed to do so! Mr. Douglas lifted his dimmed eyes to return thanks for the restoration of his child. "My dear Father in heaven," he began. Then he remembered how Frank had just called him "father," and he saw God in a different light, somehow—a closer, sweeter, more companionable light. For in all his former prayers, when he addressed him as "father," that word had not meant half so much; it had been almost formal. Now he could say no more, for sobs shook his form. But the deep currents of his heart rushed toward God in surging, irresistible prayer. Presently they rose and seated themselves with the child between, one arm around each of her newfound parents.

"You beautiful mother!" said Frank, giving her a squeeze, "you are just as nice as I dreamed—nicer! Father, too, how big you are and tall! Mother,what white, soft hair you have, and you so young! Father, what heavy eyebrows; I always wished mine had been heavy, too! Oh, mother, what a wonderful foot you have! Why! I believe it is smaller than mine! Put it out, put it out, and let's measure."

"She has the smallest foot in Kentucky," said Mr. Douglas, proudly.

"Oh, my darling," said Mrs. Douglas, "all these years—" her voice broke.

"It's a nice thing to think," said Frank, presently, "that all during those years, during every minute of all those years, God knew everything would turn out all right. He knew we would come together. I expect he was glad when I used to tell him I would have to trust him to bring mamma and papa to me. Don't you?"

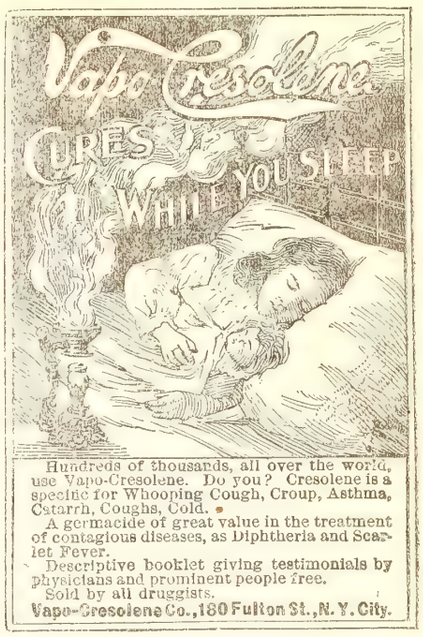
"Such trust must have been very sweet to him," said her father. "Sometimes we—did —not."

"Yes,"said her mother,"there were years—it was at the first—before my hair had turned white, when I thought God had forgotten us."

"And he never had!" cried Frank, contentedly. "You never forgot me, did you? Well, but you had to go to sleep every night and dream and forget. But God doesn't; so I had him all the time, to think of me!" Then she told them briefly the story of her life; how Nance had left her on Mrs. Dew's doorstep; how Mrs. Dew's brother had taken her away, and Nance had again gotten control of her; how Nance had left her before Mr. West's door; and of the years that followed—the compilation of the Latin Grammar. "And it was that grammar," she cried, "that brought you!"

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE TABLETS. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. GROVE'S signature on each box. 25c.



Hundreds of thousands, all over the world, use Vapo-Cresolene. Do you? Cresolene is a specific for Whooping Cough, Croup, Asthma, Catarrh, Coughs, Cold.

A germacide of great value in the treatment of contagious diseases, as Diphtheria and Scarlet Fever.

Descriptive booklet giving testimonials by physicians and prominent people free.

Sold by all druggists.

Vapo-Cresolene Co., 180 Fulton St., N. Y. City.

Church, Peal and Chime Bells, Best Metal.
BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY,
THE E.W. VAN DUZEN CO. Cincinnati, O.

Largest Foundry on Earth making
CHURCH BELLS CHIMES & PEALS
Purest copper and tin only. Terms, etc., free.
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, Baltimore, Md.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS. UNLIKE OTHER BELLS, SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE, OUR FOUNDRY ONLY TEN YEARS OLD.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

500 BICYCLES $3 to $10
all makes, good as new.
NEW 1900 Models, $11 to $20
'98 & '99 Models, high grade, $8 to $13
Great factory sale, direct to rider. We ship anywhere on approval, send us an order.
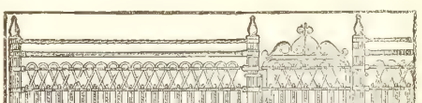
EARN A BICYCLE distributing Catalogues for us. We will give one Rider Agent in each town FREE USE of sample wheel to ride and exhibit.
WRITE AT ONCE for Bargain List and our SPECIAL OFFER. Address Dept. 165H
MEAD CYCLE CO., Chicago.



Kitselman Ornamental Fence.
Excels in strength, beauty and durability. Made of steel and iron. Cheaper than wood. 50 Designs. Catalog free.
KITSELMAN BROS., Box 163 Ridgeville, Ind.

B. & O. S-W.
"ROYAL BLUE SERVICE."
ST. LOUIS,
CINCINNATI,
LOUISVILLE,
COLUMBUS,
PITTSBURG,
WASHINGTON,
BALTIMORE,
PHILADELPHIA,
NEW YORK.

BEST LINE BETWEEN THE EAST AND WEST.

Luxurious Vestibuled Trains, Palatial Ladies' Coaches.
Pullman Drawing Room, Sleeping and Observation Cars.
B. & O. S-W. DINING CARS. Meals Served a la carte at POPULAR PRICES.

For Rates, Maps, Time-Tables or Sleeping Car Space—Call on any Ticket Agent or address

O. P. McCARTY,
General Passenger Agt.,
G. B. WARFEL, Cincinnati, Ohio.
Asst. Gen'l Pass. Ag't, St. Louis, Mo.

Sunday-School.

W. F. RICHARDSON.

JESUS AND JOHN THE BAPTIST.

Very soon after healing the centurion's servant, as recorded in our last lesson, Jesus went down to the city of Nain, accompanied by his disciples and a great multitude of those who had witnessed his mighty deeds. Nain was about 25 miles southwest of Capernaum, and lay on the northern slope of Little Hermon, a beautiful elevation overlooking the historic plain of Jezreel. This portion of the holy land was closely connected with the story of Elijah's wonderful life; and on the southern side of this same Little Hermon was the old city of Shunem, in one of whose homes Elisha had been given a hospitable welcome, which he repaid by restoring to life the darling son of the household. This interesting passage in Old Testament history doubtless recurred with startling force to the people when the Master restored to life the only son of the widow whose funeral procession he met on its way to the tomb. When, in obedience to the voice of Jesus, the young man arose from the bier, and was restored to the arms of his mother, the multitude glorified God and said: "A great prophet is arisen among us;" and, "God hath visited his people."

It was soon after this wonderful event that two of the disciples of John the Baptist came with a message of inquiry to the Master. John had been for six months or more a prisoner of Herod Antipas, confined in the castle of Machærus, or the "Black Castle," on the eastern side of the Dead Sea. His stern rebuke of the licentious king and his even baser wife, Herodias, had brought upon him their undying hatred. The king stood somewhat in awe of the prophet, and did not yet dare to take his life, for the people held him in great honor. Herod, indeed, seems to have often conferred with John, and to have had at times a disposition to release him; but the influence of Herodias, and the sting of the Baptist's rebuke, combined to prevent the liberation of the captive. His confinement was softened somewhat by the admission of his disciples to his cell, and no doubt they often visited him, and sought to comfort his lonely and despairing soul.

These were dark days for this brave servant of God. He had not so much regretted to have his work cease, when that of his Lord was well begun; but it was hard to have to lie in the dungeon and be slowly and surely forgotten. And then the Master did not seem to be so prompt to assume the kingdom as the forerunner had supposed. Why did not Jesus declare himself and take the reins of power in his hands? Surely, after the mighty works he had already wrought, the chosen people were ready to follow him in the struggle for independence. Then, too, since he could work such wonderful deeds, why did he allow his faithful servant, who had so diligently prepared the way for his coming, and so loyally gave way to his superior claims, to lie in prison through the long months, which seemed the longer because of the free and outdoor life the Baptist had always lived? John's disciples were doubtless jealous in behalf of their master. This new Teacher who had overshadowed the rugged prophet—why was he so strangely silent when his faithful friend and kinsman needed him most? Perhaps some such questions were repeated in the ears of John until a doubt arose in his mind whether he might not, after all, have been mistaken in thinking Jesus to be the Messiah. His course had been so different from the one anticipated, and his neglect of his servant so marked, that it seemed at least to warrant an inquiry.

Let us not blame John too much for this moment of weakness. "The soul has its fainting-fits." Elijah will be bold in the presence of Ahab and the false prophets, yet he may flee like a coward from the threats of Jezebel. Savonarola could defy the council of Florence, but his spirit languished in prison, and wavered in its constancy. Jerome of Prague is not less a hero because his brave soul trembled under the hot flame of persecution. To a man of the desert, like John, imprisonment was worse than death. "For the palms of Jericho and the balsams of Engedi, for the springing of the beautiful gazelles amid the mountain solitudes, and the reflection of the moonlight on the mysterious waves of the salt lake, he had nothing now but the chilling damps and cramping fetters of a dungeon and the brutalities of such a jailer as a tetrarch like Antipas would have kept in a fortress like Makor. In that black prison, among its lava streams and basaltic rocks, which was tenanted in reality by far worse demons of human brutality and human vice than the 'goats' and 'satyrs' and doleful creatures believed by Jewish legend to haunt its whole environment, we cannot wonder if the eye of the caged eagle began to film."

But the nature of the question with which he sent his messengers to Jesus almost ennobles his doubt. He does not ask, as a little soul would have surely done, "Why do you not come to my relief?" But, "Art thou he that cometh, or look we for another?" Has my message been a true one? Was my mission faithfully performed? Was my testimony given aright? This implies rather a doubt of himself, than of Christ. The fact that he asks Jesus to settle his doubt shows that he still trusts the absolute integrity of the Lord. He simply fears that he may possibly have made a mistake in proclaiming him as the Messiah. His doubt has no moral delinquency beneath it, as so much of ours has. He wavers not a hair's breadth in his denunciation of the wicked king and queen. Nor does he hold his doubt a secret in his heart, and let it eat away the substance of his faith. He takes it at once to the great Teacher for solution. O, that all who doubt to-day would seek the answer from his lips!

The reply which Jesus sends to the prophet was that of deeds, not words. In the presence of the messengers he ministers to the wants a host of sufferers, and then bids them return and tell John what they have seen and heard. The deeds of mercy and power that Isaiah had said the Messiah should do he had done, and all was crowned by the sweet proclamation of glad tidings to the poor. The answer was sufficient, and the hesitation of the Baptist was swallowed up in confident assurance. Would the church to-day but follow the example of the Master, and show to the world such deeds of mercy and such lives of service as would display the presence of the Master's spirit, it would be better than a thousand wordy arguments. We may not work miracles, but we can exhibit the three better and abiding graces, faith, hope and love.

It is worthy of note in these days when many Christian writers are telling us that there is no especial value in miracles as evidence of Christ's Messiahship, that Jesus himself offered his miracles as evidence, on more than one occasion. While deeds of power, apart from moral purpose in the deed and moral character in the doer may not prove the presence of the divine energy, where they are accompanied always by these, as in the case of Jesus, they have vast value as proof that God was with him.

Sending the messengers back to John with only the gentle rebuke, "Blessed is he whosoever shall none occasion of stumbling in me," who can endure hardship as a good soldier without doubting his commander, Jesus turns to the multitude and pays to the Baptist a splendid tribute. Men too often judge their fellows by their weakest moments. God judges his servants by their normal hours, when the tide of faith rises high, and life's responsibilities are accepted manfully. The Master reminds the multitudes of the days when they went in crowds into the wilderness to hear this servant of Jehovah. They found him in no swaying reed, to bend before every popular breeze. They heard no smooth words from his lips, such as gorgeously clothed courtiers spake obsequiously before their royal masters. They found in him God's prophet, who spoke the Word of the Lord fearlessly to high and low alike. This momentary clouding of his faith does not bespeak him a coward. He is the greatest of the prophets, since his high mission was to usher in the King of Heaven. But there is a higher honor possible to believers in the kingdom which the Messiah is about to establish. They shall be children of God, sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty. Beside this privilege, that of being the forerunner of the Christ loses its superior glory. The highest servant in the household is lower than the least and youngest child. "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the children of God!" With such a message, what haste we should make to belt the earth with Christian missions. How eager we ought to be to take the glad tidings to our brothers and sisters who are still sitting in darkness and in the shadow of death!

*Lesson for April 29—Luke 7:18-28. Parallel passage—Matt. 11:2-11.

The Starvation Plan

Of Treating Dyspepsia and Stomach Troubles is Useless and Unscientific.

The almost certain failure of the starvation cure for dyspepsia has been proven time and again, but even now a course of dieting is generally the first thing recommended for a case of indigestion or any stomach trouble.

Many people with weak digestion as well as some physicians, consider the first step to take in attempting to cure indigestion is to restrict the diet, either by selecting certain foods and rejecting others or to cut down the amount of food eaten to barely enough to keep soul and body together, in other words the starvation plan is by many supposed to be the first essential.

All this is radically wrong. It is foolish and unscientific to recommend dieting to a man already suffering from starvation, because indigestion itself starves every organ, nerve and fibre in the body.

What people with poor digestion most need is abundant nutrition, plenty of good, wholesome, properly cooked food, and something to assist the weak stomach to digest it.

This is exactly the purpose for which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are adapted and the true reason why they cure the worst cases of stomach trouble.

Eat a sufficient amount of wholesome food and after each meal take one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to promptly digest it.

In this way the system is nourished and the overworked stomach rested, because the tablets will digest the food whether the stomach works or not, one grain of the active digestive principle in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets being sufficient to digest 3,000 grains of meat, eggs or other albuminous food

Dr. Harlandson and Dr. Redwell recommend these tablets in all cases of defective digestion, because the pepsin and diastase in them are absolutely free from animal matter and other impurities and being pleasant to the taste are as safe and harmless for the child as for the adult.

All drug stores sell this excellent preparation, and the daily use of them after meals will be of great benefit, not only as an immediate relief, but to permanently build up and invigorate the digestive organs.

CHILDREN'S DAY SERVICES for the Sunday School.
GOLDEN SUNBEAMS music by Gabriel, Thiel and Rosche; words by Laura E. Newell. This service offers exceptional opportunities for decorative effects. The music is particularly bright and sparkling. Price 50c. per doz., $4 per 100. postpaid. Enclose 10c. in stamps for samples of our three latest services for Children's Day.
THE CHURCH CHOIR for May contains Children's Day music for the Choir. Enclose 10c. for sample copy.
GEO. F. ROSCHE & CO.
Chicago, 38 Randolph St. New York, 22 N. William St.

Christian Endeavor.

By Burris A. Jenkins.

TOPIC FOR APRIL 29.

WHAT IS GOD'S DUE?

(Luke 20:19 26.)

Never did any one more effectually silence enemies than did Jesus, when he uttered the saying quoted in our lesson. They thought they had him between the upper and the nether millstone, between Scylla and Charybdis, between two horns of a dilemma, upon one or other of which he surely must be impaled. The Roman power on the one hand, or the Jewish hierarchy on the other, they thought he was sure to offend in his answer to their query: "Is it right to pay tribute to Cæsar?" But his diplomacy as well as his righteousness was unquestionable as he made that famous reply: "Render to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's and to God the things that are God's."

This word is usually quoted with emphasis upon the first clause. It is the duties to the state, to the constituted authorities, citizenship, that it is made to represent. And, indeed, it undoubtely conjoins the duties of Christian citizenship, respect to the law, the desire to enforce it—and the payment of taxes. Would it not be well that the Christian world should hear a word on this matter of tax-paying?

But it is the other clause that is emphasized in our lesson, here. Render to God the things that are God's. This, indeed, was just what the shrewd scribes and Pharisees were not doing. They were seeking to checkmate God's plans, and to thwart his Son, who was doing God's work. Instead of doing this, they ought to render to God—

Assistance. In order to the full carrying out of his purposes God needs the assistance of men. Get on God's side. One man with God is a majority. It is a terrible thing to be against God. Render to him also.

Righteousness. It is this which exalteth a nation and strengtheneth an individual. Those that hunger and thirst for righteousness, though they may fail of it at times, shall be filled. One's own secret righteousness when none is by, never doing when alone what would not be right when others are near; and one's public righteousness, living in the presence of men, so standing on public questions that goodness and truth are exalted—this is the righteousness we owe.

Piety is another due of God. Piety, that much-abused, sweet word. That word in which there is little of cant and hypocrisy and so much of humility and truth. Piety, that word as guileless as Nathanael when, under the fig tree he was alone with God and the unseen eye of Christ. Piety, that word that has been like sweet bells jangled and out of tune in the mouths of godless or of Pharisees. Because a word has been abused is no reason why it should be thrown overboard altogether with the ideas it contains. There is much in many of the old phrases which have passed into cant, much that is still deep with meaning. "Get right with God," shouts the exhorter; and there never was a more imperative word spoken in the world. "Come to Jesus," has passed into derision; but it has not passed out of the cathedral of truth into desuetude. Piety, like these other words, could be rescued from any taint of hypocrisy and cant into a newness of life. Piety includes—

Prayer. We cannot avoid the debt of prayer. Duty, the true Christian heart will not seek to avoid it. Prayer will be spontaneous, welling up from to everlasting life. Praise to God for sunshine and blue skies, in this charming April weather; thankfulness for abounding life; and yearning for the water brooks of communion with him, must all express itself in utterance or silence.

Many things more we owe to God. Tell, Endeavorers, in this meeting, what you in particular owe. The acknowledgment of a debt is going far towards payment.

University of Indianapolis.

GOLD DUST
The Best
Washing Powder.
Ask Your Laundress to Try It.

Bethany Reading Courses.

HOW TO STUDY THE BIBLE.

By Herbert L. Willett, Director.

There can be no doubt that in order to study the Bible one must have a plan of work. No haphazard and happy-go-lucky Bible reading ever leads to any results. The Christian Endeavor pledge is not satisfied with this kind of random observance. It is scarcely better than an entire failure. The plan must be chosen with care. It may be the reading of the sidelights upon the Sunday-school lesson, though these, in most cases, lack a continuity which gives them special value. In the case of the members of the Christian Endeavor Society the plan of following some regularly outlined scheme of biblical study prevails, and this the Bethany Reading Courses seek to accomplish among the Disciples of Christ. This plan must be followed consecutively. You must plan your work and then work your plan. No careless and indifferent method of procedure will accomplish anything with even the best plan. One ought not to leave his readings from day to day, thinking that at the week's end or month's end he can catch up. This is always a futile endeavor.

Directly connected with this consecutive reading is another feature which grows out of it, namely, a thoughtful consideration of that which is read. It is not the mere getting over or through the passage of Scripture selected, but the careful consideration; that is to say, a careful study of the words and their meaning. The first requisite is getting the situation, by which is meant a careful reflection upon the conditions out of which the words proceeded when they were first uttered. Alexander Campbell was accustomed to insist upon several questions as a preparation for the comprehension of every Scripture: Who is speaking? To whom is he speaking? In what age, under what circumstances, and for what purpose is he speaking? After all these questions have been asked and answered satisfactorily, as they come to be asked almost automatically, if one has due understanding of the passage he is reading, there will come the final question: What is the value or message of this Scripture to me? Only when the other questions have been considered can this question find a place. Those who study the Bible purely for its practical value usually miss the real meaning of that which they study, because they do not consider its original purpose and audience.

Then comes the question of helps for the study of the Bible. It goes without saying that the Revised Version of the entire Bible will be used whenever this is possible. There may be cases in which one cannot have access to any other version than the authorized. There may be those who have so long used the King James Version that any other seems strange and difficult to become acquainted with. With elderly people this is a valid excuse, but no young person, whose Bible study is yet largely before him, should fail to avail himself of the great help afforded by the Revised Version.

Then, if he is pursuing the Bethany Reading Courses, he will, of course, use the handbook which deals with the particular course to which he is devoting himself. This is the purpose of the handbooks—not to exhaust the subject, but to outline it in the briefest and simplest way, so that one shall be able to secure a knowledge of the important feature of the theme, and then work out from that point for one's self. Meantime, other helps should be used, in so far as they are within one's reach. If one is able to buy some books, these should be purchased with care and discrimination. Not all biblical commentaries are worth buying. Such a set of commentaries as the Cambridge Bible for Schools and Colleges perhaps approaches the nearest uniform value. Then other books will be commended by such writers as one may confidently trust, and especially the Christian journals should be watched both for notices of books and articles upon a given subject.

A journal devoted exclusively to biblical themes is also valuable if one can afford to take it. Such a magazine as the Biblical World, published in Hyde Park, Chicago, gives its entire monthly space to subjects interesting to Sunday-schools or Bible students, and is well-nigh invaluable as a medium of communication with all that is being done in these lines. It costs two dollars a year. Other similar journals are published.

The object of all this study is not the acquisition of information alone, though this has value, but it is the right appreciation of the Bible as the greatest of all books, the divine text-book, the revelation of God's life in terms of human life and the means by which we may gain such knowledge of the Christ and his work as will make us wise unto salvation by faith in him.

Free Trial Lesson

In Bible course by mail. Take this course right at home. Diploma and degree when you finish. Terms only $1.00 per month. Write to Prof. C. J. Burton, Christian University, Canton, Mo.

THE WONDERFUL VAPOR BATH.

Invention of an Ohioan that Guarantees Perfect Health, Strength and Beauty to Every User, and Cures Without Drugs, All Nervous Diseases, Rheumatism, La Grippe, Neuralgia, Blood and Kidney Troubles, Weakness, and the Most Obstinate Diseases, by Nature's Methods of Steaming the Poisons out of the System.

Ministers and Those Who Have Used It Declare It To Be The Most Remarkable Invigorant Ever Produced, Better Than Any Treatment At Hot Springs, Sanitariums or Health Resorts.

38,478 "Quaker" Cabinets Sold Last Month

A genius of the Queen City has placed on the market a Vapor Bath Cabinet that has proven a blessing to every man, woman or child who has used it.

Our recent investigation of this remarkable invention was so very satisfactory we have no hesitancy in endorsing the same as just what all our readers need.

It is an air-tight inclosure, in which one comfortably rests on a chair, and with only the head outside enjoys at home, for 3 cents each, all the marvelous cleansing, curative and invigorating effects of the famous Turkish Bath, Hot Vapor, of Medicated Bath, with no possibility of taking cold afterwards, or in any way weakening the system.

Hundreds of well-known physicians have given up their practice to sell this Cabinet—such eminent men as Emerson McKay, Detroit, who has already sold 700, and John C. Wright, Chicago, who sold 125 last month.

Thousands of remarkable letters have been written the makers from users, some of which, referring to

RHEUMATISM, LA GRIPPE, KIDNEY TROUBLES,

will be interesting to those who suffer from these dread maladies. W. L. Brown, Oxford, O., writes: "My father was down in bed for months with rheumatism; this Cabinet did him more good than $50 worth of drugs." G. M. Lafferty, Covington, Ky., writes: "Was compelled to quit business a year ago, being prostrated with rheumatism and kidney troubles, when your Cabinet came. Two weeks' use cured me; I have never had a twinge since." Rev. Geo. H. Hudson, Okemos, Mich., says: "I gave up my pastorate on account of nervous prostration and lung troubles; my editor so highly recommended your Cabinet, I tried it; from that day I have steadily grown better; am now well; nervousness gone; lungs strong; am a new man." Mrs. Ober, No. 994 Broad St., Columbus, O., writes: "It is grand for curing colds, la grippe, inflammation, aches, pains; it cured my uncle of neuralgia and sleeplessness with which he had long suffered. A neighbor cured herself of la grippe in one night, her little girl of measles, her son of croup. Another neighbor cured eczema of many years' standing." Hon. A. B. Strickland, of Bloomington, writes that the Cabinet did him more good than two years' doctoring, entirely cured him of catarrh, gravel, kidney trouble and dropsy, with which he had long been afflicted.

HUNDREDS OF MINISTERS

write, praising this Cabinet. Rev. H. C. Roernaes, Everett, Kan., says: "It's a blessing; made me full of life and vigor; should be in use in every family." Rev. J. C. Richardson, N. Fifth St., Roxbury, Mass., was greatly benefited by its use, and recommends it highly, as also does Prof. R. E. P. Kline, of Ottawa University, who says: "I find it a great benefit. No Christian should be without it." Hon. V. C. Hay, St. Joe, Mo., writes: "Physicians gave me up to die; was persuaded by friends to try this Cabinet, and it cured me. I can not praise it enough." Rev. Baker Smith, D. D., Fairmont, N J., says: "Your Cabinet rids the body of aches and pain, and as cleanliness is next to godliness, it merits high recommendation."

Congressman John J. Lentz, Mrs. Kendricks, Prin. of Vassar College; John T. Brown, Editor "Christian Guide;" Rev. C. M. Keith, Editor "Holiness Advocate," as well as hundreds of clergymen, bankers, governors, physicians and influential people, recommend it highly.

IT PREVENTS DISEASE, and physcians are unanimous in claiming that colds, la grippe, fevers, smallpox consumption, kidney trouble, Bright's disease, cancer—in fact, such marvelous eliminative power has this Cabinet that no disease can gain a foothold in your body if you take these hot Thermal Baths weekly. Scientific reasons are brought out in a very instructive little book, issued by the makers. To this Cabinet has marvelous power. Dr. Shepard, of Brooklyn, states that he has never failed to draw out the deadly poison of snake bites, hydrophobia, blood poison, etc., by this Vapor Bath, proving that it is the most wonderful blood purifier known. If people, instead of filling their systems with more poisons by taking drugs and nostrums, would get into a Vapor Bath Cabinet and steam out these poisons, and assist nature to act, they would have pure blood, and a skin as clear and smooth as the most fastidious could desire.

CURE BLOOD AND SKIN DISEASES

THE IMPORTANT FEATURE of this Cabinet is that it gives a hot vapor bath that opens the millions of pores all over the body, stimulating the sweat glands, drawing out all the impure salts, acids and effete matter, which, if retained, overwork the heart, kidneys, lungs, and cause disease, debility and sluggishness. Astonishing is the improvement in health, feeling and complexion. The first bath makes you feel like a new being; 10 years younger.

With the Cabinet, if desired, is a

HEAD AND COMPLEXION STEAMER,

in which the face, head and neck are given the same vapor treatment as the body, producing the most wonderful results; removes pimples, blackheads, skin eruptions, cures Catarrh, Asthma and Bronchitis.

O. C. Smith, Mt. Healthy, O., writes: "Since using this Cabinet my Catarrh, Asthma and Hay Fever, with which I have been afflicted since childhood, has never returned. Worth $1,000 to me. I have sold hundreds of these Cabinets. Every one was delighted. My wife finds it excellent for her ills."

Whatever

WILL HASTEN PERSPIRATION

every one knows is beneficial, but other methods are crude and insignificant, when compared to the convenient and marvelous curative power of this Cabinet, known as the new 1902 style

SQUARE QUAKER FOLDING THERMAL

Bath Cabinet. We find it to be a genuine Cabinet, with a real door, opening wide as shown in cut. When closed it is air-tight; handsomely made of best, most durable, water-proof goods, rubber lined. A heavy steel frame supports it, making it a strong and substantial bathroom within itself. It has top curtains; in fact, all the latest improvements.

The makers furnish an excellent stove with each Cabinet, also valuable recipes and formulas for medicated baths and ailments, as well as plain directions. It folds flat in 1 inch space, when not in use; easily carried; weighs but 10 pounds.

People don't need bathrooms, as this Cabinet may be used in any room, and bath tubs have been discarded since this invention, as it gives a far better bath for all cleansing purposes than soap and water. For the sick room its advantages are at once apparent. There have been on the market, but they were unsatisfactory; inconvenient, simply cheap, flimsy affairs.

SO-CALLED CABINETS

After investigation we can say the Quaker Cabinet made by the Cincinnati firm is the only practical article of its kind, and will last for years. It seems to satisfy and delight every user, and the MAKERS GUARANTEE RESULTS.

They assert positively, and their statements are backed by a vast amount of testimony from persons of influence, that this Cabinet will cure Nervous Troubles, Debility, Purify the Blood, Beautify the Skin and Cure Rheumatism. (They offer $50.00 reward for a case not relieved.) Cures the most obstinate cases of Women's Troubles, La Grippe, Sleeplessness, Neuralgia, Malaria, Headaches, Obesity, Gout, Sciatica, Eczema, Scrofula, Piles, Dropsy Blood and Skin Diseases, Liver and Kidney Troubles. It will

CURE THE WORST COLD

with one bath, breaks up all symptoms of La Grippe, Fevers, Pneumonia, Consumption, Asthma, and is really a household necessity. Gives the most known, and all those enjoying health should use it at least once or twice a week, for its great value is its marvelous power to draw out of the system all impurities that cause disease, and for this reason is truly a God-send to all humanity.

CLEANSING AND REFRESHING BATH

HOW TO GET ONE.

All our readers who want to enjoy perfect health, prevent disease and are afflicted, should have one of these remarkable Cabinets. The price is wonderfully low. Space prevents a detailed description, but it will bear out the most exacting demand for durability and curative properties.

Write The World Mfg. Co., 2173 World Building, Cincinnati, O., and ask them to send you their pamphlets describing this invention. The price is wonderfully low, only $5.00, complete, with heater, directions and formulas. Head Attachment, if desired, $1.00 extra, and it is indeed difficult to imagine where one could invest that amount of money in anything else that guarantees so much health, strength and vigor.

Write to-day for full information; or, better still, order a Cabinet: you won't be disappointed, as the makers guarantee every Cabinet, and agree to refund your money after 30 days' use if not just as represented.

We know them to do as they agree. They are reliable and responsible; capital, $100,000.00.

The Cabinet is just as represented, and will be shipped promptly. You can remit safely by express, P. O. money order, bank draft, or certified check.

Don't fail to send for booklet, anyway.

THE CABINET IS A WONDERFUL SELLER

for agents, and the firm offers special inducement to both men and women upon requst, and to our knowledge many are making from $100 to $150 every month, and expenses.

All the Fault of a Bell.

Judge. Have you anything to say before the sentence is passed?

Burglar. Yes'r; if I'd a know'd that spinster lady had a dinner bell under 'er piller things 'd a come out diff'rnt.

Running No Risk.

Fudd. What! reading that novel over again? You have read it a dozen times at least.

Dudd. That's why I am reading it again. I run no risk. I know it is a good story.

In Another Grade.

Churchby. Does Mr. Thirdly belong to the advanced school of thought?

Layman. Well, I have heard him but once; then he impressed me as belonging to the kindergarten.

Marriages.

ADAMS—BURGE.—Married, at the home of the bride's parents, near Solon, in Johnson County, Iowa, March 31st, at high noon, Dr. Albertus J. Burge to Miss Georgia Adams; T. J. Dow officiating. Dr. and Mrs. Burge will go abroad for a year for study. They will visit Leipsic, Berlin, and Vienna, where the Doctor will pursue special lines of study in the hospitals. They are both members of the Christian Church and faithful.

BANNISTER—CALVERT.—Married, at the St. Charles Hotel, Savannah, Mo., April 4th, 1900, Luther H. Bannister and Effie Calvert, both of Rea, Mo.; A. R. Hunt officiating.

JONES—CLEAR.—Married, April 4th, at the home of the bride's parents, near Seneca, Kansas, Mr. Wm. M. Jones and Miss Lula G. Clear; by F. H. Bentley.

Obituaries.

DAVIS.

Flint T. Davis, the subject of this sketch, was born in Davis County, Mo., on Dec. 2nd, 1854, and died at Gallatin, Mo., on April 3rd, 1900, in his 46th year. He was called from earth very suddenly. He retired about 10 o'clock, saying to his wife: "Call me early, as I have a big day's work before me." But before the call of his faithful wife came, a higher call had taken him from time to eternity. He united with the Christian Church when he was 16 years of age, and was a faithful member to the day of his death, serving for some time as a member of the official board. He has two brothers, who are preachers in the Christian Church. He leaves a wife and seven children, two brothers and four sisters to mourn his departure. Two of his children preceded him to the other shore. Funeral services were conducted by the writer in the Christian Church here and also at Clear Creek where the body was interred. H. A. KERR.

HARMAN.

Theodocia, daughter of James and Sarah Carver, was born in Fayette County, Ky., May 2nd, 1819. In early life she removed with her parents to Randolph County, Mo. In 1842 she was married to Tobias G. Newton. To this union one child was born. Being left a widow she was again married to Anthony Harman. To this union six children were born, all of whom are living and were present at her funeral. She departed this life April 2nd, 1900, after a short illness, aged 80 years and 11 months. While yet young she gave her life to the Master and always lived a consistent Christian life. The funeral was preached by the writer in the Union Chapel, near her home, and the remains were laid to rest by the side of her second husband in the Harman Cemetery.

T. A. HALL.

Oxford, Ind.

HASTINGS.

Martha A. (Graham) Hastings was born in Indiana February 14, 1827; died in Milton, Oregon, February 23, 1900. In 1844 she moved from Kentucky to Iowa. In 1850 she married Jacob P. Hastings. In 1853 her husband baptized her. In 1862 the family came to Walla Walla Valley. She then said to her husband: "If you can do any good preaching, we will live on what I and the children can make on the place." He did preach without remuneration. Her husband and seven children survive her. Her last words were: "Now I begin to see just how it is." W. L. MCCOLLOUGH.

HURT.

Monday morning, March 17, 1900, the many friends of Prof. William P. Hurt were startled to hear the sad news of his death at his home in Columbia, Mo. He had been complaining of a cold for a day or two, and remarked that he could sleep better sitting up in his chair, and had kept that way for a few nights. Monday morning his son-in-law, Ed G. Davis, with whom he was living, went into his room to see if he cared for his breakfast; he seemed to be sleeping, and did not disturb him. In a few moments he again entered the room and found Mr. Hurt had passed away apparently without a struggle. He died sitting in his chair, attired in his clothing, with his glasses on, and a book, "In His Steps," near him, which he had been reading. Thus passed away one of Columbia's old and honored citizens. Prof. Hurt was born in Montgomery county, Ky., Nov. 22, 1824. At the age of 18 he began teaching school in Clark county, Ky. In 1846 he enlisted in the Mexican war, in Company I, Second Regiment, Kentucky Volunteers; was in the battle of Buena Vista. In 1847 he was mustered out of service, returned home and resumed teaching. He was married in 1849 to Miss Kitty Bruton. They had seven children; two are living, Mrs. Fannie Lee Davis, wife of Ed G. Davis, and a son, William Hurt. He taught mathematics in Christian College for a number of years. He was also a partner with Pres. Rogers from 1871 to 1876. In 1878 he was associated with Pres. Bryant; at the close of the collegiate year he retired from school work. Prof. Hurt was an elder in the Christian Church for a number of years, also a trustee of Christian College. In early life he became a Christian and to the day of his death was an active, earnest, consistent member of the Christian Church. No one ever called in question his loyalty to Christ and the church. He needs no words of praise; his life, unstained and above reproach, speaks for itself. The Lord called and he is at rest. After an appropriate service at the Christian Church Tuesday afternoon, conducted by Elder C. H. Winders, his remains were laid to rest in the Columbia Cemetery to await the resurrection of the just.

NULL.

Sister Ellen Stroup Null, who departed this life recently at her home at Hematite, Mo., was born October 26, 1826. She was married to John W. Null, December 5, 1844, to whom she proved a faithful wife until her decease. She united with the Christian Church at Hematite, Mo, about the year 1870. She was a faithful and exemplary member of that congregation until the time she was called home. She and her husband were pillars of the church, and their home was a hospitable one where the preacher always found a welcome. Our sympathies are extended to the bereaved family in their loss, but they have the comfort of knowing that she is at rest forever. G.

SOLOMON.

Bro. Dempsey Noble Solomon was born in Kentucky January 11th, 1821, and died at Palmyra, Ill., on Sunday, March 25th, 1900. He came to Illinois in 1825 and located near Palmyra in 1827. In 1854 he moved to where the village of Palmyra now stands; he started its first store and in 1855 laid out the village in which he has since resided. On June 4th, 1846, he was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth C. Newell, who shared with him the joys and burdens of life as a faithful helpmeet till her death on June 10th, 1892, leaving as the fruit of their union two sons, George W., of St. Louis, and Charles D., of Palmyra, Ill., and five daughters, Mrs. Mary J. Ridgway, Mrs. Sarah A. Martin and Mrs. Carrie J. Mahan, of Palmyra; Mrs. Salome Wilson, of Lincoln, Ill., and Mrs. Minnie Thomas, of Gillespie, Ill. Bro. Solomon united with the Christian Church in 1867, and in the building of the church, soon after, at Palmyra was its chief contributor and supporter. He was the local agent of the Christian and CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST for about thirty years, and was an earnest and devoted Christian to his death. He was energetic and faithful in business and acquired considerable wealth. On September 7th, 1894, he married Mrs. Martha Hulse, who survives as his widow and resides among us. By his will he left one thousand dollars to the church trustees, the income of which is to be used in the support of a pastor for the church at Palmyra. He was prominent in the church and the political and business world for a generation and leaves a name worthy of honor and emulation. He was for about a half century a member of the Masonic brotherhood, who honored him with the beautiful and impressive ritualistic service of the order in his burial. In him we have lost a pillar to the church, a bulwark of social order, a patriot to the state and an earnest, faithful advocate for Christ.

J. B. S.

WREN.

Washington Wren was born in Jefferson County Ill., January 12th, 1820, and died at his home Savannah, Mo., April 3rd, 1900. Was married to Elizabeth J. Payne, December 17th, 1848. Of this union two sons were born, both of whom, with their mother, survive him. He came to Savannah in 1869, where he lived till death. Funeral at the Christian Church, under the auspices of the I. O. O. F. Interment in home cemetery.

A. R. HUNT.

VITALITY low, debilitated or exhausted, cured by Dr. Kline's Invigorating Tonic. FREE $1. Trial Bottle containing 2 weeks' treatment. Dr. Kline's Institute, 931 Arch Street, Philadelphia. Founded 1871.

For Ladies

One Full-sized $5 Package of Dr. Mary Lock's Wonderful Home Treatment Mailed Free.

Cures every form of Female Weakness. The celebrated lady specialists have decided for a short time to send free by mail, one full sized $5.00 treatment to every suffering woman in order to quickly introduce their most wonderful remedy in every city, town and hamlet in the U. S. They could not afford to do this only that they expect after you are cured you will recommend the remedy to suffering friends who will gladly order the treatment and in this way they will be amply rewarded for making this most liberal free offer. Send your name and address to Dr. Mary Lock Co., 334 Englewood Station, Chicago, Ill., for a free $5.00 package and be quickly cured in the privacy of your own home. It means health and happiness and costs you nothing to try. Write to-day and package will be sent by return mail. Remember, this is not a patent medicine but a full three course treatment.

AMERICA'S GREATEST LADY SPECIALISTS.

ALVERD

Franklin E. Alverd was born in Northern Ohio, Jan. 24, 1846; died in Rooks County, Kansas, March 22, 1900. He enlisted in '61 at Springfield, Illinois, in the 95th Ill. Infantry. After the war he moved with his folks to Taylor County, Iowa. Here he was married, in '68, to Mary F. Lewis. To this union were born two children; the wife and one child preceded him to the better land. On Feb. 2, 1880, he was again married, to Mrs. Mary F. Morris, who was his companion up to the time of his death. He has lived in Rooks County and been an active worker in the Green Mound Church since '81 and was one of its officers at the time of his death. He was a man loved and highly esteemed by all. The funeral services were conducted by the writer. W. H. VALLETTE.

Stockton, Kansas.

WOOLAM.

Mrs. Mary Woolam died at her home, St. Louis, Mo., March 27, 1900. Her maiden name was Miss Mary Stiter. She was born in Marion County, Mo., March 30, 1830. She leaves three sons and one daughter to mourn her departure. For nearly four years she had been almost an invalid, but through it all had had a happy and cheerful spirit. Her presence was like a benediction. She had been a devoted member of the Christian Church for more than 40 years. When the Master called her home, she was in the fellowship of the Fourth Church, of this city. Funeral services were conducted by Bro. Bryan, of Montgomery City, and the writer. Interment was made near the old home in Montgomery County, Mo.

St. Louis, Mo. E. T. MCFARLAND.

"Of a Good Beginning cometh a good end." When you take Hood's Sarsaparilla to purify your blood you are making a good beginning, and the good end will be health and happiness. It never disappoints.

Sick headache is cured by Hood's Pills. 25c.

Special Rates to New York via B. and O. S-W. R. R.

For Ecumenical Conference of Missions, held April 21st to May 1st, rate of $28.10 for the round trip from St. Louis. Three Daily Through Trains, Sleeping and Dining Cars. Stop-over at Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia. Rate open to all persons attending the meeting. Fu l particulars by addressing

JNO. P. ROGERMAN, T. P. A., B. & O. S-W. R. R. Dallas, Tex.

A. C. GOODRICH, T. P. A., B. & O. S-W. R. R. Kansas City, Mo.

G. B. WARFEL, A. G. P. A., B. & O. S-W. R. R., St. Louis, Mo.

A PURE GRAPE CREAM OF TARTAR POWDER
NO ALUM - NO AMMONIA

·DR·
PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

Superior to all others in purity, richness and leavening strength.
Highest Honors, World's Fair
Gold Medal, Midwinter Fair

Carbondale Church, Illinois.

Southern Illinois has many churches of our people which are old enough to be strong, influential churches. The Carbondale Christian Church is one of these old churches. But she is neither strong nor energetic in Christian activity. Many churches flourish for a time and then lose their power, and cease to be useful in the community. But it seems strange that one of our churches, with the grand plea that we make, and located favorably, should lose its energy and usefulness. But such is the case in more than one community, as we know. Southern Illinois is not the only field in which such sad occurrences are to be found. Some churches have been robbed of their power and usefulness by the removal of the most of their members. In such instances the loss is a gain to some other locality. But in cases of spiritual decay the loss is without any visible compensation to the immediate community, or to the brotherhood at large. It becomes an irreparable loss, besides creating a local prejudice against said church.

I have recently spent a few days at Carbondale under the direction of our State Board of Missions. It is known to some of the readers of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST that the Carbondale Church has not prospered during the past few years. It is apparent to all who know what Carbondale is that we ought to have a strong, efficient church there. Carbondale is the seat of the Southern Illinois Normal University, and is a growing center. Four or five hundred young men and women from Southern Illinois are at this school the greater part of every year and among these a number of our own members. A good church at Carbondale is an absolute necessity.

It is not necessary to enter into a discussion here of the causes which have combined to rob the Carbondale church of her power and prestige. Suffice it to say that the church there has been, for some time, wholly incapable of wielding the needed influence in such an educational center. The church is weak and struggling in the throes of disorganization and uncertainty; and meeting in an out-of-date old house located in the most uninviting part of the city. They have had no regular preacher for about a year and no one who has had time to give to the care of the flock. It is a marvel that they are not dead and buried. That they are alive is a proof that they have good material out of which an influential church can be organized. This was demonstrated during my recent visit.

They have two members who are teachers in the University, Bros. Smith and Kirk. Bro. Smith, to his praise, has kept the organization from becoming extinct. Bro. W. S. Errett lives there, but is not active in the ministry as he once was. There are near one hundred members in and around Carbondale who could be rallied to the work, and many of these are good material out of which a good church will grow if the right man is secured to lead them. They are intelligent, and I believe are willing to take up the work and follow the Savior in doing his will.

The state board is trying to find a suitable man for this field. So it will be a loss of time and a worry to the Carbondale brethren for any one to address the church there concerning the pastorate. The field has been canvassed and its needs are known to the board, as also the man they want. We hope to have a good man located there before the summer is over.

J. H. SMART.

Centralia, Ill.

A New Church for Christian Colony.

I have just acknowledged a letter from Brother R. W. Ballah, St. Thomas, Ont., which reads: "It is my pleasant duty to inform you that at our recent meeting the board of co-operation granted one hundred dollars ($100) to the White Fish River Church, Christian Colony, Ont. Wish you success in the work of the Lord."

One hundred dollars is amply sufficient to enable the colony to dedicate their church free from debt. Several of the members of the colony have offered to donate the land, the timber for the building and six days' work. The building, however, will be located in the center of the colony. The entire community is alive, building houses and preparing for gardens and crops. There is a rush and a push on the part of every one. Some day in the near future forty or fifty men will be called together and the building will go up like magic. For the present services are being held at Beaver Mine. Bro. W. E. Reeves, who came three weeks ago from Denison, Kan., preaches. Next month Bro. I. W. Lowan, of Winamac, Ind., will arrive. It is only in these Christian colonies, where people gather from all parts of the continent and England, that true zeal and brotherly love is found. Bro. A. O. Pasley, from Iowa, walked last Lord's day six miles to attend the services. His wife is with him in this work.

DRUNKENNESS CURED.

An eminent St. Louis physician has given a positive answer to the oft asked question, is drunkenness a disease, or is it simply a temptation that cannot be resisted by a vast number of the human race? The physician in question is Dr. Ozias Paquin, who for years has been a practicing physician in the City of St. Louis. He has answered this question by taking five of the worst drunkards that could be found and cured them of all further appetite for intoxicating drinks. The five cases were all beyond middle age and they had sunk into the deepest pit of drunkenness, with the odor of drink about them so obnoxious that it was almost impossible to stand within speaking distance. He not only cured them of all desire for intoxicating drink, but at the same time placed upon their cheeks the flush of health and into their eyes the light of happiness, and took from their person the odor of whiskey. It was almost a miracle, for he had raised five cases from degradation into the sunshine of health and happiness. Dr. Paquin has cured hundreds of patients who were relapses from other treatments, and in every instance he cured these patients, and they have remained cured for months and years. It can therefore be said that the Paquin Treatment is a permanent cure, and not a temporary one, for the patient never relapses to his former condition. We know of no more humane work being done at the present time than that which Dr. Paquin is doing, and it is the duty of every reader to assist Dr. Ozias Paquin in his noble work, and if any reader has brother, sister, husband, father or friend in whose system lurks the disease of drunkenness, he shou'd at once send their name to Dr. Paquin or see that they either visit or place themselves in communication with the Ozias Paquin Immune Co. Suite 1113 Chemical Bldg., St. Louis. The reader that does this will certainly be doing a christian act, for no matter how hopeless the case may seem, and no matter how many other treatments have unsuccessfully been tried, the method known as Ozias Paquin Treatment will perfect a cure, dispelling all desire for drink, and at the same time will place the constitution in a robust and healthy condition.

A letter of recent date from Sister Richardson who came with her husband and children from Doublin, Texas, writes regarding her Sunday school class in the colony in Burriss Township on Rainy River: "We have an interesting Sunday school. I have nine enrolled in the intermediate class, of which I have the honor of acting the part of a teacher. All of them are Christians, seven of them becoming Christians since the organization of the Sunday-school."

We wish to build the first Church of Christ in the Slate River Colony in May or June. Bro. I. N. Babcock, from Erie, Ill., has arrrived with a company of men, and they are building houses. Six car loads of effects and the families will arrive at once. Sister C. E. Babcock will be the preacher of this colony. It will require more money to build a church in this colony than in the other because of the want of proper building material which cannot be donated. One sister in Ontario carried the Christian Messenger to the woman's meeting and read one of my articles about "One Hundred Dollars for a Church." She said: "I will give $10." Another lady said: "I will give $3. I wish the Eastern churches to assist in this work. We want at least $100 more for this church. Every church planted in this great field will be self-supporting from the start, free from debt and missionary in spirit.

A. A. BURRISS.

Port Arthur, Ont.

What Lieut. Peary Says:

An interesting item appears in McClure's Magazine for January, 1900, in the report of Lieutenant Robert E. Peary, U. S. N, in which he tells of a visit in January, 1899, to Greely's Old Camp at Fort Conger, established at the time of General Greely's Polar Expedition in 1881-83, 18 years ago. Lieutenant Peary, in speaking of certain supplies found in the old deserted camp says: "After eighteen years a case of Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk was as good as ever." This speaks emphatically, and of course impartially, regarding the merits of this widely celebrated brand of condensed milk.

Has Eight Colleges.

Prof. J. F. Draughon, who is well known in the Business College work, will on May 1st open a well-equipped Business College in Montgomery, Ala. Prof. Draughon already has flourishing Business Colleges established at Nashville, St. Louis, Savannah, Little Rock, Fort Worth, Galveston and Shreveport. See his ad elsewhere in this issue, and write for a catalogue at either place.

Try YOUNG'S MONTHLY ROSES
They Bloom the Entire Summer.
Our FOREST PARK COLLECTION contains 13 different varieties, ALL HARDY and vigorous growers:
2 Year old, 50 cents each; 13 for $5.00.
1 Year old, 25 cents each; 13 for 2.50.
FLOWER SEEDS, Our Popular Collection.
13 Varieties, that will bloom the entire summer, 25c.
NASTURTIUM, 8 pkgs., all distinct colors.....25c.
Young's
Illustrated CATALOGUE FREE. Gives practical information for growing the BEST kinds of Vegetables, Fruits and Flowers.
1403 OLIVE ST., ST. LOUIS, MO

THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

A WEEKLY FAMILY AND RELIGIOUS JOURNAL.

Vol. xxxvii April 26, 1900 No. 17

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:

Current Events....515
Another Diagnosis....516
The Paris Exposition and Northern Europe....517
Do We Realize?....517
America Ripe for Our Plea....518
Questions and Answers....518
Editor's Easy Chair....519

ORIGINAL CONTRIBUTIONS:

The Relation of Pastor and Church.—N. J. Aylsworth....520
The Personalness of God.—Joseph Fort Newton....521
Do We Lack Spirituality?—T. H. Blenus.521
The Spiritual Side of Our Plea.—A. B. Jones....522

CORRESPONDENCE:

English Topics....527
New York Letter....528
Letter from Ephesus....528
B. B. Tyler's Letter....529
Kansas City Letter....529
Texas Letter....530
America and the Christian Church....531

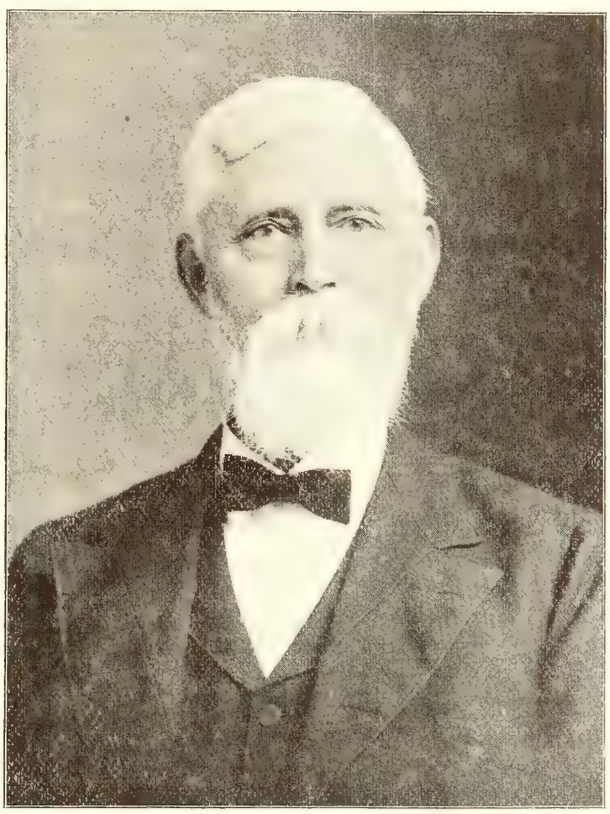
FAMILY CIRCLE:

Alone With God (poem)....536
The Lost Emigrants....536
The Old Hymns (poem)....538
A Reply....538
"I was a Stranger"....538

MISCELLANEOUS:

Our Budget....523
Personal Mention....526
Missionary....532
Evangelistic....535
With the Children....540
Sunday-school....541
Christian Endeavor....542
Bethany Reading Courses....542
Announcements....544

Subscription $1.50



N. J. AYLSWORTH.

(SEE PAGE 526)

PUBLISHED BY

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY

1522 LOCUST ST., ST. LOUIS

THE
Christian - Evangelist.

J. H. GARRISON, Editor.
W. W. HOPKINS, W. E. GARRISON,
Assistant Editors.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTIONS:

Single subscriptions, new or old ..... $1.50 each
Ministers ..... 1.00 "

CLUB RATES.

25 or more copies ..... $1.00 each

All subscriptions payable in advance. Label shows the month up to the first day of which your subscription is paid. If an earlier date than the present is shown, you are in arrears. Paper will be discontinued at end of time paid for if express orders to that effect accompany payment of subscription. Arrears should be paid when discontinuance is ordered.

If paper fails to reach you regularly please notify us at once.

In ordering a change of post office, please give the OLD as well as the NEW address.

Do not send local check, but use Post Office or Express Money Order, or Draft on St. Louis, Chicago or New York, in remitting.

ADDRESS, CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.,
1522 Locust St. St. Louis, Mo.

Join the Procession!

Send us.....

One Dollar

And until Jan. 1st, 1901, you will receive each week ....

THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

"In His Steps."

Given away

New Subscribers send $1.50 for a year's subscription from May 1st.

a year's

Old Subscribers pay arrears to May 1st and $1.50 for a year from that date.

with

Subscription to

Those Now Paid in Advance send $1.50 for another year's credit.

The...
Christian--Evangelist.

STANDARD BOOKS AT HALF PRICE.

SYMPOSIUM ON HOLY SPIRIT.

By A. B. Jones, Thos. Munnell, G. W. Longan, J. Z. Tyler and Alex. Campbell. The highest possible commendation of this book is the list of the men who wrote it. The price of this book was Seventy-five Cents.

Price, Thirty Cents.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM.

By Alexander Campbell. This is a work of permanent value, which should be in the library of every preacher. Baptism is treated in all its aspects. 460 pages, bound in leather.

Price, Fifty Cents.

CAMPBELL--OWEN DEBATE.

Alexander Campbell met the noted infidel, Robert Owen, in a debate on the evidences of Christianity. This book is a verbatim report of the debate, making a cloth-bound volume of 465 pages.

Price, One Dollar.

TYPES AND METAPHORS OF THE BIBLE.

J. W. Monser has treated the types and metaphors of the Bible in their order, shedding light on passages obscure to the average reader. The former price of $1.50 has been reduced to a very low figure.

Price, Seventy-Five Cents.

ORIGIN OF THE DISCIPLES.

A review, by G. W. Longan, of the untruthful, sectarian volume by Prof. Whitsitt. It is a broad, scholarly discussion of the underlying principles of our movement. The price was formerly $1.

Price, Fifty Cents.

CARE OF ALL THE CHURCHES.

By Thos. Munnell. A study of the organization, government and discipline of the local congregation. The volume should be read by every preacher, pastor, elder, deacon and active Christian.

Price, Seventy-Five Cents.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, 1522 LOCUST ST., ST. LOUIS, MO.

THE CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST

"IN FAITH, UNITY; IN OPINION AND METHODS, LIBERTY; IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY."

Vol. xxxvii. St. Louis, Mo., Thursday, April 26, 1900. No. 17.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The situation in South Africa is practically unchanged. Preparations for a forward movement on the part of Gen. Roberts still goes on, but when the actual start toward Pretoria will begin is not clear. The garrison at Wepener is still unrelieved, but the latest report is that Rundle and Brabrant are gradually converging on that point. Heavy fighting was reported on Friday and Saturday, but the censor has not permitted the world to know the results. The Boers are displaying unusual activity at various points, but with no concert of action or purpose other than to annoy Gen. Roberts' army and delay the invasion of their country as long as possible. Lord Methuen has been strongly opposed at Boshof and report says that he has been ordered to retire upon Kimberly. The pressing demand of the army at Bloemfontein is still "remounts," and it may yet be some weeks before the forward movement can be made.

Later word from General Roberts says that he has dispatched two cavalry brigades and General Pole-Carew's infantry division to support Rundle, who is trying to relieve Wepener. The Boers seem to be stronger about Wepener and the result of the fighting on last Saturday more serious than was reported, as Rundle's losses are now said to have been considerable. The British, as usual, seem to have miscalculated their strength and their fighting qualities. Methuen at last accounts was conducting a difficult retreat upon Boshof, with the probabilities of being again besieged as at Kimberly. It seems to keep Roberts busy getting his generals out of trouble, to say nothing of the difficulties of a forward movement toward Pretoria, and he may yet meet with experiences that will lead him to modify some of his severe criticisms of generals Buller, Warren and others. At least England's anxieties are not rapidly abating as yet.

Severe fighting occured about Manila last week, in which three hundred and seventy-eight Filipinos are reported to have been killed and twelve officers and two hundred and forty-four men captured. Of the wounded Filipinos it is thought that for want of hospital facilities the majority will die, so that their casualties for the week will approximate one thousand men. The American loss is said to have been nine killed and sixteen wounded. The insurgents seem to have been unusually active throughout Luzon during the last week, but with such reverses as above reported, will soon become tired of this method of warfare. Gen. Pio Del Pillar's band, numbering about three hundred men, has reappeared in his old field about San Miguel and gave that post a three hours' fight, but without serious result to the garrison. It is to be hoped that this insurrection will soon cease and peace be established in these islands.

The closing down of twelve of the mills of the American Steel and Wire Co., last week, and the throwing out of employment their thousands of laborers, all for what is believed to have been purely stock minipulation purposes, is not likely to decrease popular prejudice against trusts. The introduction of speculation into the industrial properties involving as it does the bread and meat of their thousands of laborers and their families is a danger not so apparent in any other form of stock dealing. Disaster to a railroad is usually confined to its security holders, for the railroad must run and its employees be paid just the same. But in the industrial properties the men are suddenly deprived of their living by such manipulations as that of the American Steel and Wire Co. last week. That wise legislation at this point is greatly needed could not well be made more apparent.

The unexpected closing down of twelve of the mills of the American Steel and Wire Company last week came near producing consternation in Wall Street. The excuse for the closing of the mills was overproduction, and a slump in the market followed. John W. Gates, the magnate of the company, claims that the high-water mark of prices in iron and steel has been reached, and that prices must fall, and in proof of his opinion closed down the mills, and in this action was upheld by the steel and wire directorate and a heavy reduction of prices on their finished products announced. How long the mills will remain closed is wholly problematical, or at least known only to those who are on the inside of the game. At present, however, John W. Gates is said to be one of the most despised of men on Wall Street because of this action.

The matter of our nation's claim against Turkey for missionary property destroyed in Armenia by the Kurds, some time ago, occupied considerable space in the newspapers last week. The claim amounts to $90,000, and has been, it is said, repeatedly promised by the Sultan, but never paid. Each of the Ambassadors since the Armenian massacre has pressed this claim upon the Sublime Porte, but without success, and now there are indications of stronger measures being used by the United States to collect the debt. The latest word is that the Sultan does not refuse to pay the claims, but claims that the American missionaries should prove their loss in Turkish courts. This will doubtless lead to further diplomatic correspondence between this government and Turkey and a further delay of the payment. The matter is attracting international attention, but it is generally thought that the matter will be quietly settled as other nations have similar claims.

The proposition of Dewey as a presidential candidate seems to be having no visible effect upon the prospects of William J. Bryan as the Democratic nominee of the Kansas City convention. The state conventions, so far held, are instructing their delegates for Bryan without a break, and with almost equal unanimity reaffirming the Chicago platform. As the time of the convention approaches there seems to be less probability of an anti-Bryan movement in the Democratic party, as in the last campaign. Democrats who were prominent in the anti-Bryan movement in '96 are now either openly declaring for Bryan or expressing a willingness to accept the nominee of the Kansas City convention. On the other side, politically, all the signs to date just as clearly and strongly point to William McKinley as the nominee of the Philadelphia convention. The only undecided action of these two great political conventions is that of their respective vice-presidents, and these may not be foreknown. In the meantime, all kinds of reports are current as to who will be the running mate of each of the presidential candidates.

The largest gun in the world and the greatest achievment in gun-building the world has yet known is now on the way toward completion at Watervliet. It is to weigh, when completed, without carriage, one hundred and twenty-six tons, carry a projectile weighing 2,370 pounds twenty miles, and will cost $865 for each firing. Its length is 49 feet six inches, diameter of breech six feet two inches, and size of the bore sixteen inches. It requires 1,060 pounds of powder to discharge the projectile. The most critical feature in the making of this gun was the putting on of the jacket, which weighed thirty tons. The jacket was lifted from the furnace hot and lowered down over the gun with a margin of only six hundredths of an inch, while hot, for the work. The slighest inequality in heating or in calculation would have ruined the work. This monstrous gun, when completed, is to be placed on guard over the harbor of New York.

According to an article in the Post-Dispatch of recent date, the public bequests for 1899 are estimated at $62,750,000, the largest ever recorded The bequests for the year 1898 were $38,000,000 and for 1897 $45,000,000. The largest bequest for the year 1899 was that of Mrs. Leland Stanford, of San Francisco, consisting of real estate, stock and cash, having a total value of $45,000,000. This was given to the Leland Stanford, Jr., University, which is now said to be the most largely endowed institution in the world. Its endowment is placed at $80,000,000. Next to Mrs. Stanford comes Andrew Carnegie whose gifts for libraries and other institutions for 1899 are placed at $5,000,000. Mr. Rockefeller's for 1899 are placed at $750,000 cash besides $2,000,000 to Chicago University, $150,000 to the Rochester Theological Seminary and $500,000 in property to the city of Cleveland for parks. The public gifts of J. P. Morgan consisted of valuable manuscripts and works of art, including property valued at $350,000. A. B. Wildener, of Philadelphia, gave $2,000,000 to the city for a home and hospital for crippled children. Among other donors for the year are mentioned the following names and amounts: Collis P. Huntington and Mrs. Huntington, $75,000; Edward Austin, Boston, $1,100,000, Dorman B. Eaton, New York, $240,000; Mrs. George C. Crocker, San Francisco, $20,000; Hon. Mark A. Hanna, Cleveland, $12,000; Robert C. Billings, Boston, $1,500,000; Mrs. Emmons Blaine, Chicago, $1,000,000; John I. Blair, $150,000; Mrs. Lydia A. Bradley, Peoria, Ill., $1,000,000; Catherine Wolfe Bruce, New York, $10,000; Phil. D. Armour, Chicago, $750,000; Mrs. Elizabeth H. Bates, M. D., Port Chester, N. Y., $114,000; Calvin Ellis, M. D., Cambridge Mass., $140,000; Samuel Cupples, St. Louis, 400,000; C. F. Daly, New York, $40,000; Benjamin M. Duke, Durham, N. C., $50,000; H. C. Frick, Pittsburg, $20,000; Leon Wendel, Chicago, $50,000; anonymous gift to Pennsylvania University, $250,000; Edward Y. Perry, Hanover, Mass., the income from $1,000,000 to be given to the poor; Henry A. Pevear, Lynn, Mass., $300,000; Chas. F. Smith, Boston, $1,000,000; Edward Tuck, New York, $300,000; Cornelius Vanderbilt, $1,120-000; Mrs. Hester N. Wetherell, Worcester, Mass., $102,000; Maxwell Somerville, Philadelphia, $600,000; anonymous gift to Princeton University, $800,000; Prof. O. C. Marsh, $150,000.

Following the great disaster at Austin, Texas, comes reports of disastrous floods of water in various parts of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama. The streets in some parts of New Orleans were so deeply submerged for a time that people had to use boats to leave their houses. Temporary repairs from former floods on the railroads have been washed away and traffic from New Orleans and Mobile north still further delayed. Six persons have been reported drowned and it is feared the inhabitants of many of the inland towns surrounded by water will suffer for want of food. The loss of property and of planted crops along the swollen streams will be a matter of serious and deep concern to many to say nothing of the broad and sweeping destruction to railroad property along these rivers. Heavy rains are falling in the interior of Texas and another flood is feared along the Brazos and other rivers.

The Senate committee on privileges and elections having in charge the case of Senator Clark, of Montana, has submitted its report and recommends the adoption by the Senate of the following resolution: "Resolved, that William A. Clark was not duly and legally elected to a seat in the Senate of the United States by the legislature of the state of Montana." The finding of the committee is that the election of Senator Clark is null and void because of briberies and attempted briberies used to secure his election. The eleven Republicans in the legislature of Montana who voted with the Democrats for the election of Clark and especially those upon whom suspicion rests as participants in the briberies offered are severely reprimanded by the committee. The unseating of Roberts for polygamy and of Clark for bribery shows quite a strong disposition in our national Congress to preserve a healthful moral atmosphere about the national Capitol. Let the good work of purging out the leaven of unrighteousness go one.

A meeting attracting the eyes of the world is now in session in New York City. It is the Ecumenical Conference on missions. More than two thousand delegates, including missionaries from all parts of the world are present. The leading sessions are held in Carnegie Hall, but overflow meetings are reported. The first business session of the conference was held on Monday, of this week. The addresses of missionaries from the foreign fields are of thrilling interest and of great importance to the cause of both home and foreign missions. Some of the figures presented in the staistical reports presented to date are of marvelous dimensions and import. The assembly of representative men and missionaries from all parts of the world and from all evangelical religious bodies in one body must of itself be a prophetic and an inspiring sight; one to make angels glad and demons tremble. What an argument this conference is in favor of the unity of Christendom.

The saddest sight in the world to-day is the famine sufferers of India. The misery of these people is simply indescribable and unparalleled. It is estimated that twenty millions of people in the famine district will die of hunger this year unless relief can be had. The cattle are dying and in places human beings are taking their places in the use of farm implements. In some places the people are becoming vicious toward Europeans and endangering their lives. In others children are being sold for food. Others wander about naked and starved until death ends their sufferings. The demand for relief increases and the Christian world can not close its ears to their wail and remain guiltless.

ANOTHER DIAGNOSIS.

The Northwestern Christian Advocate contains an article by "John Dale, layman," on the Bishops' Address, in which he has his own explanation of the loss of power and evangelistic zeal in the Methodist Church. His diagnosis does not exactly agree with that of the Bishops. He says:

If our good bishops had gone a little deeper they would have reached what thousands upon thousands in our church feel to be the real reason for the declension. In the quadrennial address of 1888 our bishops gave forth that grand utterance, that clarion cry of the great Methodist Church: "It cannot be legalized without sin." This was a bugle-blast, a war-cry, and a great church took courage, and the General Conference of 1892 reiterated the language of the bishops in 1888 and added thereto: "We do not presume to dictate the political conduct of our people, but we record our deliberate judgment that no political party has a right to expect, nor ought to receive, the support of Christian men so long as it stands committed to a license party or refuses to put itself on record in an attitude of open hostility to the saloon."

This layman critic does not believe that Methodists have been living up to this high standard of late. He adds: "No wonder Methodism has begun a retreat, when many of our ministers have no word of disapproval, public or private, against the wine-drinking, theater-going, dance and card-playing practices that obtain in the homes of a majority of the so-called 'better class' of our Methodist families. . . . Let us be honest before God, and if no party exists which properly represents our sentiments, let us crystallize the church vote and make one."

The editor of the Northwestern Christian Advovate, referring to this article in the editorial, writes much in the same strain. He says:

The writer is confessedly devout, wise, judicious, judical and influential with respect to other issues, and we confess that his words cut and cleft as written words seldom cut and cleave. Many thousands of lives are lost, hundreds of thousands of characters are blighted, legislation is deformed, existing laws directed against crime are made as ropes of sand, the policies and platforms of parties are despised like footstools and cuspidores when the liquor barons demand the debasement, families are broken up, the home is swept from its sacred foundations, Christian character is wrecked, cables of personal dedication to God, usually most binding, are rotted when the spume of this moral acid touches them, and the land seems to quiver in base silence with respect to its most sacred obligations when the demon beckons with his Gorgon head. It has been demonstrated again and again that the cowardly beast slinks into obedience when law insists and when good men, reinforcing the indifferent, forbids further depredation, corruption and death. Nothing is clearer than that Christian consent, and Christian consent alone, legalizes that traffic and puts its bloated prophets at the head of its columns of progress. Since legalization cannot be without sin, consent and legalization demonstrate the presence of sin—known, identified and consented-to sin.

These words are worth pondering, just now, on the eve of platform-making, by the various political parties. Will they declare themselves in reference to the saloon? In a forecast which we saw the other day of the platform of one of the leading political parties, temperance was mentioned as one of the subjects on which the party would declare itself. Is it to be supposed that the liquor interests of the country will not take note and bring their concentrated influence to bear upon the men who will be charged with the duty of writing that platform? Will there be any such concentrated influence of the temperance and prohibition sentiment of the country brought to bear on the party leaders against the liquor traffic?

It is a good time, at least, to agitate the question through the religious press and through as many of the daily and weekly secular papers of the country as will print articles on the subject. We do not believe that Methodists are sinners above others in their relation to the saloon business, and the words of rebuke which we have quoted apply equally, perhaps, to most of the Christian bodies of Christendom. It is time we were cultivating a conscience on the subject of our responsibility for the existence of the saloon and the continuation of its destructive influence upon the life of the country.

THE PARIS EXPOSITION AND NORTHERN EUROPE.

The International Exposition which opened in Paris the 15th inst. is an event of the first importance. It is designed to signalize the close of the 19th century by the highest and best products of our civilization. Every civilized nation on earth will make an exhibit there of what is most characteristic of its civilization and achievements. Our own nation is excelled in the number of its exhibits only by France itself. A thorough examination of the exhibts by the various nations in this Exposition will be almost equivalent to a journey around the world in its educational value.

The success of these great International Expositions is not to be measured by dollars and cents. They have a distinct value in promoting civilization and culture and a knowledge of the arts which is of far greater moment than the financial loss or gain. Every nation can profit by studying the best things in any other nation, and by bringing these all together there is such a dissemination of ideas as could not be secured so readily in any other way. Expositions must be measured by their capacity to promote the advancement of the world in the knowledge of those inventions and sciences which ameliorate the condition of mankind, add to the value and dignity of human life and bind together the nations of the earth in stronger bonds of friendship and unity. We believe that they have a vast influence in promoting the welfare and the unity of mankind.

We have thought the Paris Exposition of sufficient importance to justify us in sending a member of our editorial staff to Paris to see it and write up its salient features for the benefit of our readers. Mr. W. E. Garrison will sail from New York the latter part of this week, and will spend a few weeks in Paris, and will give our readers some illustrated articles on the Paris Exposition. Believing that our readers will be interested in a series of letters from the less frequented portions of Northern Europe, a journey has been planned in that direction. From Paris he will go north by way of Antwerp and Brussels to Hamburg; thence by wheel to Copenhagen, Denmark. He will then wheel through Southern Sweden to Christiana, the capital of Norway, then wheel across Norway to the West Coast and north to Trondhjem; thence by steamer along the fyords to the North Cape of Europe, 350 miles north of the Arctic Circle. From North Cape he will go south across Lapland to the Baltic Sea, by foot, canoe, bicycle or any means of conveyance that a Lapp guide can furnish; then by wheel southeast through Finland to St. Petersburg. From St. Petersburg a hasty trip will be made through the chief cities of Russia, Novgorod, Moscow, Kieff and Sevastopol; thence, by steamer, on the Black Sea to Constantinople,thence to Athens, across Greece to Corinth and Patras, and will sail from Naples for New York via Gibraltar. The entire journey will occupy about four months.

He will write concerning the religious, political and social conditions of the peoples of Northern Europe, with illustrations taken on the ground. His former letters have been read with interest by our readers, and we have reason to believe that the series for the coming summer will be no less interesting and instructive.

DO WE REALIZE?

Do we realize that when we give for General Home Missions we give to the support of two boards? Do we realize that we give to the support of our Board of Negro Education and Evangelization as well as to the support of work throughout our vast dominions outside of this section of our land, in which is found a people of an alien race ten millions strong? A people numbering ten millions! Do we realize this? Would that some power could cause us to come into any sort of realization of the power, the influence for good or evil that lies in this mighty land entrusted by us to the care of our American Christian Missionary Society—these names we speak so glibly,with so often not a thought or care for their great meaning. Would that some power could cause us to realize the need for heathen missions within the borders of our own mighty land.

When, this spring, we make our annual offering for General Home Missions, we are making an offering that is to support the work of two boards, the scope of either one of which is almost beyond comprehension. Do we realize this? Let our gifts answer. That will be charitable.

In our South alone, among this people of another race, our neighbors, not only in the broad meaning given the word neighbor by Christ, but also in its resrticted meaning; among His people here in our midst, and a part of our nation and national life, the issue is appalling. Do we realize this? It is time we did. There are to-day more illiterate negroes in the South than there were slaves at the close of the Civil War; and they are outrunning the facilities for education at the rate of more than a hundred thousand a year. I would that we read these two facts until they brought a deeper meaning to our minds and a greater burden to our hearts and consciences than they ever have before. The idea of colonizing the Afro-American is no longer a dream of even prejudice and ignorance. What will save these millions? Just what will save the dying millions in India or Africa. What will solve this that we call, and rightly too, our "Southern problem?" Christian education and evangelization—the truth, which alone can make men free.

It was the wisdom of our National Convention of 1890 that a separate board be appointed to care for this branch of our home work, but when that "cry went up from the hosts of the Lord," of "too many offerings!" this work was merged with the American Christian Missionary Society for the raising of funds. Did this relieve us of responsibility toward this ten millions of people in the Southland, brought there and held there by no wish of their own? Did this mean that we need no longer give of our means for this work? If so, how was it to be supported? Surely, not by taking from some other part of the great home field to put into this part. No; you know and I know that it can only be supported now by increased gifts to the American Christian Missionary Society. This union of these two boards will not relieve us of responsibility toward this people in the South, either now or in the great day of God. Again, last year the Methodist Episcopal Church expended more than half a million dollars in the South!

We hear of the work of our Board of Negro Education and Evangelization; of the work carried on at our Southern Christian Institute; of the lofty Christian characters that each year go out from it, but do we realize that this work has only been made possible from the beginning until now by the sacrifice of the few who alone seem able to read the handwriting on the wall , and not because the Disciples of Christ as a body have done their duty in this regard? Then this is a view of only one portion of the land—a glimpse of one cultivated valley. But if we ascend "into a high mountain" and view this field as a whole, catching only the stronger outlines and losing the detail as of some cultivated spot, formed perchance by an enlightened life uplifted from the waste around, and lost to view in such a survey as this—we shall find it but a vast, dreary landscape, wrapped in the gloom of ignorance and made barren by the blight of superstition!

The harvest for Home Missions begins on the first Sunday in May and the indications at this writing are favorable toward the largest yield that our people have yet known in this grand work.

Hour of Prayer.

AMERICA RIPE FOR OUR PLEA.

(John 4:35-38; Acts 1:7-9; 9:31.)

(Uniform Midweek Prayer-meeting Topic, May 2.)

CENTRAL TRUTH: There is a time in the kingdom of grace as well as in the kingdom of nature, when the fields are ripe and ready for the harvesters, and that is the time when and those are the fields where the reapers should be at work.

It is the hour of noon and the sun is shining down from the Syrian sky. Jesus, weary and thirsty, sits on the well-curb at Sychar, resting from His journey. He has been engaged in conversation with a woman from the town, whose life he had laid bare. She had run back to the town, leaving her waterpot, to tell the people what a Prophet she had seen. Soon crowds of people were seen streaming out of the town down toward the well to see and hear this Prophet for themselves. As Jesus lifts up His eyes and sees the multitude, He exclaims: "Say not ye, there are yet four months, and then cometh the harvest? Behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes and look on the fields, that they are white already unto the harvest."

Here was an eager throng of people anxious to hear the Prophet of Nazareth, even though He was a Jew, for they, in common with the Jews, looked forward to the coming of a Prophet who should solve the great problems of life for them. It was their readiness to hear the gospel of the kingdom that led Jesus to speak, in a familiar figure, of the ripened harvest fields, ready for the sickle. We are not surprised to learn that Jesus consented to tarry two whole days to teach the hungry multitude. There must have been something about Jesus' teaching and personality calculated to disarm prejudice and awaken interest. The preacher that is most Christlike to-day is most likely to disarm prejudice and find open hearts for the message which he has to deliver.

The fact that this field was ready for the harvest was sufficient reason for Jesus to abandon any immediate plans He might have had and devote Himself to that field. The principle which we may get out of this fact is that we, also, as Christ's disciples, should give special attention to those fields which seem to be ripest and most in need of reapers. This was the method adopted in the beginning of Christianity. The apostles were told by Jesus after His resurrection from the dead that they were to receive power when the Holy Ghost should come upon them and that they were to be His witnesses "both in Jerusalem and in all Judea and Samaria and unto the uttermost part of the earth." Their work was to begin in Jerusalem, from that center spread out over Judea, thence into the uttermost part of the earth.

The reason for this divine method of procedure was, no doubt, that Jerusalem and Judea were a little riper for the harvest than other places farther away, because of their familiarity with the facts to which the apostles were to bear witness. This is the method which husbandmen employ in caring for their crops, gathering them in the order in which they ripen. It is the common-sense method which commends itself to our reason and judgment.

As a result of these early missionary labors, we read that "the church throughout all Judea and Galilee and Samaria had peace, being edified, and walking in the fear of the Lord and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, was multiplied." That is always the result of true evangelistic labor. When the church, instead of being edfied, is filled with division and strife, and instead of being multiplied is diminished, we may know that there is something radically wrong with the kind of preaching and teaching it is receiving.

Applying this principle of giving preference to the ripest field, we should see that our own great country has special claims upon the Disciples of Christ, or the churches of this Reformation, for the following reasons:

1. The revolt against the authority of human creeds in this country is very pronounced. Religious people are weary of doctrinal controversies and strifes, and long for a simpler and purer gospel. They see that the creeds do not unify, but divide believers, and they are looking for a basis of faith and of co-operation that is much more simple, vital and fundamental than any formulated doctrine.

2. There is likewise a rejection of ecclesiastical authority, in the sense of refusing to admit its control over the conscience and over the mind of man. The spirit of liberty which is engendered by our free institutions manifests itself in matters religious no less than in matters political.

3. There is an increasing desire on the part of the people for Christian union. They feel that without a closer co-operation among Christians the world is not likely soon to be evangelized. Never was the Christian union sentiment so strong as it is to-day, in this country.

4. Some of the largest religious bodies in this country have reached a standstill, and some are on the retrograde. There is a widespread conviction that something must be wrong in the ordinary method of presenting the gospel to the people, when large bodies, with wealth, education, talent and all modern appliances are able to do little more than hold their own.

Now, at every point mentioned above, the plea that we are making offers a remedy for the existing evil. It presents a simple, divine creed, which all men acknowledge; it recognizes no authority outside of Christ and those whom He commissioned to convey His will to men, the apostles, and it pleads for a union of believers on the simple basis on which the church was originally one, namely, faith in Christ and loyalty to Him; it preaches a simple, direct gospel, easily comprehensible, that commends itself to every man's conscience in the sight of God, and which moves men to instant decision.

This plea for reformation had its birth in this country, and here it has its stronghold, and here is evidently the ripest field which the world offers to-day for its acceptance. If we are wise, if we can hear the call of God in these facts that are before us, and read our duty in the events of current history, we will rise up and meet the great demand that is upon us and send forth a mighty army of laborers into this vast field that is ripe for the harvest.

The annual offering for Home Missions affords an opportunity for expressing our interest in this work.

PRAYER.

O God, our Father, we thank Thee for our beloved country—for its free institutions, its civil and religious liberty, its schools, its churches, its benevolent enterprises, its independence, its vast opportunities. We thank Thee for all the signs looking toward national righteousness and religious progress, and we pray for wisdom to appreciate the doors of opportunity which are open before us here, in our dear homeland, and that we may so use them that Thy kingdom may be advanced here and elsewhere by a free, united and aggressive church. In Christ's name. Amen!

Questions and Answers.

Jesus says (Matt. 5:32): "Whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery, and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery." Now, in the statutes of the different states of the Union, various grounds for divorce are laid down, as impotency, drunkenness, former marriage not yet dissolved, cruel, inhuman treatment, conviction of felony or other infamous crime, permanent insanity, and so on. What was the scope of Christ's statement here? Was it universal, to be applied to all systems of law and in all times, or was it to be of local application? If universal, can a lawyer who is a professed follower of Christ, consistently obtain divorces on any other ground than that of adultery? T. R. Dean.

S. McAlister, I. T.

We have here one of the most difficult problems with which the Christian lawyer or Christian preacher has to deal. It is generally conceded, we think, that Christ was laying down a general principle, or law, for universal application; that is to say, not limited to that time or to any particular country. It would hardly do to say, however, that there are no exceptional cases in which there are justifiable causes of divorce other than the one mentioned by our Savior. But our law recognizes more than one kind of divorce. Some of the causes mentioned, at least, would justify legal separation. About this there will be no difference of opinion. But should any of the causes mentioned, aside from adultery, be the ground for a divorce that would carry with it the right to marry again? It must be confessed that a negative answer to this question, strictly adhered to in all cases, would seem to work hardship in many instances, and would lead to evil results. This raises the question whether Christ intended this as an inflexible rule to be applied in all cases, or as a general principle which should guide Christians in their conduct in the marriage relation. Fornication is a crime which destroys the family relationship. Is there any other crime, besides that of fornication, which prevents the marriage relation from accomplishing the purpose for which it was formed? If so, would not the same principle which makes fornication a just ground for divorce make such other causes? This would seem to be a reasonable inference. And yet, on the other hand, it is easy to see how this could be abused and has been abused by persons who have sought for and obtained divorce on slight and trivial causes. There can be no doubt that society is suffering more to-day from a too lax interpretation of the divorce law than from a too rigid construction of it; and yet, a too rigid construction is likely to react in the direction of too great laxity. These are some of the considerations that enter into this complex problem. There is too great discrepancy, at present, between the divorce laws in the several states and this law of divorce laid down by Christ. The whole subject is one that demands the most careful consideration on the part of lawyers, legislators and ministers, and especially of the highest courts of judicature. There ought to be greater uniformity between the laws of the several states on this subject. We cannot do better, perhaps, at present, than to hold this law of Christ as the ideal principle governing divorce, and to seek, as far as possible, to conform our action to it, having due consideration, all the while, to the fact that all Christ's legislation is intended to promote human welfare and happiness, and that no application should be made of it, in any case, in which it seems likely to produce disastrous results.

---

1. As both Unitarians and Spiritualists disbelieve the account of Christ's miraculous birth, as recorded in the New Testament, are they not, therefore, unbelievers or infidels?

2. What is the difference between the soul and the spirit?

3. Do you know of any publishers of Union Sunday-school literature who publish a scholars' quarterly containing the Scripture text in both the Authorized and the Revised Version? W. P. C.

1. In so far as Unitarians and Spiritualists reject the divine nature and unique Sonship of Jesus of Nazareth, they may be unbelievers. There are, however, so many kinds of people included under these names that we would not class all of them as infidels, by any means. Some people are believers in some things and disbelievers is others. Their faith is weak, but they are not to be classed as infidels.

2. The soul, when not used synonymously with the spirit, but in distinction from it, indicates the principle of life, that is, of physical life, and is a sort of link between the body and the spirit. The spirit is the immortal, intelligent ego, the real personality, which survives the death of the body, and which can come into communion with God and enjoy happiness forever, or be banished from His presence in eternal separation.

3. We are not sufficiently acquainted with the Union Sunday-school literature to say whether there be a quarterly of the kind you mention, or not.

Editor's Easy Chair.

While it is true that the star of empire moves westward, it is also true that the sons of the Western empire are frequently found trekking eastward for light and inspiration. But there is this difference: whereas our fathers, following the star of empire, trekked westward across the mountains and the prairies in slow-moving wagons drawn by oxen or horses, their sons now return eastward for a temporary sojourn in steam-drawn palace cars, accomplishing in a ride of 36 hours a distance which occupied weeks of travel in those old days, before the steam horse was discovered or even the railroads had penetrated into the Western wilderness. These lines are penciled by the Easy Chair, in a Pullman Palace Car, on the B. & O. Southwestern R. R., whose solid roadbed makes writing an easy task on its swiftly gliding train, and whose employees look so carefully after the comforts of its passengers as to make traveling a luxury. The car we are on goes from St. Louis to New York without change! What a boon this modern railroad reciprocity is to the traveling public! What an advance it will mark in religious progress when churches will make their ecclesiastical tracks conform to a common standard, so as to admit of like reciprocity! It is coming, too, and such conferences as this one we are going to attend is one of the means of hastening its arrival.

Our traveling companions on this eastward pilgrimage are three Methodist ministers, one of them an editor, W. B. Palmore, of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, one a presiding elder, George J. Warren, Chillicothe, Mo., and the other, Rev. W. A. Hanna, pastor at Mexico, Mo. They are remarkably genial gentlemen, as Methodist preachers usually are, and prevent any possible tedium of travel by their rich fund of anectode and experience. They represent the M. E. Church, South, the last word in which name will sometime probably be dropped out. When the young people of the Epworth Leagues in these two branches of Methodism come into power, they will sympathize very little, perhaps, with the questions of difference which divided their fathers and grandfathers. They now hold union meetings and are preparing the way for future reunion. Who knows but that this division is one of the causes which have contributed to that decline in numbers which was the occasion of the recent letter of the bishops? And yet, union in this case, as in its larger meaning, must be a matter of growth. It cannot be forced. It can be cultivated, however, and this ought to be done in all wise and judicious ways.

On the arrival of our train at Cincinnati, Bro. McLean met us with that hearty hand-grip of his, although it was in the early morning, and we went together to the Grand Hotel, where we met W. S. Dickinson, and had a pleasant chat together before our train pulled out. Bro. Rains had already gone to the conference, and Bro. McLean felt that he must abide by the stuff. We regret his absence from this great missionary conference, but he needs it less, perhaps, than most of the rest of us, his missionary travels and studies having kept him well abreast of the missionary movements of our day. He is naturally concerned about Children's Day for Foreign Missions, and much of the work of preparation will devolve upon him in consequence of the partial disability of his colaborer, Bro. Rains. They will find the preachers and superintendents quite ready to co-operate with them in making this day a success.

We have crossed the Ohio River at Parkersburg, where we pass from Ohio into West Virginia, and where we get a glimpse down the river of Blennerhassett Island in the river, once the splendid home of a wealthy man by that name, who was in the intrigue with Aaron Burr, and whose name and history are linked with that of Burr. Now we are passing through the oil region of West Virginia, darting in and out of tunnels and climbing, meanwhile, up the foothills of the Alleghenies. We shall pass through the finest scenery to-night while we are asleep, including Harper's Ferry and the national capital, will reach the City of Brotherly Love in the early morning, and breakfast in New York City. Some of the things we see and hear there we will report to our readers, for we are not making this trip for ourself alone, but for the benefit of our readers as well.

A curious phase of the ritualistic controversy in the Church of England has been pointed out by the New York Observer. It will be remembered that some months ago Archbishop Temple, Primate of England, issued an order prohibiting the ceremonial use of incense and moving lights. The ritualists submitted to this decision temporarily, but later signified their dissatifaction by issuing a protest signed by fourteen thoussand lay communicants, in which they denounced not only the decision against incense and candles, but more especially the authority, based upon act of Parliament, upon which that order was based.

It is against the grounds on which the Archbishop's decision is based, however, that denunciation is fiercest. "We protest against your Grace's attempt to foist upon the church, as her rule of ceremonial, a penal act of Parliament, passed in the days of regal autocracy, and intended to meet circumstances entirely different from those of to-day." This is a change of front with a vengeance, "the penal act of Parliament" in question being the Act of Uniformity of 1559, accepted by the Church in Convocation, and included in the title of the Book of Common Prayer. That the Ritualist, or High Church party, should thus in a formal protest scout the pretensions of Archbishop Laud and uphold the Scottish secession is so astonishing as to be scarcely credible. But the Duke of Newcastle, who headed the delegation presenting the protest, showed in his address the lengths to which the extremists were prepared to go, by threatening to demand the disestablishment of the church rather than submit to the decision. The church must, he said, "declare herself ready to forfeit such benefits as she gains from her alliance with the state rather than brook inteference with matters that are her own prerogative."

THE RELATION OF PASTOR AND CHURCH.

N. J. AYLSWORTH.

I have been requested to write an article on this subject; but the request does not specify whether it shall be considered in the light of the Scripture teaching, or from a practical point of view. I shall choose the latter.

It is impossible to know whether anything is fitted to reach a practical end until we know what that end is. What, then, is the end to be reached through the pastoral relation? Evidently, it is the bringing of the church up to a strong and complete spiritual life. The new convert is a babe in Christ. His religious life is rudimentary and weak, and it has yet to be developed into vigor and controlling power. He is to become a spiritual man, or fail of the object of his conversion.

There is nothing in the entire range of our Christian activities in which we so wofully fail as this. Our pastoral work is the poorest work we do. How many of our members ever rise to a full and vigorous spiritual life? Do not the majority remain at a standstill, or even, in many cases, fall below the spiritual level of their conversion? Failure at this point is fundamental and must affect everything else. Yet, our failure here is so signal as to suggest that it may be due, not simply to inefficiency, but to faulty ideals. The subject is a very large one and I shall have room only to offer a few suggestions.

1. The pastor should be one of a band of brothers—I do not say brethren, for we have weakened that word. Officialism and professionalism are out of place in this relation. The pastor who looks upon his work as a profession, as a means of getting a living, of getting on in the world, or of reaching distinction, may reach any of these ends, but he will not make his people spiritual. The first and indispensable qualification is that he be a lover. If any member of his congregation suffers he must be hurt—not officially, but really. He must not be able to help it. Is any glad, he must be rich in their gladness—elated, because he cannot help it. We must get over official loving and have real love. Fellowship is a deep, rich word, but we have utterly spoiled it. It has even a suggestion of ice. What a shame that we have let all the waters of the heart run out of these word-buckets! If I fellowship a man I am that man's fellow. We say brother, and mean only that we agree doctrinally. Stop! and never use that word again until you can do it honestly. How do you feel toward the brothers of your father's house? That is what the word means in the church. Fill these words, that have well-nigh shriveled into hypocrisies, with their true meaning, and you will have a revival. When every member of your church is ready to say: "Yes; he is our pastor, but—he is my friend—and often with a glistening eye or shining face, then you are ready to work.

The web of love is woven by intercourse. You must know your people intimately; not in their parlors, but in their work, in their struggles for bread. You must get into their lives, into their hearts. Love opens all doors, and they will let you in if you have that key; and then you can steal their weaknesses, their troubles, their shadows of doubt, their heartaches. Blessed are such thefts!

But love is a costly thing. The waxwork imitation may leave your purse untouched; not this. I will send you into the storm, into hardship, into—your pocket. There is no helping this if you have the genuine thing. True sympathy may touch the fountain of tears, but dollars will come up with the tears. Love is self-giving, and it cannot help giving sympathy, toil, dollars, everything. Do you say I am quixotic? Answer me if you can. The Master had a chance to be very rich, but his love-work made him very poor. The faithful pastor will often turn away from his financial interest. The church ought to see that this loving, sacrificing man is provided for, but it often does not; and the time will never come, if our pastors "walk in His steps," that some of them will not need, in the helplessness of age, ministerial relief. They should not be improvident, but love is a species of improvidence that must not be curtailed. Alas for the day when we have no poor preachers!

The pastor must also be a man who cannot be quarreled with. Magnanimity (large-heartedness) will not quarrel. Smallness is selfishness. Love is always large. If you can be quarreled with you are small, and a small man is not fit to be a pastor. You must be impervious to all the little meannesses of men.

The pastor who stands thus related to his church is ready to work miracles. All things will be pliant to his touch. What will these, his brothers, not do for him? The very ground he treads on will be a shining path which they will delight to walk in; and they will find themselves in it by an unconscious gravitation. There are some kinds of lace so delicate in texture that they must be wrought under water. The web of the Christian character is so delicate that it must be woven in a bath of love. The greatest shepherd was the greatest lover—Jesus Christ.

2. The pastor must stand to the church in the relation of an inspirer. There is room in the limits of an allotted article to mention but two things; and it has been my purpose to speak of the two things that are fundamental and essential, if we would make men spiritual. I have said that the pastor must be a lover; I now say that he must be also be an inspirer.

Teach a man that he ought to love his neighbor as himself, and he will admit it, but will not therefore do it. Teach him that he should love his enemies, and you do not thereby help him to do so. Teach him that he should love God with all his heart and soul, and his life still flows on in its old channels. And this is not with him due to perversity, but to helplessness. Tell a man that heaven shall be his reward if he is faithful, and you appeal to his self-interest —a legitimate motive—but self interest is not love, and no amount of appeal to it can make the man selfless—loving. Speak to him of the dark doom of sin, and you shall excite his fear; but no amount of fear can make a man love. Men hope and fear in their worldly life, but they are not therefore spiritual. What can you do?

The housewife brings all the kindling necessary to build a fire and places it properly in her range and then gets down and blows it; but she may blow the mere kindling forever and not get a fire. You may teach and teach and show men that it is better to be spiritual, that it is their duty, that it wins great rewards and averts great sorrows; and they may believe you and want to be spiritual, but that will not make them so. Have you ever stood there, Bro. Pastor? and did you then know what to do? No one is a "workman that needeth not to be ashamed" who has not seen this difficulty and known how to deal with it. No one can ever pass this point without applying that great law of all mental quickening whose extension is as wide as sentient being.

As you are driving in the country you pass a field in which some horses are racing. Your horse erects his ears, rears his head, turning it from side to side, steps as if on springs, and dashes into a run. He is not frightened; he is inspired. If you would have the people run, you must run yourself —not mechanically, but with all the glee of the race. When will men learn that spiritual states go by contagion? If you would have the people spiritual, you must GIVE them spiritual life. If you would have men love their enemies you must do it before them and show them how, and let them see its beauty and grandeur and catch its spirit, and then they will do it with gladness. There is nothing so noble and self-sacrificing that men will not do it, if you do it before them and set them on fire. It has been said that the blood of the martyrs was the seed of the church. Some have claimed that this is not true. It is in a sense true and not true. No doubt martyrdom has stayed many from profession; but the heroism of the martyr has set many others on fire with the same spirit, and they have gone forth to torture and death with songs on their lips. All grandeur of soul is not in the past. There are men in our churches to-day that would do these things, if need should come. All heroism has its following, because it inspires. Even the heroism of crime inspires men to crime. The curse of the dime novel has been in its inspiration to crime through heroic settings. If a murderer dies bravely on the gallows, it makes other men murderers; hence we have learned that executions must not be public. Christianity is heroism. Self-bestowing love is always heroic. All spiritual states are contagious, but strong ones are intensely so; hence the power of heroism. And this brings us to an important distinction.

There is a great difference between a negative and a positive righteousness. We may be negatively good—we may do nothing wrong—and men will speak well of us, but we shall not inspire them. A dead man does nothing wrong. It is bold, vigorous, positive righteousness that quickens men. Mr.

Sheldon has been writing stories and walking in the Master's steps for several years until now he has made all the world want to do so. He has not been preaching to men what they ought to do, with rewards and penalties attached; but in his stories and in his life he has been letting men see it done, and he has kindled a conflagration. His stories are not great literature, his acts are not extraordinary. It is, in books and in conduct, simply honest, wholesome Christianity, lived out before men; and witness the result! When men see that your Christianity is straightforward and vigorous they will feel its heroism and take fire. There is nothing in this world more inflammable than the spiritual nature.

There has heen much skepticism regarding the practicability of really changing men's characters; and even if possible it is thought to be very difficult. I wish to say that it is both possible and easy, and that it may take place very rapidly. It is not easy to bake bread with a hoe, nor to make men spiritual in the wrong way; but help them in the right way, and the result will be swift. I well remember when I had to say to a man who had always been regarded as close: "Stop! you must not do that." He was going to overgive. It was not under pressure of excitement, but his deliberate purpose of months' standing; and he did not seem to be aware that he was doing more than his share. He is that kind of man still. I was astonished then, but I have had to say the same thing to others since. Such surprises will greet us all along the line of character, if we fascinate men with righteousness.

Two disciples, journeying to Emmaus, fell in with another traveler, who talked with them by the way. They asked him to tarry with them, and in the breaking of bread their eyes were opened and they knew that it was the Lord. Did we but know those who are walking at our side! Touch them with the wand of love, live heroically before them, and unmask God's heroes, and they will bless you forever.

In conclusion, I would commend to the study of every pastor the character of Father Myriel—lovingly called by the people Father Welcome—which is portrayed in Victor Hugo's Les Miserables. He has been called by some a "milksop;" but Prof. John Fiske rightly regards the portraiture as a masterly study, amounting almost to a revelation, and further says: "In that wonderful picture of modern life, which is the greatest work of one of the greatest seers of our time, Victor Hugo gives a concrete illustration of the working of Christ's methods."

When all the people shall lovingly name us "Welcome," we shall have gone far to solving the problem of the pastoral relation.

"Well, Jack, old fellow," said one who met a man who had lately joined the church, "I hear you have given up all your pleasures."

"No, no," said Jack; "the fact lies the other way. I have just found all my pleasures, and have only given up my follies."

THE PERSONALNESS OF GOD.

JOSEPH FORT NEWTON.

Many earnest minds feared that the discovery of the infinity of the universe would destroy that simple faith in the personalness of God, and leave us shivering in the dim and shadowy realm of pantheism, which in reality is another name for atheism. No greater calamity could have come upon our struggling race than to feel that, above all sickness and misfortune, the loneliness and bereavement, the broken dreams and blighted hopes of life, there is no infinite sympathy; that no tender and compassionate Father hears our sobs and prayers; that all the bright immensity is one cold, infinite, godless expanse. Should such a thought prevail, religion would vanish like a palace in a dream. Reason demands a personal Creator; the soul requires a personal love. If the soul were not divine, something less than divinity would satisfy it. The mind that teems with illimitable thoughts will never recognize as its creator any power in nature, however irresistible, that is not gifted with consciousness and intelligence. We instinctively feel that the conscious cannot be derived from the unconscious. The idea of the personalness of God is of the same order and origin as the idea of God itself, and no religion can possibly be devised without such a conception that would satisfy the longing heart of man.

We cannot worship an abstraction. We can build no shrine for a proposition. Agnosticism can awaken no adoration. Blind force cannot compel love. Love alone can beget love. Strauss' "Universum," Comte's "Humanity," Arnold's "Stream of Tendency that Makes for Righteousness," excite no enthusiasm and command no worship. Even the "Immensities" and "Eternities" of Carlyle awaken no inspiration and give no consolation to burdened hearts. They are iridescent dreams, but they proffer no help; they vouchsafe no sweet and tender sympathy. Without the personalness of God the universe is a glittering palace of ice.

The word "person" may be inadequate and misleading when applied to God, as all words of human framing must be when applied to Him who is above all; but it is correct at heart, and tells the truth. The same objections may be urged against any other word used to describe the Infinite. God may be more than personal; he certainly is not less than personal. In his Divine Presence we are painfully conscious of the poverty of human language; but our hearts realize that which we cannot express in words. It must be that this thought, conspicuous in the gorgeous and immemorial mythologies of ancient civilizations, and in the highest reaches of the most refined religion, is the soul's instinctive perception of the all-pervading presence and personalness of God.

It is possible to have a conception of God as the universal Father that will satisfy the heart and brain, without stumbling into the indecent familiarity of the old theologians, who stood ready to define the Infinite in a list of definite propositions, and to set the bounds of his habitation, or falling into the weird abyss of pantheistic speculation with its intellectual annihilation and spiritual demoralization. We may escape both the grotesque and the blasphemous. Reading the record of the rocks and the rivers, the story of the stars and the poetry of the flowers and the language of the spiritual forces and laws in the physical world, we may accept the fact of God's immanence in the universe, a truth vaguely rejected in the great pantheistic philosophies of the past; listening to the divine voice within, studying the purities and prophecies of the soul, its intuitions and aspirations, we may accept that conception of God which satisfies our souls and solves our difficulties—"personalness made limitless."

St. Louis, Mo.

DO WE LACK SPIRITUALITY?

T. H. BLENUS.

An intimate friend, of a number of years, said to me to-day: "Do you not think there is a great lack of spirituality and a want of piety in many who profess to accept the teaching of a primitive faith and practice?" The querest is a lady of wide experience and broad observation, a student of the Bible and above the average in intelligence. The question awakened a train of serious thought and reflection. The writer is not inclined to pessimism. On the other hand, we have been considered ready to excuse shortcomings in many instances and to lean toward optimism. There are doubtless low standards of religious sentiment and a corresponding laxity of religious practices among many professed Christians. With such people religion is only a graceful mantle, worn to screen an empty, hollow heart. Those of our number who are deficient in spirituality may swell the size of the Christian Church without in any way contributing to its usefulness. Such people may outwardly abstain from sinful indulgences, while at the same time they present to the world no distinctive religious characteristics. Their policy is to occupy a kind of neutrality between God and the world, while professing to range themselves on the side of God. Their half-souled religious sentiments, their timidity of heart, their fear of being odd or singular cause them often to sacrifice duty, privilege and religious uprightness to popular opinion and popular sentiment. Willing to reap largely when religion is in good report, they shrink back at the "reproach of Christ." Safely contracted within their own selfish interests they are neither "cold nor hot." This is their ordinary condition. Such ones in the midst of religious enthusiasm and excitements are easily kindled into an excess of zealous animation, but when this extraneous excitement is withdrawn and they are left entirely to their own resources, perhaps in the midst of a thousand hostile influences, they sink into spiritless inactivity, and what is still more lamentable, into a measurable conformity to irreligious surroundings. The very truth that the Christian Church is the church of the New Testament, that the Bible is our text-book and the inspired instructions of the apostles our rule of faith, precept and practice, should urge the deep and vital importance of every Disciple of Christ enlisting heartily in the sacred service of God, thus withering the sinews of a thousand evils, and sweeping from the face of the earth all the seducing vanities and ingenious fascinations of the present pervading evil of sinful trifling and fashionable unrighteousness.

The Christian Church is ruled by the royalty of principles that can never be discrowned. We accept no temporary policies and expediencies, but everlasting facts and commands and promises. These are built on what is imperishable, have their roots in the very nature of God and are linked to the car of his omnipotent benevolence. Once the butt of ecclesiastical jeer and reproach, whose very mention was veined with sneering irony, we stand to-day with a history, our proudest eulogy. The principles we advocate have had many faithful and fearless expounders. The age of our persecution and the scorpion tongue of defamation could not seal the lips of those who called public attention to our abused and neglected Bible. Our pioneers went forth bearing the reproach of Christ, taking it as their only patrimony. Can such a church or such a people ever lack the spirit and genius of a pure religion? Our noble aspirations, our high responsibilities, our exalted privileges, our splendid relationship to God and to his Son Jesus Christ forbid the very thought of a lack of spirituality in those whose hearts are pervaded by the simplicity and purity of truth, and who are strengthened by the mutual reflection of goodness through every walk of life.

Jacksonville, Florida.

THE SPIRITUAL SIDE OF OUR PLEA.

Without and Within—III.

A. B. JONES.

The work of reconstruction and restoration of primitive Christianity according to the divine pattern meant a mighty battle with the giants of error, and called for great wisdom and strength on the part of those who would achieve such a result. Never were these qualities more happily blended in men than in Thomas and Alexander Campbell. We limit the discussion of this subject, however, for the present, to the topic before us—the outward and the inward elements of religion. What was needed in their view in order to a proper reconstruction? Those familiar with the history and writings of Alexander Campbell know that his chief object was to restore the Word of God to its rightful authority, and to restore the ordinances of religion to their rightful position in the church. This he proposed without any abatement of spiritual power or vital piety among Christians. Alexander Campbell was an intensely religious man himself. He was well balanced, self-poised and a good all-round man. He labored to bring the Church of Christ to the same sort of equipoise. Speaking of his own efforts in this direction, in 1842, he says:

"Allow me, then, to say that the three great topics which have occupied public attention for some twenty-five years, so far as our proposed reformation is concerned, are 1st. The ordinances of Christianity; 2nd. The essential elements of the gospel itself; 3rd. The influence of human creeds as sources of alienation, schism and partyism in the church."

And again, in his debate with Rice in 1843, he says:

"The present century is really retrograding in the understanding and veneration of the ordinances, both of the communion and of the rite of initiation. America is behind the age, behind Christendom, on this subject."

It is plain to see, from his own declarations, what Mr. Campbell was laboring to achieve. But may we not wisely raise the question here, whether in this effort on our part to restore the external elements of Christianity to their proper, scriptural position, the pendulum may not have swung too far again in that direction? Has history even partially repeated itself here? That in some instances and in some measure this is true, it is probably wise and manly to concede. It is so easy and tempting to unload the heart's responsibilities upon outward acts of personal obedience, and thus to be satisfied with a superficial religion! And then men are differently organized. While some have a natural tendency to subjective thought, others are decidedly objective in their nature and habits. A preacher with great heart-power will develop his church in that direction, while a preacher of a legalistic cast of mind will have a formal church. There is a necessity for every one to strive for a full, all-around view of Christian life and character.

Even inspiration did not divest the apostles of their idiosyncrasies. Matthew and John present in their gospels a remarkable contrast in this respect. Matthew is objective. The parables of the Savior, drawn from the material things around him in the natural and social world, are all gathered up and carefully recorded by Matthew, while John passes these all by unnoticed. But these marvelous lessons of the Son of God, pertaining to the inner life, which Matthew overlooks, he is careful to record. For example, his conversation with the woman at the well: "Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that shall give shall be in him a well of water springing up to everlasting life," etc. And again: "The bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven and giveth life unto the world. I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." This same diversity in taste is seen in these two inspired writers in the prayers they are pleased to record and preserve. What is usually called the Lord's Prayer, which looks to the practical things of every-day life, Matthew treasurers up, while John gives us the real Lord's prayer in the 17th chapter of his Gospel, in which we have an unparalleled outpouring of divine thought and feeling from the great, burdened heart of the Savior of men: "Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee," etc.

In recording the commission, the great law of pardon, we observe the same difference in style. Matthew gives it thus: "All authority is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye, therefore, and disciple all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." That has a decided legalistic ring. It is like Matthew. John, recording the same incident in the life of Christ, breathes it out gently, thus: "Peace be unto you; as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you. And he breathed on them and said, Receive ye the Holy Spirit; whosesoever sins you remit they are remitted unto them, and whosesoever sins you retain they are retained."

Even in their introductions to their Gospels they maintain this contrast. Matthew begins: "The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the Son of David, the Son of Abraham," etc. This is the outward, human genealogy. John begins on this wise: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God and the Word was God."

Every writer of the New Testament, although inspired by the same Spirit, retains his own individuality, his own mental characteristics. The contrast is perhaps not so apparent between any others as has appeared in the instances cited. The man of broadest views, the one who could see both sides of his religion with quickest perception, and who could estimate their relative and comparative importance with greatest ease, and who presented them in their due proportion in boldest outline, was the Apostle Paul. Without his development of the subject our inspired religious literature would be incomplete, as it appears to me. As a thinker and expander of religion Paul stands nearest to the divine Master. And with both, the life "within" is the great essential; and yet the life "without" is held with due emphasis and importance.

When brethren find themselves differing over matters along the line we are now considering, may they not each conclude that this grows largely out of their own peculiar mental bias, and thus be stimulated to an effort for broader views of the subject?

It was the Savior's chief aim to set men right "within," to "make the tree good," that the "fruit might be good," to cleanse the heart by planting faith in it. All his blessings were conditioned on that. "According to your faith so be it unto you." He knew the power of a living faith, an unreserved trust of the soul in Christ, to make a new spiritual creature of man. And the Apostle Paul pleads, evermore, for the same great principle. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness." And again he says: "He is not a Jew which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision which is outward in the flesh; but he is a Jew which is one inwardly, and circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit, and not in the letter, whose praise is not of men, but of God" (Rom. 2:28).

In the Millennial Harbinger, February, 1851, Mr. Campbell writes an article on "Christianity Experienced and Enjoyed." In this article he labors to lead his brethren away from superficial views of religion, and to open a fountain of spiritual life within them. He quotes from a contemporary the following sentence: "If I have taken ten thousand dollars of stock in banks, and an equal amount in railroad shares, may I not risk a thousand or two dollars in church rates and my Sundays to meeting, on the more than equal probability that there is a heaven to gain and a hell to escape?" And he then adds: "In some such way as this and upon the same peradventure that it may all be true and right, it is to be feared many make the Christian profession." Mr. Campbell closes his article in these words:

"The advance in Christian knowledge, faith, hope, love, joy and peace—celestial fruits of the Holy Ghost dwelling in us—we rise in beauty, holiness and happiness. The path of life is, then, the path of peace, holiness and happiness. In this path may the Spirit of God guide us, the hand of Jehovah lead us from glory to glory 'now, henceforth and forever. Amen!"

Liberty, Mo.

Our Budget.

—Home Missions to the front.

—The time for a forward movement has come.

—There is a world's conference on missions now in session in New York City.

—Missions are fast becoming the foremost work of the religious world.

—We publish a few of the letters of appreciation of our Home Mission edition to show how strong the undercurrent for Home Missions is running.

—We are pleased to hand you another edition of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST this week loaded to the guards with burning thoughts, live, spiritual matter and inspiring church news.

—The Jews of Chicago have seen the absurdity of the "Charity Ball" idea and have abandoned it as "an expensive and wasteful manner of raising funds for the poor," and henceforth they will "devote their efforts to the raising of the necessary money from private sources." We trust this will become universal, for there never was anything much more incongruous than dancing for the benefit of the poor, and spending vastly more for questionable amusement than is raised for charitable purposes.

—The Christian Scientists of Chicago are protesting to the school authorities against having their children taught physiology in the public schools. A letter is presented from a lady who objects to her daughter entering the class which is just beginning that study. She says: "As a Christian Scientist I do not believe that it will be well for her to study it, and I object to it very much. I hope you will kindly excuse her from it so that I will not be obliged to take her out of school." The committee, however, seems to feel that the children of Christian Scientists would have to accept the same treatment as the other children, and the superintendent was instructed to so inform them when they complained. It would, indeed, require a great revolution of all the text-books to make them conform to the philosophy of Mrs. Eddy.

—Rev. W. M. Howie, writing to the New Voice on "How to Secure the Union of Christian Forces Against the Liquor Traffic," the need of which is acknowledged by all, suggests that at the coming annual gatherings of the various churches this matter be presented, and that a committee on temperance be appointed to consider ways and means for the union of the Christian forces, with power to act with like committees from other denominations for unity and effective service. These committees should then meet in pan-Christian council to discuss the various phases of the liquor traffic and best means for its overthrow. This would, no doubt, have its value, but it would be a good idea for the temperance organizations of various kinds to themselves agree on some method of bringing the united anti-saloon sentiment of the country to bear on this problem. Lack of unity has hitherto been the great weakness of the opposition to the liquor traffic. The problem of unification is, therefore, the most serious, as it is the most important, problem in connection with the war against the saloon.

—The Observer, of St. Louis, which was edited by the late Dr. D. M. Harris, whose recent death was noted in these columns, has been sold to the Board of Publication of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church at Nashville, Tenn., and its existence as a separate publication at St. Louis is ended. The Observer was an ably edited and up-to-date paper, and we trust that the paper into which it is merged may be successful.

—The Board of Church Extension recently received $5,000 on the annuity plan from David R. Pickens and his wife, Melissa Pickens, of Tyler, Tex. It will be remembered that Bro. and Sister Pickens gave $5,000 last July, which makes $10,000 that they have given in nine months to begin the new century with a quarter of a million for Church Extension. This is the second $5,000 gift which has come from Texas this year. It will be remembered that W. K. Homan, editor of the Christian Courier, which is published at Dallas, Tex., is president of the next National Convention, which meets in Kansas City, which is the headquarters of the Board of Church Extension. Bro. Homan will have reason to be proud of his state when he gives the president's address before the National Convention. The board has also recently received $500 from A. J. Thompson and wife, of New Albany, Ind., and $200 from Emmor Strawn, of Salem, O. On April 14th the receipts for Church Extension during the missionary year were $26,607.57, which is a gain of $6,585 over the same time last year.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given of the withdrawal of our special offer of the "Home and Farm Cyclopedia" for $2.50. The offer was made in this paper two weeks ago, and the supply is already exhausted. All other half-price offers remain in force for the present.

Christian Publishing Co.

—Northcutt and Moore wire us that they have had sixty additions to date in their meeting in Springfield, Missouri. Great interest prevails.

—The address recently delivered in the courthouse, Pittsfield, Ill., by Russell F. Thrapp, pastor of the church in that city, on the question, "Does It Pay?" has been tracted for general distribution by the temperance committee of that city. It is a strong arraignment of the saloon.

—D. R. Dungan, pastor Mt. Cabanne Christian Church, read his paper read at the recent Congress of Disciples in Indianapolis, on Textual Criticism of the Bible, to our preachers in this office on last Monday. But little exception was taken to the positions of the paper.

—The church at Westboro, Mo., would like to correspond with a pastor who can locate with them. They can employ him only for half time, but there is another congregation near which they think will co-operate with them and take the remainder of his time. Address W. H. Shough.

—A. E. Cory, of Oskaloosa, Iowa, spent last Sunday in St. Louis, preaching for the Beulah Church on Sunday morning and evening to the great delight of all who heard him. Bro. Cory and wife expect to sail for Honolulu in about three weeks, to which place they go as missionaries. Their work will be principally among the Japanese.

—The many friends of Christian University will regret to hear of the resignation of Pres. Clinton Lockhart, as announced last week. The attendance at the University, we learn, is larger than in any recent year; Chancellor Hardy has secured some liberal gifts to the endowment, and the outlook in general is very promising. The trustees will doubtless call some competent man to the presidency, and while such work requires sacrifice it is most important and should not be refused save for very grave reasons. This is of great moment to the brotherhood of Missouri. The school has made a most honorable record, having educated five hundred of our ministers, and should receive the hearty support of the church.

—Allen Wilson wires us that they have had ninety-two additions to date in their meeting in Bellefontane, Ohio. Twenty-five went forward on last Sunday. The interest is becoming intense.

—The papers of the Christian Church last week, generally, devoted much space to Home Missions. Most of them issued special Home Mission editions which were creditable both to their editors and to the cause. We have not published more thrilling, uplifting Home Mission literature than in our special edition last week, and we think the same feature is characteristic of all the papers. Should there not be a liberal offering for Home Missions the fault will not lie upon our church papers. But we predict a larger offering than we have yet known for Home Missions next month.

—The Maxinkuckee Association was organized April 6th, with a capital stock of $10,000. One-half the stock was taken and the remaining will be offered for sale at once. The charter members are J. V. Coombs, T. J. Legg, W. E. M. Hackleman, Dr. Callane, Richard Voorhees, Prof. Miller, T. J. Shuey, C. E. Cantrell, J. O. Ferrier and J. C. Guyan. The assembly will meet July 28th and close Aug. 13th. Maxinkuckee Park is situated on Maxinkuckee Lake, 100 miles south of Chicago and 33 miles north of Logansport.

—The Foreign Society has not made a mistake in its selection of a missionary for Honolulu if the preaching of A. E. Cory in this city on last Sunday may be taken as an index. His sermon at the Beulah Church, by request, on "The Boy Problem," was full of helpful, practical thought. In his long sea voyage and his work in Honolulu he will have the prayers and well wishes of the Beulah Church along with all who have personal knowledge of his ability and fitness for the work. There were four additions to the Beulah Church on last Sunday.

—From J.G. Slayter, who has just removed from Steubenville to Akron, Ohio, we learn the following facts about the church in Steubenville, Ohio: The church celebrated the first anniversary of the dedication of their new building April 15. The reports of the various departments showed the work as being in good condition. The debt on the building has been reduced from $8,200 to $3,800. About $7,800 was raised during the year by all departments of the church. There were 61 additions; 41 by baptism and 20 otherwise, 40 from the Bible-school. J. W. Kerns, of the Broad St. Church, Akron, takes up the Steubenville work May 1.

—Mrs. V. Mott Pierce has written a poem on "Our Absent Heroes," with apologies to Rudyard Kipling for his famous war poem, in which she calls attention to our own soldiers fighting and suffering in the Philippines, and their dependent loved ones waiting and enduring at home. Mrs. Pierce's poem is a timely admonition to our own people and nation. Many thousand dollars have been contributed in this country for the benefit of the widows and orphans of "Tommy Atkins," in England. This was sympathetic and generous; but what of the dependents of our own brave soldiers, who gave their lives in defense of the flag in the Philippines? Probably two-thirds of the men who fell in the campaigns against the insurgents, or died of disease since the military occupation began, left at home dear ones to whose support they contributed—if not a wife and children, aged parents, perhaps, in many cases. What has been done for them? The casualty lists reported from Manila, are fortunately not as long as they used to be, but they still come with regularity, and every name represents sorrow and loss to some American family. But no one seems to inquire who they are.

—The closing article of A. B. Jones on "With out and Within" was crowded out last week, but will be found elsewhere in this number.

—H. H. Peters, of Rantoul, Ill., says: "We raised $15.25 at Rantoul for the Benevolent Association. This work has a place on our program of missionary work. I think the church in Rantoul will observe Easter in the interest of the helpless in the future."

—R. L. Lotz, pastor of the church in West Plains, Mo., died April 19th, of pneumonia. We have no particulars at present other than that his remains will be carried to Bethany, Mo., for interment. We are surprised at this unexpected message and extend sympathy to the bereaved family. We shall expect a suitable obituary for our columns from some one of Bro. Lotz's large acquaintance, in due season.

—One of the most artistic publications ever issued by any railroad company has just reached our table from the Union Pacific Railroad. This unique publication contains forty full-page, elegantly colored views of scenery between the Missouri River and California, together with as many pages of descriptive literature in the clearest type and all upon the finest paper. A letter addressed to J. F. Aglar, General Agent U. P. Railroad, St. Louis, Mo., with four cents in stamps for postage inclosed, will secure a copy of this book of majestic scenery for your table.

—On April 17th the East End Christian Church, Pittsburg, Pa., T. E. Cramblet, pastor gave a public reception to one hundred and forty-three new members. A special program consisting of music, prayer, talks, solos and refreshments made the occasion one of interest and profit. The printed program contained a supplementary part with the name and address of each new member in whose honor the reception was given.

—A sister wrote asking an article on "The Relation of Pastor and Church," and requested the editor or N. J. Aylsworth to write the article. It didn't take editor long to decide which one of us would write the better article on the subject, and Bro. Aylsworth was immediately pressed into service. The result is the first part of the article which is published elsewhere. Do not fail to read it. Bro. A.'s pen illumines every subject it touches.

"Deeds Are Better Than Words."

What does Hood's Sarsaparilla do? The answer comes full-throated from a gigantic chorus of healthy men and happy women. "It does just what it claims to do." It purifies the blood as nothing else can. The number of those who answer thus is legion and their sentiment is unanimous.

Kidney Trouble—"Grip left me with severe pains in my back and kidneys. Could not walk without support. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and was soon relieved. Am also cured of catarrh and indigestion." W. A. Reed, 17 Mowry Avenue, East Providence, R. I.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

—Our Home Field, published in Cincinnati, in the interest of Home Missions, has the right ring. It ought to be distributed in the churches by hundreds.

—Two good friends of the Foreign Society made liberal offerings last week. One gave $5,000 on the annuity plan, the other gave $1,000 direct. The annuity fund now amounts to $88,000, only $12,000 short of the $100,000 the society hopes to reach for that fund this year.

—Geo. F. Hall, assisted by Peter P. Bilhorn, singer, has just concluded a successful revival meeting of fifty days in the Tabernacle Christian Church at Decatur, Ill. The last day was a busy one and all the services largely attended. The communion services in the Tabernacle on Sunday morning was said to be the largest one in a year. We understand that brethren Hall and Bilhorn contemplate a work to begin in the Auditorium, Chicago, next fall, which will take him from Decatur and which he contemplates as his future life work. He has already notified his brethren in Decatur of his plans, but he has not resigned as yet. He has been in Decatur seven years.

—Word has just reached us that the property of the West Creighton Avenue Church, Ft. Wayne, Indiana, for which an appeal was made through our columns the last two issues, has been saved. This is good news. The letter giving particulars came too late for this issue, but will appear next week.

—The editor of this paper and one of the assistants, W. E. Garrison, are absent from the office and city this week. The editor is in New York City attending the great world's conference on missions. The assistant editor has started on his annual European trip to be absent probably until September. He expects to see the Ecumenical Conference in New York, then to visit the World's Fair in Paris, France. After this he will pass through a number of European nations east and north of France as far as to the Arctic Circle, thence south through Russia to the Mediteranean Sea and homeward. A part of the trip will be made on the wheel as when in Europe last summer, and letters with some degree of regularity from start to finish will be furnished the readers of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

—The Easter service of the First Christian Church, of Colorado Springs, Col., was participated in by the Pike's Peak Commandery No. 6, K. T., having a program especially arranged for the occasion. The programs were neatly printed, tract form, ten pages, in paper cover. The service was doubtless beautiful and impressive.

—The work of the Home Missionary Society is a gigantic one and requires all the support that can be summoned to it. We are passing through a critical period in our history wherein it is to be proven whether we shall ourselves occupy the virgin soil of the Western states or permit the denominational brethren to preempt that territory. If all our churches respond heartily and promptly we shall be able to carry on an effectual and aggressive campaign in all parts of the country. We therefore feel called upon to urge the brethren everywhere to remember the necessity of keeping "Home Missions to the front."

—J. W. Ellis and J. B. Ellis, of Plattsburg, Mo., have been called to Central Christian College, Albany, Mo., the former as president of the college and the latter a professor in the Chair of English Literature. However efficient may have been the former presidents and professors of Christian College, we are confident that the standard has not been lowered by the call of Bro. Ellis and his son to their respective positions in that growing institution.

Headache may be called a woman's ailment. Some men suffer from it. But almost all women have to endure its pain with each recurring month. This fact points at once to the intimate relation between the health of the delicate womanly organs, and the general health of the whole body. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription banishes headache by banishing its cause. It cures the diseases which irritate the delicate womanly organs, fret the nerves and waste the strength. It increases the vitality and builds up the nervous system. "Favorite Prescription" contains no opium, cocaine or other narcotic.

"I want to praise your medicine," writes Mrs. Sarah J. Burney, of Cresent City, Putnam Co., Fla. "I have been sick for twenty years, and have been almost in bed five years, and now I am able to work all day. I have taken eight bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and four of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and one vial of 'Pellets.' I praise your medicine to all. I had the headache but it is gone. My throat is well and cough gone, and all my old troubles are better. I tried many other kinds of medicine and four doctors."

FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION
MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG AND SICK WOMEN WELL.

—A call has been issued for a memorial edition of the late H. L. Hastings' lecture on "The Inspiration of the Bible," to consist of not less than one million copies. This call has been endorsed by a large number of prominent clergymen in the East. It is the purpose of Mrs. H. L. Hastings to carry on the work inaugurated by her lamented husband, and all orders for copies should be addressed to her at 49 Cornhill, Boston, Mass. All orders will be filled at the uniform rate of $20 per thousand copies.

—The Tabernacle Visitor, edited by S. M. Perkins, Council Bluffs, Ia., is a very neatly printed journal of carefully prepared matter, published semimonthly in the interest of the church in that city.

—From the Bethany C. E. Bulletin for April we learn that there are now more than 20,000 of the C. E. handbooks in circulation. With no organization to push the enterprise and no agency in the field this is certainly an encouraging record, and very complimentary to the intrinsic value of both the movement and the books. As to the handbooks the managers of the Bethany C. E. Reading Courses say: "We wish to have samples of these handbooks shown to C. E. Societies, to C. W. B. M. Auxiliaries, to churches, to conventions, to summer assemblies and to all gatherings of Christian people. For this purpose we will gladly send a limited number of handbooks, at our expense, to any responsible person, with liberty to return, at our expense, those that are not sold. All orders for these sample copies should be addressed to J. Z. Tyler, 798 Republic St., Cleveland, O."

—The semi-annual convention of the churches of the twelfth missionary district of Indiana will be held with the church in Bruceville, May 2-4. An interesting and profitable program has been prepared and arrangements made for a fine convention. The importance of these district conventions is too often overlooked. This should not be. There is no reason why a district convention should not partake of the same spirit and enthusiasm of our larger conventions, and it only remains for the brethren in a given district to make it such by their attendance.

—Dr. McGiffert, in resigning from the Presbyterian Church, says in his letter to the New York Presbytery:

I do not withdraw because I regard the charges of heresy preferred against me so well founded, or because I recognize the justice of the accusations that have been made in many quarters, for I still believe, as I believed when I wrote to the General Assembly last spring, that my views are in harmony with the faith of the Presbyterian Church and of evangelical Christendom in all vital and essential matters; but I cannot feel that it is my duty to go through the trial before the General Assembly which the appeal will doubtless precipitate, and I am unwilling needlessly to prolong the agitation that has been distracting the church and preventing it from giving itself unreservedly to its true work of advancing the kingdom of God.

—In speaking of the Home Mission number of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, of last week, Charles Lloyd Garrison, of Eminence, Ky., says:

There in something thrilling and martial in the ring of the current CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. It should strike a responsive chord in the heart of every minister of the gospel. There are times when it is the duty of every preacher to be great. There are times when it is possible for every preacher to be great. On the first Sunday in May every man among us ought to be transformed by the greatness of his theme and speak with prophetic emphasis.

"On—onward still! Ye hearts of fire,
Time, right and dauntless blood conspire;
The days are come—it is the hour
When God's right hand shall show his power.
On—onward still!"

—The following testimony concerning the merit of the Campbell and Purcell debate by one of our strongest temperance preachers is worthy of a place in these columns:

I am glad the Christian Pub. Co. is getting out a new and cheap edition of the Campbell and Purcell debate. I have just reread the great work, and I hope it will have a very extensive sale. Our new possessions will require considering the issues between Rome and Protestants. Recently I heard a priest lecture and he said: "This sect is so new that I believe Mr. Campbell is still living." When he got through with the Episcopalians and Methodists, I said to myself: "You can't say we came out of your apostolic succession." Whoever wants to wade through all the blood and crime after apostolic succession may have it. Purcell does not deny that more than 100 were killed in the election of Pope Damascus. Mr. C. shows that the Catholics are neither holy, catholic or apostolic. His disposal of Irenæus as first witness for a succession is masterly. Irenæus says Paul and Peter founded the Church of Rome—a case of Paul vs. Irenæus. S. W. CRUTCHER.

Pine Bluff, Ark., April 16, 1900.

—The following paragraph from one of the wide-awake, front-rank preachers of Illinois shows how receptive our preachers are to good, fresh literature on an old but undeveloped theme:

DEAR CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST: — Let me congratulate you on your splendid appeal for Home Missions in the issue of this week. It is the finest appeal you have ever made, and it ought to stir all your readers to a liberality hitherto unknown among our people. If we do not come to the front in Home Missions it will be a burning shame, for with such a plea as we have and such wide-open doors as no other people has ever had in all the world, if we fail we will cripple the cause of primitive Christianity for a full generation. Our people have money enough to convert all the United States, and thus prepare us to convert the world. By our plea we have assumed great responsibilities, and if we follow as the Lord will lead great victories will come to us; but if we draw back and refuse to follow our Leader into these open doors spiritual ruin will overtake us and the splendid victories now in sight will be lost. God help us to do our duty in bringing Home Missions to the front! J. H. SMART.

Centralia, Ill.

WATCH YOUR KIDNEYS.

The Most Important Organs in the Human Body—They Throw Out All Disease.

Swamp-Root Cures Weak Kidneys.

Does your back ache?
Do you have pains across your kidneys?
Is your complexion chalky, gray, white?
Is your skin dry or feverish? Are there puffy bags beneath your eyes?
Are your eyes dull, listless and dead-looking?
Are you irritable and hard to please?
Do you feel as though you had heart trouble?
Do you have to urinate several times in the night? Is there ever a scalding, burning sensation there?
Do you feel the desire immediately to urinate again, with no result?
Is your urine clouded, thick or milky?
Is there any sediment or do particles float in it?

Don't neglect these conditions, and if they or any part of them are yours, Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, will be found just the medicine you need.

Here's a simple test for the kidneys, just as certain as though a physician were in personal attendance on your case: Pour some of you "morning" urine in a glass or bottle and allow it to stand twenty-four hours. Then hold it up to the light, and if you find any settlings or sediment, or if it is thick or milky, or if small particles float about in it, don't hesitate for a moment, but write at once to Dr. Kilmer & Co., mention the St. Louis CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST and immediately begin using the sample of Swamp-Root which you will receive at once, absolutely free by mail. The results will surprise you.

Swamp-Root is purely vegetable, pleasant to take, and is for sale by druggists everywhere in bottles of two sizes and two prices—fifty cents and one dollar. Bear in mind the name, Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

...A CAMPBELL LIBRARY...

Alexander Campbell did not leave many books. The greater part of his time and strength was spent in preaching, lecturing, teaching and writing for periodicals. But he found time to prepare a few books, and these volumes should have a place in the library of every intelligent Disciple, and especially of every Christian preacher. The works of Mr. Campbell are now owned and published by the Christian Publishing Company. That they may be within the reach of practically every one, we have decided to make a Combination Offer of the following:

THE CHRISTIAN SYSTEM.
CHRISTIAN BAPTISM.
LETTERS TO A SKEPTIC.
LIFE AND DEATH.
CAMPBELL-PURCELL DEBATE.
CAMPBELL-OWEN DEBATE.
SERMON ON THE LAW.
GRAFTON'S LIFE OF CAMPBELL.

Three of these works are pamphlets--Letters to a Skeptic, Sermon on the Law and Life and Death. The other five are handsome cloth-bound volumes, aggregating almost 2,000 pages. At our regular catalogue rates the eight books would cost $6.76.

PRICE PER SET, $4.00.

Cash must accompany orders. Books will be sent by express, charges to be paid by purchaser. The publishers reserve the right to withdraw this offer at any time, without notice.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, 1522 Locust Street, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Personal Mention.

The address of J. A. Mohorter, in Boston, has been changed from 28 Akron St., to 20 St. James Street.

J. W. Lowber, of Austin, is now delivering a a course of lectures at the West Texas Normal and Business College, located at Cherokee, Texas.

The church in Owingsville, Ky., T. S. Tinsley, pastor, is publishing a small paper called the Church Invitation.

David Walk has been chosen by the faculty of Add-Ran University to deliver the oration at the commencement in June.

W. H. Fry, of Christopher, Ill., is preparing a lecture on the "Fools of Fortune," which he proposes to deliver on reasonable terms wherever wanted.

Dr. F. M. Kirkham, for many years the editor of the Christian Courier, now the Christian Century, has returned from the Pacific Coast and located at Des Moines, Ia.

Charles Reign Scoville is now in a meeting with the Sixth Street Church, Kansas City, Mo., with crowded house and two confessions the first night.

J. N. Jessup's lecture on "Tombstone Literature" recently delivered in Little Rock, Ark., is said to have been very entertaining and to have been heard by a very appreciative audience.

W. A. Van Dyke, pastor of the church in Sherwood, Ohio, reports the church there in a prosperous state. They had a protracted meeting of three weeks, resulting in 66 additions.

C. C. Cline is holding a meeting a Orange, Ind., and putting the completing touches on "Popular Hymns, No. 2," soon to be issued by the Christian Pub. Co.

The First Christian Church in Wheeling, W.Va., is publishing a paper monthly called the Christian Times. It is edited by C. M. Oliphant and contains a good variety of news and Christian literature

H. H. Peters, of Rantoul, Ill., recently delivered two lectures in Willard Memorial Hall, La Fayette, Ind. He also delivered a lecture in Greenville, Ill., his former pastorate, April 18, on "Odd-Fellowship in Symbolism."

Russell B. Briney has resigned his work at Amarillo, Tex., to take effect May 27th. He has accepted a call to Monroe City, Mo., where he begins work June 1st. He is now engaged in a meeting at Bowie, Tex., with good prospects.

J. E. Stuart, of Harriman, Tenn., having resigned, is made cognizant of the deep esteem in which he was held by resolutions of regret from the official board of the church and from the preachers' union of that city, of which he was president.

W. L. Dudley, of Oranda, Va., informs us of the sudden death of one of the faithful members of the Walnut Springs congregation, Abram Kern. He had been a member of that congregation for 28 years, and leaved a wife and an only son to mourn his departure.

E. Finley Mahan, of Shelbyville, Ind., is to deliver a sermon to the students of the Indiana State University, at Bloomington, on Tuesday of this week. On June 13th he will sail for Europe for a three months' tour of the Continent. He says that he will supply his pulpit while away.

Wallace Brockman reports things in a flourishing condition at Jacksonville, Ill. Easter Sunday was a high day there. There were three additions at the close of the Junior C. E. service, led by Stella Wharton. Bro. Snively, the pastor, and Bro. Roach, the assistant pastor, have the work well in hand, so that no interest of the church or department of its work seems to be lagging. The good results of the Scoville meeting are still spoken of and felt.

The church at Maysville, Ky., held its annual reception for members and friends Tuesday evening, April 17th. The pews were removed from the auditorium and it was tastefully arranged as a drawing room; lamps, plants, etc., being profusely used in decorating it. Ices and cakes were served while the Maysville orchestra furnished music for the occasion. Reports from all branches of the work show the Maysville church to be in a vigorous and healthy condition. Howard T. Cree is pastor.

M. E. Harlan, of Sterling Place Church of Christ, Brooklyn, upon request recently preached a discourse upon the distinctive features of the restoration movement, and an outline of the sermon was published in the Brooklyn Eagle.

J. H. Bryan says that one of the revival institutes of Bro. T. A. Hedges, Sunday school evangelist for Missouri, will stir up your church to a further appreciation of its opportunities and responsibilities, strengthen your preacher with his people and increase the interest and attendance at your Bible school. Bro. Bryan speaks from experience with Bro. Hedges at Montgomery City and Jonesburg, Mo.

S. G. Battenfield, pastor Christan Church, Eureka Springs, Ark., was present at our preachers' meeting in this office on last Monday. He was on his way the burial of the remains of Mrs. White, at Greenville, Ill. Mrs. White died suddenly in Eureka Springs last week. Bro. Battenfield reports the town of Eureka Springs as "booming." The church is doing as well as possible in its present location. Hope, however, to sell and relocate, more convenient to the people.

CHANGES.

John Logan, Sedalia, Mo., to Gatesville, Tex.
Robt. Graham, Chattanooga, Tenn., to Bellevue, Pa.
Henry C. Canter, Frankfort, Ind., to Colchester, Ill.
Geo. W. Kemper, Lexington to Midway, Ky.
J. M. Downing, Post Oak to Hoffmann, Mo.
Jas. E. Myers, Philadelphia, Pa., to Ft. Worth, Tex.
Austin Hunter, Cleveland, O., to Chicago, Ill.
Albert Buxton. Waco to Hillsboro, Tex.

Wanted: President with $2,000 to crowd Fraternal Insurance Association. We have the most equitable reserve plan and a proposition that is a winner, and doing a good business. Address, "Wanted, President," care THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, St. Louis.

N. J. Aylsworth.

The picture which we present to our readers on our first page this week is a very recent one of our esteemed brother and contributor to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, N. J. Aylsworth.

Bro. Aylsworth was born on a farm in Lake County, Ill., in 1843, where he grew to manhood. In his fifteenth year he began teaching in a district school and continued to teach during the winters until he graduated from college. He graduated from Chicago University, in the classical department, in 1863, being then twenty years old, and received the degree of M. A. three years later. He was married the same year to Miss Margaret Oatman, and in the autumn began teaching at the high school at Barrington, Ill. As continued confinement in the schoolroom did not agree with his health, he gave up teaching two years later and read medicine, and during the time of preparation for the medical profession supplied the pulpit of the little church at Barrington. This little church does not exist now, but three preachers went forth from it—Ira J. Chase, W. P. Aylsworth and the subject of this sketch. It was during his labors for this little church that he received a proposition from the Lake County missionary organization to act as county evangelist for six months. He accepted this proposition, and this was followed by an engagement with the church at O'Plain, near Waukegan; Ill. This was followed by a pastorate at Ligonier, Ind. After this he undertook the building of a congregation and a house of worship in Angola, Ind. This being accomplished, he went as a missionary to Ft. Wayne in the employ of the State Board, and spent five years there, resulting in a church of 160 members and a church property worth $10,000. This work proved too hard for his slender constitution and he left Ft. Wayne an invalid. He then engaged to preach for a church at Syracuse, N. Y., one sermon a week, and continued this arrangement a year and a half, when he came to Auburn, N. Y., his present home, in quest of an easir and more compact field. He preached two years and a half at this place, the last year and a half on crutches, until he became disabled for service, in 1881. He was confined in bed for many years, but of late years has been much better, though he will never be able to walk or stand, and is in bed a large part of each day.

Referring to his life, he says in a letter to the editor: "It is a life which can best be described by one word, failure, and it would suit me quite as well to have it forgotten." In this judgment we are sure our readers, and all who have come in contact with his writings, will not agree. It is not improbable that God is doing a work through Bro. Aylsworth's affliction that could not be accomplished otherwise.

Bro. D. H. Patterson, pastor of the church at Auburn, sends us the following sketch of Bro A.:

Bro. Aylsworth is remarkable for versatility. His social conversation is as interesting as his writing. He is willing to talk and always has something to say. He is also a good listener; he will allow his companion his full share of the conversation if not more; yet, there are few who care to talk if they may listen to him. One realizes that he is in the presence of a superior mind, but never feels ill at ease.

He reads a book and tells you what it contains. His memory reaches across years of physical pain and debility and lays hold of treasures gathered more than a quarter of a century ago. The standard books of his library have long been sold, those that are left are out of date; yet, with wonderful alertness he seizes current thought from most meager sources.

After fourteen years of mental inactivity, strength seemed to be returning somewhat and he was brought to church occasionally. I told him I thought he could preach. In June, 1895, he did so; those who heard him said his preaching was with astonishing vigor and clearness. Our state convention met in Auburn in September of that year. He was asked to preach at one of the sessions, and consented. Probably no audience was ever more surprised and more delighted. For fifty minutes the gracious words flowed from his lips with ever increasing eloquence. To those who had known him in former years the sermon seemed almost like a voice from the dead. The editor of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST not only published the sermon, but asked him to become an occasional contributor. His articles always whet the appetite for more. The "Frequency of the Lord's Supper" not only instructs but constantly delights the reader. Certainly, every one who reads this little booklet will want the "Spiritual Aspects of Baptism." This work ought to be published. There is every reason for publishing it. We need the book; the cause will be helped by it, and will be hindered—greatly hindered—if it is not published and read. There is a freshness in this work that ought to inspire a new interest in the preaching upon that important theme.

Easter Returns.

I am much pleased to report an increase in all reports received during the week ending April 21 In every instance except two the receipts have been longer, some double, some treble that of last year. Of the two that were less, one was an individual donation and the other a Bible-school which was short 18 cents. But we expect to hear from that school again.

Our receipts from April 15 to April 21 were $1,206.88, and not a fourth of the churches we expect to hear from have yet reported, among them some of our strongest churches. The above amount includes only one of the St. Louis churches We are anxiously waiting and hoping to reach the $5,000 mark.

We would ask our friends to please not return the envelopes after they have been used. Take out the money and send it in draft, postal or express order, to

MRS. J. K. HANSBROUGH, Cor. Sec.
5018 Cabanne Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

The Magic Darner

is a household necessity; mends any garment by weaving to match original warp; marvellous.
By Mail, 35 cents.
AGENTS WANTED—CITY AND COUNTRY—MANY QUICK SELLERS. Chas. H. Till, 207a Lake Street Chicago.

Correspondence.

English Topics.

AN AMERICAN HERO AT KIMBERLEY.

Pathetic stories are coming to hand in voluminous quantity from the field of war in South Africa. One which I have read this morning in the latest news arriving will be of great interest to American friends. The account is sent by Mr. Julian Ralph one of the most brilliant of American literary men as a newspaper correspondent. He is in South Africa as correspondent for the Daily Mail, the most popular of London journals. Mr. Ralph shows that the marvelous defense of Kimberley was conducted mainly by her civilians, whose salvation of their town puts the siege in contrast with all the other records of this war up to this time. The Imperialist soldiers under Colonel Kekewich were a brave little band, but they were too few to be of any avail had not the townsmen developed wonderful heroism. Cecil J. Rhodes was the soul of the defence. With all his serious faults that man is to be reckoned with as one of the most extraordinary leaders of other men in this age. But of his wonderfully resourceful doings at Kimberley I am not at the moment concerned. Equal to him in the value of his assistance was Geroge Labram, chief engineer of the De Beers Company. This fine specimen of manhood was an American. His talents were wonderful. He was killed during the siege and his widow and very promising little son will be generously cared for by the company. But it is said that had he lived the government could hardly have done him any honor commensurate with his deserts. He was the inventive genius of the place and time. To him nothing seemed impossible. He it was who made the famous Kimberley big gun, and to make it he had to devise and construct the tools for its manufacture. Before that he turned out shells for the cannon of the Regulars. He built a cold storage apparatus for preserving the meat used in the town. To do this he was obliged to construct the ice machines, doing all in nine days. So marked was the ability of this American, and so colossal were his services, that the Regulars buried him, civilian though he was, with full military honors. And just here let me say that Americans are taking great part in present events in South Africa. Most of the chief engineers at the mines before the war broke out were of your nation. The best scouts now in our army in the field are Americans. And many of the capitalists interested in the gold mines at Johannesburg are also from the United States. In this terrific contest England has no monopoly of interest. The issues will be arbitrated by the mysterious Power we call Providence, and they will be for the ultimate good of the races in Africa, more especially of the colored race, on whom the Boers have had scant compassion.

MY LAST MISSIONARY SERMON.

Let not my readers be at all alarmed. I am am not going to inflict on them even an outline of one of my sermons. I am merely going to allude to a sentiment I ventured to express to my people when recently on "Missionary Sunday" advocating the cause of Foreign Missions. I quoted a striking passage from a powerful paper read by our clever sister who was for some years with us in England, Mrs. J. J. Haley. She related to us how she had known a whole association of wealthy and powerful Baptist churches in America dwindle and at last die right out, simply because they were every one persistently anti-missionary. That paper produced a lasting effect on the minds of friends in our English churches. In my sermon I applied Sister Haley's citation of facts to the Boers as a nation. They are of the old, hard, Calvinistic, missionary-hating type. And I insisted in the course of my preaching on my conviction that however firmly the Boers adhere to the notion that they have a monopoly of the divine favor, they are as certain through anti-missionary selfishness to lose that grace and favor as any anti-missionary church. Pietism may stagnate till it becomes putrescent in the view of Heaven, and virtue quickly rots away into vice if tinctured by selfish Pharisaism.

A SPLENDID NEW BOOK.

I know that many of my American readers like to receive a brief summary of any really fine new book which appears from the British press. One is just issued which is sure to be accessible to students on your side in a short time, for it is published by the great Anglo American firm of Macmillan. It is "The Apocalypse: An Introductory Study of the Revelation of St. John the Divine. By Edward White Benson, sometime Archbishop of Canterbury." Now, here is a real masterpiece of theological authorship. It will be a treasure in the Christian's library. The late Archbishop of Canterbury was a man of loveliest character. He was the seraph of the Episcopal bench. And, like his successor, the present Dr. Temple, he was a magnificent scholar, each having been of the race of "schoolmaster bishops." I was charmed when, after the lamented death of Archbishop Benson, I read his book, which came out posthumously, "The Life of Cyprian," for that work was characterized by an inimitable blending of erudition, piety and literary beauty. I felt that I knew, after reading these delightful pages about the early Bishop of Carthage, that I had been treated to a realistic, pre-Raphaelite sort of picture of early Christianity in North Africa; and that I had been transported back to Carthage, in the days when it had been built up again after the Roman desolation of the city of Hamilcar and Hannibal, and when it had become a seat of Christian knowledge and worship. And now this new book, issued by Miss Benson, is another monument to the learning and genius of her father. Benson was not a statesman, as Temple is. But he was a much more fascinating and winning type of clergyman. And he was a literary expert. I am not aware that the present primate has ever written any book at all worthy of the name, or that he is likely to leave one behind him. He is a great, good and learned man, but is more respected than loved. He is a wit, who loves to tell stories of himself. One of these is to the effect that when he was headmaster of Rugby, one of his pupils wrote home to his father a list of his schoolboy grievances. He added concerning the headmaster, "Temple is a beast, but he is a just beast." Now, nothing derogatory to his temperament or disposition was ever said of Benson, who was the incarnation of episcopal grace. This new book is unique in its method of treating that most vexed of hermeneutical problems, the interpretation of the Apocalypse. It will strike the student that it is a great gain indeed to have this most difficult of New Testament treatises "written out fair," so to speak, as it is in this handsome volume. The Letters to the Seven Churches, for example, are quite a different thing when exhibited in their structure proper, of correspondence between Title, Charge and Reward, from what they are in the uniform verse division of the Authorized Version. The accurate, if sometimes pedantic, translation of the Hort-Westcott text is also a great help to the imagination. We have defined for us the different actors in the drama, the voices, and the choric songs which divide the action, each of these being shown to have its appropriate structure—threefold, fourfold or sevenfold—according as it represents the comment of the elders, the angels, or creation. Thus the Archbishop exhibits in absolutely perfect form the structure of the Book of the Revelation. But he is by no means content with this exercise of his analytic faculty. His inquiry into the meaning of the Apocalypse or Revelation proceeds on what I think must be admitted to be the only scientific method in this as also in the question of miracles. That method is the comparison of the recorded experiences of the men of that day rather than the consideration of what is possible in our own time. Its results in this important conclusion, that in St. John's Apocalypse as well as in the various other scattered apocalypses referred to in the New Testament, we have an actual unveiling of spiritual fact. Now spiritual facts are the material on which early Christian "Gnosis" worked as a basis. But what was Christian "Gnosis?" It was an insight into the divine rationale of such spiritual facts of our existence and experiemce. Let it never be forgotten that the bulk of the New Testament consists of this true "Gnosis" or knowledge of an experience that worldly philosophy can never gain. But it is this same character of the Apocslypse as an immediate revelation of the spiritual fact surrounding our earthly life which has made it the peculiar sport of that respectable profanity which searches out allusions to particular persons and events which happens to interest it at the moment. But the Archbishop, in agreement with the best recent commentators, will have nothing to say to those who read Napoleon or Mr. Gladstone between the lines of this book. It is only "unseen beings" who are unveiled in this awe-inspiring scene, together with certain abstractions representing tendencies operating on the religious history of mankind. Dr. Benson's splendid work will encourage many again to take up a part of the Bible from which they have been frightened both by its inherent difficulties and by the futility of commentators upon it. Here is one of his beautiful observations. In speaking of the gospel "unveiling" of the character of God: "If God's love does not exhibit the identity of his will with the law of righteousness by severing from life the transgressor who turns from but cannot undo his deed, will he exhibit it upon himself? He does. He puts away sin by sacrificing himself."

W. DURBAN.

43 Park Road, South Tottenham, London, March 28, 1900.

SUPPLANT COFFEE.

Belief of a Raymond Lady.

Mrs. J. T. Bartlett, Raymond, N. H., says: "I suspected that coffee was the cause of my persistent dyspepsia and terrible feeling of weakness and faintness at the heart. It was hard to give up coffee, but when I got some Postum Food Coffee and learned to make it properly I quickly obtained relief from the old troubles. The unpleasant sensation of faintness at the heart has entirely gone.

"When I first tried Postum, I failed to notice the injunction to boil it fifteen minutes, and so let it boil just a few minutes, as I would coffee. I was disappointed in the flavor, and did not try it again until told by a friend that this was one of the absolute essentials. I have since observed the rule and am entirely satisfied with the drink. It is simply perfect. I believe it to be the beverage of the future, and that it is destined to supplant coffee everywhere.

"One of our business men here has been improved in health by the use of it. No one could wish to return to coffee drinking after properly testing your delightful and healthful Postum Food Coffee."

Made at the pure food factories of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.

New York Letter.

There is no question that churches of different faith are more and more observing with special emphasis and much display the annual Easter time. Among those making a special feature of the Easter celebration this season was the Calvary Baptist Church, of which the Rev. R. S. McArthur is the pastor. The large platform and pulpit was banked with lilies, roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, goldenrod and ferns. In the afternoon a special baptismal service was held, when eighty persons were united with Christ in the likeness of his burial and resurrection. At this service all the infant and primary classes of the Sunday-school entered the church carrying Easter lilies, followed by forty young girls robed in white, and men, women and boys in sombre black, who were to be baptized, all singing the baptismal chant: "The Holy Trinity and the Jordan," which was written for the occasion by the organist of the church. This was a most beautiful and significant service. I wish all immersionists would study to make more than they ordinarily do of this meaningful ordinance. We should lose no opportunity rightly to impress its real significance and importance upon the people.

***

The realization of decadence or failure is sometimes the one thing needful to revive our work for Christ. It seems at least the Methodists are determined to turn their comparative failure of the past two or three years into greater success. As is known they have decided to cease not in their efforts to raise $20,000,000 for missions until that amount is in hand as a monumental missionary fund of the twentieth century. They can do it and doubtless they will. They have just inaugurated a movement at the Metropolitan Temple in this city which they propose to extend throughout Methodism—a series of twentieth-century revival meetings for the conversion of two million persons to Christ. Dr. S. P. Cadman, the pastor of the Temple, is being assisted by William Phillips Hall, the noted "lay evangelist." No doubt great good will be accomplished in this work, and in it all we are constrained to rejoice; but we should be much more delighted if these evangelists would preach more of the pure and simple gospel and less "ism" and emotionalism. After all there is nothing that wins the hearts of men in America to-day like the simple old story of the cross. And no other people tell it as the Disciples of Christ, as the results of their work so abundantly prove. Therefore let us tell it again and again.

***

The Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, in his last Sunday's discourse, vigorously assailed the creed of his own denomination, the Westminster Confession of Faith. He calls it an incubus; declares the Presbyterians must have a new creed; amending or revising the old one will not do; it must be born again, he says. Hear what he says:

"We ought to have a new Confession of Faith. It is surprising that the Presbyterian Church is able to do as much as it is doing with such an incubus strapped upon us as we are tottering under in our present Confession In the first place, the thing needed is not a system of theology, for that is what our present Confession is, but a simple, brief, Saxon statement of a half dozen or so of the vital ingredients of Jesus Christ's message to the world. I could get along with a Confession of Faith containing but the little that Jesus said when he was trying to make a Christian of Nicodemus: 'God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life.' That gives to us the doctrine of God's unlimited love, human guilt, the divinity of Christ, salvation through Christ, faith in Christ, immortality; every word Saxon, three-quarters of the words monosyllables, profound enough for any elder, simple enough for any four-year-old.

"At any rate we want a new creed. Amending this one will not meet the necessities of the case. Better give it a dignified place in the museum for what it is than hack it to pieces and revamp it for what it is not. It is like human nature in this respect—mending will not make it whole—and its only chance lies in being born again.

"And then, once more, if there were among us the distinct feeling which the gospel so wonderfully guarantees, that everything in all this great Christian matter pivots on the absolute and unconditioned love of God, we should be intolerant toward everything that states or even suggests anything like a partial or an arbitrary love on God's part, loving some because he chose to, and damning the rest in order to show what he could do and how just he was.

"Now, that is in our book, the Presbyterian Confession of Faith, in the third chapter. If we are thorough Presbyterians and believe what our doctrinal prospectus advertises us as believing, we believe it probable that some of the children in your homes, little children, perhaps the babe of your bosom, is damned, already damned, damned before it was born, damned from everlasting to everlasting, and then you are invited to come into church and say, 'Our Father!' Why, any man who should become a father for the sake of the joy and "glory" he would use in burning and racking his own offspring, deliberately creating a child with a view to the agony into which he was going to torture it, would be chased from the earth as a fiend and as an ebullition. It does not meet the case to say that it is only in the 'book,' and that nobody preaches it. It is true that nobody preaches it, and equally true, I doubt not, that nobody believes it; nevertheless, it is printed on the flag beneath which the Presbyterian army is marching, and it hurts us as a denomination. Men are staying out because it is there, and men are going out because it is there.

"It is a damage to every communion and to the whole Church of Christ that phrases such as occur in the third chapter of our Confession are allowed to stand as even the nominal expression of what we as Presbyterians believe; they are a permanent insult to the cross of Christ, which stands as a declaration of God's illimitable love for all his children, an invitation written in the Lord's own blood: 'Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.'

"We pray that the time may be hastened when this libel on the infinite grace of God shall be erased from our records, when we shall all become so enamored of the spirit of Jesus as to be willing to break with human tradition, that confessing the helpless corruption of our own nature we shall, nevertheless, consent to it that 'where sin abounded grace did much more abound.'"

These strong statements from a representative of a most conservative denomination show the tendency toward a simpler and a more strictly biblical faith. The Presbyterians will do well to heed Dr. Parkhurst's statements.

***

"Does God care for me?" is a question often finding a place in every devout heart. In the great and sad events of life we are wont to think God does care for us personally. The Rev. Dr. N. D. Hillis, speaking on this thought in a recent discourse said most beautifully: "The thought, 'God cares for me,' has armed man against many emergencies and been a panoply against a thousand ills. The heroes who have stained the battlefields with blood and won our victories for liberty and religion have survived their disasters through the faith that God's plan is a golden cord binding each life to his eternal throne. To the exile, wandering upon the mountains, to the patriots, lying in the dungeons, the thought of God's providence has come with the warmth of a winter's fire and the good cheer of a dear friend; beside each fountain of bitterness that thought has planted some healing tree; in life's darkest hour it has unveiled some star of hope.

"It is the thought that God lives and plans and loves that lends consecration to the brave and chivalrous hopes of youth; that lends enduring strength to those who bear life's heavy burdens; that sustains men in the hour when the immortal hope burns low within the heart. Indeed, it is permitted us to doubt whether any other truth has wrought so powerfully for heroism or liberty or religion. In the faith that God has reigned, reigns and shall reign forevermore, patriots and martyrs have gone dryshod across all seas, turned stones to angels' bread, in hot sands digged cooling springs, found every mountain smoking with God's presence and every hill of difficulty to be bright with the lightning of his commandment and promise.

"Our earth holds no truth so practical as this: God cares for me. It energizes every faculty, calms every purpose, lends strength through tranquility. Since God's providence is over man, he can bear up against every ill, rejoice midst adversity and conquer midst defeat. In the consciousness that God cares for men, the heroes have achieved their heroism, and climbed so high that men, admiring, would fain pluck the very stars from the sky to make diadems fit for those heroes of liberty and religion."

This consciousness of the Christian heart is most precious and comforting, and should ever be cherished.

S. T. WILLIS.

1281 Union Ave.

YOU can buy a chimney to fit your lamp that will last till some accident happens to it.

Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass" is that chimney.

You can have it—your dealer will get it—if you insist on it. He may tell you it costs him three times as much as some others. That is true. He may say they are just as good. Don't you believe it—they may be better for him; he may like the breaking.

Our "Index" describes all lamps and their proper chimneys. With it you can always order the right size and shape of chimney for any lamp. We mail it FREE to any one who writes for it.

Address MACBETH, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Letter From Ephesus.

Ephesus is 50 miles by rail from Smyrna, and the recent excavations off the line of regular tourist trips make it intensely interesting; the small village is the railway station and ruins of the great city are everywhere. As one of the seven churches (Rev. 2), the place of the great Pauline agitation (Acts 19) now being laid bare, the beautiful columns of marble speak of the grandeur of the temple of Diana.

But the great theatre most interested me. The whole of the columns of the proscenium end, the passages and anterooms and mosaic pavements have been opened up; before you on the mountain side rise tier after tier of seats, everthing in fine, white marble;24,500 people were accommodated in this great theatre,and one could easily fancy hearing the protracted cry: "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!" In front is the street with the marks of the chariot wheels all along the pavement.

A baptistery, about 15 feet square, near the ruins of what is called the Double Christian Church, is a mute witness as to apostolic practice.

E. H. KELLAR.

Ayassoulouk (Ephesus) Asia Minor,
March 21, 1900.

VITALITY low, debilitated or exhausted, cured by Dr. Kline's Invigorating Tonic. FREE $1. Trial Bottle containing 2 weeks' treatment. Dr. Kline's Institute, 931 Arch Street, Philadelphia. Founded 1871.

B. B. Tyler's Letter.

This letter has to do with the Congress of Disciples of Christ in its meeting in Indianapolis the last week in March. I am indebted for my knowledge of the proceedings of the Congress to the Christian Century, the Christian Standard and CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. I feel that I know almost as much about the Congress as if I had attended its sessions. All the names of those who were present and participated are familiar. Every man I know personally. I know his idiosymcrasies. His prejudices for and against are generally known. I can, therefore, read between the lines as I go over the reports in the papers named.

Daniel Sommers was present! Will wonders never cease? And he participated! How I would like to see his comments on the Congress in the paper of which he is the editor.

But why should the presence of this man in this meeting excite surprise? For this reason only: He has protested loud and long and often against such meetings. His contention has been that they are of the Wicked One; that they are evil, and only evil, and that continually. He has also sought to create the impression in his paper that he is not a Disciple of Christ; that he is not a member of the Christian Church; that this church is an apostate from the true faith. He was once a minister of the Christian Church, but having discovered its sectarian character he abandoned it, and is now a member and minister of "the Church of Christ," which is not to be confounded with the Christian Church, nor with the people who are commonly known as Disciples of Christ. It is this position of Daniel Sommers, repeatedly set forth in his paper, that makes his attendance upon and participation in the proceedings of the Congress of Disciples in Indianapolis an occasion of surprise.

There is nothing at all singular in the fact that the members of the Congress permitted him to speak. Such a proceeding is in entire harmony with the fundamental principles of the Disciples of Christ, whose motto is: "IN FAITH, UNITY; IN OPINIONS, LIBERTY; IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY." This motto was ably expounded by Robert Moffett, of Cleveland, than whom no man is more familiar with the teachings of the "fathers." It was a happy thought on the part of the program committee to have Bro. Moffett deliver an address on this subject.

The faith by which men come into fellowship with the divine is faith in the Lord Jesus. This also is the faith by which Christians ought to be held in an affectionate fellowship with each other. This basis of fellowship with God and with one another ought, in our teaching, to be made emphatic. It is of transcendent importance, and never more important than at the present time. Whatever a man's opinions may be on the mission question, or on the expediency of missionary societies, Endeavor Societies, or Sunday-schools, or a score of other things, he ought not to be denied fellowship on account of these opinions. 'What do you think of the Christ? How do you feel toward him? What is your purpose concerning him?" These are the question on the reply to which our fellowship or non-fellowship should depend.

I read, as no doubt did thousands of other, with keenest interest the reports of the discussion of "Higher Criticism," in which the foremost figures were, of course, President McGarvey and Professor Willett. This is for the time the question. The spirit must have been beautiful. Why not? Both are good men. They love the Head of the body, our Lord Jesus Christ. The Spirit of the Master dominates their lives. It was a good thing to bring these men face to face in the presen ce of many witnesses and encourage them to speak freely and frankly their best thoughts on the subject about which they differ.

Personally, J. W. McGarvey is one of the sweetest-spirited men on earth. But this is not the impression he makes on some who only know him by what he writes in the Christian Standard. I find myself in accord with what "Chronicler" says on this point in the Christian Century, in his notes on the recent meeting of the Congress. He says:

"The Chronicler must commend the spirit of Bro. McGarvey in his public addresses. His words are always kindly spoken. He is at a loss to know why Bro. McGarvey's writings in the columns of the Christian Standard should not be equally characterized by a feeling of kindness."

The educational question is one of the most important problems before the Disciples. It must be evident to all well-informed persons that our development along educational lines has not kept up with our increase, for instance, in numbers and in missionary efficiency. It will do us no harm to look at the facts as they are. There is no reason for disheartenment. We can do better—and we must: we can do better—AND WE WILL.

It is evident from the proceedings of the Congress that the movement for the unification of our missionary interests is in a chaotic condition. Those who seem to be in favor of some kind of a unification have not made clear to their brethren the nature and extent of the desired unification. The discussion must of necessity be profitless until a clear-cut statement is made as to what is desired. The unity at present existing is far in advance of anything we have had in the past; but is there not something better to which we can attain? As there is a unity in our missionary work superior to anything in our past experience, so also there is an efficiency of which in the past we knew nothing. The real question before us is this: HOW CAN WE DO MORE AND BETTER WORK IN THE EXTENSION OF THE KINGDOM? No one will claim that in this one thing we have attained perfection; that improvement is impossible.

It seems to me that the Indianapolis Congress must have been superior to the Congress that met in St. Louis a year ago. The program was better. The addresses were of a high order. The results will probably be more satisfactory. The topics as a whole were more practical.

The Congress has come to stay. It has become a necessity. It will do much to unify our people. As a result of its sessions we will come to know each other better. Suspicions and fears will be allayed. Confidence will displace doubt. The meeting of the first Congress, or the first meeting of the Congress of the Disciples of Christ, was epoch-making—it was the beginning of a new era in our history.

Have you read the book containing the papers and addresses of the St. Louis Congress? This is a book that you cannot afford to miss.

B. B. T.

Truest Economy to Get the Best.

A cheaply made sewing-machine is dear at any price, because faulty in action, liable to break and difficult to operate. A labor-saving machine for woman's use should be the best; it is truest economy to get a sewing-machine bearing this trade-mark.

EXPERIENCE PROVES A SINGER THE BEST.

Sold on Instalments. You can try one Free. Old machines taken in exchange.

SINGER SEWING-MACHINES ARE MADE AND SOLD ONLY BY

THE SINGER MANUFACTURING CO.

OFFICES IN EVERY CITY IN THE WORLD.

Kansas City Letter.

Kansas City has had a notable fire. The great Convention Hall, pronounced by Moody, Bryan, Grau and other experts as the most perfect structure of its kind in the world, is now in ashes. In twenty minutes after the fire was sighted the city's pride was no more. Built by the people it was the people's loss and sorrow. Thousands gathered round its ruins and many were in tears. What a calamity! Yea, but what an opportunity, too! The hall must be rebuilt, and while the flames were still leaping the telegraph instruments were clicking messages to the managers of the great iron works asking for bids on the new structure. Before the ashes had cooled $50,000 had already been subscribed for the new building, and a hall larger and handsomer than the old, costing not less than $300,000, will be built and that before the gathering of the National Democratic Convention on July 4. The new building will be fire-proof and enduring. In all this stress of preparation and indomitableness of determination the people are as one. Rich and poor alike are donors. It is the people's hall.

What a lesson here, but dull indeed were any reader who needs it pointed out. Such enthusiasm, such grit, such courage, such unity in the Church of Christ would bring victory on any day. If, through civic pride, merely, the citizens of this young giant city by the Kaw can construct, within three months, working by night and day, the largest and most complete auditorium in the United States, what should not Christians be inspired to do "in His name?"

And this convention noted above suggests another, not so large perhaps, but one that shall deal with graver problems, that shall confront more serious responsibilities—our own National Convention in October. For reasons, not necessary here to recite, but little thus far has been said about the convention, place and work, but we shall soon have authoritive official statements to make, exhortations fervent and invitations wide.

The writer, on a hurried lecture trip in Texas, gleaned a few items concerning our cause in that great state that may be of interest to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST family. Texas, as a whole, is too large to be gobbled up by any letter writer. It takes a facile pen like that of M. M Davis to do it justice; and what a sweep! The "Texas Letter" writer has surely a large commission. This scribe desires simply to nibble at second-hand the statement that our cause as a whole is prospering in the "Lone Star State," the elements of opposition within the churches to co-operative work steadily weakening, their influence ever waning. There, as elsewhere, it is not anti-ism to be reckoned with, but the paralysis of effort, the half-heartedness of faith. At second-hand, too, encouraging reports from Dallas, Galveston, Austin and other centers. At McKinney, where

G. A. Faris ministers, we have one of the best buildings in the state. It would do credit to any town or city in the country. There is great wealth there, too, which is becoming more and more consecrated. The offerings of this church to missions are steadily growing. At Bonham the beloved Charles Carleton ministers. Texas owes much to this princely man. A pioneer in educational work, he has made "Carleton College" as widely known as any similar institution in the South. His influence, and that of his cultured family, has been felt in many, many homes. The fragrance of his hospitality and beautiful entertainment abides. Paris is a live, bustling town of 18,000; the bishop of that important city—the convention town of Texas, by the way, for the year 1900—is Jas. N. Crutcher. Though the Bishop is young, he is capable, resourceful, alert and has made a splendid impression upon the city. He is of a family of preachers; son of the beloved S. W. Crutcher, and through his mother knit to the brilliant Pinkerton family, a preacher by predstination, birth and choice. The work prospers in his hands.

The Sixth and Prospect Church is just entering upon a series of meetings conducted by Chas. Reign Scoville, assisted by Prof. J. M. Wilson as leader of song. Our church and community are looking with eagerness and expectancy to the coming of these evangelists. We shall soon have a good test as to the comparative ripeness of Eastern and Western fields. The great result attending the labors of these evangelists in Allegheny and Pittsburg are well known. We hope soon to report that the West is ripe even as the East and that successes, large and blessed, will come, North, South, East, West, and all to the glory of God.

And now for Home Missions! The time between our March and May offerings is confessedly short. It seems short even to the preachers and other leaders in our church who are most deeply interested in our missionary work. We do not get one offering off our hands before another calls. The money is hardly paid in for Foreign Missions before the cry, "Home Missions to the Front!" comes to us. Sometimes it is just a little bit discouraging. To the poor, tired preacher it just looks as if he can't get everything to the FRONT. Oh—steady! We have chosen these days. Further along we shall make other and wiser arrangement. He sees not far who believes that our present system will long obtain? We shall fall upon wiser methods. But just now we are doing things that way. It may not be the best way, but then it is the way we have chosen. If our missionary work is not advanced on these days, then failure and shame. We succeed then or we succeed not at all. If we fail then we fail finally. The first Lord's days in March and May are epochal days. What shall we make of them? The first opportunity is past. March is behind us. May is just ahead. Shall we fail in this our great day? Let us work now as never before. Let our churches, who came so nobly to the front in the cause of Foreign Missions, be not laggards now. And let that great host hitherto unresponsive take up the burden of this work. But, alas! this exhortation does not reach the unresponsive ones. For these are not of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST household.

GEO. H. COMBS.

A Trinity of Devotional Books.....

Uniform in Size and Binding.

THE HEAVENWARD WAY.
A popular book addressed to young Christians, containing incentives and suggestions for spiritual growth, leading the young in the "Way of Life." Lately revised. 100 pages. Bound in cloth.

ALONE WITH GOD.
A manual of devotions, containing forms of prayer suitable for private devotions, family worship and special occasions. It is adapted to the wants of Christian Endeavorers. The book contains 244 pages.

HALF-HOUR STUDIES AT THE CROSS
A series of devotional studies on the Death of Christ, designed to be helpful to those who preside at the Lord's Table, and a means of spiritual preparation for all who participate. 275 pages.

Price, per copy, cloth.....$ .75
" " morocco..... 1.25

Price, per set, cloth.....$2.00
" " morocco..... 3.25

Twenty-Five Thousand Copies Sold.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, -:- ST. LOUIS.

Texas Letter.

For keen, practical point in strong, lucid English, and phrased so as never to be forgotten, commend me to Sam Jones. Here is a recent sample: "Things are not going right. You are building up environments about your children which will damn them when you are dead and gone, and all you are getting out of it is the few dimes and dollars you are putting in your pockets. If a man were on a river in a boat with his Willie boy in one end and a bag of gold in the other, and that boat capsized and that man deliberately turned his back on his drowning boy and grabbed his bag of gold and swam ashore, you would stand on the bank and kick him back in the water. And the Christian people, so called, of Dallas, have grabbed the gold and your children are sinking to hell all around you and you know it!"

The breaking of the Austin dam is one of the greatest calamities which has ever befallen our people. This magnificent piece of masonry was begun in 1890 and finished in 1893. It was 1,160 feet long, 60 feet high above low water, 60 feet broad at the bottom and 16 feet at the top. It was made of granite, limestone and Portland cement and cost an even million dollars. The power house and other property destroyed make a loss to the city of $1,600,000, besides the destruction of a vast amount of property in the valley of the river.

Eyewitnesses say it was one of the most sublime and awful scenes; and this you can well imagine when you think of a wave 70 feet high madly rushing through an opening of 600 feet. The roar was like that of Niagara, and the waters, leaping, boiling, surging, seemed bent on revenge for having had their progress impeded.

Many sad scenes were connected with it. Eight men were at work in the power house at the time and seven of them were instantly drowned. The eighth, in some strange way, was saved. A mother and two little children were looking at the water as it poured over the dam, and they have never been seen since. A man some distance below, crossing the valley in a buggy, escaped from it and climbed a telegraph pole. But he had scarcely done this when a floating house struck the pole, broke it, and threw him into the water and he disappeared and every one thought him lost, but he clambered up to the top of the house and after floating down the river ten miles was saved.

Besides this loss of property and life, the full extent of which is not yet known, the city is left without water, light and street car service, and with no means of fighting fire or flooding sewers. The neighboring cities are doing all in their power to help their unfortunate sister, but still the condition is pitiable indeed.

C. L. Cole, of Garland, is one of the lovliest and most loved men in Texas, and there is great grief in our hearts to know that he is an exile from home in search of health. May he soon find it and return to the church for which he has labored thirteen years and which loves him so tenderly.

W. B. Carnes leaves Melissa for Denison. We feel sorry for Melissa, while we congratulate Denison. This gives Bro. Carnes a larger field of usefulness, and one which needs a strong man very much.

J. M. Campbell leaves Van Alstyne for Whitewright, and again both congratulations and commiserations are in order. Prof. Anderson's fine school makes his new work an exceptionally good one.

J. W. Marshall leaves Taylor, but I know not his future program. Bro. Marshall is one of our best men, and he will not be idle very long.

F. E. Meigs, of China, is to attend our state convention at Paris, June 12-15, and our people will give him a royal welcome.

Preachers like to know what their brothers are preaching about. Here are four subjects which this scribe is to discuss during the next four weeks. They are popular objections to our teachings: "You Deny the Holy Spirit," "You Deny Conversion," "You Make too Much of Baptism," "You Monopolize the Name 'Christian.'"

M. M. DAVIS.

833 Live Oak St., Dallas, Texas.

Free Trial Lesson

In Bible course by mail. Take the course right at home, Diploma and degree when you finish. Terms only $1.00 per month. Write to Prof. C. J. Burton, Christian University, Canton, Mo.

ESTEY PIANOS AND ORGANS

Excel in Superior Tone, Perfect Construction and Great Durability

THE ESTEY CO., 916 OLIVE ST., ST. LOUIS, MO

The Blood is the Life

Perfect health is impossible when the blood is impoverished, the supply scant and watery or when through impurities it has become stagnant and sluggish. Don't neglect such a condition an instant. Hasten to correct the evils of bad blood and regain health and happiness. Take

Dr. Peter's Blood Vitalizer

—The time tested remedy discovered by an old Swiss-German physician and in constant use for over 100 years. It seldom fails to cure all diseases caused by impoverished or impure blood or from a disordered stomach.

No Drug-Store Medicine; is sold only by regular Vitalizer agents.

Persons living where there are no agents for Dr. Peter's Blood Vitalizer can, by sending $2.00, obtain twelve 35-cent trial bottles direct from the proprietor. This offer can be obtained only once by the same person.

Write to DR. PETER FAHRNEY,
112-114 South Hoyne Ave., Chicago.

America and the Christian Church.

The phenomenal growth of the Christian Church in recent years is a fact that not a few scribes and seers have felt called upon to explain. The adaptability of "our plea" to the genius of America has been hinted at often, but not, so far as I have seen, emphasized as it deserves to be. The purpose of this paper is to show that what self-government is in the political world, the plea of the Disciples is in the religious realm.

There is necessarily a very close relation between the political and the religious ideas of any age or people. Our ideas of God and of government have gone hand in hand on their upward march.

Governments are divided into three great classes—Monarchy, Aristocracy and Democracy—one shading gradually into another, and each has its religious correlative. A few centuries ago in Europe "the divine right of the king" was the accepted theory of government. No matter by what name he was called, whether czar, emperor, sultan or king, he was God's authorized ruler, and loyal, unquestioning obedience was the highest virtue in a citizen. But one could not long claim to rule by divine authority without claiming also to be divinely qualified. Hence arose the doctrine, "the king can do no wrong;" "the voice of the king is the voice of God." If a mistake is made in government, not the crown, but the ministry, the counselors, are at fault.

The claims of the Pope to rule by divine right is the corresponding theory in spiritual affairs. He is God's vicegerent; he is an ecclesiastical monarch. And he also must be qualified of God if he is authorized of God; hence the doctrine of papal infallibility. When he speaks ex cathedra he is inspired of God.

Now the king and the pope have flourished together. They have as a rule favored each other because their thrones rest on the same foundation. To question the authority of one is to question the authority of the other.

I cannot here even outline the transition from an unlimited to a limited monarchy. The bill of rights and magna charta are monuments of the struggle in England by which the powers of the king were limited and others shared with him the right to rule. Thus arose government by a few—by "the best." The great mass of men still had no voice in the affairs of state. The ruling class said: "We know your needs and rights better than you know them yourselves; abide by your trades and we will give you your laws." The correlative in religion, of this form of government, is the reign of creeds. A limited number of leaders in the church met in solemn assembly, discussed, committed, revised and resolved what to them were the fundamentals of truth, and sent them forth in due form to be accepted by the people; saying, practically: "We know these things better than you can; here is what you are to believe and defend." Now these twin conceptions have also flourished together. It is in Europe during these latter centuries that aristocracy in government has prevailed; it is in Europe that most of the creeds have arisen. Their relation is not an accident. One great principle underlies both.

For more than a century America has been contributing a new idea of government to the world. Though the germs existed long ago in Europe, they were not developed till planted in American soil. This idea is, in a word, self-government. The people have the ability to govern themselves; they have the right to do so, and self-government is the highest and best government. The idea was ridiculed in the older countries, and prophets of terrible calamities were not a few, but a century and a quarter of history has made America's contribution respected, and it has reacted toward more confidence in and larger liberty for the people in the world.

A corresponding movement in religious matters was inevitable. The ability of the common people to know the essential truth of God's Word, their right to open the book untrammeled by any ecclesiastical dogmas, their liberty in Christ Jesus, could not be no longer denied. Denominations looked on askew and prophesied speedy failure; "a church without a creed must fall." But our history has had its effect, and there is not a Protestant body in this country that has not in a measure been influenced by the idea. The Philadelphia Confession, in full force when this movement began, has been laid on the top shelf and forgotten; the Westminster Confession is not so prominent as it was, and in less than fifty years will be where the Philadelphia Confession now is.

Geographically, this movement is of American origin, and grew inevitably out of the genius of the American people. The gospel was preached in Greece and the Greek Church was the final product. The same gospel was proclaimed in Italy and the Roman Church grew of it. The gospel seed in German soil produced the Lutheran Church. In England the same seed grew into the Anglican Church. In Scotland it brought forth the Presbyterian Church. National characteristics and institutions being different, different results were produced. Plants of all these varieties have been imported and set out in this country. But the Christian Church is indigenous to this country; it is the product of the gospel seed in American soil; it appeals, therefore, with peculiar power to the genius of this country. If self-government is the best government and must prevail, the plea of the Disciples is the best in religion and must finally triumph. Our growth, then, is no mystery; it is to be expected. What government of, by and for the people is politically, that our plea is religiously. If democracy is right, the Disciples are right. If democracy is to prevail, this movement must prevail.

Let us look a little more closely at the similarity between the American idea and the Christian Church. When a foreigner wants citizenship here we ask of him only that he shall be loyal to the constitution. Under that constitution he has the fullest political liberty; he may believe in high tariff, low tariff or no tariff; he may believe in gold, silver or greenback, and he may speak his opinions. Then, our states are a unit. We may have our domestic difficulties, but against a foe we rally under the one flag. "E pluribus unum" is no hollow form of words. Witness the late war with Spain.

Now the loyalty, liberty and unity underlying our national institutions are the great words of our people. "Loyalty to Christ;" he is our constitution. "Liberty in Christ;" no one may take that from us. "A united church" is the watch-cry from the beginning. If our country is right, our plea is right. If our government is to stand, the plea must stand. In the light of these things we should approach the first Lord's day in May with a liberality born of confidence; a liberality commensurate with the cause committed to us. We hear much these latter days about "America as a factor in the world's future;" we need to think of our past in the future of America and to be stirred to such giving toward American missions as will show that we truly believe we have a plea given us of God.

H. C. GARRISON.

Danville, Ky.

For Sick Headache Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

DR. H. J. WELLS, Nashville, Tenn., says: "It acts like a charm in all cases of sick headache and nervous debility."

DRUNKENNESS CURED.

An eminent St. Louis physician has given a positive answer to the oft asked question, is drunkenness a disease, or is it simply a temptation that cannot be resisted by a vast number of the human race? The physician in question is Dr. Ozias Paquin, who for years has been a practicing physician in the City of St. Louis. He has answered this question by taking five of the worst drunkards that could be found and cured them of all further appetite for intoxicating drinks. The five cases were all beyond middle age and they had sunk into the deepest pit of drunkenness, with the odor of drink about them so obnoxious that it was almost impossible to stand within speaking distance. He not only cured them of all desire for intoxicating drink, but at the same time placed upon their cheek the flush of health and into their eyes the light of happiness, and took from their person the odor of whiskey. It was almost a miracle, for he had raised five cases from degradation into the sunshine of health and happiness. Dr. Paquin has cured hundreds of patients who were relapses from other treatments, and in every instance he cured these patients, and they have remained cured for months and years. It can therefore be said that the Paquin Treatment is a permanent cure, and not a temporary one, for the patient never relapses to his former condition. We know of no more humane work being done at the present time than that which Dr. Paquin is doing, and it is the duty of every reader to assist Dr. Ozias Paquin in his noble work, and if any reader has brother, sister, husband, father or friend in whose system lurks the disease of drunkenness, he shou'd at once send their name to Dr. Paquin or see that they either visit or place themselves in communication with the Ozias Paquin Immune Co., Suite 1113 Chemical Bldg., St. Louis. The reader that does this will certainly be doing a christian act, for no matter how hopeless the case may seem, and no matter how many other treatments have unsuccessfully been tried, the method known as Ozias Paquin Treatment will perfect a cure, dispelling all desire for drink, and at the same time will place the constitution in a robust and healthy condition.

"LIFE OF MOODY." Cloth, 358 Pages. 25 Cents, postpaid, of C. F. HOWARD, Windfall, Ind.
"DAILY BREAD." Cloth, 192 Pages 25 Cents, postpaid, of C. F. HOWARD, Windfall, Ind.
VEST-POCKET DICTIONARY, etc. Morocco, Gold Edges, Alphabetic, 194 Pages. 25 Cents, postpaid, of C. F. HOWARD, Windfall, Ind.
(Agents' Library.)

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING. The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Standard Adding Machine Co., for the election of directors and the transaction of such other business as may come before it will be held at the office of the Company in St. Louis, Mo., on Tuesday, May 1, 1900. Polls open at 9 o'clock A.M. F. M. CALL.
JOHN Q. MCCANNE, Sec'y. President.

LIFE OF MOODY," cloth, 318 pages, 25 cents, postpaid, of C. F. Howard, Windfall, Ind.

DAILY BREAD," cloth, 192 pages, 25 cents, postpaid, of C. F. Howard, Windfall, Ind.

VEST POCKET DICTIONARY, etc., Morocco, gold edges, alphabetic. 192 pages, 25 cents, postpaid, of C. F. Howard, Windfall, Ind.

A FOREMAN for the Southern Christian Institute printing office is wanted. A consecrated young man with a plain knowledge of plain printing is wanted. Address J. B. Lehman, Edwards, Miss.

FOR SALE: A good building lot 25x147 feet, near Beulah Christian Church, and also ten shares of Standard Adding Machine stock. Apply to "W. W." this office.

SEEKING the Old Paths and other Sermons, R. Moffett, 715 Logan Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. By mail, $1.35.

THE ACME SMELTING AND REFINING COMPANY, of Phœnix, Ariz., is controlled by Christian business men and offers for a short time excellent opportunities for either large or small investments. Write for full information. A thorough investigation is desired by the company.

MYSTERY OF THE GOLDEN CLOTH. The greatest book ever written on John's Revelation. Price, $1.50. Also Seer of Patmos, or John's Place in the Christian Economy. Price, 25cts. Address J. S. HUGHES, Station O, CHICAGO.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR BUSINESS MAN.

A business man with from $4,000 to $6,000 to invest in a Publishing Company with good job office and religious newspaper in the best city west of St. Louis, and who could become business manager of the company, can learn particulars by addressing "Business Man," this office.

The Iron Mountain Shortens its Time to Texas.

Train No. 51 now leaves St. Louis 2:21 P. M., daily, shortens the time by several hours from St. Louis to Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio, Houston and Galveston. Through Pullman Buffet Sleeping Cars will be operated on this train from St. Louis to San Antonio, and reclining chair car service to Dallas and Fort Worth. A delightful feature of this train is the daylight ride along the Mississippi and through the beautiful Arcadia Valley. Time of other trains remains the same excepting train No. 57 for Delta, Columbus, Cairo and Shreveport which now leaves at 8:00 A. M.

Missionary.

Why Help Home Missions.

We should help Home Missions for the following reasons:

1. Because every reason that caused our fathers to make the plea for Christian union on the Word of God alone as our rule of faith and practice, pleads with us to send it all over this good land; every reason which justifies our having become strong in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Iowa and Missouri urges us on to win all America to New Testament Christainity; every reason that justifies our existence as a seperate religious people urges Home Missions to the front to stay.

2. Because, while the home missionaries of the Congregational Church last year averaged four and one-sixth additions for each home missionary; the Baptists six and one-half for each home missionary; the Presbyterians nine for each home missionary; the Lutherans 19 for each missionary, our home missionaries averaged 77½ additions for each missionary employed by our American Christian Missionary Society—a record without a parallel.

We should support such successful work, for America is the ripest mission field in the whole world.

3. Because every $5 put into our Home Mission work will bring a soul to Christ; $3.00 will keep a missionary at work all the year.

4. Because America holds the key of the future; if we fail in America we fail in all the world.

5. Because our plea is adapted to American thought as is no other presentation of the gospel.

6. Because America is our base of supplies for the conquest of the world. For fifty years to come it must be that from the American church will come the men and women and the money that will carry the gospel to the uttermost part of the earth.

7. For the sake of the souls we can win in such large numbers. There are thousands all about us that we can win to Christ.

8. For our country's sake—America needs Christ, as Christ needs America. Jesus is the only statesman that can solve the problems that are before the American people. Patriotism pleads for Home Missions.

9. For our own sake. "There is no religious body on earth that with the same amount of money and the same number of men can win as many converts to Christ as the people known as Christians or Disciples of Christ." This is said in no spirit of boasting. On the contrary it places upon us a very grave responsibility. "If God has given us a dispensation of truth that commends itself to the people of this generation we are under the most sacred obligations to consecrate our means, our talents, our energies to the presentation of this truth to the people of our own and other lands." If we do not do this God will raise up a people to do his will and work.

10. Foreign Missions and Home Missions interlock in America, and here we have foreign missions at home—we have the foreign field transferred to our own doors. It seems as if the Lord, wearying of our failure to go to distant shores, has brought the strangers to our gates to challenge our service in their behalf.

11. We ought to correct our previous neglect of this home work. "Home Missions and Foreign Missions are the two wings of our aggressive ongoing; they should be made and kept equal in our love, our prayers and our offerings."

BENJ. L. SMITH, Cor. Sec.
Y. M. C. A. Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

"Delays are dangerous." Those who have poor, weak, impure blood should take Hood's Sarsaparilla at once. It never disappoints.

Two Generous Givers.

The two good faces into which you look below are those of David R. Pickens and Melissa Pickens, his wife, who have given $10,000 to the Church Extension Fund on the annuity plan. It will be remembered that the first $5,000 was given last July. The second $5,000 is a recent gift, received by the board on the 4th of April, 1900. If all the circumstances were known these gifts would be considered most generous. The $10,000 very nearly represents their entire wealth. They still possess a modest home in Tyler, Texas, which is open to every good preacher who comes along.

Brother and Sister Pickens had no trouble in keeping their money loaned out at 10 per cent. with the best of security, but they preferred the joy of seeing their money work in the Church Extension Fund while earning them an humble living rather than loan it out at 10 per cent. While men would gladly pay them 10 per cent. for the money, Brother and Sister Pickens know that there are scores of mission churches, who have no homes, that would gladly pay six per cent. to get annuity money from the Board of Church Extension when it is impossible for that board to furnish them the four per cent. money of the General Fund.

And then Brother and Sister Pickens state that they are thoroughly satisfied with the business management of the fund and its admirable plan of making the money build a church every five years.

Brother Pickens was born in Monroe County, Kentucky, and his wife in Hopkins County, in the same state. Brother Pickens was baptized into Christ at the age of 30 by W. C. Dimmitt and Sister Pickens at the age of 18 by John C. Walden. For 25 of the best years of their lives these two consecrated people gave themselves wholly to the preaching of the gospel, not losing as much as three months' time in the entire 25 years.

Brother Pickens' work as a preacher terminated by an attack of hyperæmia of the brain at the close of his first year's ministry at Tyler, Texas. During his ministry he preached in Georgia, Illinois, Kentucky, South Carolina and Texas. Since Brother Pickens' affliction he has not been able to do the work of the ministry.

Scores of consecrated Christian people will commend Brother and Sister Pickens for their generosity, which will inspire others to give for the extension of our Master's kingdom.

G. W. MUCKLEY,
Corresponding Secretary.

Our Mission Among the Mexicans in San Antonio.

Through the help of Geo. B. Ranshaw, pastor at San Antonio, we have a mission among the Mexicans at San Antonio. Bro. Ranshaw says there is a wide-open door for us, and if we are only able and willing to enter in the great harvest field of Mexico lies before us.

Our Mexican missionary in San Antonio is Bro. Ygnacia Quintero. We have a regularly organized church with over 40 members. If we could only give it larger financial support we could enlarge that Mexican work until it would become the surprise and wonder of our brethren and the people generally, for in the rebound that has come from Romanism nothing is so winning and helpful to those Mexicans as the simple gospel of the grace of God as revealed in the primitive gospel of the New Testament once for all delivered to the saints.

Bro. Quintero sends his report as follows:

To the Board of Missions: Peace of God and the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be multiplied to you.

Report of my work:

Predications	14
Matrimonium	2
Prayers	26
Confessions	5
Baptisms	3

One Baptist brother joined the church and made his good confession, which I hope you will accept. We have 41 in the church, of these 8 are Baptists from origin, 22 Romans baptized here and some from other religious bodies.

I have opened a mission fifty miles from here in San Marcos. We have 14 members there. I hope by the grace of God to give better reports of the Christian progress. Great is the labor in this state, but greater is my faith in the Lord.

I need tracts, Bibles and hymn books in the Spanish tongue. Can you not let me have them? God bless the work. In the love of the Lord Jesus,

YGNACIO QUINTERO,
Evangelista de la Mission Mexicana.

Our board pays this brother a pitiful stipend of $10 per month; $300 per year would make this work blossom as the rose.

What church among us will adopt that as the special work to be done by them?

BENJ. L. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

The May offering for Home Missions is near at hand. Through your columns I desire to call on every Disciple in New England to strain a point and give largely to the Home Society in May. Every church in New England will contribute, but want them to give until they feel it. New England, the fairest and best Home Mission field on earth, needs help from the larger and wealthier churches of the West. God blesses us as we give, and if we wish help we must give largely ourselves, and I am sure we will do it this year. Watch the papers when the reports come in from New England. S. M. HUNT, Cor. Sec.
Springfield, Mass.

Mites from the Many.

The last issue of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST—"loaded to the guards" as it is with Home Missionary freightage—ought of itself, to determine every reader to strain a point, if necessary, in order to have fellowship in the glorious work of assisting the A. C. M. S. to evangelize America. While the help already given by our generous-minded editors, to the missionary cause, both Home and Foreign, is incalculable, perhaps space will be granted for a few closing words before the May offering is passed. A single point—that indicated by the above heading—is sought to be emphasized in this brief message, viz.: We well know it is the offering from an all too small percentage of churches and individuals that constitutes the cash that has gone into the treasury of the Home Society. But now let the "mites from the many" be rolled in from every church that has not yet contributed, and we shall behold how great a sum will be gathered. We can never know how much has been withheld from this greatest work in the universe of God, because of the multitudes of Christians who have simply kept back their mites, for the reason that they are but mites.

W. P. KEELER.

As to the C. E. Societies Contributing.

DEAR BRO. GARRISON:—I have noticed in the reports of the Church Extension Board and those of the Foreign and American Missionary Societies that there is a decrease in the number of contributing C.E. Societies. While I believe that the societies are not doing their whole duty in the matter of contributing, I also believe there are contributing societies unreported, not that their offerings were not sent to the proper parties, but that proper credit is very often not given to the C. E. Society by the church treasurer or pastor, the whole amount being credited to the church only.

I know this to be true in several instances and believe an investigation would bring out many instances. An agitation along the line of persuading pastors and church treasurers to take more interest in their young people's reports, giving them proper credit in the church reports for what they do, would bring the number of contributing societies up to a worthy standard.

I know several pastors whose consciences in this matter need stirring up. The fact that reports show the C. E. of their churches a blank in the world's evangelization does not affect their consciences in the least, and the comparison of the small number of contributing societies as against the whole number existing is more to the discredit of the pastor and church board than the inefficiency of the Christian Endeavor.

That the money sent serves the same purpose in our Lord's work is not questioned. Contributing C. E. Societies are reported for the same reason that contributing churches, Bible schools, C. W. B. M. Auxiliaries and the Junior C. E. in the Woman's Board. We want to know what is being done, and the reports tell us. The C. E. model constitution recommends that offerings be remitted through the church treasurer, for obvious reasons very commendable, as the C. E. is not an independently separate institution. But it does not follow that carelessness and false pride should be practiced to the exclusion of "credit where credit is due."

If the young people are not being brought into the service as they should be, and are not informed as to what occurs in the church world, and their personal and society obligations to it, the right use of church literature in the home where the young people "live and move and have their being" might be a great stimulus in producing the desired effect. Parents are very anxious that their children appear well before the world, particularly the grown up young people. If a fraction of the same interest on the part of the pastor and the church board was taken in the young people of the church, there would be a forward move in Christian Endeavor reports.

Jewell City, Kan. LILLIAN FORREST.

No Backward Steps.

In our mission work, I mean, let there be no retreat. I am for State Missions first, for Home Missions second and for Foreign Missions third, and for all of them first, last, and all the time. Nor need a man be particular about which end he begins at; if he has a missionary conscience, he will wade through to the other end Start him in at State Missions, he will come out at Foreign Missions; start him in at Foreign Missions, he will come out at State Missions And notice that passing in either direction he passes through Home Missions. When a boy we used sometimes to sleep three in a bed. The fellow in the middle always slept warmest and and waked warmest. This gives Home Missions, whether sleeping or waking, a good show. Home Missions! What a mighty thought! How many states have we? I've forgotten. How many territories hove we? I don't remember. How many colonies? Don't know. But I know "Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm," and we ought to be good enough to be good missionary men, and see after his spiritual w lfare. If we have the greatest country in the world, we ought to be the best people. Nothing can make a nation truly great or truly good but the religion of Christ—"Righteousness exalteth a nation." And the purer your religion the more vigor and vitality it will infuse into the body politic. This view of the subject is a mighty challenge to the Disciples to see that America is properly evangelized; that our country has the unadulterated gospel of Jesus Christ given to it—given at once, given in abundance, "heaped up, shaken down, and running over." Well, this calls for money. "Money is the root of all evil," unwisely conceived and improperly used. But, sanctified wealth! What a power for good! The "Almighty Dollar" consecrated to missionary work, to giving the pure gospel of Christ to America, giving it now, before the golden opportunity is lost, means the working of marvelous if not miraculous results to the whole world in the oncoming future. Let us put the banner of divine truth into every county, every state, every territory, every colony of our mighty country. And then let us "sing with the spirit and with the understanding:"

"My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing."

After that we may soon, in louder strains, sing:

"From Greenland's icy mountains,
From India's coral strand."

And then in loudest chorus we will close the service with:

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow,
Praise him all creatures here below!"

Home Missions having been put to the front must now be kept to the front, and let all other missions be kept abreast of Home Missions.

A. B. JONES.

Liberty, Mo.

Rest and Health to Mother and Child.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over FIFTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, with PERFECT SUCCESS. It SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHŒA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" and take no other kind. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

YOU MAKE $5.00 A DAY EASY

Gold, Silver, Nickel and Metal Plating. At home or traveling, taking orders, using, selling Prof. Gray's Machines. Plates Watches, Jewelry, Tableware, Bicycles, all metal goods. NO EXPERIENCE. Heavy plate. Modern methods. No toys. We do plating, make outfits, all sizes. Complete, all tools, lathes, materials, etc., ready for work. The Royal, new dipping process, quick, easy. We teach you the art, furnish secrets, formulas free. Write today. Pamphlet, samples, etc., FREE. D. GRAY & CO., Plating Works, CINCINNATI, O.

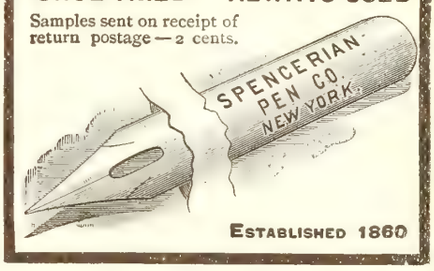
POSITIONS GUARANTEED under reasonable conditions; car fare paid; board, $10-$11; catalog free; no vacation.

DRAUGHON'S PRACTICAL BUS. Colleges, St. Louis; Nashville, Tenn.; Savannah, Ga.; Montgomery, Ala.; Galveston, Tex.; Fort Worth, Tex.; Little Rock, Ark.; Shreveport, La. Indorsed by merchants and bankers. Best patronized in South. Bookkeeping, Shorthand, etc., taught by mail. Begin any time. Address (at either place) Draughon's College.

SPENCERIAN PENS

WRITE WELL ONCE TRIED WEAR LONG ALWAYS USED

Samples sent on receipt of return postage — 2 cents.



ESTABLISHED 1860

Home Missions.

What our American Missionary Society could do in strategic points if it had the funds can easily be seen from our recent victories in the cities of Allegheny and Pittsburg. Here is the marrow of the backbone of Presbyterianism of every shade in this country. Yet, we have had a glorious trinity of victories—278, 251 and 150 in thirteen weeks for the Christ—"the creed that needs no revision." "The Bible only makes Christians only" is peculiarly sweet and dear to hundreds and thousands distracted by human creeds. "Give ye them to eat," are the imperative words of the blessed Bread of Life, himself. Let us rally to the offerings for the first Lord's day in May, and criminal be our action if we do not do so in view of the majestic possibilities.

C. L. THURGOOD.

1931 Fifth Av., Pittsburgh. Pa.

"A Single Fact is worth a shipload of argument." Every cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla is a fact, proving its merit, and the thousands and thousands of cures recorded certainly should convince you that Hood's will cure you.

Indigestion, nausea are cured by Hood's Pills.

An All-Year Resort.

The Crescent Hotel, Eureka Springs, Ark. opens March 1, 1900. A most desirable, attractive and convenient resort for health and pleasure-seekers. Ideal climate, pure, sparkling water, best accommodations. Through Sleepers via Frisco Line. Write for particulars to Manager Hotel or to any representative of Frisco Line.

Special Rates to New York via B. and O. S-W. R. R.

For Ecumenical Conference of Missions, held April 21st to May 1st, rate of $28.10 for the round trip from St. Louis. Three Daily Through Trains, Sleeping and Dining Cars. Stop-over at Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia. Rate open to all persons attending the meeting. Ful particulars by addressing

JNO. P. ROGERMAN, T. P. A., B. & O. S-W. R. R Dallas, Tex.

A. C. GOODRICH, T. P. A., B. & O. S-W. R. R., Kansas City, Mo.

G. B. WARFEL, A. G. P. A., B. & O. S-W. R. R., St. Louis, Mo.

Interesting Statistics.

Below we glean some facts and statistics as taken from an article in the Christian Advocate, of New York, by H. K. Carroll, LL.D. Mr. Carroll was in charge of the United States census of the churches in 1890 and is well prepared to speak on the matters of church growth and statistics. The whole number of denominations in the United States is now 149. The net gain for all these churches for 1899 is 2,228 ministers, 1,661 churches and 348,230 communicants. The gains in communicants for 1898 was 492,794 or 155,000 more than last year. This is quite a falling off. The seventeen Methodist branches show a gain of only 1,045 for the year 1899. This largely accounts for the great drop in the net gain of all the churches for 1899. We present here a table that is full of interest to the writer, and doubtless will be to many others. It is full of lessons, full of instruction and especially full of promises to the Disciples of Christ or churches of Christ.

THE ORDER, THE GAIN AND THE PER CENT OF GAIN. OF THE DENOMINATIONS FROM 1890 TO 1899:

Denominations.	Rank in 1899.	Communicants.	Rank in 1890.	Communicants.	Gain.	Gain Pr ct
Roman Catholic	1	8,464,474	1	6,231,417	2,233,057	36
Methodist Episcopal	2	2,698,810	2	2,240,354	458,565	20
Regular Baptist (South)	3	1,647,521	4	1,280,066	369,455	29
Regular Baptist (colored)	4	1,584,920	3	1,348,989	235,931	18
Methodist Episcopal (South)	5	1,460,272	5	1,209,976	250,290	21
Disciples of Christ	6	1,118,396	8	641,051	477,345	71
Regular Baptist (North)	7	995,743	6	800,450	195,293	24
Presbyterian (North)	8	961,334	7	788,224	173,110	22
Protestant Episcopal	9	693,342	9	532,054	161,288	30
African Methodist Episcopal	10	641,727	11	452,725	189,002	42
Congregational	11	630,000	10	512,771	117,229	23
Lutheran Synodical Conference	12	542,946	12	357,153	185,793	52
African Methodist Episcopal Zion	13	528,461	13	349,788	178,673	51
Lutheran General Council	14	333,803	14	324,846	8,951	3
Latter-day Saints	15	300,000	21	144,352	155,648	107
Reformed (German)	16	239,930	15	204,018	35,912	14
United Brethren	17	233,972	16	202,474	31,498	15
Presbyterian (South)	18	221,022	18	179,721	41,309	23
Colored Methodist Episcopal	19	204,317	24	129,383	74,934	57
German Evangelical Synod	20	202,415	17	187,432	14,983	8
Lutheran General Synod	21	196,701	20	164,640	32,016	20
Cumberland Presbyterian	22	186,582	19	164,940	21,642	15
Methodist Protestant	23	183,585	22	141,989	41,596	30
United Norwegian Lutheran	24	126,903	26	119,972	6,931	6
Primitive Baptist	25	126,000	25	121,347	5,653	5
United Presbyterian	26	114,635	27	94,402	20,233	21
Reformed Dutch	27	109,361	28	92,970	16,319	18

The net gain of the membership for the nine years in the whole 149 denominations is 6,353,626. The gain in the ministers is 40,735 and in churches 28,550. Thus, when taken together, it shows a gain of 31 per cent. in nine years. The Catholics have a gain of 36 per cent. and the Protestants 29. The large Eurepean immigration keeps up the growth of Catholicism. Now leaving out the negro churches and the Lutheran, which is drawing large numbers of European immigrants, the average Protestant body has gained about 23 per cent. during the nine years, if we omit the Disciples of Christ. There are two remarkable things in regard to the Disciples or Christian Churches. First, they have gained more than any one except the Catholics, the net gain being 477,345. Second, their per cent. of gain is nearly three times as large as the average Protestant body, being 71 per cent., while the averege gain of the larger Protestant bodies is only about 23 per cent. It will also be noticed that while the Disciples of Christ were eighth in size, in 1890, they have displaced both the Regular Baptists (North) and Presbyterians (North), and are now sixth among the great religious bodies of America. This is a magnificent showing and certainly very gratifying. While some of the denominations are complaining at their meagre results, the growth among us seems to be as large as could be expected.

G. A. Hoffmann,
Statistical Sec'y.

P. S.—The Latter-day Saints are gaining rapidly, but we question their gain of 107 per cent. If both the figures for 1890 and 1899 were accurate we are satisfied that their gains would not be over 80,000, or 60 per cent. G. A. H.

CHILDREN'S DAY SERVICES.

THE GLAD JUBILEE.
By W. W. Dowling, with parts for Select Speakers and Classes, and for the school at large. 50 cents per dozen.

HAPPY VOICES.
By W. W. Dowling, in which are heard the voices of the birds, the flowers, the children, the saints, the angels and the redeemed. 50 cents per dozen.

THE GOSPEL SOWERS.
By W. W. Dowling. A service, consisting of Bible Readings, Poetical Recitations and Songs, introducing twelve characters in costume representing as many heathen nations or countries. 25 cents per dozen.

FREEWILL OFFERINGS.
By W. W. Dowling. A Missionary Service in Poetry, Songs and Bible Readings, with Floral Decorations; arranged for selected speakers, classes and the school at large. 25 cents per dozen.

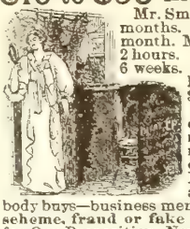
THE DAYSPRING.
By W. W. Dowling. Choral Service, with parts for many select speakers, and introducing many characters in costume, with directions for decorations. 25 cents per dozen.

BEAUTIFUL SPRINGTIME.
By L. E. Jones and F. S. Shepherd, just issued, with music complete. This is one of the best services we have ever issued. 50 cents per dozen.

—NO SAMPLES FREE!—

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, ST. LOUIS, MO.

$18 to $35 WEEKLY and Expenses. | MEN and WOMEN, At Home or Traveling.



Mr. Smith, of Ind., made $927.50 first 6 months. Albert Hill, of N. J., $238 first month. Mr. Muncy, of Texas, $12.50 first 2 hours. Carrie Williams, clerk, $144 in 6 weeks. Mrs. Hitchcox, $222, besides housekeeping. Lida Kennedy, $84.00 while teaching.

LET US START YOU—No experience needed. Our agents made over $47,000.00 last month supplying the enormous demand for our famous Quaker Bath Cabinet, and appointing agents. Wonderful Seller. Everybody buys—business men, families and physicians. No scheme, fraud or fake methods. WRITE TODAY for Our Proposition, New Plan, etc., FREE. Address, World Mfg. Co., 47 World B'ld'g. Cincinnati, O.

Free - - -

On receipt of postal card request we will forward our . . .

Special Catalogue No. 22

Which is just from the press.

It is a bargain list of Books at Half Price.

Christian Pub. Co., St. Louis.

The Reason Why.

We are informed that one million Singer sewing machines were made and sold during the year 1899. This probably equals the production of all other manufacturers combined, and the question arises as to why the Singer should be so greatly preferred all over the world.

There is a valid reason for everything whether we are able to find it or not; and the reason for the tremendous and constantly increasing distribution of Singer sewing-machines is easily explained.

From the very beginning there has been a constant evolution in the construction of these machines, a ceaseless attempt to enlarge their usefulness by adapting them to the performance of every stitching operation, a continuous improvement in the process of manufacture.

Singer machines are so simple that a child can understand them; they are so strong that a bungler can hardly get them out of order. Every part is made with such scrupulous care from the best materials, fitted in its place with the utmost exactness, and tested and re-tested so many times before leaving the factory, that they never get the "fits" which try a woman's patience, destroy the fruits of her labor, and consume her time in vexing attempts to coax the machine to a proper performance of duty.

Such a high degree of mechanical perfection can only be obtained through long experience in the operation of immense factories containing tools that are peculiar to these works and are unequaled for their purposes. The system of testing, inspecting and assembling at the Singer factories is such that it seems well-nigh impossible for a Singer machine or any of its parts to leave the works in an imperfect condition.

Of course, this elaborate system of inspection and testing materially increases the cost of manufacture; but it is only by the use of such means that really firstclass sewing-machine can be made. Imitation is the sincerest flattery, and imitations of old forms of sewing-machines long since discarded by the Singer Company are made by unscrupulous persons, and put upon the market to deceive the unwary. The difference between the cost of a high-class sewing-machines, embodying the best of materials and workmanship, and its spurious imitation, made of cheap materials in the cheapest way, is soon eaten up by the added cost of the latter for repairs and lost time in the workroom.

The Singer Manufacturing Company aims to maintain its well-earned reputation for fair dealing during all time. It is permanent, its offices are in every city in the world, and parts and supplies for its machines can always be easily obtained. Thus it may be seen why Singer sewing machines have the preference whenever their merits are fairly investigated.

Evangelistic.

NEW YORK.

Buffalo.—Four accessions since last report at Forest Avenue Church. Organized a Junior Endeavor of 45. We are to move into our new location soon.—JAY A. EGBERT.

TEXAS.

Austin, April 16.—We have recently have 21 additions at our regular meetings. Large audiences and prospects bright.—J. W. LOWBER.

Hico, April 13.—We are in a fine meeting here; five additions and a growing interest. Next Sunday many are coming from Stephenville and Hamilton, where we have held meetings. Bro. Morrison is doing a fine work here and is greatly loved by his people.—MORGANS AND DAUGHTER.

NEBRASKA.

Omaha, April 16.—I am now in my third week here and see many cheering tokens of success. Our audiences at all meetings are good, a mind to work prevails among the members, and nine accessions have been made. Any one knowing of members of the church or persons who might be won to the church in Omaha, please address me as above, and I will do my best for them.—SUMNER T. MARTIN.

KANSAS.

Hutchinson, April 16.—Our meeting is two weeks' old. There have been 25 additions to date. Interest and attendance good. Bro. Saunders, of McPherson, will be with us this week to assist.—D. Y. DONALDSON AND E. W. KERR.

Kansas City, April 19.—Meeting with South Side Church three days old and four added. The Query Box is a feature. Will lecture to-night on "Infidelity."—T. S. NOBLITT.

Barnes.—Sister C. H. Hazelrigg closed her meeting here on the 1st instant, with nine additions. Many more would have become Christians, but her time was limited and she had to close in order to meet her next appointment.—J. C. MCARTHUR.

INDIANA.

Zionsville, April 17.—One week ago last Monday night I was called to the bedside of an old man, 86 years of age. He has always been one of the best citizens in the community, but had never confessed Christ. He was very penitent. He said he had always intended joining the church some day, but had put it off too long. Then he asked me to pray that he might live long enough to be baptized. Last Friday we prepared a tank in the house and baptized him. I do not think I ever saw a man more happy.—WM. H KNOTTS.

Bedford, April 16.—Bro. B. L. Smith was with us Sunday last and preached two splendid sermons for the church here. There were three good confessions during the day and one by letter. The spirit of missions, which is always the spirit of healthy activity, pervades the whole church. Bro. S. will long be remembered by the church here. Miss Josepha Franklin, who is home from India, is doing the church good by her speeches. Her missionary facts are feeding our missionary foes these days. She is a charming speaker and a most estimable Christian lady. She is overwhelmed with calls for speeches.—JAMES SMALL.

ILLINOIS.

Decatur.—Twenty-six additions to date at Tabernacle Church meeting.—GEO. F. HALL.

Atlanta, April 16.—Easter Sunday was a grand day with us. There was an immense crowd at the evening service which was given up entirely to the Orphans' Home cause. All the departments of the church joined heartily in the services and the result was $20 for the Home. We hope that there may be large returns for this work.—W. R. JINNETT.

Sullivan, April 16.—We had a blessed service yesterday, and two confessions. All we lacked yesterday to make us a perfect day was room for the people.—E. W. BRICKERT, pastor.

Toledo, April 16.—I helped organize a Bible-school at Union schoolhouse yesterday at 3:00 P. M. This is my second school, with one C. E. Society, this spring. I will do a great deal of this work this year, as we have 13 old conservative churches which need workimg over. Bro. W. H. Waggoner is holding Missionary Institutes in these churches. We expect him to visit each one in time.—E. E. HARTLEY.

Carrollton, April 16.—One added here yesterday. The work continues to grow.—J. LYMAN SMITH, pastor.

Ipava, April 17.—Five added here by letter and two confessions since I began here March 1, making seven in all. Work here and at Summum, prospering.—J. E. DEIHL.

Fisher, April 4.—We are rejoicing in the addition of six splendid workers, who came last Lord's day; two by confession, two by letter, one by statement and one from the Baptists.—S. F. JORDAN, pastor.

Each one of the above three lines of figures spells the name of a great city in the United States. This is a brand new puzzle and can be solved with a little study, as follows: There are twenty-six letters in the alphabet, and we have used figures in spelling the cities instead of letters. Letter A is number 1, B number 2, C number 3, etc., throughout the entire alphabet. IF YOU CAN SPELL OUT THESE THREE CITIES YOU MAY SHARE IN THE DISTRIBUTION OF $1,000 WHICH WE ARE GIVING AWAY for doing a little work for us. This you can do in less than one hour of your time. This and other most liberal offers are made to introduce one of the very best New York magazines into every home in the United States and Canada. WE DO NOT WANT ONE CENT OF YOUR MONEY. When you have made out the names of these three cities, write them plainly on a postal card and send it to us, and you will hear from us promptly BY RETURN MAIL. It may take an entire evening to solve the three names, but STICK TO IT AND TRY TO GET YOUR SHARE OF THE $1,000. A copy of this high-class ONE DOLLAR MAGAZINE WILL BE SENT FREE to everyone answering this advertisement. Do not delay. Send your answer immediately. Address ROBINSON PUBLISHING CO., 24 North William Street, New York City.

OHIO.

Lisbon, April 6.—Three received March 25, and eight on April 1; all by baptism.—GEO. FOWBERT, pastor.

Findlay.—The Church of Christ here is prospering. So far this year we have paid out for missionary work (for Fostoria debt, state and foreign) $238. For the past month have had accessions every Lord's day. The preaching of the gospel is being met by large congregations. The people pay most respectful attention. The Sundad-school, Y. P. S. C. E. — including Juniors — Aid Society and C. W. B. M. are prospering. Perfect good will prevails among the membership. The gospel is the power and we believe in it both as a pastor and people.—ARTHUR M. GROWDEN.

IOWA.

Prairie City.—Have had five addition within the last two weeks.—C. E. WELLS.

Lewis, April 17.—I came here to hold a short meeting and to see what can be done in the way of locating a pastor. April 17 Bro. W. O. S. Cliff accepted a call to the pastorate for full time and entered into the work. Bro. Cliff is a young man from Ohio and a recent student of Drake University, Des Moines, Ia. The congregation at Lewis owns a neat, commodious house, well located. Both pastor and people are happy in their new reiation. My next meeting is with the church at North Lawrence, Kan.—L. S. RIDENOUR, evangelist.

Essex, April 16.—My meeting with the church resulted first in the organization of a good Sunday-school; second, in the organization of a C. E.; third, in nine additions to the church. We raised $7 for S. S. literature, $6.44 for I. C. C., $6 for an organist, $12.50 for hymn books, $12.80 for famine sufferers in India and $36 for the evangelist. The Essex Church was organized Oct. 22, 1899. It has a new, neat house of worship, paid for. It is a wide-awake, up-to-date congregation. One man made the good confession at the first prayer-meeting after the close of our revival meeting. I am in a short meeting at Lewis, Ill., now.—L. S. RIDENOUR.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Pittsburg, April 14.—The East End Church has jost closed a maeting of four weeks and two days with a total of 143 accessions. Evangelist Charles Reign Scoville did the preaching and J. Walter Wilson led the singing. Our people and the community generally were more than delighted with the earnest gospel preaching of Bro. Scoville. He preached the old gospel with marvelous simplicity and power. His pleadings with sinners are well-nigh irresistible. He is a true yokefellow for the pastor. It was a constant joy to plan and labor with him. Bro. Wilson is a most competent leader of music. His sweet gospel solos added much to the success of the meeting. The audiences were uniformly large, though we are situated in the most conservative and aristocratic portion of the city. Nearly one hundred of the 143 accessions came from new families and a large proportion of the accessions were adults and heads of families. The East End Church now has a membership of more than 520 and in every way is a great church. This great meeting demonstrates that there is no riper field for our plea than the cities of the East. In the three meetings held by Bro. Scoville in Greater Pittsburg since January 6 about 667 were added to the three churches. We thank God and take courage.—T. E. CRAMBLET.

MISSOURI.

Nashville, April 16.—One confession the first Sunday in April, and three yesterday; four for the month, all young men.—O. W. JONES.

St. Louis.—Frank Thompson, of the School of Evangelists at Kimberlin Heights, Tenn., has closed a revival at Fisk, where he organized a congregation of 30 members, most of them by confession. Bro. Thompson is enroute to California, where he accepted a church.

W. D. Pittman reported 20 additions at the Second Church on Easter Sunday; nine confessions.

F. O. Fannon reported four additions at the First Church on Easter Sunday.

Springfield, April 15.—Bro. Northcutt is with us, with 34 confessions to date; 18 to-day. Meetings continue this week.—D. W. MOORE, South St. Church.

Maysville, April 13.—The meeting here closed with 27 added. It was a delightful meeting. Bro. Gilliam has been a great blessing to the church here. We now have the largest congregation in the town. They are talking of enlarging the building soon. Among those added were some of the best business men in the place and one of the most prominent lawyers.—C. E. MILLARD, singing evangelist.

Savannah.—Our prayer-meeting has more than doubled in attendance. Every department of church work is prospering. We had an excellent Easter service yesterday morning. Home Missions has the right-of-way now and will be in on good time the first Sunday in May.—A. R. HUNT.

Rich Hill, April 16.—Meeting one week old and five confessions. Church building unfortunately located, but not a better town in the state for some energetic, working pastor. Letters from churches desiring meetings will reach me here.—J. S. DICKERSON.

Farmington, April 16.—Four additions to date this month in my work here at Doe Run. One of them from another religious body and one confession here yesterday. An excellent Easter program was rendered by the Bible-school here, with an offering of about $12 for the Orhans' Home.—A. M. HARRAL.

Maysville, April 14.—We closed a two weeks' meeting here, with home forces, April 3, with 27 additions; most of whom were by primary obedience. There were three confessions the last evening, a full house and intense interest. The additions include a leading member of the Maysville bar, as well as a number of the leading citizens. The church is greatly strengthened every way and will soon move to employ a minister for full time. For years the church has not had so encouraging an outlook.—H. S. GILLIAM, pastor.

FITS Permanently Cured. No fits or nervousness after first day's use of Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. Send for FREE $2.00 trial bottle and treatise. DR. R. H. KLINE, Ltd., 931 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa

"Alone With God."

MRS. P. R. GIBSON.

[Written after reading J. H. Garrison's very precious and helpful book, "Alone With God."]

Alone with God—the cares of life shut out;
The busy, bustling world of care and strife
Forgotten all, and dark destroying doubt
Submerged in faith and love and joy and light.

Alone with God—in closet shut apart
From all the sadness and the vague unrest
That oft will come to every human heart,
There to recline, like John, upon His breast.

To feel beneath the everlasting arm,
And overhead the shadow of His wing,
Secure from all that may disturb or harm—
O, how the soul, exulting, then may sing!

"Alone with God!" O, holy trysting-place!
Shekinah, where before the mercy seat,
The soul communing, saved by wondrous grace,
Finds rest and peace and joy and comfort sweet.

St. Louis, Mo.

The Lost Emigrants.

R. H. JOHNSON.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The solution of the safe's disappearance, and of many other articles, tended to aggravate the ill-feeling between our party and the Blackbirds; and the more excitable of the former lost no opportunity to charge the thefts upon the latter.

In justice to these, it seems probable, as neither Pat nor Tony when with them knew of the secret pass to the warehouse, that this was only known to a few of the more trustworthy of the gang, because Bird, naturally suspicious, feared that if it were generally known to his party, it was likely to come to our ears and the way of ingress be cut off.

The charges of theft, whether upon the innocent or guilty, served to intensify the bitterness between the two parties. The wiser heads of our village did all in their power to allay the excitement, and to suppress the belligerent spirit of our men, but so protracted and serious had been the aggravation that it was a difficult thing to do.

It was deemed a proper precaution on the part of Captain Wolcott to restore the watchmen to look after the security of the warehouse.

Several days elapsed and the excitement seemed to be dying out, when one night we were awakened by the startling cry of fire. Very soon the entire village was awake, and pouring in the direction of the light, thronged to the west end of the village and found the poultry houses in flames. These being covered with a roofing of great sapida leaves, were very inflammable in a dry time.

Slowly we returned from the smoldering embers toward our homes, when a new surprise awaited us. The watchmen who were the first to give the alarm and to rush to the flames, on returning found the warehouse broken open and pillaged, especially of the canned meats and fruits, with many other valuables.

We thereupon remembered Pat's warning and reproached ourselves for having been caught napping.

But the worst was yet to be learned. As soon as we could recover from our surprise at the plundering, and discover something of its extent, the captain with a party hastened to the harbor, hoping to intercept the marauders before they could get away with the plunder, but they had already disappeared.

In hopes of overtaking them, impeded by overladen boats, the Captain ordered the new boats that we had made manned; but to our consternation the boats were gone, save the clumsy oyster scow, and that was scuttled. And now another appalling disaster was discovered. Some one cried: "Where's the brig?" All eyes at once turned to the place of anchorage, where out in the bay at nightfall she was securely dipping her bow to the waves with two trusted seamen aboard.

But now, on all the waters lit by the rising moon, there was not a vestige of the Island Queen.

Had the sea yawned and engulfed our boat?

Had the sailors, foreseeing danger, slipped anchor and got out of the bay? Had they turned traitor and given up the ship to the robbers, or had the vessel been seized and they made prisoners?

"They've got the start of us," said the Captain, "but we've got one more chance. We'll go home and get our breakfasts and hurry over to South Bay in time to intercept them yet." Accordingly, after a hurried breakfast, the Captain with a strong party went over.

But to their surprise, the Nest gave every indication of a hurried desertion. The Birds had flown. The mental darkness that rested over their location did not clear away until some of our men climbed a cliff near the sea, and saw a slender mast rising above the woods of the little island near the entrance to the bay. From this it was evident that the Blackbirds had removed with their spoils and the pirated brig, to the island, where they might be inaccessible to us so long as we had no boats; and the probabilities were that they would be away before these could be made.

A day or two later Tom Watson, one of the sailors on the brig at the time of its capture, came into the village. His report of the seizure of the brig was that the other sailor, Bill Owens, was on the watch at the time, while he was asleep below, when he was awakened by a noise, and coming on deck, he found Bill and three or four others hoisting the anchor. Refusing to lend a hand, he was seized and bound.

This occurred about midnight. The brig was then taken round a point of land to the south and anchored in a small cove, and leaving only one man in charge, the others rowed away in the small boat. Presently, as he lay bound on deck, he saw a bright light in the direction of the village, and after awhile a considerable party came with heavily laden boats, and transferred their stores to the brig, when all sailed away and anchored in a small bight on the outward side of the island off South Bay.

On the morning of his return to us he was put ashore and ordered to "light out," which he accordingly did. Interrogated as to the intentions of the malcontents, he said he could give no information, so uncommunicative were they in his presence.

We kept a watch on their movements, that we might not be taken by surprise, but not for long, for one foggy morning, when it was impossible to see a boat's length, they evidently hoisted sail and departed, as when the fog lifted later in the day, they were nowhere to be seen. Whether they were hidden away in some cove about the island was a matter of uncertainty to us until a thorough search of the island had been made, and then we came to the conclusion that they had left for some distant haven. And though their going had been somewhat expensive to us we did not begrudge it, and were thankful. Many were apprehensive of a return of the gang, but fortunately we had seen the last of them.

I may here add that a mystery unfathomable as the great sea in which they disappeared enshrouds their subsequent history. They may have reached the islands of the great archipelago to the north, and there have found kindred spirits. They may have taken a course that landed them on either North or South America; or they may have been swallowed up by the great ocean. Captain Wolcott is of the latter opinion because, though there were some fair sailors among them, there was not a man in all the gang who sufficiently understood navigation to take their reckoning.

At one of our meetings Mr. McGregor spoke with much enthusiasm of the prosperous condition of our church. He contrasted it with what it might have been had we given the reins to religious bigotry and divided up into little selfish parties according to our former affiliations, freezing to death for want of the spiritual warmth that comes from numbers, and powerless by our very

LEA & PERRINS'
SAUCE
The Original and Genuine Worcestershire.
All successful cooks use LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE to get the most delicious flavor for soups, fish, meats, gravy, game, salads etc.
BEWARE OF IMITATIONS
SIGNATURE on every bottle
Lea & Perrins
JOHN DUNCAN'S SONS, AGENTS - NEW YORK.

subdivisions to influence others for Christ.

He said he would to God the entire Protestant world—whose strength is its plea for the Bible as the supreme authority, and whose weakness is its disobedience to that Bible when it requires us to be one—could look in upon us and see the happy results of Christian union, and the moral power of such unity. In his judgment such an object-lesson would be a hundredfold more effective than the occasional half-hearted utterances against divisions, and the feeble pleas for the oneness of Christians, made within the lines of individual sects.

"But," said he, "while I rejoice at our happy condition, I am not without some apprehension that our present coherence and uniformity will be short-lived, unless we crystallize our views in the form of a creed.

Finally, Mr. Burton being called upon, said: "Brethren: up to the time of our organizing here, I have been a memher of a church whose creed dates back about two hundred and fifty years. The men who made it were very wise and devout, but after all they were fallible men. The church has outgrown it as the Episcopalians have outgrown theirs,* and many are clamoring for a revision. It contains errors. So does every creed made by men; for alas, fallible men cannot make an infallible creed. A stream cannot rise higher than its fountain. We might make the best creed ever formed by men, but it would partake of the imperfection of its authors.

"Again, human creeds are attempts to define a belief. To define signifies to mark out the limits; to make a boundary. But the moment you make a boundary, you are on one side and somebody is on the other. If you want to separate a people, draw your boundary lines and it's done.

"If you want them to be one, take down the dividing lines. I rejoice that we of this colony have pulled down the fences, and in consequence there is one fold and one shepshepherd.

"As there is but one fold, so there is but one true and infallible creed—one that every Christian can accept. And that must unite the religious world if it ever becomes one. This creed is, that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God. Professor Fisher, of Yale, in his History of the Church, p. 42, writing of the Apostolic Age, says: 'The one article of faith at the outset was that Jesus is the Messiah. Whoever acknowledged him in this character was baptized.'

"At Cæsarea Philippi when Peter said: 'Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God,' Jesus declared: 'Upon this rock I will build my church.' Peter's confession is the one thing to be believed; it is the 'rock'—the foundation stone on which the church rests. Hence we are not surprised to hear Paul say: 'If thou wilt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thy heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.'

*Rev, Huntington, D. D., Rector of Grace Church, New York, in a sermon published by Thos. Whittaker, 1899, says even of the conservative English Church: "It has at last been recognized by English Churchmen that the Book of Common Prayer, admirable as it is, does not necessarily cover and meet the spiritual needs of all sorts of men under all sorts of conditions."

IT'S WORTH YOUR WHILE....

to investigate the difference between our prices and those of agents and dealers for the same grade of work.

...WE DO NOT SELL...

through agents or dealers, therefore we do not have them to protect, and in making our prices are enabled to figure them as low as the grade of work we manufacture can be sold. We save you the profits that are added between the manufacturer and the consumer, by selling direct to you from our factory. This has been our method of selling for the past twenty-seven years, and we are today the largest manufacturers of vehicles and harness in the world selling direct to the user exclusively. We make 178 styles of vehicles and 65 styles of harness and ship anywhere with nickel trimmings, $11. for examination, guaranteeing safe arrival. Send for free catalogue showing all of our different styles. Good as sells for $16.

No. 48—Single Strap Collar and Hame Harness. Price complete with shafts, $70. We guarantee it as good as others sell for $30 to $40 more than our price.

No. 725—Stanhope.

Elkhart Carriage and Harness Mfg. Co., W. B. Pratt, Secy., Elkhart, Indiana.

"Jesus, triumpant over death, commanded the gospel to be preached throughout the world. And what is the gospel but the good news of the crucified and risen Christ, the Son of God, and that men believing in and obeying him should be saved?

"Belief in dogmas never saved a soul. You may collate from the Bible and arrange the most beautiful creed possible, and belief in it would be powerless to save. You might make your creed belief of the entire Bible, and yet that would not save you. The Christian's creed is pre-eminently personal—not belief in things, but in a person—belief in Jesus, and a personal trust in him for salvation. God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth—in the Bible? no: Whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

McGregor: "I agree with the speaker. We have a very succinct and beautiful creed that embodies the very essence of Christianity; but when I raised the question of a creed, I used it in the broader sense as embodying rules and regulations for church government."

Mr. Burton: "Well, in this broader sense, I think Mr. McGregor will agree with me that any rules and regulations not found in the Bible ought to be left out; and also that nothing the Bible has said on the matter ought to be left out. Very well; let us then just take the Bible as it is. We cannot improve upon it unless we are wiser than its author.

"The highest tribute I ever heard paid to any rules for discipline and government of a church are in these words: 'All Scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable for doctrine for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works.' If we can get up anything that will make men better than that, let us try it; if not, we will be wise to let well enough alone."

McGregor: "The difficulty is, we can't agree about the Bible. We divide in opinion as to what it teaches."

Burton: "Very true. Suppose we embody our opposing views in creeds, how is that going to help matters? If we fence off ourselves by creeds we are hopelessly separated; whereas, though we hold different opinions about many things in the Bible, we may still be in cordial fellowship. My brethren, let us stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free. I am glad I cannot put a yoke on you, nor shall you put one on me. We may honestly differ about many things, but shall we denounce and cast out those who disagree with us?

"There is one thing in which it is vitally important that we agree. There is 'one faith'—we must believe that Jesus is the Christ of God.

"It must be a faith made vital by the committal of our lives to him. The man that comes with me to this 'unity of the faith,' and stands close to Jesus, stands close to me, if I am near my Savior. He and I may disagree in many an opinion, but we will agree to disagree.

" 'Let us not therefore judge one another any more, but judge this rather, that no man put a stumblingblock or an occasion to fall in his brother's way.'

"Holding to a human creed, we are committed to every error it contains. Holding to an inspired creed, we are bound to discard every error of interpretation as soon as found. We may, therefore, say with the psalmist: 'Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path.' I say, therefore, if the effulgence of this light shall beam so brightly into our darkened souls as to dissipate our erroneous views of the Bible, we are not the losers, but great gainers, and it is not the overthrow of our creed, but the vindication of it.

"Hence, pledged to the Bible and the Bible alone, we glory in the light of a better understanding of the Word, in growth and progress, until we can eliminate every error from our darkened minds and enter into the boundless freedom of the truth."

McGregor: "I am glad I called up this discussion. We need to compare views upon this matter. I am well satisfied with the conclusions. I rejoice that we hold inflexibly to the only infallible creed: Jesus, the Christ, the Son of God; and to the infallible rules of faith and practice, the Bible; and I hold that to make any other creed would be disloyalty to the Christ, who died for us, and to the inspired Word, that is to be our guide."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Hall's Family Pills are the bes

The Old Hymns.

A. T.

There's lots of music in them—the hymns of long ago—
An' when some gray-haired sister sings the ones I uster know,
I sorter want to take a hand; I think of days gone by—
"On Jordan's stormy bank I stand, and cast a wistful eye."

There's lots of music in them—those dear sweet hymns of old,
Of visions bright, of lands of light, and shinin' streets of gold.
An' I hear them ringin', singin', where memory dreamin' stands—
"From Greenland's icy mountains, to India's coral strands."

They seem to sing forever of holier, sweeter days,
When the lilies of the love of God bloomed white in all the ways;
An' I want to hear their music from the old-time meetin's rise—
"Till I can read my title clear to mansions in the skies."

We never needed singin' books in them old days. We knew
The words and tune of every one, the dear old hymn-book through.
We didn't have no trumpets then, nor organs built for show;
We only sang to praise the Lord—"from whom all blessings flow."

An' so I love the dear old hymns; an' when my time has come,
Before the light has left me, and my tremblin' lips are dumb,
If I can only hear them then, I'll pass without a sigh—
"To Canaan's fair and happy land, where my possessions lie."

Akron, O.

A Reply.

GERTIE GIGGLETON.

Those "dear old hymns," of which you tell, were very well, no doubt,
In olden times, when you were young, but now they are played out.
We've got a brand new hymn-book—"Tuneful Two-steps" is its name—
From which we warble ditties that make your old tunes sound tame.

"On Jordan's Stormy Banks," indeed! Permit me here to state
That such old-fashioned melodies are hardly up to date.
If you want first-class music, just come and hear our choir
A-singing "When the Roll is Called up Yonder I'll be There."

Those dreary hymns in 4-4 time are too sedate and slow,
We've got to have, these modern times, some melodies that "go."
And so you'll hear, each Sunday morn, resound through Zion's walls,
The jigs and rag-time ditties borrowed from the music halls.

JESSE FRENCH PIANOS

AND ORGANS HAVE BEEN RECOGNIZED AS THE MOST POPULAR INSTRUMENTS IN THE WHOLE SOUTHWEST FOR NEARLY THIRTY YEARS.

Our FACTORIES are among the LARGEST in the U. S.

Jesse French Piano & Organ Co.

HOME OFFICE ST. LOUIS MISSOURI

Branches, Agents & Representatives in all LARGE CITIES

"I WAS A STRANGER."

A Story of the Klondyke.

EFFIE M. DAUPHIN.

"Hello—o! supper is ready, Will; are you coming?" The voice rang out strong and clear in the crisp, cold air, the light atmosphere of the Klondyke country plainly carrying the voice a great distance. A pause, and then came back the answer: "Yes, but Rob, come lend me a hand; we will have company for supper, I am thinking."

Rob and Will Meredith had gone to the Klondyke country a year and a half before with provisions and money to last them through two summers and one winter, hoping by that time to find untold wealth; but, as so many others have done before them, had failed.

They had traveled a great ways farther north, passing around Behring Strait and through Kotzebue Sound, as far north as the Arctic Circle, out of what is called the Klondyke district, but Alaska.

Spending a great deal of time and finding no gold, they had traveled back down near to Dawson City and built their cabin before the extreme cold came on.

They had witnessed strange changes—from the tenth day of June until the fifth day of July the sun was never out of sight, at midnight light as day and warm; then from the tenth day of December until the fifth day of January the sun was not in sight at all. From intense darkness through the night it gradually, from about 7 A. M., grew lighter, until at noonday it seemed like twilight, light enough to read by sitting close to the windows, then gradually grew dark again. The coldest days the mercury had fallen to sixty-three degrees below zero, but in this extreme cold their little log cabin, with its one room, was fairly well heated with a small sheet-steel stove, made on purpose for taking apart and being easily carried, brought with them from Seattle; these little stoves being used a great deal by the prospectors of that country.

True, they had much to be thankful for: they had suffered from no serious sickness and were together, had plenty to eat, and good, warm clothes to wear, and they found plenty of fuel, but the privations and intense cold had told upon their health and spirits until both were in a state of depression; their provisions were almost gone and they had deciced to go home while they still had money enough to take them there. Thus we find them at the beginning of our story.

Rob went at the call of his brother and found him partly leading and half carrying a man almost frozen, and it seemed half starved, he was so poor and weak, and dressed too thinly to stand the excessive cold.

They soon got him in by the fire and laid him on the bed made of poles, with first blankets and soft dried moss over them, then blankets over the moss, making a nice, soft bed, Will went to his medicine chest and got some medicine for the stranger, who soon revived sufficiently to talk.

"Well, boys," he said, "if you hadn't found me I would soon have gone over the divide this time, sure; I tried to stay with some fellers back there a piece this mornin', but they said they hadn't room and was about out of grub, and couldn't keep me no way."

Rob gave the stranger, who said his name was Jim Barlow, a good, hot drink of coffee with condensed milk; he drank greedily, but they saw that he was suffering from pneumonia, and the next day he was not able to get up, but lay on the bed all day, watching "the boys," as he called them, as they busied themselves about the cabin. He asked them what luck they were having, so they told him of their poor success, all the trials and hardships they had passed through in the past year and a half, and all for naught; of their wives and two little ones, that they had left together on a small farm in the East, who with their united efforts had managed to get along but poorly sometimes, especially through the winter, but who kept up their courage by thoughts of the home coming, and how they dreaded the going home with nothing, although knowing that the good-hearted wives would as gladly welcome them as though they were laden with gold.

In turn the stranger told them that he had been a Colorado miner with fairly good luck, but when his wife and child both died the same year it "broke him all up," as he said, and having no other relatives he had traveled to the Klondyke two years before.

"I could never stay there without Sary, the best little woman in the world, and the baby," he said pathetically. "My name was James Barlow there, but out here they all call me "Old Jim," but it matters little to me; I'll soon be done with this old world anyhow."

One day not long after the stranger's coming, Rob laughingly said, "This is Will's birthday; we have saved our last can of turkey for the birthday dinner, his wife wrote us to be sure to remember it and have something extra, so we will have turkey and mince pies. We have two cans of mincemeat left yet, and I'm a good hand at pie-baking. I will soon show you if I am not," and he laid a clean white board, which he called his molding board, over the box used for a table and rolled up his sleeves ready to begin operation.

"Boys, I hate to impose upon ye by stayin' so long and eatin' your grub, when ye are so short."

"Oh, nonsense," answered Will, "we are glad of your company, and glad to do all we can for you; you are to be chief guest at dinner to-day, so try and get up a good appetite for turkey and pie, and I will make you a good, strong, hot cup of beeftea besides."

Rob was naturally of a jolly, lively disposition, and he kept them both laughing at his queer remarks and efforts at pretending to serve a grand dinner. The stranger was given the only chair the cabin afforded made of poles, and with a blanket thrown over the back made quite a comfortable seat.

In the evening Rob and Will, who both had good voices, Rob a sweet, clear soprano and Will a heavy, rich bass, had been singing some gospel songs which seemed to greatly please the stranger, who rested quietly on the bed, listening.

Then Will read a chapter from his little pocket Bible, reading from Matt. 25. After a few verses had been read Old Jim interrupted by repeating after Will.

"'I was a stranger and you took me in;' yes boys, that's jist what ye did to me. Who said that?" "Jesus," answered Will.

"Why, he was a friend of Sary's, I've often heard her speak of him, and fer her sake, boys, I know he will see Old Jim through."

Tears stood in Will's eyes as he finished the chapter, and the short prayer offered by Rob was fervent and earnest.

Old Jim moaned and tossed on his bed all through the night, they gave him what few medicines they had that they thought good for him, but he seemed to grow worse and talked of Sary and the baby, of gold and Christmas dinners, of father and mother and the old Eastern home, all long since gone.

"Poor old man, he can't last long," said Will. "I am glad he wandered to our cabin, and it is a blessing that we had not left before he came, for he certainly would have perished from the the cold and, Rob, although we have found no gold, if we have been the means (as I feel that we have by his unspeakable love) of the poor man finding Jesus (Sary's friend), I feel that our trip to this country will not have been in vain.

In the morning the stranger seemed to feel better, and Rob and Will, after fixing up the fire good and seeing that he was comfortable, started out after fuel. After they had gone Old Jim carefully and with much exertion bolstered himself up in bed, and reaching his old coat that hung on a nail by the bed he took from the pocket a notebook and pencil and wrote for a long time, resting awhile, then laboriously writing again.

When he was resting, he would talk to himself. "Yes, boys, you will be surprised, but ye have been good to me and deserve it. Wouldn't them fellers back there feel queer if they knew the old man had gold by the thousands, but I forgive 'em, yes, I forgive em. The boys think I am poor, bless them, but won't they be happy when they find themselves rich and git back home to their wives and babies—happy as Sary and me was together. At the thought of her tears oursed down the weather-beaten face, but smile came to his lips as he wandered on: "'I was a stranger and ye took me in;' Sary, I am coming; Jesus, Sary's friend; I hear music—"

The smile remained on the cold, dead face. When Rob and Will returned a folded paper addressed to both lay on the piece of log, used for a seat, by the side of the bed. When they stepped into the cabin they saw at a glance that the stranger's spirit had fled, they saw the tears and the smile, and their tears fell unrestrained as with tender, loving hands they prepared the body for burial.

When this was finished Rob happened to notice the folded paper that lay on the log; he unfolded it and read aloud:

"Dear Boys—The old man is goin' to Sary and to Sary's friend. Ye was good to me and I am goin' to leave my gold to ye, for I have no folks to leave it to; its most all good, clean nuggets and plenty of 'em. The money ye will find in my belt is yours, too; the rest is buried under the pine tree jist about thirty foot straight north of yer cabin. I buried it there last year before ye come here; that was the reason I was tryin to git back here when I took sick. I didn't know anybody was here, and after them fellers refused to take me in I thought I would try to git back here and lie down under the old pine tree and die. I guess them fellers didn't know I was so sick and I forgive 'em. Leave Sary's picture right where it is, over my heart, and bury me under the old pine tree. Goodby boys. 'I was a stranger and ye—'"

Here the letter abruptly ended, but they could imagine the effort it must have cost him to write it, the poor weak fingers, and at the last the mind wandering.

The next morning the sun shone as brightly as though there were no saddened hearts in the little cabin. Rob took a spade and walked to the pine tree and with very little digging came upon the gold, just as Old Jim had told them in his letter, rare nuggets, large and small, and some curious trinkets gathered from the natives, a friendly, superstitious, migratory people having no idea of the value of gold. The trinkets and nuggets were all wrapped in seal skins and at the bottom of the excavation were large pieces of birch bark, smooth as paper; all were in an excellent state of preservation.

In the afternoon a party of three men who were camped about eight miles from the cabin, came over to borrow some reading matter. They were prevailed upon to stay over night. They helped Rob and Will to make a rough coffiin, and lined it with cloth the best they could do.

Rob read a short funeral service and Will offered a fervent prayer, both for the living and the dead, over all that remained of poor Old Jim. Then they laid the body to rest as he had requested, beneath the pine tree.

Rob and Will could hardly realize their good fortune, but finished their arrangements for leaving as quickly as possible, and will you wonder when I tell you that the name and memory of the stranger will be loved and cherished by them and their children as long as life shall last, and that soon a church called Barlow Chapel will be built in one of our Eastern cities?

Stenuous Regrets.

Teddy. I wish I hadn't licked Jimmy Brown this morning.

Mamma. You see how wrong it was, don't you dear?

Teddy. Yes, 'cause I didn't know till noon that his mother was going to give a party.

Uneeda
Jinjer Wayfer
Uneeda Jinjer Wayfer
The new dainty that has captivated the young folks, delighted the old folks, charmed all sorts of folks.
The sweet sister of
Uneeda Biscuit.
At grocers.
National Biscuit Company.

Success in Life.

Henry Watterson, the famous editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, was asked by the magazine entitled Success, to give his views on the matter of success in life and the best methods of attaining it. Mr. Watterson is a brainy man, as all the world knows, and he has something good to say on all subjects and on all occasions.

He says: "Success in life is largely referable to the fulfillment of two conditions indicated by the terms 'aptitude' and 'concentration.' To be successful, one must possess aptitude for the particular business that engages him. He must love it for its own sake. If, suited to and loving it, he concentrates upon it all his energies, he is tolerably sure to succeed according to the measure of the business itself and of his own capacity. In other words, success is the round peg in the round hole and the square peg in the square hole and, big or little, is to be attained in proportion to the coincidence of these requirements with the opportunity and the man. In the cases of Cæsar and Napoleon, they reached the altitude of human endeavor. In the case of the country lawyer, or doctor, or banker, or merchant he reaches the lower ranges; but if happiness be considered one of the ingredients of success, these latter surpass Cæsar and Napoleon, who were not very happy in their lives, and the death of both of whom was tragic."—Sunny South.

The Red Box Clew.

J. BRECKENRIDGE ELLIS.

"Yes," said Frank's father, "seeing your name and Mr. West's name together reminded me of my brother Frank and his sweetheart. Something told me to come—that I must come. There was one page missing from the grammar and I made that an excuse. And I persuaded my wife she needed a vacation—a long trip. It wasn't hard to persuade her when she knew I was hunting for a clew to our little girl!"

"But how did you find out I was here?"

"The grammar was sent from Creekville, so we went there, drove from St. Joseph in a carriage for the pleasure of the long drive. It took all day—what a delightful day it was, with lunch in the woods and no city walls to hold the sunshine prisoner. As we drove up behind what turned out to be Mr. Clarmont's place, I took a fancy to follow the brook on foot. I had a long stick and began poking about in the water—"

"Just like the boy he is!" cried his wife.

"And as I went along the pasture—you see I jumped over the gate—I came to where some rocks had been thrown across—"

"It was our dam!" cried Frank.

"Did you help to build it, darling?"

"Yes, I persuaded Vega, and we made it. It was one whole morning—such fun!"

"Frank, that dam was the cause of our finding you as soon as we did. You had built it in fun—how strange that your hands led to your being found! Well, as I pried about among the rocks I found this," and Mr. Douglas held up a small, round, red box.

"Oh, that is my charm!" cried Frank in wonder.

"So you have seen it before?"

"Yes, sir; Nance gave it to me. She said it was a charm, but I didn't believe her; and I was afraid of her and I threw it away. It fell in the brook and was washed out of sight. Then I was sorry that I had lost it."

"It is wonderful," said Mr. Douglas, "how even your thoughtless acts have led to our happiness. Had you not sent the grammar to Chicago I doubt if we would ever have met. Had you not built the dam the box would have been washed away, and had you kept the box we might have left Creekville without finding a trace of you. For you were there a very short time and I doubt if many knew of you, or at least knew your name."

"What did you do when you found the box?"

"We went toward the house to make inquiries and met Vega in the summer-house. She told us about you, and when we reached the house Mrs. Clarmont gave us your St. Louis address. At St. Louis Bro. Wilton told us how to find you."

"And how is Ronald?" asked Frank eagerly." You know he got shot trying to be a friend to me."

They told how they had left Ronald sitting up and improving rapidly. And Frank told them more and more about her life, until they began to understand what she had suffered, and how she had endured and had become all the better and nobler and sweeter for her sorrows. They had indeed found their daughter a little princess. For she had reigned over her days; she had subdued the dark days, conquering them by her faith; and the bright days had laid at her feet the tribute of their golden hours. And who is a prince but the one who is master of his days?

"One thing I don't understand," said Frank, after they had talked a long time, the parents describing their Kentucky home, and telling how they would buy her a pony and other delightful things. "Why did Nance ever steal me from you, and what is this little red box?"

"For many years," said her mother, "I could not have talked on this subject, for it would have reminded me too terribly of my loss. But now with my arm about you, darling, there is nothing to fear. So I shall tell you all about it, as if it were a story—for it has 'turned out right!' This little box belonged to your uncle, Frank Douglas, for whom Miss West named you. He was much older than your father. When he was a young man he took a trip to Europe (perhaps we three shall go, wouldn't that be fine?) and he got this box in Paris; I don't remember what he bought in it. Any way he kept it as a souvenir of his trip. When he was killed in the Civil War his property was divided out, and your father, then a young boy, was given this box among other things. When I married your father I had a handsome gold watch; every night I used to keep it in this box. You were about two weeks old when the box and the watch were stolen. Everything went to prove that your nurse was the thief. She found that she was about to be arrested on suspicion and she tried to escape. But she was captured and put in jail. She persisted in denying that she was the thief, and the watch could not be found at her hiding-place. She had been in jail about two weeks when one night the prisoners managed to break out. This wicked nurse escaped, and to revenge herself stole you. We were able to prove that she was the one who kidnaped you, even had suspicion not been enough in this case. And never were we able to find a single trace of you, of her, or of my watch. Now you will understand what we felt when we saw that red box. We always connected its disappearance with yours. We knew you or the nurse was near at hand. Thank God, it was you! And let us hope that that evil woman will never cross our lives again with her hateful shadow!"

Scarcely had she spoken the words when Frank gave a loud cry and pointed toward the window. Mrs. Douglas turned white at the note of terror in her daughter's voice. "What was it?" demanded Mr. Douglas, springing to his feet.

"Her face!" cried Frank, trembling. "It was Nance. Just for a moment she looked in. Oh, such a look! Then she was gone. It was so sudden, so dreadful! Oh, father, don't go out there. She looked as if she could have killed us all!" But Mr. Douglas, unheeding the pitiful request, hurried out of the room.

Mason & Hamlin
Church, Chapel, Lodge, ORGANS School and Home.
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD.
Catalog free. 146 Boylston St., Boston, Mass.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Cures scalp diseases & hair falling. 50c, and $1.00 at Druggists

Church, Peal and Chime Bells, Best Metal.
BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY,
THE E.W. VAN DUZEN CO. Cincinnati, O.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

WATCH AND CHAIN FOR ONE DAY'S WORK.

Boys and Girls can get a Nickel-Plated Watch, also a Chain and Charm for selling 1½ doz. Packages of Bluine at 10 cents each. Send your full address by return mail and we will forward the Bluine, post-paid, and a large Premium List. No money required.
BLUINE CO. Box 3, Concord Junction, Mass.

500 BICYCLES all makes, good as new. $3 to $10
NEW 1900 Models, $11 to $20
'98 & '99 Models, high grade, $8 to $13
Great factory sale, direct to rider. We ship anywhere on approval, send us an order.
EARN A BICYCLE distributing Catalogues for us. We will give one Rider Agent in each town FREE USE of sample wheel to ride and exhibit.
WRITE AT ONCE for Bargain List and our SPECIAL OFFER. Address Dept 165H
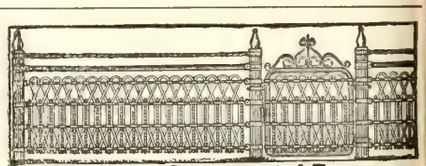
MEAD CYCLE CO., Chicago.



Kitselman Ornamental Fence.
Excels in strength, beauty and durability. Made of steel and iron. Cheaper than wood. 50 Designs. Catalog free.
KITSELMAN BROS, Box 163 Ridgeville, Ind.

B. & O. S-W.
"ROYAL BLUE SERVICE."
ST. LOUIS,
CINCINNATI,
LOUISVILLE,
COLUMBUS,
PITTSBURG,
WASHINGTON,
BALTIMORE,
PHILADELPHIA,
NEW YORK.

BEST LINE BETWEEN THE EAST AND WEST.

Luxurious Vestibuled Trains, Palatial Ladies' Coaches.
Pullman Drawing Room, Sleeping and Observation Cars.
B. & O. S-W. DINING CARS. Meals Served a la carte at POPULAR PRICES.

For Rates, Maps, Time-Tables or Sleeping Car Space—Call on any Ticket Agent or address
O. P. McCARTY, General Passenger Agt.,
G. B. WARFEL, Cincinnati, Ohio
Asst. Gen'l Pass. Ag't, St. Louis, Mo.

Sunday - School.

W. F. RICHARDSON.

JESUS WARNING AND INVITING.*

Luke places the events of our present lesson much later in the life of Jesus, almost at the close of the Galilean ministry, and after his sending forth of the seventy disciples. But Matthew makes this discourse of Jesus to follow very soon after the visit from the messengers of John the Baptist. It is possible that the Master on two occasions gave utterance to solemn warnings of impending judgment on the cities which had so poorly repaid the favors shown them. The differences in the narratives of the two evangelists are wide enough to warrant the opinion that their similarities are due to repetition.

Chorazin, Bethsaida and Capernaum were highly favored of the Lord, in being the scene of a large part of the public ministry of the Christ. He lived among their people, and most of his mighty works and wonderful teachings were wrought and spoken in their presence. Never before had God come so near to any earthly communities. Nazareth had enjoyed the presence of Jesus during the years of his private life; but his glory was veiled from their eyes. Jerusalem he had visited on several occasions, but his tarryings were brief and his miracles few. These cities on the shore of the Galilean lake had seen him almost daily; had witnessed his marvelous deeds of power and mercy again and again; had heard him speak as never man spake in their synagogues and homes, and upon their streets. They had every opportunity to know that he was, indeed, the Messiah. Yet, a multitude of their inhabitants would not receive him as their Savior. His heart was sore with the sense of unwelcome, and he poured out his sorrow and indignation in burning words: "Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! for if the mighty works which were done in you had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes." Tyre and Sidon were heathen cities, and the prophets of old had foretold the judgment of God upon them for their obstinate idolatry, and their haughty and intolerant spirit. Already they had begun to drink of the bitter cup of judgment for their sins. Yet, said the Master, they would have repented of their sins with such opportunities as had come to these cities of Israel. Therefore there would be more excuse for them in the day of judgment than for these. And Capernaum, haughty Capernaum, which the Messiah had exalted to heaven by the peculiar privileges conferred upon her, has returned evil for good, and persisted in her unbelief and stubborn rejection of the promised Savior. Even Sodom, that city of shameful history, whose very name was a stench in the nostrils of all good men, was less guilty than this metropolis of Galilee; for the former knew no messenger from God of higher rank than angels, while the latter was for three years the home of his only begotten Son. Opportunity measures responsibility. How many poor souls from the dark realms of heathenism may confront us in the judgment day to condemn us, because we have neglected the perfect light of the gospel of grace, and have fallen below their stumbling efforts to find and follow righteousness. "While ye have the light, walk in the light, that ye may be the children of light."

At this stage of his discourse, Luke places the return of the seventy, with their exultant account of the success attending their ministry. This outflow of their faith in joyous testimony comes as a sweet solace to Jesus' weary soul, and he breaks forth into rejoicing: "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight." The humble disciples were, in comparison with the learned rabbis, as little children, yet to them had come the revelation of God's truth and grace through the Christ, as the wise men had failed to comprehend it. Truth ever lies ready to the childlike spirit. The mind and heart that are closed by prejudice or filled with conceit must remain in ignorance. Any humble unlettered saint, whose soul is full of the love of God, will receive more nourishment from an hour's study of the word of God than can be gotton by the learned student, whose motive is vitiated by pride or self-righteousness. A thousand questions are answered by faith that are insoluble through knowledge. Some visitors to a school for deaf mutes were asked to write upon the blackboard such questions as they would like to have answered by the pupils. One of them wrote this question: "Why did God make you deaf and dumb, and make us so we can hear and speak?" It was a hard question, and the eyes of many of the children filled with tears, as they groped for an answer that would not impugn the divine goodness. At length, after a long pause, a boy went to the platform and wrote upon the board this answer: "Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight!" Who could give a better answer? It was the answer of a child when his father's action was called in question.

Jesus then tells them that he is the mediator between them and God, and only as they come into harmony with him will they truly know the infinite Father. No one knows the Son except the Father, and no one knows the Father except the Son. But the mission of the Son is to show men the Father, in his spirit, works and character. When they have learned what he has to teach them of God, and have conformed their lives to the ideals he has set before them, then will they truly know the Son himself. They will never appreciate him until they become measurably like him.

His discourse closes with what is perhaps the purest gem of all persuasive utterances: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." Nothing so apt and beautiful has been written on these words of Jesus as the chapter of Prof. Drummond in his little volume, "Pax Vobiscum." Every student of this passage ought to read it. He tells us, that rest is given as a gracious boon from Jesus, yet it is "found," and therefore depends upon our seeking it. We seek it by "learning" of Jesus. Now learning usually involves weariness, but learning of the divine teacher is itself refreshing. What we learn, that brings rest, is meekness and humility. And these ever bring rest and peace, as their opposites, ambition and pride, always result in restlessness and discontent. Though Jesus seems to make the way hard by demanding that we take his yoke upon us, we are reminded that the yoke is put upon the neck, not to make the task hard, but easy; not to make the burden heavy, but light. So, when we follow Jesus, take life as he takes it, work in his spirit and with his motive, cherish in our heart his ideal, life becomes a delight, duty loses its hardship, service is sweet and sacrifice a pleasure. O that men would realize that it is the way of the transgressor that is hard! The path of the just is as a shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

*Lesson for May 6,—Matt. 11:20-30. Parallel passage—Luke 10:12-22.

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR, ECKSTEIN } Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC, BRADLEY, BROOKLYN, JEWETT, ULSTER, UNION } New York.
SOUTHERN, SHIPMAN } Chicago.
COLLIER, MISSOURI, RED SEAL, SOUTHERN } St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

IT IS quite generally believed, particularly by large consumers and practical painters, that Pure White Lead is the best paint. It is because of this belief that manufacturers of the so-called White Leads, mixtures of Whiting, Barytes and Zinc, brand them "White Lead," "Pure White Lead," etc., etc. You can avoid these by making sure that the brand is right.

FREE For colors use National Lead Company's Pure White Lead Tinting Colors. Any shade desired is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving full information and showing samples of Colors, also pamphlet entitled "Uncle Sam's Experience With Paints" forwarded upon application.

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE TABLETS. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. GROVE'S signature on each box. 25c.

CHILDREN'S DAY SERVICES for the Sunday School. GOLDEN SUNBEAMS music by Gabriel, Thiel and Rosche: words by Laura E. Newell. This service offers exceptional opportunities for decorative effects. The music is particularly bright and sparkling. Price 50c. per doz., $4 per 100. postpaid. Enclose 10c. in stamps for samples of our three latest services for Children's Day. THE CHURCH CHOIR for May contains Children's Day music for the Choir. Enclose 10c. for sample copy.
GEO. F. ROSCHE & CO.
Chicago, 38 Randolph St. New York, 22 N. William St.

Do You Suffer With PILES
Send us your name and address, and let us mail you our Booklet—"FACTS," about MERTANNO the only specific for the non-surgical treatment of PILES.
Our Guarantee: We will refund the price paid for this remedy in any case of Piles it fails to relieve or cure.
MERTANNO PHARMACAL CO.,
416 Scott Street, Covington, Ky., U. S. A.

AULT & WIBORG COMPANY
Manufacturers of Printing Inks.
CINCINNATI. NEW YORK.
CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.
This Paper printed with Ault & Wiborg Ink

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION
25 CTS 25 CTS

Christian Endeavor.

By Burris A. Jenkins.

TOPIC FOR MAY 6.

HOW CHRISTIANS GROW.

(Mark 4:26-29.)

These parables show very clearly that the kingdom of God comes, not in a moment of time, but that it is of gradual development, and that it is still coming, still developing. Although these figures of the growth of seed were spoken of the kingdom, nevertheless, they are true of the growth of individuals, who make up the kingdom.

There is no interpretation of these parables that will admit of the notion that Christians suddenly attain sinlessness, or, for that matter, ever attain it. Gradual is the unfolding of those qualities which belong to the kingdom of God.

It seems to some of us that possibly we are not growing at all, and sometimes the terrible question comes whether we are not actually going backward. But if we are thus concerned over our spiritual growth the chances are that this concern is, itself, evidence of growth. They that hunger and thirst after righteousness shall be filled.

Moreover, it is never God's way to do things by fits and starts. Not by sudden jerks and lurches does the great ship of this world's progress go forward. How infinitely slow, infinitesimally gradual, was the course of development in our world of nature. There were, to be sure, and still are, earthquakes and volcanic upheavals, but how small are these in the great increasing purpose of the ages—merely heart-throbs.

So it is with the unfolding of a soul—always gradual, majestically slow and dignified, in perfect harmony with the great processes of God. There are, to be sure, seasons of upheaval and earthquake in our experiences, moments when it seems that all his billows have gone over us, when fire has entered our bones and the iron our hearts; but these are the heart-throbs and throes of development. All things work together for good to those who hunger for righteousness.

Be still, then, O our hearts, and know that he is God, that he will do his work in a large and noble way. Fret not, neither strive nor cry; but sleep and rise night and day, and the kingdom of God which is among us—nay, is in us—will grow; we not fear.

And yet, although we can rest in perfect peace if our heart is stayed on him, nevertheless, we should be very sure we are putting no obstacles in the way of his dealing with us. It is not an intricate thing, the preparing of the ground and the keeping down of weeds, so that the seed may grow. Our part is comparatively simple. God does the difficult things—sending of sunshine and rain, freezing and thawing. Let us only see to it that we do not neglect the simple measures that are ours.

The reading of his Word we ought not to neglect. It is like the rooting out of weeds—weeds of idle brain and wrong or foolish thinking. Fill the mind full of bright and sweet thinking by reading God's Word. Yes, in sky and field and wood, in utterances of noble minds, in music of birds and human skill and in The Books.

Prayer cannot be neglected any more than plowing. It is the turning over of the soil of our souls; it is the piercing to the depths and the freshening of the loam. It is elemental, fundamental. We dare not neglect it. There are many ways of praying, and many places for it—under the blue sky, before the fire, facing the rain, elbowing the crowds. Men ought always to pray. Meanwhile, the life grows.

Right action is essential to growth. When we do wrong it dwarfs us. Here is the most terrible thing about sin: its wages is death—death by stunting. Boys are sometimes told that certain practices will stunt their growth, and no thought is more terrible to a boy, for all of them want to be large. So men should be told that the wages of sin is dwarfing, and when once they realize the truth of it, it will be a deterrent. Wrong-doing grieves the Holy Spirit, the spirit of growth, the life of God within us, and every sin is followed by so much of atrophy, shriveling, dying of noble aspirations and worthy effort.

If we freshen the soil, then keep right with God, calmly, quietly look to him, he will see to the growth. Put no obstacles in his way, but help him with our little best and he will see to the issue.

Bethany Reading Courses.

SOME BENEDICTIONS OF MISSIONARY BIOGRAPHY.

By W. J. Lhamon, Director.

An attractive book of biographies of certain worthy missionaries has appeared from the press of the Christian Publishing Company, in St. Louis, Missouri. It is not my intention to review this book, but simply to commend it to the readers of the Bethany Circles, for it is worthy and will do them good. One of the missionary heroines treated at length in it has been accorded but a single paragraph in our handbook, "Heroes of Modern Missions." I trust that what is said in the handbook will inspire our readers to know more of Ann Hasseltine Judson, and N. M. Ragland, the author of this book with the modest title, "Leaves From Mission Fields," is quite competent to tell more about her. Other biographies are those of our own Hattie L. Judson and Josephine Smith and Charles E. Garst. I am glad for the sake of our readers and many others that Brother Ragland has gathered these leaves into such a thing of beauty, and I trust the young people of many churches and circles may be blessed by it.

Now all this leads to some reflections upon the value of missionary biography. In the first place, it must be said that it is always well for us to keep step with those who have been keeping step with Christ. If it is true of the lives of great men that they help us make our lives sublime, it is likewise true of the lives of good men, that they help to make our lives beneficent. Among the chiefest forces with which Jesus has been moving the world is his character; i. e., himself. His life speaks even beyond the eloquence of his lips. His precepts are made over into practice and his love into life. That he is flesh of our flesh has drawn these myriads of hearts very near to him. Certainly, his life is not worth less to us than his teachings, and surely, one must put as high an estimate upon his biography as upon his sermons and parables, though they are incomparable. It has been finely said: "Ideas are not the greatest power of change for the better, but a mind full of ideal forces." It is reported of President Eliot that he considered the life of Washington as well-nigh incomparable, "because of the incessant transfusion of his great mind through the intellectual life of the children and youth of America." This holds true in a measure of all biography, and it is thus that the record of a life is a true benediction.

Again, missionary biographies show us ancient ideals in modern realities. We see Christ's majestic misssionary ideals incarnate measurably in Peter, more largely in Paul; but these great and heroic ones seem a long way off to us. If we were shut up to them we might wonder whether the salt of the gospel had lost its savor. But when we see Livingstone and Carey and Judson and Morrison and Patteson and Williams and a great host of our present-day brothers and sisters, emulating according to their gifts and opportunities these ancient heroes and martyrs, we are compelled to say the gospel is even yet the power of God unto heroism to those who believe it.

Again, we are helped by the story of the fruitfulness of their lives. They do have children in the faith—all these heroic ones. Sooner or later where Christ is exalted men and women are drawn to him; multitudes believe and are baptized; churches spring up and with them schools and Christian homes and a whole new world of blessed things.

Again, the promise of the Savior is made good in the lives of these missionary heroes and martyrs: "I will be with you even unto the end of the world." No records of spiritual life and the joys and beneficences of such life are more convincing, nor any, it would seem, quite so enrapturing as those of the mission fields of this century, unless, indeed, it be those of similar workers of other centuries. If any servants more than others "lie within the light of God," if any more than others rest upon the Savior's bosom, they are the missionary servants.

Thus there are peculiar glories about the stories of their lives, and a seeming incense which, so far from rising to heaven, descends from heaven, if one may so imagine it, making them rich in spiritual fragrance.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better, it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary great benefit.

A Buffalo physician, in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in the stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation. yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets.

Daily Double Train Service to Portland,

Commencing April 22, Union Pacific Railroad Company, will run two daily trains from Chicago, Omaha, and Kansas City to Portland, Ore. These trains will be equipped with Buffet, Smoking, Library, and Dining Cars; Standard Sleepers, Ordinary Sleepers or Tourist Cars. Time from St. Louis to Portland via Omaha, 68 hours; from Chicago, 69 hours; from Omaha, 55 hours; from Kansas City, 68 hours. For particulars address E. L. Lomax, G. P. A., Omaha, or J. F. Aglar, Gen. Agt., 903 Century Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Book Notes.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the notice of the withdrawal of our offer of the Home and Farm Cyclopedia for $2.50. This book was advertised but once, but our stock was exhausted within a week afterward. It appears that the people know a good thing when they see it. We regret that any should have been disappointed in failing to secure a copy of this work. We are still offering, however, a number of equally good bargains in books. Our stock of these is growing "small by degrees and beautifully less," and it behooves those who wish to take advantage of our great half-price sale to send orders at once.

"A Campbell Library" at $4.00 is most decidedly a great offer. It should be taken advantage of by hundreds of preachers and others. We cannot guarantee to continue the offer indefinitely, and therefore urge intending purchasers not to delay sending their orders. See half-page advertisement on another page.

"Wheeling Through Europe," by W. E. Garrison, will be ready for delivery by the time this issue reaches our neaders. During the summer of 1898 and 1899 the author traveled extensively through England, Scotland, Wales, France, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Austria and Italy. All of this touring was done on a bicycle, and he was thus enabled to see Europe as it cannot be seen by the tourist who rushes through the several countries on railway trains. He has written of his travels in a most entertaining and fascinating style. "Wheeling Through Europe" is a beautiful volume of 263 pages, handsomely bound and illustrated with half-tone cuts from photos taken by the author. Price, postpaid, $1.

"Christian Science Dissected," by A. D. Sector, is another new work that will be ready by May 1. There has for some time been a demand for a forcible, convincing but concise book directed against this modern folly, and "Christian Science Dissected" is intended to meet this demand. It is written in a popular style and published at a price that should give it a very wide circulation. It is fair, inasmuch as the tenets of the Eddyites are given in their own words. The author has a sense of humor, and has not failed to see the ridiculous side of Christian Science. Price, postpaid, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.50.

"Christian Baptism," by Alexander Campbell, is having a very large sale. Our offer of this great work of over 400 pages, bound in leather, at fifty cents, has already made heavy inroads on our supply, but our offer is continued for the present. We are much gratified also at the increasing demand for the Campbell-Purcell debate on Romanism and the Campbell-Owen debate on the evidences of Christianity. These books are practically indispensable to the Christian minister. Our offer of either volume for $1 has gained us the thanks of a host of preachers.

For Foreign Missions.

Oomparing the receipts for Foreign Missions for the week ending April 19, with the corresponding week, 1899, shows the following:

	1899	1900	Gain
No Contrib. Churches,	228	226	Loss 2
No. " Sunday-schools,	6	11	5
No. " C. E. Soc's,	9	22	13
No. Individual offerings	11	45	34
Amount	$3,902 81	$12,287.66	$8,384.85

$8,000 of the above is on the annuity plan.

Send to F. M. RAINS, Treas.

Box 884, Cincinnati, Ohio.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

"ALL THY CHILDREN SHALL BE TAUGHT OF THE LORD."

Our Young Folks gives special and most careful attention to the Sunday-school Interests, looking upon this organization as the strongest Working Arm of the Church, and the most effectual agency for teaching the Word of God to the young and bringing them to Christ and promoting their growth in grace and in knowledge.

1. THE BIBLE LESSONS.—Two or three pages of each issue of OUR YOUNG FOLKS are devoted to an exposition of the International Bible Lesson. The Scripture Text is printed in full, with copious Explanatory, Geographical, Illustrative and Applicatory Notes, also Suggestions for Teaching and Review, with carefully prepared Outlines and Blackboard Designs. The Teacher or Student who is in possession of a copy of this Journal will find himself or herself so fully equipped that no other lesson help will be required.

THE DESCENT OF THE DOVE.

2. PRIMARY HELPS.—The Helps and Hints for Primary Teachers, prepared by Mrs. Mary Wisdom Grant, the foremost Primary Teacher and Writer of the Christian Church, leave nothing further to be desired along this line. They are full, simple and practical, often accompanied by pictures and blackboard designs such as the ordinary teacher can reproduce, and such as the little ones can understand. The Primary Teacher's work is the most difficult of all work attempted in the School. Many who can teach successfully in other departments of the school prove failures in the presence of the little people, as to successfully lead and interest them requires special talent and equipment. Therefore the teachers of these classes ought to have the best help obtainable, and such help it is the province of OUR YOUNG FOLKS to supply.

The Home Mission Number.

The Home Mission number of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is a gem.

It is demonstrably true that all our church enterprises depend on the well-being and multiplication of the home churches. It is also probably true that the well-being of the home churches depends on their touch with the world-wide field.

The lesson of "An Interview with the Genius of Missions" is one of much importance. Every one should ponder it. As to "Our Plea," America is the source of supply for the world.

The illustration of opportunity that has been given is especially applicable to our collection for Home Missions. Opportunity is in the act of stepping, her step means flying, she may easily be seized in front, but cannot be caught from behind. The May offering ought to be the most generous ever offered for missions during our history. Now is our opportunity. Its neglect will leave the car of salvation far in the rear.

E. C. BROWNING.

A Splendid Number.

The Home Missionary Number of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST should stir the heart and open the pocketbook of every Disciple into whose hands it comes. The beautiful front cover is a study, and the "Interview with the Genius of Missions" is a masterpiece. I could wish that every Disciple in the land could and would look upon the picture and read the interview, then make a study of the entire number. If this was done the home missonay treasury would be full to overflowing. "As goes America, so goes the world." Is it so? Do we believe it? These are questions that immediately came to me as I looked at the front cover. Yes, we answer. Hold a moment, ye Disciples of Christ in Missouri! Last year in this state less than 150 churches gave to American Missions, and only $4,377.88 was received from all sources for this work. We gave about 2¾ cents per member. Oh! we have been converted. We do believe that Jesus is the divine Savior. "As goes America, so goes the world." All right! "By their fruits ye shall know them." The first Lord's day in May is the test day. It is the day of responsibility; the day of opportunity. Let Missouri push up from fifth to first place in the roll of states. The way into all the world is by way of America. Our love for Christ and native land should move us to larger giving and greater sacrifice.

M. J. NICOSON.

The State Bible-school and Endeavor Convention.

This great convention will be held at California June 11-14, 1900. Are you coming? We hope so. We will be prepared to entertain all who may come. But we want you to help us. How? By sending the undersigned, on a postal card, your name.

Let every one who expects to attend do this and we will assign you to a home and send you on a card the name of your host. By so doing you will enable the committee to perform the burden of its work before the convention meets. Do this now.

C. C. HILL.

California, Mo.

A PURE GRAPE CREAM OF TARTAR POWDER
NO ALUM - NO AMMONIA

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

Superior to all others in purity, richness and leavening strength.
Highest Honors, World's Fair
Gold Medal, Midwinter Fair

Announcements.

Spring Term Lectures.

DRAKE UNIVERSITY BIBLE COLLEGE will hold its Spring Term Lectures in the Auditorium of the University Church at 4-5 P. M., from April 23 to May 9, 1900, as follows.

APRIL 23 TO 27.

1. Monday. "Wyclif and the English Bible."
2. Tuesday. "Luther and the Reformation."
3. Wednesday. "Calvin and the New Sovereignty."
4. Thursday. Wesley and the Revival of Religion."
5. Friday. "Campbell and Christian Union." By T. W. Grafton, pastor of Memorial Christian Church, Rock Island, Ill.

APRIL 30 TO MAY 4.

1. Monday. "Yiz'haki and Ibn Ezra: The Two Classical Bible Commentators." By Rabbi S. H. Sonneschein, Des Moines, Ia.
2. Tuesday. "Special Problems for Ministers." By I. N. McCash, pastor of the University Christian Church.
3. Wednesday. "The Minister as a Man Among Men." By W. B. Craig, Chancellor of Drake University.
4. Thursday. "Criticism and Christianity." By H. O. Breeden, pastor of the Central Christian Church.
5. Friday. "Some Religious and Ecclesiastical Problems of Marriage and Divorce." By J. Everist Cathell, Rector of St. Paul's Parish, Des Moines, Ia.

MAY 7 TO 9.

1. Monday. "The Pioneer Disciples of Iowa." By Allen Hickey, of Des Moines, Ia.
2. Tuesday. "The Place of the Preacher in the Social Order." By Ed Amherst Ott, Dean of the College of Oratory, Drake University.
3. Wednesday. "The Huxley-Drummond-Gladstone Debate." By Alfred Martin Haggard, Dean of the Bible College, Drake University.

AVOID UNKNOWN BRANDS

BORDEN'S EAGLE BRAND CONDENSED MILK

SEND "BABIES" A BOOK FOR MOTHERS
Borden's Condensed Milk Co, NY

Ministerial and Missionary Meeting.

The Indiana State Ministerial and Missionary Meeting will meet at Valparaiso May 15-18.

PROGRAMME.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION—TUESDAY.

2:00 P. M. Devotional Exercises.
2:15 P. M. Sermon by Jabez Hall.
3:00 P. M Celebration of the Lord's Supper, conducted by J. L. Brandt.
8:00 P. M. Address.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 16.

8:30 A. M. Chapel exercises at Normal School.
9:45 A. M. Open Parliament, "The Pastoral Relation," led by Allan B. Philputt.
11:00 A. M. "The Power of the Preacher," Prof. E. S. Ames.
2:00 P. M. Prayer.
2:10 P. M. Business Session.
2:45 P. M. "The Value of Associated Studies," Symposium, C. C. Rowlison, Prof. C. B. Coleman and Prof. E. S. Ames.
7:30 P. M. Devovional.
8:00 P. M. Address, G. P. Coler.

STATE MISSIONARY CONVENTION—THURSDAY, MAY 17.

8:30 A. M. Chapel Exercises at Normal school.
9:45 A. M. Field Secretary's Report, T. J. Legg.
10:00 A. M. Treasurer's Report.
10:30 A. M. "Methods ot Evangelistic Work in our State," T. H. Kuhn.
2:00 P. M. Prayer.
2:10 P. M. "The Problem of the Country Church," Prof. C. B. Coleman.
2:45 P. M. "Relation of the Country Church to the City Church," J. H. McNeill.
Discussion
7:30 P. M. Devotional.
8:00 P. M. Educational Address, Pres. B. A. Jenkins.

FRIDAY, MAY 18.

8:30 A. M. Devotional Exercises at Normal School.
9:45 A. M. "Normal Methods in the Sunday-school," Prof. Bogardus.
10:10 A. M. Missionary Address, G. L. Wharton, of India.
10:40 A. M. Chrisrlan Endeavor Address, B. L. Allen, state superintendent.
11:00 A. M. Ministerial Relief, Howard Cale.
11:45 A. M. Address, Prof. M. L. Sniff.
2:00 P. M. Prayer.
2:10 P. M. Home Missions, C. C. Smith.
2:40 P. M. C. W. B. M., Mrs. Helen E. Moses.
3:20 P. M. Symposium on State Work: (a) Its Organization, E. B. Schofield; (b) Its Finances, J. A. Rose; (c) Its Evangelism, James Small.
7:30 P. M. Devotional.
8:00 P. M. Sermon, P J. Rice.

COMMITTEE.

Program

Of the Annual Conference of the Disciples of Christ in the North Atlantic States, at the First Christian Church, Hagerstown, Maryland, May 16th, 17th and 18th, 1900.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, MAY 16.

8:00—Devotional services. Richard Bagby.
8:20—Address of welcome. Charles D. Wagaman.
8:30—Vocal solo. A. D. Buttrick
8:35—Address, Education and Missions. Cary Morgan.
9:00—Vocal solo. Miss Florence Robertson.
9:05—The Call to Us To-day. W. J. Lhamon.
9:30—Greetings from States.
Announcements.
Adjournment.

THURSDAY MORNING, MAY 17.

8:00—Devotional service. H. F. Lutz.
8:30—How to Study the Gospels. J.W.McGarvey.
9:15—President's address. F. D. Power.
Appointment of committees. Chairman.
9:30—Statement by Secretary. S. T. Willis.
9:45—Brief reports from the field, by ministers and others.
10:45—Evangelization of the East. E. B. Bagby.
11:05—Our Educational Needs in the East. Conference led by B. A. Abbott.
11:25—Business session.
12:00—Adjournment.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

2:00—Devotional service. Dr. E. E. Montgomery.
2:20—The Saloon and Missions. L. A. Cutler.
2:40—Mission Fields in our Great Cities. J. M. Philputt.
3:00—Business session.
4:00—The Problem of the Country Church. J. D. Hamaker.
4:20—Hindrances to our Eastern Work. W. J. Wright.
4:40—Christian Endeavor in Evangelism. W. J. Cocke.
5:00—Adjournment.

THURSDAY EVENING.

7:30—Devotional service. J. A. Hopkins.
7:45—Our Plea and Eastern Conditions. Peter Ainslie.
8:00—Solo. Miss Florence Robertson.
8:05—Ministerial Training and the Churches. J. W. McGarvey.
9:00—Solo. A. D. Butrick.
9:15—Announcements.
Adjournment.

FRIDAY MORNING.

8:00—Devotional services. W. H. Maxwell.
8:30—How to Study Acts of Apostles. J. W. McGarvey.
9:15—Business session.
Election of officers.
Future work, etc., etc.
10:45—How Escape the "Dead Line in the Ministry?" Harry Minnick
10:00—The Preacher as a Student. C. A. Young.
11:20—The Holy Spirit in the Sermon. M. E. Harlan.
11:40—Neglected Bible Doctrine. A Symposium.
12:00—Adjournment.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

2:00—Devotional service. B. P. Smith.
2:15—Sunday-school work. G. P. Rutledge.
2:40—Suggestions on Sunday-school work, led by W. S. Hoye.
Three minute speeches.
3:00—The Minister for our times. J.W.McGarvey.
3:30—Business session.
4:30—Y. P. S. C. E. Conference. C. W. Harvey.
5:30—Adjournment.

FRIDAY EVENING.

7:30—Devotional service. R. W. Clymer.
7:45—Training the New Convert. T.E.Cramblett.
8:00—Music.
8:05—Final business meeting.
8:20—Fellowship meeting.
Three and five-minute addresses.
Hymns and farewells.
9:30—Announcements and final adjournment.

The Trunk Line Association has just informed me that they have authorized a rate of two cents a mile on card orders to our Conference; tickets to be sold and good going May 14 to 17, returning, to May 21, inclusive. I am authorized to distribute supplies of the card orders on application. Therefore, all wishing to avail themselves of this rate should send in their orders to me at once, inclosing stamp, and I will fill them as soon as possible, Will each one, in making the order, please state the railroad lines over which they will travel to Hagerstown, as this will assist me in filling the order intelligently. You will notice that the tickets will be good returning until midnight of Monday, May 21. This has been arranged so as to allow all who care to stay in Hagerstown over Lord's day, the 21st, to do so. Bro. P. A. Cave is anxious to have many of the ministers remain and preach in the Hagerstown pulpits on that day. Hoping that we may have an excellent Conference and practical results, let me suggest that all delegates come prepared to say how much their respective churches will pledge to sustain one or two evangelists in this field next year. I see no reason why we should not undertake the work of aggressive evangelism in some of the many neglected centers of population in our territory.

The prospects for a good Conference are flattering, a large attendance is expected, the very best of talent is on the program, and we must take definite steps toward evangelizing the neglected fields in the great East.

Praying for divine blessings upon our efforts, I am yours sincerely,

S. T. WILLIS, Secretary.

DR. J. HARVEY MOORE,

EYE, EAR, NOSE
and THROAT....

648-649 CENTURY BUILDING,

HOURS: 10 to 3. SAINT LOUIS.

MARCH AND APRIL
Are the most disagreeable months of the year in the North.

In the South they are the pleasantest and most agreeable. The trees and shrubs put forth their buds and flowers; early vegetables and fruits are ready for eating, and in fact, all nature seems to have awakened from its winter sleep. The Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company reaches the Garden Spots of the South, and will on the first and third Tuesdays of March and April sell round-trip tickets to all principal points in Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia and West Florida at about half rates. Write for particulars of excursions to P. Sid Jones, D. P. A., in charge of Immigration, Birmingham, Ala.

THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

A WEEKLY FAMILY AND RELIGIOUS JOURNAL.

Vol. xxxvii — May 3, 1900 — No. 18

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
Current Events....547
World's Conference on Missions....548
Incidents and Sayings of the Ecumenical Conference....549
Unceasing Prayer....550
Editor's Easy Chair....551
Questions and Answers....551
ORIGINAL CONTRIBUTIONS:
Our First Congress.—A. B. Jones....552
Christ's Life and the Christ-Life.—Sherman Hill....553
The Need of the Hour.—Louise Kelly....553
Pessimism in the Church.—Joseph Fort Newton....553
The Keynote of the Christian Religion.—J. M. Lowe....554
Dawson as a Critic.—J. W. Monser....554
CORRESPONDENCE:
Chicago Letter....560
Letter from Indiana....560
B. B. Tyler's Letter....561
The St. Louis Letter....562
The Circuit Completed....562
Leaves from Mission Fields....563
Kansas Christian Ministerial Institute....563
FAMILY CIRCLE:
The Lost Emigrants....568
Reverie (poem)....569
A Little Child Shall Lead Them....569
The Winged Seed (poem)....569
Mother's House....569
MISCELLANEOUS:
Our Budget....555
Personal Mention....557
Notes and News....564
Missionary....566
Evangelistic....567
With the Children....571
Sunday-school....572
Christian Endeavor....573
Literature....574
Marriages and Obituaries....576
Ohio State Convention Program....576

Subscription $1.50

J. S. HUGHES. (See Page 556.)

PUBLISHED BY

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY

1522 LOCUST ST., ST. LOUIS

THE
Christian - Evangelist.

J. H. GARRISON, Editor.
W. W. HOPKINS, W. E. GARRISON,
Assistant Editors.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTIONS:

Single subscriptions, new or old.....$1.50 each
Ministers.....1.00 "

CLUB RATES.

25 or more copies.....$1.00 each

All subscriptions payable in advance. Label shows the month up to the first day of which your subscription is paid. If an earlier date than the present is shown, you are in arrears. Paper will be discontinued at end of time paid for if express orders to that effect accompany payment of subscription. Arrears should be paid when discontinuance is ordered.

If paper fails to reach you regularly please notify us at once.

In ordering a change of post office, please give the OLD as well as the NEW address.

Do not send local check, but use Post Office or Express Money Order, or Draft on St. Louis, Chicago or New York, in remitting.

ADDRESS, CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.,
1522 Locust St. St. Louis, Mo.

Join the Procession!

Send us.....

One Dollar

And until Jan. 1st, 1901, you will receive each week....

THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

"In His Steps."

Given away

New Subscribers send $1.50 for a year's subscription from May 1st.

a year's

Old Subscribers pay arrears to May 1st and $1.50 for a year from that date.

with

Subscription to

Those Now Paid in Advance send $1.50 for another year's credit.

The...
Christian--Evangelist.

BIOGRAPHIES of PROMINENT AMERICANS

The history of any nation is best told in the lives of its eminent men. No American who wishes to fully understand the history of his country should neglect to read and study the lives of the men who have made it great. We are happy to be able to offer to our patrons such volumes as the following, at prices within the reach of all:

GRANT

A volume of 766 pages, copiously illustrated, bound in cloth. A complete history of the great General—his boyhood, early experiences in the army, his part in the civil war, his service as President of the United States, his triumphant tour of the world, and his later years. Original publishers' price was $2.00.

PRICE, SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS.

SHERMAN

The personal memoirs of William Tecumseh Sherman, Grant's ablest lieutenant in the civil war. A volume of 522 pages, splendidly printed and bound—the original edition published by the Chas. L. Webster Co. To the memoirs has been added a chapter giving an account of Sherman's death and funeral. Original price, $2.00.

PRICE, SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS.

GARFIELD

A sympathetic biography of the soldier, statesman and Christian gentleman, by F. M. Green. An appendix contains the memorial address delivered by Hon. Jas. G. Blaine. The volume tells of Garfield's boyhood, early struggles, his career in the army and in Congress, his election to the presidency, and his death. Original price $2.00.

PRICE, ONE DOLLAR.

BEECHER

This is the standard life of Beecher, by Lyman Abbott. It is a book of nearly 700 pages illustrated, printed on fine paper and bound in half morocco. Besides being a biography it is an analysis of Beecher's work, and his influence on American life and thought. Contains many extracts from sermons. Original price, $2.50.

PRICE, ONE DOLLAR.

Here are four splendid works without which any library is incomplete. At the original publishers' prices they cost $8 50. We offer to deliver any volume to you for the price indicated, or the four volumes, express prepaid, for $3.50. Our stock of these books is not large: orders should be sent at once.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, ST. LOUIS, MO

THE
CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST
"IN FAITH, UNITY; IN OPINION AND METHODS, LIBERTY; IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY."

Vol. xxxvii. St. Louis, Mo., Thursday, May 3, 1900. No. 18.

CURRENT EVENTS.

While the city of New York has been somewhat tardy in the adoption of improved transit systems, she is now taking a step that will at least bring her abreast of the most advanced cities in this respect. She is now constructing an underlying railway system of twenty-one miles in its total length. The first seven miles from the City Hall Park is to have four tracks and the remaining fourteen miles two tracks. The cars on the inner tracks of the first division are to run thirty miles an hour, while those on the outer tracks are to run fourteen. The subway is to be built by excavating the streets to a depth of twenty feet and setting steel posts at proper distances upon which the reconstructed streets are to be supported. The work will be a great engineering feat, and when completed is to cost thirty-five million dollars. The contract is let in such a way that the earnings of the road will be mutual between contractor and city, and at the end of forty-five years the city has the refusal of the entire ownership of the system by payment for equipment at a price to be determined by arbitration. The city gives bonds for first cost on the completed roadway, which are to be met by a sinking fund of one per cent. per annum on the earnings of the road. The method is a novel one, avoiding as it does a franchise steal, and will be watched with peculiar interest by other cities.

On last Thursday the cities of Hull and Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, suffered a fire almost rivaling that of the great fire of Chicago. Five square miles of territory were swept of property, entailing a loss now estimated at seventeen million dollars. Two thousand and five hundred dwellings, mills, factories, stores and other properities were destroyed. The entire industrial district of Ottawa was burned out. Seven thousand people were made homeless and their means of livelihood gone. The large lumber mills as well as the large factories were burned. The fire started in Hull about eleven o'clock on Thursday morning and was not brought under control until midnight of that day. There was a strong wind prevailing, and this carried the flames across the Ottawa River, which separates Hull from the city of Ottawa. For a time it seemed that the Parliament buildings would be destroyed, but these were finally saved. All business in the city was suspended, and the House of Commons adjourned until Tuesday of the present week. There were many accidents and seven fatalities. Had the wind been blowing from a westerly direction it is said that the entire city of Ottawa would have been destroyed. All of Hull's principal buildings with the exception of the Catholic Church are now things of the past.

Something in the nature of a sensation was created in the House last week by the revelation of a species of fraud in the pneumatic mail service now in operation in New York. The postal commission had discovered that the exorbitant charge of $37,000 per mile for six-inch iron pipe, besides the cost of operating the machines, was being made upon the government by the service, and that one of the principal holders of the stock and bonds of this company was a member of the House, and also a member of the committee on appropriations. These statements were made upon the floor of the House on last Wednesday by Mr. Little, of Arkansas, and Mr. Moody, of Massachusetts, and created no small degree of excitement. As a result the increase from $225,000 to $725,000, recommended by the committee on appropriation, was defeated. But it is to be hoped that such a scandal as is here hinted at will not be dropped at the defeat of the committee's recommendation. The committee itself seems to need a little investigating.

The Senate surprised itself and the country last week by unseating Quay, and that, too, in advance of Clark from Montana. The committee had reported a resolution declaring the election of Clark void on account of bribery used in his election, but before this report was acted upon by the Senate the Quay matter came up, and he was unseated by a majority of one vote. Mr. Quay had been appointed by the Governor of Pennsylvania, because of a deadlock in the legislature, but this method of making senators has now received a decided rebuke. The record of three ejectments by one Congress, for reasons not in harmony with the moral law, ought to have a healthful influence upon the nation. All men and methods not congenial to good morals ought to be as objectional to state as to church, especially when it comes to offices of trust and of responsibility. The cases of Roberts, Clark and Quay ought to become a spectacle to make corrupt politicians and political "bosses" tremble.

The close vote by which M. S. Quay was prevented a seat in the Senate of the United States last week, and his subsequent indorsement by the Republican convention of the state of Pennsylvania, is a revelation of the wonderful influence and power of a political leader. Had it not been that some senators feared the influence of a dangerous precedent and voted against him for that reason alone his defeat would have been impossible. What course Mr. Quay may now take is not stated, but it is hardly probable with such a strong following that he will retire from the political arena. While he may not venture to run for the seat of a senator again, for a time at least, it is not improbable that his influence may give turn and color to some events in a way that defies the love of party and the scrutiny of men. His influence in the Republican state convention of Pennsylvania was by no means indicative of a surrenner to his opponents nor of political aspirations.

The Republican state convention in Ohio and Indiana, held last week, were of more than ordinary interest for several reasons. Each convention strongly endorsed the present Republican administration and each state platform contains an anti-trust plank, all of which was, of course, to be expected. The greatest surprise was probably the degree of harmony that prevailed in each convention. The break in Republican ranks over the Porto Rican tariff bill was put aside, on the ground of submission to the majority, and the administration endorsed without apparent stint or remorse of conscience from any quarter. And in the Ohio convention old feuds seem to have been forgotten for the time, at least, and harmony prevailed. Hanna's refusal to be a delegate at large to the national convention at Philadelphia seems to have come in the nature of a surprise. Foraker, Nash, Grosvenor and Dick were the four men elected to this office. The platform adopted by the Ohio convention is supposed to foreshadow the platform to be adopted by the national convention.

Central and Southwestern Texas is again deluged with water. It is feared that the flood along the Brazos and the Colorado Rivers will equal or exceed that of last July, which broke all previous records. Towns, cities, railroads and farmers are the sufferers. The rain storms are said to have been the most severe for fifteen years. In some places last week a precipitation of five inches in twenty-four hours was reported. Twelve lives have been lost. Ten out of thirteen railroads entering Houston were reported disabled last week. In many places a second cotton crop will have to be planted. The loss to railroads is particularly heavy, for the reason that many of them had not finished repairs from former floods, and now more washouts and greater delays are promised.

The British garrison hemmed in at Wepener for several weeks has at last been relieved. It now seems that this was planned by Gen. Roberts that all the Boer forces in Southeast Natal might be collected and captured; but the plan failed. In carrying out this scheme about forty thousand British troops or about one-half of Gen. Roberts' great army at Bloemfontein was used, but succeeded only in relieving the small garrison of 1,500 men. Gen. French was sent out last that he might head off the Boers from going north, but he seems to have failed, for reasons not yet known, to accomplish his mission. The Boers seem to have succeeded in escaping with all of their guns and equipage. While no great battle was fought, the Boers have succeeded in dividing Gen. Roberts' army and greatly delaying his projected trip to Pretoria, and all delays have their effects upon large bodies of troops.

The Paris Exposition had its baptism of blood on last Sunday. A footbridge connecting the Exposition with the model of the Celestial Globe collapsed, killing nine persons outright and seriously injuring as many more. The bridge had been condemned by the Exposition authorities Sunday morning and the public excluded from using it, but later in the day it fell of its own weight with the result stated. An investigation of the accident will be held in order to locate the blame. The street underneath the bridge was full of people when the bridge fell and the accident cast a gloom over the throng of people on the ground and over the city. The accident has also had the effect of making the people suspicious of other unfinished structures on the ground and the greatest necessary caution will be taken in order to prevent another catastrophe and thus reduce the popular attendance for a while at least.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church met in Chicago on Tuesday of the present week. This is the legislative body of the Methodist Church, and it will be called upon to amend the Discipline in relation to popular amusements at this sitting; but what that action will be is problematical. Another of the chief things to be considered in this session of this body is the election of publishing agents of the Book Concern for this section, for which there seems to be a number of candidates. The quadrennial address by Bishop Andrews, containing fifteen thousand words, was read to the Conference ou Wednesday morning. This address treats of the state of the church and its work for the past four years. There are various reasons for believing that this will be an unusually interesting session of this ecclesiastical body.

General Roberts' attempt at a capture of the Boers who invested Wepener has failed. Gen. Botha seems to have forestalled Gen. Roberts by twenty-four hours and the Boers escaped to the north without loss to men, munitions of war or baggage. Some attempt at pursuit was made, but this was abandoned and French's cavalry returned to Bloemfontein and the great army is where it was a month ago. There have been a number of dispatches recently concerning the strength, position and purposes of the Boers, but of such a conflicting nature as to give little reliable information. The failure of Lord Roberts to capture anything in this great southeastern diversion has not produced a very pleasant feeling in London, and this uneasiness is aggravated by reports of an alarming condition of health in Gen. Roberts' army and his apparent inability to begin his general movement toward Pretoria.

The hero of Manila is receiving quite an ovation on his western tour, notwithstanding his confessed desire for a seat in the presidential chair of the nation and the peculiar disposition of the property given him as a popular expression of appreciated service. Chicago and St. Louis have given him a royal and hearty welcome, which shows that the American people know how to rise above political party prejudices when the occasion demands. As nothing is being said of his candidacy for the presidential race it is not probable that his tour has any political significance. And if any effect it will probably be to quietly remove his name from before the people as a candidate. But for his name to be erased from the roll of the world's greatest men and that of the nation's heroes is not a future possibility. His name on the page of history is imperishable.

The question of a World's Fair in St. Louis in 1903 in honor of the Louisiana Purchase is now fairly before Congress. A delegation representing fourteen states and composed of governors, ex-governors,mayors, former Cabinet officers and other prominent men appeared before the special congressional committee last week and presented the merits of the question. The opening speech was made by ex-Secretary Francis, of Missouri, and followed by speeches from a number of influential men. This meeting drew a large attendance of congressmen and great interest was shown in the enterprise. It is the desire of this delegation that Congress shall act on a bill in favor of the fair to the extent of $5,000,000 on agreeable terms during its present session. St. Louis has about completed her subscription of $5,000,000, and if promised aid by Congress will vote $5,000,000 more, making in all $15,000,000, with which to carry out the enterprise. So far as could be discovered the congressional committee seemed favorable to the movement.

Mafeking seems destined to fall into the hands of the Boers. The latest word indicates a most serious condition. Rations have been again reduced and the supply will be exhausted by May 15th. The nearest hope of relief is the organization of force now being made in Kimberly for that purpose but not yet on the march.

WORLD'S CONFERENCE ON MISSIONS.

The opening session of this remarkable missionary gathering occurred in Carnegie Hall, April 21,at 2:30 P. M. At that hour, and before, the large hall with its seating capacity of 3,300 was filled. Rev. Judson Smith, secretary of the Baptist Foreign Missionary Society and chairman of the committee on arrangements, called the conference to order and announced as the honorary chairman of the conference, Benjamin Harrison, ex-President of the United States. Mr. Harrison, who was received with great enthusiasm, called on Dr. H. C. Mabie, of Boston, to open with prayer. The great audience, led by Geo. C. Stebbins, then sang as the keynote of the conference: "All hail the power of Jesus' name." It was sung with a fervor and volume of voice we have seldom heard equaled. At this point it was announced that a photographer wished to take a picture of the audience. The great company of distinguished people on the platform rose, there was a flash, and the great gathering had gone into pictorial history.

MR. HARRISON'S SPEECH.

The honorary chairman then delivered his address, which was worthy of the occasion, and was liberally applauded. He counted it a great honor to be called upon to preside over the deliberations of such a body, and thus to associate himself with "the most influential and enduring work that is being done in this day of great enterprises." He outlined the work of the coming conference. He spoke of the mighty achievements of this age in science, invention, art, industry, wealth, and asked, Why all this? It was useful only as it contributed to "the regeneration of mankind." On this point he said:

To what other end is all this stir among men—this increase of knowledge? That these great agencies may be put in livery and lined up in the halls of wealth to make life brilliant and soft, or become the docile messengers of a counting house or a stock exchange, or the swift couriers of contending armies, or the courtiers who wait in the halls of science to give glory to the man into whose hand God has given the key to one of his mysteries? Do all these great inventions, these rushing intellectual developments, exhaust their ministry in the making of men rich, and the reinforcing of armies and fleets? No. These are servants, prophets, forerunners. They will find a herald's voice, there will be an annunciation and a coronation. . . . The highest conception that has ever entered the mind of man is that of God as the Father of all men—the one blood—the universal brotherhood. It was not evolved, but revealed. The natural man lives to be ministered unto—he lays his imposts upon others. He buys slaves that they may fan his sleep, bring him the jeweled cup, dance before him and die in the arena for his sport. Into such a world there came a King, not to be ministered unto but to minister. The rough winds fanned his sleep; he drank of the mountain brook, and made not the waters wine for himself; would not use his power to stay his own hunger, but had compassion on the multitude. He called them he had bought with a great price no more servants but friends. He entered the bloody arena alone, and, dying, broke all chains and brought life and immortality to light.

Perhaps no sentiment in Mr. Harrison's address elicited more enthusiastic applause than his reference to the duty of civilized nations to prevent the sale of intoxicants in those lands we are seeking to redeem from paganism. He said:

The men who, like Paul, have gone to heathen lands with the message, We "seek not yours but you," have been hindered by these who, coming after, have reversed the message. Rum and other corrupting agencies come in with our boasted civilization, and the feeble races wither the hot breath of the white man's vices. The great nations have combined to suppress the slave trade. Is it too much to ask that they shall combine to prevent the sale of spirits to men who, less than our children, have acquired the habits of self-restraint? If we must have "consumers," let us give them an innocent diet.

A man who has been President of the United States can talk in that manly fashion. Is there a probable candidate for the high office who would dare say as much?

In closing, Mr. Harrison, speaking of the influence of this great conference in manifesting the existing unity among Christians, drew a good illustration from his army experience:

A view of the whole army is a good thing; the heart is strengthened by an enlarged comradeship. It gives promise that the flanks will be covered and a reserve organized. After days in the bush the sense of numbers is lost. It greatly strengthens the soldier and quickens his pace, when he advances to battle, if a glance to right or left reveals many pennons and a marshaled host moving under one great leader to execute a single battle plan.

During the Atlanta campaign of our Civil War the marching had been largely in the brush. Sometimes in an advance the commander of a regiment could see no more than half of his own line, while the supports to his right and left were wholly hidden. To him it seemed as if his battalion was making an unsupported assault. The extended line, the reserve, were matters of faith. But one day the advancing army broke suddenly from the brush into a savannah—a long, narrow, natural meadow—and the army was revealed. From the centre far to the right and left the distinctive corps, division brigade and regimental colors appeared, and associated with each of these was the one flag that made the army one. A mighty spontaneous cheer burst from the whole line and every soldier tightened his grip upon his rifle and quickened his step. What that savannah did for the army, this World's Conference of Missions should do for the church.

Rev. Judson Smith followed ex-President Harrison in an address of welcome which would be worth quoting here entire if we had space for it. He extended a most cordial welcome to the missionaries from foreign countries, and to delegates from various sections of our own country. He spoke of the greatness of the occasion, and of the times in which we live, closing his splendid address with the following lines from Mrs. Howe's "Battle Hymn of the Republic:"

"He is sounding forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat.
O be swift, my heart, to answer Him, be jubilant, my feet;
Our God is marching on."

RESPONSES BY FOREIGN DELEGATES.

Fitting responses were made to these addresses of welcome by Rev. Wardlaw Thomson, representing the British delegation, by Rev. Dr. Schreiber, in behalf of the German delegation, Rev. Joseph King, for the Australasian delegates and by the venerable Dr. Chamberlain, in behalf of the foreign missionaries. These foreigners all spoke heartily of the warm welcome they had received at the hands of their American brethren. Dr. Thomson, of England, said he would call it "a right royal welcome" if he were not in America, but that in his country they so highly esteemed their Queen that this was the highest praise they could confer on our welcome—a sentiment that met with a very hearty response from the audience. Dr. Chamberlain, from the mission field where he has grown gray, said he spoke in behalf of 2,400 missionaries in India, 15,464 missionaries of all churches, in all lands, of whom there were 750 present in the hall. He deprecated the lack of more unity in the mission field, where missionaries sometimes elbowed each other instead of going into new fields where better results could be achieved. He believed the time had come for each church to sustain two pastors, "one for the thousands at home and one for the myriads out in the world of heathendom." This, with the report of Secretary Baldwin, closed the afternoon session.

SPECTACULAR.

The session on Saturday evening was given up to addresses of welcome from distinguished gentlemen—the President of the United States, Governor Theodore Roosevelt, of New York, and a response by ex-President Harrison. This attraction caused seats to be at a premium. Some of us who held delegate tickets and had traveled a thousand miles to attend the conference had to content ourselves with seats in the fourth balcony, while the main body of the hall was filled, we suspect, with local visitors. Long before the time to begin the hall was densely packed. When President McKinley, Gov. Roosevelt, ex-President Harrison and other local celebrities came on the platform the immense audience rose and received them with clapping of hands and waving of handkerchiefs. After prayer by Bishop Potter, the chairman of the evening, Mr. Jesup, president of the Board of Trade, introduced President McKinley, who was again greeted with long-continued applause. His speech was not long and has been no doubt given to the public generally by the daily press. It could not be called a strong speech, but was graceful and appropriate enough as far as it went. His voice was a disappointment to us, but this may have come from our having been so highly exalted above the speaker. At the close of the President's address the chairman asked the audience to sing "that good old hymn," "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." The people rose en masse, the great organ pealed the keynote, and such a volume of song we have not heard for a good while. It was an inspiring scene, and the President and Gov. Roosevelt and the other distinguished men joined heartily in the singing.

Gov. Roosevelt was next introduced and was greeted with about the same applause that was extended to the President. His speech was evidently unstudied, was much longer than the President's and indicated the man of action rather than of theories, of deeds rather than words. His address was heartily received, for "Teddy" is evidently a favorite in New York. Who could follow these two kings? Nobody but another king! So ex-President Harrison, in an extempore address, responded to these distinguished men in a very happy vein. After he had paid his compliments to each of them, he spoke again of the value of mission work and paid a high tribute to the Word of God as the only hope for deliverance from the perils which confront our modern civilization. It was our first opportunity to see and hear Mr. Harrison, and he impressed us as a man of both intellectual and moral power. A well-known preacher among us, hailing from Kentucky's capital, expressed his opinion of the three speakers as follows: "McKinley, Roosevelt and Harrison: these three; but the greatest of these is Harrison." It is not often that one is permitted to hear on the same evening, on the same platform, and that a missionary platform, addresses from a President, an ex-President and a prospective President of the United States. Their testimony to the value of missions and to the worth of Christianity no doubt has its value, and imparts a sort of dignity to a conference like this, but to the great speeches of the consecrated men who are engaged in the work of actually subduing the world to Christ, do we look for those principles and truths which are to guide this great enterprise to ultimate success.

Concerning some of these other addresses and other matters of interest we shall speak in a later report, as we only are at the begining of the conference. A number of our missionaries are here, and quite a delegation of our members, whom we may mention when we get a fuller list. It is destined to be one of the great historic meetings of the church Protestant and Evangelical.

INCIDENTS AND SAYINGS OF THE ECUMENICAL CONFERENCE.

A speaker hailing from the mission field of India, in recounting what changes Christianity had accomplished in that country, introduced each sentence with, "Not long ago," such and such a practice was in vogue, etc. The repetition of the phrase became funny to the audience, and it began to laugh and applaud. He paused, looked puzzled, and said he did not know whether that meant for him to take his seat or not. The audience felt rebuked for its ill-manners, and there was a united chorus of "Go on." He resumed his speech with a monotonous repetition of "Not long ago," and the audience exploded again, worse than ever, to the further confusion of the speaker, who had no idea what was amusing his audience. By good luck, however, he got switched off that point, dropped his favorite refrain, and was permitted to go on in peace.

It was during the discussion of "Comity" on the mission field when several able speeches had pointed out the value and "limitations" of comity between different religious bodies, that a small man came on the platform, among the volunteer five-minute speakers, and in five minutes tore in shreds the plausible pretexts for divisions, which he declared were "needless," "schismatic," "ineffective" and "wasteful" of the Lord's money. "Comity," he declared, "will not do. It is too superficial, and does not meet the demamds of the case." He was cheered to the echo. It was the first note that struck the heart of that great missionary audience on that subject. Other speakers following, took note of that fact and profited by it. One thing was made clear. The missionaries in the field are much more ready for union than the Boards at home. This was openly affirmed by the missionaries themselves.

Some of the speakers spoke in a clear, manly, natural voice, and commended their message to the audience by so doing. Others whined, both in prayer and speech, or drawled out their words in holy, clerical tones that would kill the effect of an angel's message. Why do public speakers, who have any sense of the fitness of things, allow themselves to fall into that abominable habit of talking in an unnatural voice, using holy tones and pronunciations unrecognized by any dictionary of the English language? Do they not know that it is disgusting to sensible people? We are bound to confess that there is much in the mannerism and tones of some preachers to create a lasting prejudice against Christianity. Young preachers, be manly. Don't whine. Deliver your message in the voice God gave you. Avoid holy tones and perfunctory phrases.

The chairman was asked early in the Conference to announce that the Presbyterian delegates from abroad would be welcome at the rooms of the Presbyterian Board of Missions in the city. A Methodist minister then requested the same courtesy to be extended to visiting Methodists, which the chairman did. Other religious bodies caught the cue and asked that the rooms of their local boards be offered to their visiting delegates. Last of all, the Dutch Reformed Church, through one of its local members, requested that the same privilege be extended to its members. The chairman said, in all seriousness, "And the reformed delegates are also invited"—but that was as far as he got, as the Conference was roaring with laughter. No doubt many of the delegates had been "reformed," but the absurdity of our denominational designations became too amusing for the gravity of the august body.

On Tuesday evening of last week Bro. Willis and his congregation invited all visiting members outside the city to take tea with them and spend the evening with them. A large company of Disciples from different sections of the country, including six of our foreign missionaries, responded to the kind invitation, and after a bountiful repast, Pastor Willis, our New York correspondent, acted as toast-master, and called out a goodly number of us to respond to toasts. The first toast was "The Fathers," and Dr. W. A. Belding was appropriately called out to respond. The Doctor spoke with his oldtime force and felicity, and seems none the worse for the 84 years that he bears. Among other speakers were the missionaries present, F. E. Meigs and Miss Lyon from China, Miss Mary Graybiel and J. G. McGavran from India, E. S. Stevens from Japan, and Dr. Frank T. Lee from Africa. Others who responded to toasts were George Darsie, F. D. Power, W. J. Lhamon, Mark Collis, F. M. Rains, Miss Lois White, the writer, and perhaps others whose names do not now occur to us. It was a season of delightful fellowship, and a hearty vote of thanks was extended to Bro. Willis and his congregation for their thoughtfulness in extending this hospitality to us and thus giving us an opportunity of meeting them and each other. One speaker went so far as to declare it to be the best session of the Ecumenical Conference he had attended! This congregation is planning to reconstruct and enlarge its building. Bro. Willis has not only endeared himself to his church, but is making his influence felt among the other ministers of the city.

The sisters of the C. W. B. M. in Brooklyn served refreshments to all visiting delegates among the Disciples at the West 56th Street Church, on Friday during the conference, from 12 to 1:30 P. M., and followed that with an after meeting which occupied the afternoon. The C. W. B. M. had charge. Sister Rundle, a sister of our lamented J. M. Trible, presided. Sister Harlan, of Brooklyn, and B. Q. Denham, pastor of the 56th Street Church, extended us a hearty welcome, the latter to their church building, the former to the material and spiritual feast which had been prepared. Addresses were made by M. E. Harlan, and Sisters Encill, Miss Mattie Burgess, Miss Lyon, Miss Mary Graybiel, B. B. Tyler, Sister Stephens, Sister Moses and the writer. There was a large company of enthusiastic Disciples of Christ who were greatly enjoying the Ecumenical Conference, but who were all the more convinced by it that they have a religious plea which is of vast value to Christendom and to the world. It was a spiritual and moral tonic to breathe the atmosphere of the meeting. It was charged with Reformation ozone, of the kind that blends charity with loyalty to truth, and fidelity to a providential mission with a just recognition of the work that is being done by others.

We shall speak more particularly of our churches in Greater New York in another number.

The emphasis which the Ecumenical Conference has placed upon the value of Christian unity cannot be effaced, and will alone justify its great cost in financial, physical and intellectual energy.

Hour of Prayer.

UNCEASING PRAYER.

(Luke 18:1-8; 1 Thess. 5:17; Acts 12:1.)

(Uniform Midweek Prayer-meeting Topic, May 9.)

CENTRAL TRUTH: Prayer is so vital a part of our Christian life that its cessation because of discouragement, lack of faith, or through neglect, means peril to the soul and loss of power for service.

Jesus not only prayed much Himself—which is the all-sufficient answer to all skepticism as to the value of prayer—but He taught his disciples how to pray, and in the passage cited from Luke there is a parable spoken by him "to the end that men ought always to pray and not to faint." This is the one lesson to be learned from that parable—persistency in prayer—and that is of sufficient importance to justify the parable without our seeking to make it mean more. The widow in the parable had an adversary in law for whom she felt she was no match, in herself, and she asked the judge to interfere in her behalf. He was a judge who cared neither for God nor for man, but he did care for his own comfort, and when he found she was persistent in urging her cause he granted her request. Had she been less tenacious in her purpose, believed less firmly in the righteousness of her plea, she might have been repulsed by his indifference. It was her importunity that won her case.

God is our Father. He is not indifferent to our needs. He is more willing to give good things to His children than earthly parents are to give their children the things that are good for them. Persistency in prayer is not needed to overcome God's reluctance to give, but it is often needed to overcome our unfitness to receive. Hence it may often seem to us in our shortsightedness as if God were indifferent to our petition, but if we are convinced that the petition is right in itself we must persist in asking for it until God grants it, or something better, which He often does.

To "pray without ceasing," as the apostle exhorts us, may at first thought seem impossible, if not undesirable; and this would be the case if formal prayer were meant, or if we give a too literal interpretation to the words "without ceasing." But if we conceive of prayer as a spiritual attitude, in which the soul instinctively glances Godward in thanksgiving, adoration and petition, it ceases to be impossible. We may live in an atmosphere of prayer. All holy desire and aspiration, all unselfish service, all consecrated effort to do God's will, is prayer in God's sight. We have not learned the divine art of prayer until our praying is as natural and as instinctive as our breathing, and like the latter, mingles with all our daily tasks.

The story of Peter's imprisonment and release (Acts 12) in answer to the unceasing prayer of the church is one of the thrilling incidents in the history of the early church. That prayer-meeting at the house of Mary, the mother of John Mark, which had for its object Peter's safety from the murderous intent of Herod—how much it meant for the future of Christianity! The success attending their prayers was a surprise even to themselves. God often answers our prayers with a promptness and a largeness that surprises us. The incident, too, is a good example of the power of united prayer. It was a great crisis in the history of the church at Jerusalem, and the members felt that only God could protect them. Hence, they resorted to prayer and continued in it until the crisis had passed and Peter was safe.

Times of special danger and temptation should be times of special prayer for God's protection and guidance. Continuing in prayer is to "walk with God," and to hold constant communion with Him, who is our Father in heaven.

PRAYER.

Our Father who art in heaven, we thank Thee that there are no set times and places at which we may approach Thee, but that we have continual and constant access to Thee at all times and places, through Jesus Christ our Lord. We thank Thee that we may call Thee Father, for that makes us feel at home in Thy presence. We beseech Thee, most gracious Father, to so fill us with Thy Spirit that we may pray as we ought, in faith, in perseverance, in patient waiting, that we may receive from Thee those spiritual blessings which Thou art so willing to impart to us. Thus drawn to Thee by love here, may we abide in Thy presence forever, through the mediation and merits of Jesus Christ, to whom be glory in the church world without end. Amen!

Editor's Easy Chair.

The Easy Chair has been located for the past week in the metropolis of the New World, and on its greatest thoroughfare, Broadway. What a tide of human life pours along this great highway day and night! What tragedies and comedies are being wrought out daily in this great commercial and social maelstrom! New York is at once the best and the worst city on the American continent. It is the center of the widest religious activity, the seat of the most potent religious forces that are working for the salvation of the world. Here live many of the most consecrated people of the world, who are pouring out their treasures and energies for the regeneration of mankind. And here, also, we have one of the most corrupt city governments in the world, and here human life is lived by thousands of people under the hardest conditions and the most repulsive surroundings which human beings are called upon to endure anywhere on the globe. Here the extremes of wealth and poverty are both found, with their attendant evils. Here villainy thrives and virtue finds an opportunity of testing its power. Here are the best and the worst we have in our American civilization.

Here is a remarkable fact, however, which shows how the best and the worst are separated in our large cities. We have been here in this great city, a week at this writing, mingling with its people on its crowded thoroughfares, riding on its street-cars, living in one of its hotels, and we have not heard one oath, or one uncivil or angry remark, and have seen no drinking and but one intoxicated person. On the contrary, we have meet with a great deal of civility and kindness, and have seen evidences of Christian culture on every hand. No doubt the bad things are here, but one does not have to come in contact with them if he does not wish to. We did not come here on this short visit to reform the vicious and the outcasts of New York City, and hence have not met with that class. One can see the names of "John L. Sullivan" and "Jim Corbett," spelled out with electric lights on Broadway over their respective saloons, at night, but he does not have to enter and will not unless he occupies an exceedingly low plane of morality. What is true of New York is true of St. Louis and every great city, that one does not, ordinarily at least, come in contact with its seamy side unless he desires to do so, either because of kindred taste, or because he desires to do something for its elevation. One thing becomes increasingly apparent: We must save our cities in order to save this country.

Among the signs of the times must be reckoned this Ecumenical Conference on Missions. A gathering that comprises more than 700 missionaries from all parts of the world and representatives of its heathen populations, who have been Christianized, civilized and educated as trophies of the mission work, and that has as delegates members of every evangelical body and citizens of every civilized land, all moved by one common object—the winning of this world for Christ—with audiences which no single hall can accommodate, holding for ten days with unflagging interest, is an all-sufficient reply to the man who thinks Christianity is on the wane. When it is remembered, too, that these people thus gathered, who are responsible for and are taking part in this conference, are among the ablest and best educated minds of this and other lands, it is seen how baseless is that other superficial charge against Christianity, that only the ignorant and superstitious embrace it. Never was it so manifestly true as now that Christianity is getting a strong grip on those forces which shape the course of human history. Such a conference in the closing year of the century, which has been marked by missionary activity, is more significant even than the World's Fair at Paris, because that celebrates the products of our civilization, while this conference marks the growth of interest in the enterprise of missions, without which no high civilization would be possible.

At our reunion of Disciples of Christ at West 56th St. Church, on Friday last, re-reported in another place, the question was raised as to the limited place our religious movement on the program of this Ecumenical Conference. The facts that we are young yet in world-wide missions, that we have not a large number of missionaries in the field as compared with others, and that our churches have contributed very little toward the expenses of this Conference, which amount to over $40,000, were held to be sufficient reasons for our limited representation, without attributing it to any wrong motive. It was also urged in this meeting that as many of the things we would have said have been said by others, and as those things received the most hearty applause, we ought to be content to keep in the background, and not be too self-assertive in demanding what we might think our rights. We are sure this is the proper course to pursue when there is no evidence to believe that we have been intentionally discriminated against. It was also pointed out in this meeting that the men who control this Conference are largely Eastern people, and that we are strong in the middle West and are little known in the East, as yet. We are growing rapidly, not only in numbers, but, what is more to the point, in missionary zeal and liberality, and are developing a much larger number of men who are studying the subject of missions and who are capable of treating the different aspects of this enterprise. The East will know us in the future, and so will the whole world, for we are bound by the very logic of our position to he a great missionary people.

Questions and Answers.

Is it correct to say that Alexander Campbell was a Baptist minister, and as such built a Baptist Church at Wellsburg?

Maroa, Ill. C. C. Redgrave.

Mr. Campbell was never a Baptist minister in the current and accepted meaning of that term. He and the church to which he belonged at one time co-operated with the Baptists, but his teaching and practice were never fully in accord with those of the Baptists of his day. Had there not been this difference, his church would have remained in co-operation with the Redstone Association.

Can you give me, through the Christian-Evangelist, the addresses of the three ministers mentioned below? Samuel F. Fowler, who in '83 was pastor of the Christian Church at Charlottesville, Va., L. A. Cutler and J. T. Lyle, who attended the University of Kentucky in '71 or '72. Mrs. Texie Lipscombe.

Jacksonville, Fla.

L. A. Cutler's address is Louisa C. H., Va., we believe. Perhaps some of our readers can give the sister information concerning the other brethren mentioned.

If Jesus knew Lazarus was to be raised from the dead beforehand, as the context shows, was not his weeping at the grave affected, as reported in John 11:35? How could it be sincere? H.

Jesus wept in sympathy with the weeping sisters. It was a most natural and human thing to do under the circumstances. Lazarus was a close personal friend, as were also these sisters who met Him with their story of grief. There was no affectation in those tears of sympathy. No consideration of what was to take place in the immediate future would prevent His heart from going out in instant sympathy with their present sorrow and tears.

OUR FIRST CONGRESS.

A. B. JONES.

This book of 246 pages, just from the press of the Christian Publishing Company, is on my desk, in answer to one dollar sent to the publishers as soon as I saw it announced. Mechanically the book, according to my taste, is a gem. The binding, the paper, the type, the spacing—all invite you, almost importune you, to walk in and wade through if you can, swim through if you must.

The book is edited by J. H. Garrison, editor of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. This is of itself a guarantee of something good. Aside from the graceful preface and introductory address of the editor the volume is made up of ten chapters:

I. The Value of Theology. Edward Scribner Ames.

II. The Cry, "Back to Christ." J. J. Haley.

III. The Cry, "Back to Christ"—A Review. J. B. Briney.

IV. The Cry, "Back to Christ"—A Review. W. J. Lhamon.

V. Crucial Points Concerning the Holy Spirit. R. T. Mathews.

VI. Crucial Points Concerning the Holy Spirit—A Review. W. E. Ellis.

VII. Crucial Points Concerning the Holy Spirit—A Supplementary Statement. F. N. Calvin.

VIII. Organization and its Adjustment to the Needs of the Church. Allan B. Philputt.

IX. Organization and its Adjustment to the Needs of the Church—A Review. W. F. Richardson.

X. Enrichment of Public Worship Among the Disciples. Ida Withers Harrison.

How do you like that bill of fare? Does it not whet your appetite? If there is a preacher who does not feel a rising relish for these dishes he must have a diseased and perverted stomach. Both the themes and the writers give a clear guarantee of value—value received for your one dollar, the price of the book, and much more.

I have read but three chapters so far—the discussions on the "Crucial Points Concerning the Holy Spirit," by Mathews, Ellis and Calvin. This section of the book does not come first in the arrangement of the matter, but being at the time engaged in studying that subject, I was first drawn to read that discussion. I have read it, and my notice of the book, for the present at least, will be confined to that part of it. It is hoped that others more competent will notice other parts of this volume. "Our Congress" is public property. We are expected to notice its proceedings, its doings, its deliverances. And have we not the right to criticise, favorably and unfavorably, our own? And, especially, ought we not to see well after "Our First Congress," that this new institution gets at least a fair send-off in the great world? But these interviews must be brief. This is enough for one sitting. If a little expectancy has been created, our object for the present is accomplished. We will hear next week more definitely from Messrs. Matthews, Ellis and Calvin.

"CRUCIAL POINTS CONCERNING THE HOLY SPIRIT."

The lamented R. T. Mathews leads the discussion on this subject. Mr. Mathews was always thoughtful and scholarly as a writer. But his writings have always appeared to me a little nebulous. He seems to sacrifice perspicuity and strength to a profusion of verbiage and an elegance of diction. It is never wise for a man to dress so fine that his friends forget the man in their admiration for his clothes. The first and most essential thing in writing or speaking is clearness—clearness of conception and clearness of expression. In the present instance, however, Mr. Mathews gives us less to complain of than usual.

The essayist names three "crucial points concerning the Holy Spirit"—1. "The Personality of the Holy Spirit;" 2 "Baptism in the Holy Spirit," and 3. "Method of the Holy Spirit's Operation in Salvation." That the Holy Spirit is a person, as distinctly so in fact, if not in form, as that Jesus Christ is a person, is indeed a crucial point of this subject. This point clearly understood, the subject is cleared of much vagueness. And there seems to be no differences among the three men engaged in this investigation as to the personality of the Holy Spirit. For this let us be profoundly thankful.

But, now, notice the difference between these two brethren, Mr. Mathews and Mr. Ellis, in the inferences drawn from this mutually conceded fact. From the fact that the Holy Spirit is a divine person Mr. Mathews concludes as follows: "The worship of the Holy Spirit, of course, is scripturally sound." But Mr. Ellis says: "This conclusion is unscriptural." Is not this strange? Both these writers refer to the baptismal formula and to the apostolic benediction as proof of the divine personality of the Holy Spirit. May I not be permitted to ask, if the baptismal formula: "In the name of the Lord Jesus Christ I baptize you into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit," and the apostolic benediction, when we use it over a congregation: "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Spirit be with you all"—in the use of these words is there not the element of worship? Can a man invoke the name and favor of the Godhead without the element of worship?

"Baptism in the Holy Spirit" may also be considered a "crucial point," I should say, viewed as a fact rather than as a form of expression. On this point, however, Mr. Ellis, who is a clear, concise, crisp writer, parts company with Mr. Mathews. A single sentence quoted from each essayist on this point will put the issue in a nutshell. Mr. Mathews says: "Baptism in the Holy Spirit is a luminous figure of speech to denote the superabundant influence of the Holy Spirit in salvation." Mr. Ellis says: "Baptism in the Spirit is a technical phrase used to indicate a specific, temporary work of the Spirit in the introduction of the gospel." Neither one denies "the superabundant influence of the Holy Spirit in salvation." Neither one denies the "specific, temporary work of the Spirit in the introduction of the gospel." The issue is, whether the phrase "baptism of the Holy Spirit" technically means the latter. On this point the question is modestly raised whether the broad, general declaration concerning Christ: "He shall baptize you in the Holy Spirit and in fire"—baptize the good in the Holy Spirit, baptize the bad in fire—is more in harmony with the broad, general view of Mr. Mathews, or with the narrow, special view of Mr. Ellis?

Liberty, Mo.

CHRIST'S LIFE AND THE CHRIST-LIFE.

SHERMAN HILL.

One class of thinkers esteem Christ as only a man and the Christ-life as only a manly life. Another class of thinkers regard Christ as other than a man. They believe he is super human. They accept him as divine. They repudiate the view that the Christ-life is but an improved or higher order of human life. They likewise repudiate the alternative that it is a divine life—that the Christ-life differs from Christ's life—only in degree. With them the Christ-life in its nature or essence is not intelligently defined, if definitely and comprehensively perceived. It is some sort of intermingling of human and divine life, the the nature or essence of which is not determined. The first class of thinkers from their premise have reached a logical conclusion. Their weakness is in their premise. The second class has reached no conclusion. From their premise their conclusion would be—the Christ-life and Christ's life are alike in essence or nature.

The final act of creation was the creating of a man in the image and likeness of God. "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness. . . . So God created man in his own image." In the process of man's development "the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us" that the divine life, the image and likeness of God in man, might be manifested and developed. "I came that they may have life and may have it abundantly." "That life which I now live in the flesh I live in faith, the faith which is in the Son of God." It was the divine nature partaking of human nature, thus enabling the human to partake of the divine nature. In this a transformation, a begetting, a birth takes place. "Be not fashioned according to this world, but be ye transformed." "Having been begotten again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible." "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." Now whatever is born is in nature or essence like that by which it is begotten and of which it is born.

In this spiritual transformation, begetting and birth we are "born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God;" hence we "become partakers of the divine nature," for "that which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit," and thus "our life is hid with Christ in God." Christ's life and the Christ-life are alike in nature and essence. They are not dissimilar lives. They are not separate, but identical, for the life of the vine and the branch is identical.

In Christ's life is a sure prophecy of the soul's heritage, for we are "heirs with God and joint-heirs with Christ." And Christ becomes "in us the hope of [character] glory," for "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." Therefore, "that life which I now live in the flesh I live in faith, the faith which is in the Son of God."

THE NEED OF THE HOUR.

LOUISE KELLY.

In the face of the many problems that confront us on every side it is not strange that we should grow confused amid the babel of cries for help, and wonder which should demand our highest thought, our largest support.

It is well to remember that we who have accepted the Word of God as our rule of faith are not without chart or compass in such a case. When Jesus began his public ministry he was confronted by a profound problem. With the mighty lens of a pure, impartial eye he saw the giant evils of social and political corruption, of oppressive legislation. The grinding of the poor, the sighing of the needy, moved his great, compassionate heart to the depths. Yet, he recognized these conditions as effects of evil rather than causes, and his master mind sought at once to apply the remedy to the cause rather than waste time in dealing with the effect.

Since the first transgression it has been the ruling power of sin in the human heart that has produced all the misery and degradation of the race.

The mission of Christ was to open the way by which the power of sin might be broken—the burden of sin removed—when the effects of sin must eventually disappear. Aside from the shedding of his blood the methods used by our Lord in carrying out his mission were apparently very simple, but eminently practical in their results. He lived the principles he enunciated, and by preaching and teaching others he so inspired them that he made it the business of their lives to teach to all mankind the principles he had taught them.

The poor, sinful woman at Sychar's well needed but one draught from this fountain of living water to send her out as God's messenger to awaken that sleeping village to hear Messiah's message.

Here we have a record of the first home missionary society which sprang up as the legitimate result of our Lord's ministry on the earth. Its success was phenomenal. Not only was the city moved to come out to hear him, but "from that city many of the Samaritans believed on him because of the word of the woman."

Dissemination is the divine law of the gospel dispensation. Just in the proportion in which the "GO" of our Lord's command has been heeded has the "COME" of his blessings been dispensed.

A sleeping soul is a lost soul. A sleeping church is a lost church. Inactivity not only denotes loss of power, but inevitably leads to death. Still more dangerous is the condition of those who hear their Master's will and do it not.

"Ichabod" is written over the portal of many a church because it has become self-centered—a cistern to hold in the living water, rather than Christ-centered — a fountain from which rivers of blessings shall flow out to gladden the whole earth.

The need of the hour is for the church to recognize her mission in the world, lay aside the toys and playthings with which she has been seeking to amuse herself and bend herself to her God-appointed task of dispensing the life-giving blessings of the gospel to the blighted, sin-cursed souls about her. What spectacle could be more hideous in its taunting cruelty than to hold up a brightly painted toy before the eyes of a man who was being swept over Niagara, that he might forget or be kept in ignorance of the awful doom that awaited him!

The world is demanding that the church shall go back to the methods of Jesus; that she shall present a life that is unspotted and above reproach; that she shall give honest bread to the hungry souls about her, and not a stone that shall cause men to stumble and forget to rise again. Let the trumpet-call of "HOME MISSIONS TO THE FRONT" be sounded out from every pulpit and heeded by every pew in the land, and let every one who has named the name of Christ depart from the iniquity of covetousness and the sin of selfishness, and let us pour out our love, our service and our treasures that America with her limitless opportunities for world-wide conquest may be won for Christ. Then shall she be indeed a goodly land, and she shall be called "Hephzibah," saith the Lord, "for my delight is in her."

PESSIMISM IN THE CHURCH.

JOSEPH FORT NEWTON.

It seems that pessimism has invaded the church, and pessimism is always paralyzing. It has become fashionable to magnify the mistakes of the church. Popular preachers describe in fiery rhetoric the deficiencies of the methods of the church and bemoan the decline of spiritual religion. In their hands foibles become failures and defeats become disasters. The yellow journal is bad enough, but the yellow preacher is too much. Patience ceases to be a virtue when the pulpit becomes an echo of the evening paper and rehashes the rubbish picked up by reporters as automatically as a phonograph repeats the music of a minstrel. All this ranting about the decline of the church is as shallow as it is baseless; it is "full of sound and fury, signifying nothing." The publicity gained by this method is as cheap as it is short.

The pessimist is always wrong. He sees but one side of life; he sees through a glass darkly. His glasses impart their color to the scene. Pessimism is the product of a morbid and diseased condition. It distorts facts and exaggerates evils; it is a sweeping generalization from a narrow experience. It befogs the mental vision and cripples the sources of human energy; it darkens the soul with doubt and freezes the fires of enthusiasm. It is a vicious mental habit; it is intellectual dyspepsia. A calm study of facts reduces pessimism to absurdity.

Let us have done with this doubt; let us have none of this despair. The doubter is beaten before he strikes a blow. Men come to what their beliefs are, and when they are constantly told that the world and the church are going to ruin, they naturally decide as the inevitable conclusion to such dreary logic that one man cannot stem the tide of woe, and so it is not worth while to try. Criticism and doubt work injury, if in no other way, by the subtle influence of suggestion. This powerful law makes pessimism contageous and goes far toward making the imaginary condition a grim reality. It creates an atmosphere of discouragement that is unfriendly to vital conviction and unfavorable to vigorous effort. Pessimism is but another name for scepticism. A loss of hope is the result of a loss of faith.

That the church is not what is should be is true; that the state is not what it should be is true; that the social system is imperfect is true, and that the man who denounces all of them is not doing what he should do is certainly true. If we are far below our ideals it is because our ideals are higher than those of any other age. That in itself is an indication of progress. Men complain that the church does not reach the masses and wonder why it has lost its hold upon the people. As a matter of fact, the church has never reached the masses in the sense in which the reformer uses the phrase, in all its history as a church, but it is doing more for them and with them to-day than it ever did before. Those who lament the shortcomings of the church forget that it was only since yesterday that they were seen to be shortcomings at all. Present evils are black only because they are viewed under the white light of our higher ideals. The same evils existed in other ages and neither church nor state were disturbed about them. Nor did carping criticism open our eyes to them. That spirit of love and brotherhood, which is the soul of true religion, flashed over the world and revealed its want and woe. That pity for the poor, that sympathy for the suffering, that kindness for the crushed, that demand for justice and liberty for the oppressed, that love for the lost—the sweet flowers of modern life—are the fruits of religion.

This is the best age in the history of mankind. Beauty beams upon us, great thoughts thrill us, God reigns above us and man goes marching on to virtue and to victory. To live is ecstasy; to be young is simply heaven.

The unrest of the age is the unrest of a marching army. The infinite pain that throbs in the great heart of the race is the pain of growth.

The great truths of religion are firmer than ever before; its hopes are richer and more radiant. Pessimism is out of order. We may celebrate the passing of the iconoclast. Religion is becoming more rational; service is becoming more reverent. Sectarianism is vanishing from the church; sectionalism is disappearing from the state. Philosophic materialism has failed as an explanation of the universe; scientific agnosticism has failed to satisfy the spiritual instincts of mankind. The warfare between religion and science is a thing of the past. The treaty of honorable peace has been signed. Practical religion is taking the place of polemic theology. Love is melting the old creed into a universal faith. Hope's star grows brighter every year. There is no cause for pessimism in the church.

St. Louis.

THE KEYNOTE OF THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

J. M. LOWE.

Religion is the prayer of the universal human heart. Christianity is God's answer to that prayer. Before Jesus came religion and life were divorced. In him they are forever one. Christianity has something in common with other religions. The life of the Christian has something in common with other lives. But there is a point at which Christian life rises above other lives. He is a disciple indeed who follows Jesus, not only in ordinary ways, but who follows him still when he transcends human life, as commonly lived, and runs counter, it would seem to the ways and thoughts of the world.

This point at which the divine parts company with the human is the place where religion becomes distinctively Christian. Standing upon this eminence, Jesus is the Teacher of teachers. He is unique. He stands like some mighty mountain peak, "cloud-capped and companionless." With three words—love your enemies—he has caused man to face about and enter his last battle, whose every advance is cheered by a bugle blast of victory. The world's last battle is on. The last command is ringing along the lines. Down from the gates of God, the hosts of light are coming clothed in the strength of the Highest. The centuries are vibrant with the echoes of clashing arms. Love's columns are advancing. The enemy's lines are wavering above, beyond the conflict the everlasting doors are lifting that the King of Glory may come in.

It is the kingliest command ever given. In all the books of twenty centuries there is not as much power to win the world as there is in that command. Like noon breaking in upon midnight it came: "I say unto you, love your enemies.' Ingersoll said: Love wife and child and friend. Thieves, outlaws and traitors do that. Nature gave that command a million years before Ingersoll was born. One may say it is not natural. To be sure, it is not natural. It is supernatural. Herein is Christianity a continuous miracle, in that it transcends nature and accomplishes that with which nature is at war. This command exhorts to the impossible, and under its spell the impossible is accomplished.

This is the keynote, because it describes the only attitude one can assume if the world is to be won. Of course, the world would hate and rebel and destroy, but it was from these very things that it must be saved. Hate cannot destroy hate, on the contrary, hate augments hate. Malice cannot murder malice. Jesus employed a superior force. He assumed an attitude unmoved and unmovable by all the world's complaining. If Jesus had been moved by merely human incentives he would have hurled the crown of thorns into the face of the mob, retired from the hall of judgment in wordless disgust and left the world to perish. But he did not come into the world to resent an insult. He came to save men from that narrow, intolerant spirit which alone can give birth to an insult. These are evidently some of his thoughts: I must live my life in the world without a friend who will not at some time forsake me. I must be continuously misunderstood. Men will hate me. They will get wild and mad with anger. Like a conflagration the flames of passion will possess my perscutors, but I must be calm, for to overcome this I came into the world. I must let jealousy and anger take what course they will. I must endure the arrows of insult until the quiver of malice is empty and anger is weary with hating. Then, when the human heart has exhausted itself, shall come love's opportunity.

Love is irresistible. He who loves his enemy is one day going to win him, if he loves him unto the end. This is the real victory. Every conquered foe of Jesus enters valiantly into the service of his captor. It is not so in the world's warfare. This command is not of human origin. The human heart can but utter itself, and the pages of its record are written in blood stained with tears, and punctuated with sighs and groans. Such a command contemplates the destruction of everything that is unlovely and rebellious in human nature. It comprehends in its circle of love the continents of earth and the islands of the sea. It is a foregleam of the golden age—

"When the war drum throbs no longer and the battle flags are furled
In the parliament of man, the federation of the world."

When we can love the man who hates us, only then can we understand the mystery of the cross, only then can we translate that "Father, forgive them," into the language of human life. Here on the cross is the crowning act of the man Christ Jesus. Here he is obeying his own command—love your enemies. Are we with Jesus here? If so, we are disciples indeed. We are not true unless we follow him all the way. Anybody could follow Jesus in his triumphal entry into Jeruralem. Anybody could wave a palm branch and say: "Hosanna in the highest." But it is a different discipleship that follows him into Gethsemane's garden—

"And kneels with him in darkness there,
And battles with some fierce despair."

It is a different discipleship that stands by his side in the judgment hall where he is despised and rejected of men. It is a different discipleship that helps him bear his cross up Golgotha's slope, suffers with him and echoes in sweet sincerity those words of divine prayer—Father, forgive them. These were his words, but they are ours if we are his.

This crusade of love had to be begun. He began it. To it he gave his days and his nights, his tears and his blood, his life and his death. If we are not worthy disciples here we are worthless everywhere. This is the keynote; if we cannot get the key we would better quit singing. Silence is better than discord. Our greatest need is, not more service, but better service, to bring our lives into full harmony with the wondrous life of Jesus, to live in happy, holy touch with all that is divine.

Des Moines, Ia.

DAWSON AS A CRITIC.

J. W. MONSER.

W. J. Dawson has given what to me seems the most luminous and exact characterization of Ruskin that has appeared in years. Unlike many who have ventured an opinion upon the poet-artist, he knows his limitations as well as his excellencies, and hence is able to form an equitable conclusion. A true critic must be a person whose insight enables him to lay bare the laws of life and art. If he has not the clearness of vision and subtle experiences of his subject he at least must be large enough to be responsive, and must possess a passion which will enable him to sympathize with the impulses which unify all high work. Writers of the first order, such as Ruskin, appeal to our own conscience of the true and beautiful, and if they are disappointed their sensitiveness leads them to indulge in doubts concerning the aspiration of their race. Great souls have their seasons of temptation, possibly more than little ones, and in the battle made with the materialism of his age—a battle the results of which were not flattering to the assailant—our great author found reason for his growing irascibility. The budding hope he had in the world's consent to truth was blasted all too soon. But he still held a lofty view of life, and as Dawson well says, "never spent his genius upon an unworthy cause." No friend of Ruskin will claim that he made no mistakes or that his views were always sound and seasonable. But it can be said that no teacher has ever more frankly admitted an error.

Dawson, in his recent work on "The Makers of Modern Prose," says that England has never quite known how to take Ruskin. "He presents a character of so many subtleties and variations, so tremulously poised between common sense and eccentricity, so clear and firm in outline, yet touched with such deceptive lights and shadows, and capable of such extraordinary transformations, that average opinion has preferred to accept him as a great stylist rather than a great man. He is by turns reactionary and progressive, simple and shrewd, a mystic and a man of practical affairs. He has bewildered men by the very brilliance of his versatility. No sooner has the world owned him as the prince of art critics than he sets up as the exponent of a new political economy. He will show us how to weave cloth honestly as well as to draw truly; how to build character as a matter of greater import, even, than the building of a Venice; and he who is an authority on Botticelli must needs also be an authority on drains. He links together in the strangest fashion the remotest things—philosophy and agriculture, theology and sanitation, the manner of a man's life and the quality of his pictures. It is this very variety and exuberance of mind which has kept the estimate of his genius low among his countrymen."

Our Budget.

—Next Sunday is an high day.

—Home Missions has the right of way.

—Do not fail to take the much-needed offering.

—Make it the largest offering for missions in your history.

—Upon your action next Sunday depends the destiny of many souls.

—Home Missions is one of the vital factors of the future of our civilization.

—Read all the urgent reasons for Home Missions given in this paper.

—The inspiration of a new season ought to enlarge our faith in Home Missions.

—The revival of life all about us ought to enlarge our offerings for a like phenomenon in the spiritaul domain.

—Let the church that calls itself poor, beware that it does not make this plea an excuse for giving nothing to missions. That is the way to remain poor.

—Somebody has likened such a plea of poverty as a reason for being excused for giving anything for missions, to a man who has killed his father, pleading the fact of his orphanage as a ground of leniency!

—Two dangers threaten every missionary offering: one is that many weak churches and the poorer members will give nothing because they cannot give much, and the other is that strong churches and rich members will rest content with giving something without any thought of just proportion. The same fallacy underlies both these failures. Read the parable of the Pounds and that of the Talents.

—The one thing that has in it a prophecy of better things to come, is the increased number of churches participating each year in these offerings, and the diminishing number of those that entirely neglect them. Let us hope that this year will witness a very large increase in the number of contributing churches. Let every reader of this who holds membership in a noncontributing church, or one that failed to contribute last year, see to it that an offering is made this year.

—We have found it impossible to publish all the articles sent us on Home Missions. Some of these were as good as any that have appeared, but our space would not permit. We trust that what has been said in our columns may be used of the Lord to the glory of his name in contributing to the largest offering for Home Missions yet known in our history. And to those whose articles have not appeared, we send this evidence of appreciated kindness and desire to help forward a good and great work.

—One of the questions to be decided by the General Conference of the Methodist Church in Chicago this month will be that of the creedal attitude of that body toward dancing, theatre-going and other popular amusements and games. There is a proposition to amend section 248 of the Discipline of 1896 so as to leave out the words "dancing, playing at games of chance, attending theatres, horse races, circuses, dancing parties, or taking such other amusements as are obviously misleading or of questionable moral tendency" and substituting therefor "the taking of such diversions as cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus." In taking this step the General Conference by no means withdraws its disapproval of these things, but desires to put the church more under grace and less under law, thereby better conforming to the spirit of Christianity. And yet, this action, if taken, will be falsely interpreted by many as a concession to the world in its demands or greater liberties in these things.

—E. H. Keller and wife, who have just completed a tour of Germany, Belgium, Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Greece, Italy, Switzerland and France are now in London en route home. They went from Waxahachie, Texas, where they were doing a good work and were greatly esteemed by the people. Upon leaving for their tour in Europe and Asia that church officially adopted very tender resolutions of appreciated labor and of deepest regret at their departure. Owing to the long Texas summers Bro. Kellar and wife will return to the central states for their future work. Their address for the present is Sullivan, Ill. In the meantime, any church in need of an energetic, scholarly preacher, full of the inspiration of a successful tour of the Holy Land, will do well to get in an early application for his services.

—Miss Lura V. Thompson, who has just completed three months' work in Oklahoma in the interest of the C. W. B. M. organization, visited this office last Friday on her way to Arkansas. She reports the territory flourishing spiritually and materially and thinks the outlook for our work exceedingly bright. Our brethren are numerous and active. They are organizing churches and building places of worship in every quarter of the territory. Sister Thompson particularly noted two qualities possessed by the Disciples in Oklahoma, namely, they are liberal in contributing to the work and are sensible enough to build just such church houses as they can pay for. The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, of course, is their favorite paper.

—We have just "captured" Mason City, Ia. A canvass of our wondefully vigorous church there last week added seventy-six new subscribers to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. This journal now enters the homes of about one hundred families in that city.

—Bro. Paul McReynolds, pastor of the church at Redlands, Cal., sends us a list of twelve new subscribers and remarks that "out of a church membership of fifty, every family but two take one or more of our church papers." Surely, that is a promising congregation. Is there any that beats its record in the matter of good literature?

—On Saturday, April 28th, occured the final examination of Hiram Van Kirk at the University of Chicago, for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Dr. Van Kirk received his A. B. from Hiram College in 1882 and his B. D. from Yale Uniuersity in 1895, and now his Dr. Ph. from the University of Chicago.

—The Christian Church in Knob Noster, Mo., wants a preacher to serve them and give one-half of his time to them. They can pay about $300 for one-half time. Have 90 members and the prospects are good to build up a good congregation if the right man can be had. They have no age limit, but want a man of good report and capable of interesting an intelligent audience and not afraid to work. Address A. M. Craig, Clerk, Knob Noster, Mo.

—A missionary rally was held at the First Christian Church, this city, on last Sunday at three P. M. in the interest of the city and Home Missions. There was a fair attendance and a good spirit manifest. But some of our people are out of the city, some had other engagements and some were hindered because of a strike on one of the street car lines in the city. The leading address was made by our city evangelist, A. J. Marshall, but there were a number of short addresses from the pew as well as the pulpit. St. Louis evidently has greater cause to appreciate the great cause of Home Missions than ever before and will do liberal things for Home Missions this month.

—Those expecting to attend the C. E. Convention in London, July 14-18, will do well to look out and read an article elsewhere in this paper on "Our Rally at the World's C. E. Convention," by J. Z. Tyler. The article concerns you and is of importance.

—Some time ago O. E. Payne, formerly manager of our subscription department, but now president of the Keystone View Co., of this city, was made the subject of an evidently malicious attack in two of our city papers by some local personal enemies, and similar articles also appeared in some Iowa papers, with the apparent purpose of extending the injury in the field of Brother Payne's former acquaintance and labors. As the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST goes into this field we think it but just to say that very few persons who knew Bro. Payne here were in the least effected by the reports and regarded the matter simply as the venom of a personal enemy. We are glad to see that the Chariton Patriot, upon personal investigation, has corrected itself as to the facts, thus doing itself and Brother Payne justice in the matter. Brother Payne has since been re-elected to the eldership of the Tuxedo Church, of which he is one of the fathers.

—Our Ohio readers and others will be interested in the program of the Ohio state convention which appears in another part of this paper. It is a strong program and bespeaks a great convention.

—The two articles from the pen of F. D. Power on "The Lord's Treasury," the first of which appears in this paper, will not fail to interest our readers. The Lord's treasury is a living, practical question and ever worthy of the closest attention of every disciple of the Master. These articles are written for and published under the auspices of the Bethany C. E. Reading Courses' management, and nothing passes their eye for publication in our columns that is not vitally related to the church and the cause we plead.

—At the Ecumenical Conference on Foreign Missions provision was made for the presentation of the work of the great Bible societies of the world. The three largest societies, the British and Foreign, the American and the Scottish, will all be represented by distinguished speakers. The history of these and kindred societies is one of the marvels of the nineteenth century. The last annual report of the American Bible Society notes over seventy Bible societies which have been engaged in the work of publishing and circulating the Word of God on the earth, but the three above named are by far the largest. The British and Foreign Bible Society, organized in 1804, has circulated 160,000,000 copies of the Bible, or some portion thereof, and the American Bible Society, organized in 1816, has issued about 67,000,000 copies. The total issues of all Bible Societies during the century is not less than 280,000,000 copies, in addition to what has been done by other agencies, which would doubtless reach a total of at least one-half billion copies. The two largest societies have always been in very close and friendly co-operation.

—The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST still grows in favor and our list of readers continues to expand. The "dull time" in the subscription department this year promises to be about like the core of the small boy's apple, concerning which he remarked: "There ain't goin' to be any core." Charles City, Ia., Fulton, Ky., Sturgeon, Mo., Oelwein, Ia., Indianapolis, Ind., Lincoln, Neb., Nora Springs, Ia., and Ballards, Mich., all make generous additions to our number of readers, besides many other places which we have not space to mention.

—The yearbook for the church in Reserve, Kansas, for 1900, is indicative of enterprise and of energy. This is the congregation that suffered the loss of its house by cyclone some years ago and rebuilt so soon again. It is a congregation of indomitable will. Melancthon Moore is its present pastor.

—One of the means used by Charles Reign Scoville to announce his meetings and to invite people to hear him is that of the doorknob evangel or messenger. It contains announcements of meetings, statements of successful meetings, outline of our missions and a scriptural answer to the question: "What must I do to be saved?" The plan is a good one and within the reach of all evangelists and churches.

—On April 28 there closed in St. Louis a remarkable season of opera. On November 6 the Castle Square Opera Co. took possession of Music Hall in the Exposition Building, and for six months steadily presented the best operas in English at popular prices. Night after night (Sundays excepted) the great auditorium, seating 4,000 people, has been filled with people. Such works as Lohengrin, Tannhauser, Martha, Il Trovatore, Aida, Lucia di Lammermoor and Faust have been heard by thousands of the people of St. Louis, who have never felt like spending from two to five dollars to hear these masterpieces when given by visiting companies. The presentations have been of a high order of merit, the principals being selected from the best American singers and the chorus a carefully drilled body of young men and women. We believe that Mr. H. W. Savage, proprietor of the Castle Square Company, is a public benefactor. Good music is a civilizing agent and St. Louis is a better city to live in because of the work which has been done here during the winter. No appeal was made to the lower elements of the city, and the patrons of the opera have been pre-eminently the respectable people of St. Louis. Mr. Savage deserves much praise for the work done in St. Louis and in other American cities, and we are glad to know the same company will be in St. Louis again next winter, and probably indefinitely.

—The new Christian College building, Columbia, Mo., is now formally open to the public and seems to be a most satisfactory structure, embodying as it does grace, elegance, beauty and every convenience for a modern, up-to-date college for girls. Of this new building the Herald says:

The splendid new building is a symphony in brick and stone. Within the furnishings are of the highest order of excellence. The building, outside of smaller structures, has a frontage of 228 feet, the same as the ancient Greek Parthenon. It faces southward, has an entrance way of generous proportions and the threshold has an inviting look in its very massiveness. Builded by the indomitable energy, pluck and faith of two women, Mrs. W. T. Moore and Mrs. L. W. St. Clair, it has reached its present fruition in scarcely eight months. Everything about it bespeaks exquisite taste, thorough understanding of the needs of school and an eye to the beauty which supplements utility and is part of it. From the hanging of the Rubens masterpiece in the main entrance way to the dust shutes in the side there is the same attention to detail, the same careful combination of refinement, culture and excellence of homekeeping.

—A word from our New York correspondent says:

I wish to heartily commend the enterprise and the ability with which the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is emphasizing the cause of Home Missions. Beloved, we must evangelize our own land, and our people will send the gospel to the ends of the earth. It is to be hoped that not a single reader of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST will fail to make an offering—a liberal offering—toward preaching Christ to all the people of the United States. The first Lord's day in May should be a high day of privileges. S. T. WILLIS.

—EDITOR CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST: — Dear Brother: I note with pleasure the strong work done by the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST for the May offering. The importance of this time can hardly be overestimated. The wide plains of this West are great mission fields yet. The work is but just begun. Our opportunities were never greater or more promising. From all parts the call for more workers comes to me and I am not able to send them. May the home offering be double that of last year. W. A. BALDWIN, Cor. Sec.
Ulysses, Neb.

A Modest Creed.

In looking through some old papers the other day I found a waif which deserves republication. It is a scathing commentary upon the bigotry and intolerance exhibted in matters educational, political and so-called religious. While people are casting about for partisan platforms and denominational creeds, they ought not to forget the one that follows. J. FRAISE RICHARD.
Washington, D. C.

Believe as I believe, no more, no less;
That I am right, and no one else, confess;
Feel as I feel, think only as I think;
Eat what I eat and drink but what I drink;
Look as I look, do always as I do,
And then, and only then, I'll fellowship with you.

That I am right and always right I know,
Because my own convictions tell me so;
And to be right is simply thus to be—to be Entirely and in all respects like me;
To deviate a hair's breadth, or begin
To question or to doubt or hesitate, is sin.

'Twere better that the sick should die than live,
Unless they take the medicine I give;
'Twere better sinners perish than refuse
To be conformed to my peculiar views;
'Twere better that the world should stand still than move
In any other way than that which I approve.

After reading and digesting this modest creed, the reader may be prepared to appreciate the truthfulness of the couplet:

"How few think justly of the thinking few;
How many think they think, who never do."

J. S. Hughes.

On our first page this week we present the picture of J. S. Hughes, of Chicago, to our readers. Brother Hughes began preaching at the age of eighteen and has attained wide reputation as a preacher and lecturer. He is a man of strong convictions and not afraid to utter them. He is a radical prohibitionist and at one time made the race for governor in Indiana on the Prohibition ticket. His latest specialty, however, is the writings of the Apostle John, of which he has been a hard student for a number of years. Not finding former interpretations of the Apocalypse of St. John satisfactory, he set about to find a more satisfactory one, and this he claims to have found and set forth in a book called "The Mystery of the Golden Cloth." Since that he has written another book on "The Seer of Patmos, or John's Place in the Christian Economy." In addition to his writings on these things Brother Hughes has arranged a series of lectures embodying the contents of these books and more on the Book of "Revelation," which he has delivered in many places to the great pleasure and profit of the people. His lectures invariably awaken great interest in Bible study and call forth the highest praise. They are undenominational and heard alike with interest by people regardless of religious creeds. Though severe in his denunciation of sin in all places and persons, Brother Hughes is an optimist and inspires his hearers with the hope of the triumph of righteousness and the authority of Christ, and of him the churches are to know more through his books and his lectures, for which there is an increasing demand.

A Spotless Skin

And a clear complexion are desired by every woman and admired by every man.

Eruptions, pimples and similar blemishes are caused by an impure condition of the blood. These skin blemishes are permanently removed by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which thoroughly purifies the blood and cures the cause of the disease.

"For about one year and a half my face was badly broken out," writes Miss Carrie Adams, of 116 West Main St., Battlecreek, Mich. "I spent a great deal of money with doctors and for different kinds of medicine, but received no benefit. At last I read one of your advertisements in a paper, and obtained a bottle of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Before I had taken one bottle of this medicine I noticed a change, and after taking three bottles I was entirely cured.

Free. The Common Sense Medical Adviser 1008 pages, is sent free on receipt of stamps to cover expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for paper covered book, or 31 stamps for cloth binding. Address, Doctor R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Last Call.

This is the last word we shall be able to speak to our churches before the annual offering for Home Missions, the first Lord's day in May. The promise for the offering is brighter than ever before; more churches have planned to take the offering. We find just one danger, and that is the danger of reaction from the offering of last year. A number of churches have written that they will not push the offering this year. We plead with our churches not to injure this great cause in that way. Let there be no steps backward in Home Missions. On account of the increase of the offering of last year the appeals became more pressing than ever before and the board has made larger appropriations and employs more missionaries to-day than at any time since the society was organized, in 1849. We want to take the churches into our confidence and say we are in debt to these missionaries, and unless there shall be an increase in the offerings over last year, the board will be compelled to withdraw its support from a number of these fields and the work will suffer loss.

Our report at the Kansas City Convention will show the greatest results ever attained by our board, and we plead now for such an offering from the churches as will not only prevent loss, but insure larger victories still to come. Send us word promptly about your offering for the encouragement of others.

Remit by draft, check, money order, express order or registered letter; send very small sums in two-cent postage stamps. Send no money loose in letters without registering.

Remit all money for Home Missions to
BENJ. L. SMITH.
Y. M. C. A. Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Personal Mention.

J. M. Campbell has resigned at Van Alstyne, and accepted a call to Whitewright, Texas.

W. B. Carnes has resigned at Melissa and accepted a call from Denison, Tex.

W. H. Waggoner held a Missionary Institute in Fulton, Mo., last week.

David Walk has accepted an invitation to deliver the commencement oration at Carleton College, Bonham, Texas, May 23.

V. E. Ridenour, singer, is now assisting W. F. Jordan, of Newport, Ark., in a protracted meeting.

W. F. Turner, pastor of the church in Joplin, Mo, called at this office while in the city on last Friday.

F. L. Davis has closed his work in Charles City, Iowa, and is now preaching for the church in Tama.

Robt. G. Frank, of Fulton, Mo., begins a protracted meeting in Hurdland, Mo, for J. T. McQuary, May 7th.

J. N. McConnell, of Hoisington, Kan., will enter upon his third year, June 1st, as pastor of the Hoisington Church.

A. F. Ayers has accepted a call to preach for the church in Hartford, City, Indiana. He was at New Carlisle, Ind.

Having finished his course in the medical school in Omaha, Neb., C. L. Pickett will return to Woodbine, Iowa, for the summer.

S. W. Nay, pastor of the church in Elk City, Kansas, preached the baccalaureate sermon for the graduating class of the Elk City High School, this year.

J. P. Lichtenbor, of Buffalo, N. Y., orders the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST sent to Edward Owers, a preacher whom he has just received from the Baptist Church.

J. B. White is located at Wakefield, Michigan, instead of Wakefield, Nebrask, as formerly reported in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. He is now in the second year of his ministry at this place.

J. W. Holsapple is editing and publishing the Christian Visitor in connection with his work as pastor of the Central Christian Church, Sherman, Texas.

Charles E. Walk, the younger son of David Walk, is a practicing attorney in Sherman, Texas, and is connected with the Central Church in that city.

H. A. Denton, of Warrensburg, Mo., is holding a protracted meeting with Levi Marshall in Hannibal, Mo., and the Hannibal Journal speaks of his preaching as strong and impressive.

Prof. J. Fraise Richard, of Washington, D. C., and Miss Margaret Sutherland, of Columbus, Ohio, will be instructors at the Fulton County Teachers' Institute, to be held in Wauseon, Ohio, beginning August 20th.

Any preacher or evangelist needing a tent 42x68 for gospel work this summer can find the opportunity to outfit himself at a reasonable figure by addressing a letter to J. G. M. Luttenberger, Dorchester, Ill.

J. D. Dillard, field agent for the Christian Orphans' Home, and the B. A. C. C. for Missouri, was in the city yesterday. He is one of the men that our Missouri churches ought to be glad to see at least once or twice a year.

Fred A. Nichols, of Hiram, Ohio, has accepted a call to preach for the church in Haverhill, Mass., beginning July 1st. Brother Nichols will then have completed a seven years' course of study in Hiram College.

K. W. White, of Glasgow, has a call to preach one-half time for the church in Salisbury, Mo. He centinues one-half time at Glasgow where he was recently assisted in a good protracted meeting by E. M. Smith, of Centralia. Bro. Smith's preaching in Glasgow was highly appreciated and commended.

J. L. Smith has closed his work for the church in St. Louis, Mich. His ministry, he says, has been reasonably blessed and it is with regret that he ceases these pleasant relations to the church. The church has been greatly strengthened and enlarged during his ministry. His address will continue at St. Louis, Mich.

W. F. Turner, Joplin, Mo., made our office a pleasant call during the past week. He was in the city looking after the interest of their new church building. They have secured one of the best lots in the city and raised over $8,000 last Lord's day morning toward the new building.

In a letter from Luther Moore, formerly pastor of the Tuxedo Church of Christ, near this city, he states that he is prospering beyond all expectation. He states that Hopedale is the oldest living church in our brotherhood and evidently he has not spoken without knowledge in this matter. We rejoice with Bro. Moore in his prosperity.

Prof. J. W. Shepard, a member of the church in Hoisington, Kan., and principal of our public schools, of that city, has closed a successful school year and will enter the ministry at once. Bro. Shepard has the reputation of a consecrated, educated young man, possessing an easy delivery and very much in earnest. He will probably take the work at Smith Center, Kan.

Marion Stevenson, pastor Edwards Street Christian Church, Decatur, Ill., recently delivered an address on Christian Science, under the auspices of the several churches of that city. The address was delivered in the Presbyterian Church, heard by a full house and printed in full in the Decatur Daily Review. It is a pretty thorough review of the doctrine of Christian Science, setting forth their teaching on many points in detail.

Easter day with the church in Kenton, Ohio, was an enjoyable one. The sermon by the pastor, T. W. Pinkerton, on the "Credibility of the Resurrection" was especially appreciated by the congregation. His discourse in the afternoon to the Knight Templars' Commandary No. 58, of which he is commander, is reported in the Kenton Daily as one of the finest he has ever delivered before a Kenton audience.

T. W. Grafton has resigned at Rock Island to accept the pastorate of the church at Ann Arbor. Bro. Grafton has been pastor of the Rock Island Church for ten years and has done most excellent work. When he assumed the pastorate of the local Christian Church ten years ago next May it had sixty-five members. During Mr. Graftons ministry 600 people were received into the church and the actual membership is now 400, deaths and removals from the city accounting for the difference. During his ministry a beautiful and commodious church was erected. Mr. Grafton will be a safe man and a wise leader for the important work at Ann Arbor.—Christian Century.

CHANGES.

J. M. Kantor, Sheldon to Webster City, Ia.
J. H. Goldner, Chagrin Falls to Goldner, O.
H. L. Calhoun, Franklin to Henderson, Tenn.
E. J. Hart, New Philadelphia, Pa., to Wheeling, W. Va.
F. W. Henry, Lincoln to Trinidad, Col.
Walter Kline, Clay City to Robinson, Ill.
A. W. Davis, Kansas City, Kan., to Kansas City, Mo.
P. M. Kendall, Columbus to Flora, Ind.
L. C. McPherson, San Miguel to No. 7 Tenth St., Vedado, Havana, Cuba.
Frederick F. Wyatt, Kansas City, Mo, to Whitesboro, Tex.

Keep the Ball Rolling.

I wish to commend the splendid manner in which you are presenting Home Missions. Keep the ball rolling. As a Kansan it seems to me that the prospect was never brighter for a large offering. The outlook for an enormous wheat crop is flattering. Kansas churches will, no doubt, do their part this year for Home Missions. I am acquainted with the preachers. I know something of the burdens they are carrying. But they are missionary to the core. They love the old plea. They are instructing their people. They love the brotherhood. The Lord blese the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST and those to whom it ministers.

W. S. LOWE, Supt. Kansas Missions.
Topeka, Kansas.

"Fortune Favors the brave." It is also favorable to those who purify their blood in the spring by taking America's Greatest Spring Medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla. A clear head and a healthy body are given by its use.
Constipation is cured by Hood's Pills. 25c.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains the linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day and get up many times during the night. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention that you read this generous offer in the ST. LOUIS CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

The International S. S. Lessons.

The International Sunday-school Lesson Committee met in New York last week, Wednesday and Thursday. The lessons for 1903 were selected and a first draft of lessons for 1904 were made. The first six months of 1903 will be devoted to a study of the Acts of Apostles and the Epistles. The last six months will be given to the Hebrew history, from Samuel to Solomon. The subject of preparing graded lessons came up. A committee was appointed to consider the advisability and practicability of attempting this. Lessons for primary teachers were selected not more than three or four years ago; but the teachers would not use them. The Sunday-school Times published them and encouraged their use. They were selected after free and frank conferences with some of the leading primary teachers in the United States. It is now proposed to confer with the publishers on the subject with a view to obtaining their thoughts. There is a rumor, which seems to be well founded, that a company which started out a few years ago to supply a graded system of lessons for the Sunday-schools has failed financially. This would seem to indicate that there is no great demand for graded lessons.

Prof. J. M. Stifler, of Crosier Theological Seminary, was elected a member of the committee to take the place vacated by the death, last December, of Dr. Warren Randolph. Prof. Stifler, it is said, is an expert on the New Testament.

B. B. TYLER.

Advance Along the Line.

The work which the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is doing is more than the sending of a trumpet call for the present offering for American missions. It is an education of the people to an appreciation of the privileges of Christian giving. It is an arousing of heart and conscience to a sense of responsibility for the saving of our own home land.

If the free, full gospel of Christ was ever needed in America it is to-day. While two of the greatest denominations are staggered at the thought of their failure to advance, let the Disciples prove their loyalty to Christ and the strength of their position by making this by far the greatest year for Home Missions we have ever known. I am sure New York state will do her part.

F. W. NORTON.
Niagara Falls, N. Y.

The B. C. E. R. C. Directors.

The management of the Bethany C. E. Reading Courses is frequently congratulated on their good fortune in having men so exceptionally and particularly well adapted to their duties as directors. There are three courses; each has a director. Herbert L. Willett, director of our course in Bible study, is instructor in Semetic languages and literatures, and dean of the Discipies' Divinity House in the University of Chicago. He is a most devout and diligent student of the Bible, and while conservative, is open to any additional light which modern research may throw upon these ancient Scriptures. He is widely recognized as a highly gifted teacher. Frederick D. Power, director of our course concerning the Disciples, although pastor of the Vermont Avenue Christian Church, Washington, D. C., for nearly a quarter of a century, is still in the full vigor of a strong manhood. Not only is he in complete accord with the purpose and plea of the Disciples, but he has such a knowledge of their history as few possess, and he presents their position with clearness and grace and force. He is universally regarded as peculiariy well fitted for his duties as director. William J. Lhamon, director of our study of missions, is the prosperous pastor of the First Christian Church, Allegheny, Pa., one of our largest churches. With him the climax of the life and teachings of Jesus is the divine commission to preach the gospel to every creature. His knowledge of missionary fields and forces is not only extensive but exact, and he communicates his knowledge and enthusiasm to others through an admirable literary style. He excels in his ability to diffuse missionary intelligence and awaken a missionary conscience. Not only are these reading courses to be congratulated, but the million and more Disciples are to be esteemed fortunate in having such instructors of their young people in these important studies.—Bulletin.

Concerning Disciples Who Move to Chicago.

If our pastors throughout the land will co-operate in the matter herein referred to it will doubtless be the means of saving to the Master's cause many Disciples who are continually wending their way to the great city of Chicago from all sections of the country.

It is a conservative estimate that places the number of *un*identified (and undiscovered) members of the Christian Church, living in Chicago as greater than the identified.

Bro. A. I. Berninger, of this city, who by the expenditure of not a little time and labor has succeeded in perfecting a plan for looking after this influx of newcomers, has requested the writer of this notice to serve as secretary or correspondent, to whom all communications in the premises should be addressed. A brother or sister in each of our Chicago churches—some twenty of them—has been delegated to represent their respective churches; in a few cases the pastor to act temporarily. This brother or sister, upon hearing from the secretary that a given Disciple from another city or town has located in the territory naturally falling to their church, will at once visit the person and invite him or her to make their church home with them. Do not write until able to furnish exact address, street and number, and it would be well to include, if possible, place of business, or name of firm with whom party may be employed.

A plan of this kind, applicable to Chicago, could and should be worked in every one of our larger cities. Address W. P. KEELER, Care of Marshall Field & Co.

Chicago, April 16, 1900.

[A good suggestion, this, by which the church and others might profit.—EDITOR.]

The Moody Bible Institute.

"Not as long as I am alive," Mr. Moody used to say, when it was proposed to link his name with any of the institutions founded by him; but now, in order to perpetuate his memory, the trustees of his school for training Christian workers at Chicago have changed its corporate name to "The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago."

In the reorganization that has been effected, Fleming H. Revell, the well-known publisher, has been elected vice-president. Twenty-five of the leading Christian men and women of this country and Canada will be invited to serve as a board of managers.

The general conduct of the Institute will proceed on the same lines so successfully outlined and carried on by Mr. Moody since its organization ten years ago.

Over three thousand students have been in attendance during the decade, coming from thirty-five states and eighteen foreign countries. They have gone to all quarters of the globe, wherever missionaries have penetrated. S. F. G.

Message from London.

While waiting in the station for the train to bear me to New Haven I will send a message to my friends through the courtesy of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

I have now been away from home over two months. Have visited in Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Ohio, Washington, D. C., and New York City. I sailed March 24 on the Campania, of the Cunard Line, for Liverpool. We had good weather, all but two days and nights, when our good ship plunged and rocked and shivered in a fashion that would have been alarming had I not been too sick to care what was going on. I came direct from Liverpool to London, where I arrived March 31.

I leave for Marsailles via Paris, to night, where I embark Thursday for Alexandria. Will spend some time in Egypt, going up the Nile to Thebes and Luxor. I have visited the office of the "Egyptian Exploration Society" in London and secured valuable information on recent discoveries in Egypt, that will be invaluable to me, and cannot be had in any other way. I have just time to secure a lunch before the train starts, so will close by adding that I am feeling much better than when I left home. Am traveling entirely alone, buying my ticket from one point to another as I go. Will say to all who care for my experience that if I were planning another trip I would start exactly the same way. I enjoy the freedom that I could not have with a party or a scheduled ticket. B. B. BURTON.

London, England, April 3, 1900.

A Word of Introduction.

W. H. Waggoner, missionary evangelist, of Eureka, Ill., has been here for the past week. Bro. Waggoner came to Missouri at the invitation of the C. W. B. M. of this place, and at my suggestion; and consequently we feel that we are, in a way, responsible for his success or failure in our state. I am a stranger within your gates, but trust I shall be heard when I introduce Bro. Waggoner to our great brotherhood in imperial Missouri.

His institute will prove a blessing to any church in which it is held. His maps and charts are the best I have seen, his lectures are full of information and he himself is consecrated to the great work of world-wide missions. His terms are so liberal that any church can have the advantages of his work. You furnish him with entertainment, he takes a collection each night, and the people gladly contribute. This is the sensible way of managing the finances of the institute, for in this way those who are not able to pay th customary price of admission can attend and con tribute what they are able.

He has several institutes already planned i the state, and wants to spend several month here. If you want your church enlightened o the subject of missions, send for him. He goe from here to Mexico, where he will hold an in stitute for S. D. Dutcher.

This letter is not asked for by Bro. Waggoner but is written in the hope that some who read i will take advantage of having a visit from hin and his institute. ROBT. G. FRANK.

Fulton, Mo., April 30.

Our Rally at the World's C. E. Convention.

The Nineteenth Internetional Christian Endeav or Convention is to be held in London, England July 14-18, 1900. No doubt many of our breth ren from the United States will attend. Brethrer in England have asked me to arrange for a rally of our people. They suggest a whole day's ses sion to be held in the West London Tabernacle Saint James' Square, either during or immediately after the convention, and that there be a morning afternoon and evening session.

The special purpose of this note is to request al of our brethren who are expecting to attend th London Convention to drop me a card at once Our British brethren wish to know whom t expect and we wish to have the material ou of which to arrange the provisional program The time is short. Please drop me a postal car immediately upon reading this, if you expect t attend. This request includes the sisters.

Truly and fraternally,
J. Z. TYLER.

798 Republic St., Cleveland, O., April 25, 1900

"Our First Congress."

Every thoughtful Disciple ought to welcome th publication of this volume of selected addresse from the program of our first Congress, which wa held in Saint Louis, last year. Although I hear them when first delivered, I have just read them with increased interest, and I am sure the prob lems they discuss are such as will appeal to th earnest and practical thinkers and workers amon us. No preacher will regret it who sends for copy. W. F. RICHARDSON.

One of the Best of the Year.

Allow me to congratulate the CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST on its splendid Home Mission number which was one of the best issues of the year. trust that its appeal will not go unheeded, bu that every pastor who reads its stirring article will take an offering the first Sunday in May fo the evangelization of America. The devil is mak ing a most desperate fight to gain control of thi country, and only the utmost diligence and fidelity on the part of the Lord's people will ensure hi defeat. The splendid offering for Foreign Mission ought to be duplicated by our churches for th American Christian Missionary Society. Thi whole continent must be leavened with the gospe of Jesus Christ, if it is to be saved from th demons of lust and greed. America for Chris means ultimately the world for Christ.

W. F. RICHARDSON.

Kansas City, Mo., April 25, 1900.

ESTEY PIANOS AND ORGANS
Excel in Superior Tone, Perfect Construction and Great Durability.
THE ESTEY CO., 916 OLIVE ST., ST. LOUIS, MO

WHEELING THROUGH EUROPE.

By W. E. Garrison.

During the summers of 1898 and 1899 the author toured on a bicycle through England, Scotland, Wales, France, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Austria and Italy. Traveling on a wheel, he was able to see Europe as it cannot be seen by the tourist who is whirled over the Continent by train. He has written most delightfully and entertainingly of his travels, of his experiences with obdurate officials and unsophisticated peasants, of his struggles with the several European languages, of the customs of the common people, of Alpine scenery, Swiss lakes, etc.

Wheeling Through Europe is a handsome, cloth-bound volume of 263 pages, illustrated with half-tone cuts made from photographs taken by the author.

PRICE, ONE DOLLAR.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.,
St. Louis, Mo.

STREET OF AN ALPINE VILLAGE

The Standard Dictionary.

Of all dictionaries of the English language, the very best, and the one now most in use in the United States, is the Standard Dictionary. In its preparation, 247 editors and specialists were engaged for five years, and the publishers expended $960,000 before the first copy was placed on the market. It is in every respect full and complete. The pronouncing dictionary of proper names, for example, contains over 27,000 words. The Standard is published in two volumes, bound in full Morocco, comprising 2,338 pages, illustrated with many full-page plates and thousands of small engravings.

REGULAR PRICE, $26.00. OUR PRICE, $13.00.

We recently came into possession of a few sets, which we will sell, while they last, for just half price.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO., St. Louis, Mo.

Christian Science Dissected.

There has been a demand for some time for an effective work against Christian Science. To supply this demand we have issued this book. The insane folly of Mrs. Eddy and her followers is growing. Thousands are being deceived and led astray. In all parts of the country Christian people are puzzled to meet and overcome the teachings of "Mother" Eddy. Christian Science has become a menace second only in seriousness to Mormonism.

Christian Science Dissected is designed to enlighten those who know nothing of Christian Science, and to open the eyes of those who have learned a little of what it is, and have been thereby deceived. The author believes that Mrs. Eddy is a conscious fraud and charlatan, but he has no harsh censure for the bulk of her followers, believing them to be honestly following a cunning but unscrupulous and wicked leader. The book is neatly printed and bound, and contains 62 pages. It should have a wide reading.

PRICE, 25 CENTS.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO., St. Louis, Mo.

A NEW SONG BOOK--$10.00 PER HUNDRED.

TIDINGS OF SALVATION is the title of a new song book, just issued. It contains one hundred and seventeen popular gospel hymns and standard songs--a great many of the favorite compositions of the best song-writers, and some new and excellent pieces. It is a cheap book, but only in price. The music is first-class, and printing, binding and paper are good. It is just the thing for evangelistic services, for conventions, for the Christian Endeavor Society, and for Sunday-schools and churches that cannot afford to purchase a more expensive book.

EDITIONS AND PRICE LIST.

	Per copy, Postpaid.	Per dozen, Not prepaid.	Per hundred, Not prepaid.
Manila	$ .15	$1.20	$10.00
Limp Cloth	.20	1.50	12.00
Boards	.25	2.00	15.00

If your Church, Sunday-school or Society wishes to purchase a cheap book that is a good book, do not fail to examine TIDINGS OF SALVATION.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, St. Louis, Mo. HACKLEMAN MUSIC COMPANY, Indianapolis, Ind.

Correspondence.

Chicago Letter.

The newspapers are still poking their jealous jibes at the Sheldon venture in decent journalism. Here is a line from the morning paper: "The Rev. Chas. M. Sheldon, who recently gained notoriety by running a Kansas newspaper as he thought Jesus would have run it, has contributed a poem," etc. "Notoriety" is a word quite popular with the powers of this world when they would discredit a minister whose work menaces their dominion. The fact is, said Kansas newspaper was brought into public notice by Mr. Sheldon, who had already earned his title to fame by his simple, earnest efforts to solve the practical question: "What would Jesus do?"

We believe that the Topeka experiment is an indication of a deep and wide dissatisfaction with the typical daily; and the signs are not wanting in the great dailies themselves that they are aware of the growing popular disfavor. Some of them give more and yet more space to current religious history, and cut down the reports of "sport" and crime in order to have space for paragraphs on moral issues.

April 24th the Times-Herald of this city printed an editorial on "The Dominant Religion." We quote: "It not infrequently happens that a religionist of the school of Ingersoll will attempt to decry the importance of Christianity by a reference to the millions upon millions who are attached to some other faith. His joy is in the Orient, where the immense populations of China and India, and the lack of exact information about them, make the most exaggerated speculations plausible. . . . There is no single religion that has anywhere near as many adherents as Christianity, and when we pass from numbers to other considerations the comparison tells still more powerfully in its favor. In the matter of missionary endeavor the Christians so far exceed all their rivals that they may be said to be carrying on the only really active religious propaganda in the world to-day. The (ecumenical) conference which represents fifteen millions of annual expenditures, and the Catholic societies with their agents everywhere, must be set against the baker's dozen of Hindu and Mahometan proselytes who were part of the debris of the Parliament of Religions in Chicago. . . . . Whether we measure it by its numbers, its energy or its power it exceeds all others put together."

"It's no use; I'm done with churches!" This was the rather belligerent exclamation the preacher met from a woman in her own home as soon as he disclosed his identity. Said woman was at one time a member of a Christian Church, the pastor of which was a man famous for evangelistic power. He out-classed all his brethren in the estimation of his admirers as a pulpit orator. He hobnobbed with the elite, buttonholed governors and men of light and leading, and deluded multitudes burnt incense at his shrine. But alas! he fell. Pedantic, pretentious, selfish, he stood disclosed at last as a liar, a tippler and an adulterer.

After a time the woman above referred to became interested in the fad popularly known as Christian Science. All went well until her little daughter fell sick with diphtheria and the "healer" failed to convince the patient that she was not sick, and finally failed to convince the heart-broken mother that she was not dead! The husband himself, a man of good morals, but without religious belief, had gone with his wife the easy way of this sad lunacy, but now, after these experiences, they are, as he expressed it, "blanks."

And so we find wrecks along this way—immortal wanderers. What shall be the portion of those who, blind themselves, lead other blind into the ditch? "If the light that is in thee is darkness, how great is that darkness!"

One of the great difficulties in the way of our city work is the nomadic character of the population. Every city church must lose each by removal at least ten per cent. of its members. If they went to strengthen churches elsewhere that would not be very bad; it would be a transference, not a loss of members. But the religion of the average disciple is of so tenuous a character that it rarely survives transportation. Witness the immense number of derelicts in all the cities. One of the most promising of our Chicago churches has lost, during the past year, until it is rendered practically incapable longer of self-support. In order to make good this loss we suggest that in every church where the brethren are leaving for Chicago their departure be the occasion for fasting and prayer, and if need be, that the pastor and elders be authorized to accompany them to the city and steer them into one of the churches at once!

The Home Society furnishes this year ample ammunition for the engagement on the first Lord's day in May. If the members of the church cannot be seen personally by solicitors, then be sure that they all receive a pastoral letter, with several tracts and envelopes for the offering; a one-cent inclosure is all that is required, and the increased contribution will pay several times over the increased expenditure.

"If we have not learned that God's in man,
And man in God again;
That to love thy God is to love thy brother,
And to serve the Lord is to serve each other,
Then Christ was born in vain."

FRANK G. TYRRELL.

4957 Prairie Ave.

Letter from Indiana.

I write from Greenfield, the capital of Hancock County. This county is in the "gas belt," as this three-cornered and irregularly shaped territory is called. Who invented the word belt I do not know. The shape of the gas region would enclose a ball or a pyramid quite as readily as a cylinder.

Hancock is one of the counties east of the state capital, and its own shape is bounded by straight lines, eleven in number; so jagged at intervals as to bring us in contact with six other counties. All these six counties are in the level portion of the state; and in the absence of hills the section has almost no waste land. The roads are straight, the farms are regularly laid out and well fenced, the water is ditched off and the whole section is fertile and productive. With the best of soil, the best of water, the fortieth parallel climate, the boundless railroad accommodations and the presence of natural gas in exhaustless abundance, the section is rich beyond calculation.

Greenfield is on the great National Road, twenty miles east of Indianapolis, and for a number of years it has enjoyed the great traffic of the Pan-Handle Railroad. This mighty thoroughfare has no superior in the West. There are seven trains a day each way for passengers, and freights according.

Not content with these opportunities, we are about completing a rapid transit line to run by electricity. The rails are already laid through our town, and in the next three or four weeks the road will be in operation.

Greenfield has a splendid meeting house, the monument of our lamented brother, Morgan Chandler, deceased. He was a successful banker, and having no children to inherit his estate he put several thousand dollars into this work. Ably seconded by Dr. Warren King and others, Bro. Chandler gloried in seeing the structure raised and dedicated while he lived. It is by far the best church edifice in the city.

Bro. B. F. Daly is the pastor, and the church has never been so peaceful and so properous as it is now. This is Bro. Daly's third engagement here. Accessions have been frequent since the beginning of the year; and as the trolley line is coming and people are taking residence here in considerable numbers I look for the additions to continue.

Bro. T. H. Kuhn, the state evangelist, lives here; and he has just bought a farm here where he is to reside permanently.

There are churches in the county in most of the villages—Fortville, New Palestine, Carrollton, Charlottesville, Wilkinson, Warrington and a country neighborhood called Nameless Creek. These congregations all have preaching and some of them twice a month.

Bro. Kuhn has recently spent the week-days of two or three weeks with the little congregation of at Wilkinson. He succeeded in engineering an exchange of the old property for an unoccupied house belonging to a a defunct Episcopal congregation. Bro. K. thinks this movement will be the means of burying a lot of unsavory history that has been sadly in the way of Wilkinson's prosperity. So mote it be.

T. M. Wiles, of Anderson, preaches for the Warrington Church, and the others are supplied as follows: Charlottesville, Bro. Hufford; Nameless Creek, Bro. Shutts; "Little Sugar" (near Carrollton), Bro. Willoughby; Fortville, Bro. Kerr, of Crawfordsville, and Palestine, a brother from Irvington, whose name I cannot recall.

The writer has no work except as he preaches and lectures for nothing, and peddles books for a living. He could preach if he had a chance; but he is gray and fleshy and bald and stoop-shouldered, and somehow others get the work. If some congregation feels inclined to try on old fossil who has completed twoscore years and fifteen, and who has vitality enough to preach twice a day, he, the undersigned, is ready to respond. I can recommend him as able to preach and sing as well as he could ten years ago.

WALTER S. SMITH.

COULDN'T KEEP IT.

Kept It Hid From the Children.

"We cannot keep Grape-Nuts food in the house. It goes so fast I have to hide it, because the children love it so. It is just the food I have been looking for ever so long; something that I do not have to stop to prepare and still is nourishing. Wishing you all the success you deserve," Mary Y. Margeson, 80 Lincoln St., Winthrop, Mass.

Grape-Nuts is the most scientifically made food on the market. It is perfectly and completely cooked at the factory and can be served at an instant's notice, either with rich cold cream, or with hot milk if a hot dish is desired. When milk or water are used, a little sugar should be added, but when cold cream is used alone the natural grape sugar, which can be seen glistening on the granules, is sufficiently sweet to satisfy the palate. This grape sugar is not poured over the granules, as some people think, but exudes from the granules in the process of manufacture, when the starch of the grains is changed from starch to grape sugar by the process of manufacture. This, in effect, is the first act of digestion; therefore, Grape-Nuts Food is pre-digested and is most perfectly assimilated by the very weakest stomach.

Made at the pure food factories of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.

B. B. Tyler's Letter.

There are a half million Bohemians in the United States. There are one hundred thousand in Chicago. About one-third of the population of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, is Bohemian. Many of them are excellent Christian people. They maintain churches and Sunday-schools and care for their intellectual, social, moral and spiritual life. The Christian portion of the Bohemian population is worthy of American citizenship.

Thirty years ago or more there appeared in this country a number of unprincipled Bohemian adventurers. "Being without character, fearing neither God nor man, they desired to propagate the infidelity they themselves professed, and ventured to believe that the Bohemian people in this country furnished a suitable field for the spread of their ideas." An apostolate of the press was established. The papers that are published were not at first well supported, but gradually those for whom they were intended began to be pleased with their teaching and to give them a comparatively liberal support. "When it became evident that the enterprise was a success, new papers of like character appeared, until to-day the country is flooded with them." "There are in all forty-two Bohemian newspapers published in the United States." Seven of them are religious in character, five of them are Roman Catholic and two are Protestant. There are thirty-five secular papers published in this country in the Bohemian language. It is said that only one is favorable to Christianity, one is neutral and thirty-three are out-and-out opposed to the Christian religion. They habitually speak of Christians with contempt. They speak of the church as "the Lord's junkshop." The Christian religion is spoken of as "witchcraft" and "superstition." They contemptuously speak of God as "Lordy." The following are quotations from this literature:

"Infidelity alone holds up the Bohemian nation in America. If it should fail all our glory is at an end. We are the essence and guaranty and the only hope of the Bohemian nationality in this country."

"Every religion or faith is enslaving, it matters not whether it be Catholic, Protestant or something else."

"All that is contained in the Bible is a cruel fraud, for the purpose of deceiving credulous and unthinking believers."

"Dwight L. Moody, the noted traveling preacher, died of heart disease, which harrassed him to death in spite of all the praying of his adherents. On account of his ignorance he fell into a superstitious and raging faith and began to preach in order that he might earn his living more easily than by cobbling and farming. He called after him the low classes of Chicago, and it paid him well."

It is said that this character of literature is read by not less than four hundred thousand Bohemians in the United States.

Fraternal societies abound. The organ of the "Bohemian Benefit Society" is published at Cedar Rapids, Iowa. The chief associate editor of this paper is Prof. B. Shimek, of the Iowa State University. The following are quotations from this paper:

"As long as there was nothing better known in the world, a flint stone was good enough to kindle the fire with, and as long as natural science was unknown the best thing to satisfy the minds of the progress-loving people was Christianity; but now Christianity is a back number and unnecessary, being only a soothing for dormant minds."

"Whosoever has a son, encourage him, bring him to the order, teach him to be a man, a Bohemian, an infidel. Do not carry your children to the Lord's junkshop (church), to the priests for baptism, as if you were afraid of their hell."

"The wife of many a brother is yet in the grasp of religion. She begins with god and ends with god [the Bohemian infidel press always spells "God" with a small "g"]; she also thus brings up her children; she sends them to a Catholic or some other sectarian church; she does not realize that she is thereby crippling her children morally and placing obstructions in the path of our beloved society."

"Many persons are joining our ranks because we are the C. S. P. S. Society [Bohemian Benefit Society] and because we are an Order of Infidels."

It is said that this paper is sent to the ten thousand members of this society and their families. Do you see any reason why the Disciples of Christ should engage in Home Mission work? Do you see any reason why Drake University should be endowed when one of the professors in the Iowa State University is the chief associate editor of the paper from which the last four quotations are taken?

The Bohemians publish at least one magazine for children, the purpose of which is to train them in unbelief with all that this word means. The following is a quotation from a four-column article on Christmas:

"Every year this day is celebrated in which began the foolish fables about Christ. How should a nation of free thinkers consider this holiday? This day should not be celebrated; but rather damned. There is no greater evil in the whole world than religion. . . . I will again bring before you, dear children, a number of proofs that there is no God. . . . . The entire book called the Holy Scriptures is a pack of lies very cleverly arranged. Man has no soul, and what people imagine as a soul is simply a figment of the brain. . . . No person on earth really believes what is being taught about the life and death of Christ. Ask any intelligent man—laborer or scholar—and every one will tell you and prove to you that what is being taught about him are miserable lies."

This is what the Bohemian children are now taught in the United States. Are they affected by it? Read the following. A boy is describing the Christmas festival in Minneapolis, and this is what he says:

"In this holiday time our Bohemian community was awakened to a new life. It was a fine celebration. the schoolchildren declaimed, sang and danced. The chief point of the festival was an essay by one of the larger pupils, which ended thus: 'Let us own our own Bohemian language and our Bohemian nation; let us respect the fatherland for which our fathers died; let us take a stand against religious falsehoods, for religion is the greatest evil of mankind.'"

In an interview with a Bohemian named Joka Pavlieek, which appeared in the Chicago Tribune, September 20, 1899, the following language is found:

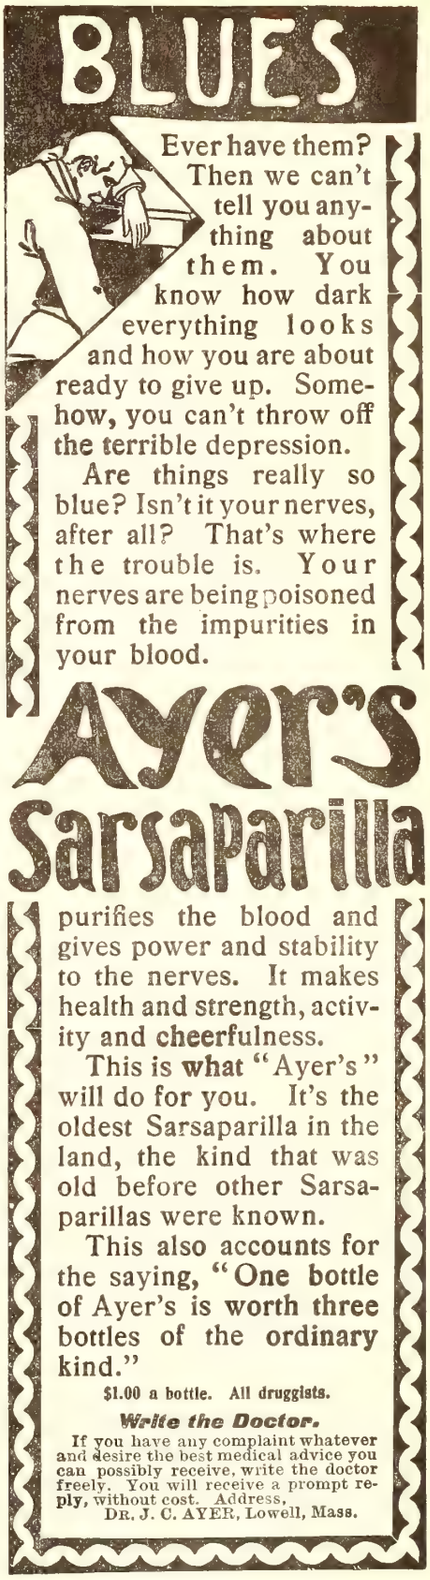
"Our secret societies enforce agnosticism. We advocate suicide, as Ingersoll advocated it. The principles of agnosticism are so grounded in the Bohemian blood as to be beyond change."

As to suicide, the Bohemian agnostics go beyond Ingersoll. He held to the right and duty of suicide, under certain conditions, as a theory. Ingersoll did not practice what he preached; the Bohemian agnostics reduce to practice the teaching of Ingersoll on the subject of suicide and murder. There is an organized propaganda of agnosticism of the Ingersoll kind among the half million Bohemians in the United States among the men, women and children, by periodicals, books, lectures and schools.

There are about two hundred of their schools in this country. In the larger cities the Bohemian infidels own their buildings, while in the smaller settlements they teach on Saturdays and Sundays in the society halls, or during vacation in the American public school buildings which they secure from the school boards. In a series of readers used in these agnostic schools, there is a progressive course in infidelity. In the primary readers it is taught that "the world had no beginning;" that "it is impossible that it could have had a Creator." Concerning religions it is said: "They are all fables and superstitions and they are against reason and knowledge." On the fly leaves of this primary reader are many such advertisements of books as the following: "Thomas Paine's Age of Reason," "Ingersoll's Lectures," "The Holy Bible for Ridicule," "Position of Woman in the Church" and some books so immoral that [they] should not be permitted to pass through the United States mails.

The foregoing information was obtained from F. J. Woitishek, M. D., president of the "Bohemian Brotherhood League of Cedar Rapids, Iowa." This band of earnest believers in God and in his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, over which Dr. Woitishek presides, was organized a year ago or more, aroused by the growth of infidelity and the alarming prevalence of suicide among their fellow countrymen in America. Dr. Woitishek was once an atheist. The circumstances attending the death of a beloved child caused him to give attention to the claims of Jesus of Nazareth, with the result that he is now a believer. He is devoting his time and strength to the conversion of his people. Dr. Woitishek has the confidence and sympathy of the Christian people of the city in which he resides.

B. B. T.



BLUES
Ever have them? Then we can't tell you anything about them. You know how dark everything looks and how you are about ready to give up. Somehow, you can't throw off the terrible depression.
Are things really so blue? Isn't it your nerves, after all? That's where the trouble is. Your nerves are being poisoned from the impurities in your blood.
Ayer's Sarsaparilla
purifies the blood and gives power and stability to the nerves. It makes health and strength, activity and cheerfulness.
This is what "Ayer's" will do for you. It's the oldest Sarsaparilla in the land, the kind that was old before other Sarsaparillas were known.
This also accounts for the saying, "One bottle of Ayer's is worth three bottles of the ordinary kind."
$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.
Write the Doctor.
If you have any complaint whatever and desire the best medical advice you can possibly receive, write the doctor freely. You will receive a prompt reply, without cost. Address,
DR. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE TABLETS. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. GROVE'S signature on each box. 25c.

The St. Louis Letter.

I am to write about reasons for a more vigorous propaganda of our faith—the gospel—to the world in this letter. True, this seems useless until we have aroused the church to a better conception of its mission and a more vigorous application of Christianity to every-day life on the part of its members; but fortunately the church has no monopoly upon reform measures. If she had, the funeral oration over the grave of progress would now be an ancient document. It is possible, therefore, to better the condition of the world by thundering into its ears the truths of the Almighty. When the Jews would no longer hear Paul he turned to the Gentiles and won great victories for righteousness.

One of the ruinous conceptions about Christianity is that it is something too precious for public eyes or too delicate for open-air exhibitions; something fit only for the cathedral and the cloister. The Christianity of Christ was not of this quality. It withstood the heat and the dust of the highways, the contention and strife of the cities, the winds and frosts of infidelity, the allurements of wealth, the influence of politicians and diplomats, and every other corroding and nullifying influence of the world. What the world wants and what it has largely succeeded in accomplishing is to confine Christianity to the cathedral and the pulpit. This is a mistake. Christianity must be gotten out into the world in some way, and one of these ways should be a living, vigorous propaganda of the gospel in its ears. Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, is the command of the Savior.

There is great power in popular sentiment and there is no way to create sentiment faster than by a living, earnest declaration of truth. Paul's preaching of righteousness, temperance and a judgment to come before a Roman governor made him tremble. The terrors of sin can be thundered into the ears of men until the strongest of them will fear and tremble. The strong preaching of the decrees of God and the terrors of hell in olden times brought the vilest of sinners to repentance. How much more, then, ought the preaching of living truths to-day bring men to a consciousness of their sins and to repentance. Wicked and corrupt men become bold when public sentiment against unrighteousness is at low tide, but they flee as darkness before the morning sun at the approach of the preacher of righteousness.

What we need, therefore, is a vigorous and united campaign of righteous preaching, not of the milk-and-water sort, not churchianity, not negative goodness, but an onslaught upon unrighteousness everywhere. The gospel is above the church, above the world, above everything on earth, and cannot be preached as it is until the men who preach it can liberate themselves from religious and political sectarianism. The best thing that could happen to our foremost preachers and the church would be for them to be turned out of their pulpits for preaching righteousness in politics, in business and in society; and the men are coming who are going to do this very thing. If not in the church they will preach it elsewhere.

But this preaching should begin in the churches. Judgment must begin at the house of God, and the preaching of sound doctrine is judgment. There are no places so well suited to this work as the churches. The complaint that people will not go to the churches to hear the gospel is unfounded. The trouble is they do not hear the gospel when they do go. Preach sound doctrine vigorously, unselfishly and unsparingly and the pews will soon fill up; but sound preaching is no longer a drawing card. Let the churches cut loose from the world, drive out the evil spirit of selfishness, sectarianism, aristocracy, denounce sin in high places, take a bold stand on the moral side of every public issue, and keep in touch with the people and the question of reaching the masses will disappear as dew before the morning sun.

But the preaching must not be confined to the pulpits of the land. It must be carried into the streets, the shops, the factories, the schools, the stores, the political wards, the primary elections, the state, national, and municipal offices, the homes, the fields of agriculture, the marts of commerce, everywhere. Not by preachers alone, but by every lover of righteousness. Not by word only, but by word and deed. Street preaching and street exhibitions of religious ceremonies amount to nothing. No man goes to street fakirs for the goods he needs. Going into the lanes and by ways, the streets and the slums, to reach men in a practical way is true Christian work, but street songs, prayers and religious harangues are too suggestive of the hypocrite.

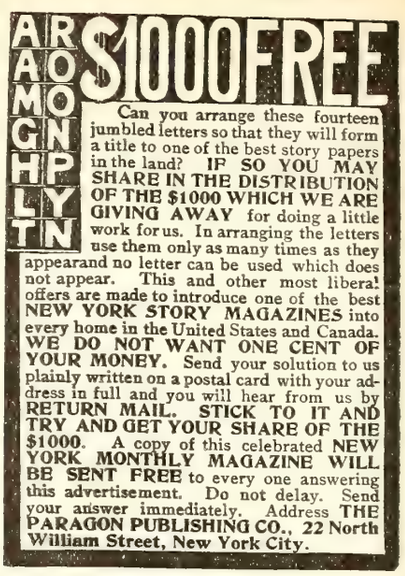
The preaching of the gospel to an orderly crowd, large or small, in the grove, on the river bank, in the lecture room, courthouse, schoolhouse or private house, barn, field or street is not to be condemned, but the gospel on wheels—a wagon or car outfit—looks too much like the circus business to do effective, solid work. Neither should the preaching be confined to men fitted for pulpit work. At Jerusalem, when the church was scattered, the lay members all became preachers, and if members can do this when persecuted and homeless, how much more can they become preachers of righteousness in their homes and under our flag. But we must stop and leave further reasons for a more vigorous propaganda of the gospel to another writing. W. W. H.

The Circuit Completed.

DEAR BRO. GARRISON:—After an absence of about twelve years as residents of this city the writer and his family again find themselves domiciled within its gates in that capacity, having completed the circuit the 5th inst. Our removal from here in the autumn of 1888 was made necessary by the transference of the Christian Oracle plant to Chicago. Having disposed of my interest in the Oracle Publishing Company to the editor of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST in the fall of 1898, and in the deal coming into possession of of his interest in the Pacific Christian, San Francisco, Cal., necessitated a removal to that city. But in the prosecution of my work on the Pacific Christian my health became impaired to such an extent that I was under the necessity of desisting from my labors. Such being the case I sold my interest in the Pacific Christian Publishing Company last December to W. B. Berry and J. F. Ghormley. Since then wife and I have spent the winter in Southern California, most of the time at Santa Maria, Santa Barbara county, where I preached for the church two months, during which time seven were added, five of whom were by baptism. Since our leaving O. H. Derry has located with the church there as their minister.

Leaving Santa Maria the 2nd day of March, we spent a Lord's day at Los Olivos; from thence to Santa Barbara, where we spent a week most pleasantly, and from thence to Los Angeles, a former field of labor in the gospel for near two years, beginning in July, 1884.

The progress our cause has made in that city since then is highly encouraging. From a single church of about 200 members at that time we now have five organizations and 1,300 or 1,400 members. The most of these are in two organizations: the First Christian Church, which is ably served by A. C. Smither, and the Broadway Christian Church, by B. F. Coulter, the merchant-preacher. H. Elliott Ward began a successful work with the Eighth Street Church the first of the year, and is prosecuting it with vigor.



ARAOMONGHPLYTN
$1000 FREE
Can you arrange these fourteen jumbled letters so that they will form a title to one of the best story papers in the land? IF SO YOU MAY SHARE IN THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE $1000 WHICH WE ARE GIVING AWAY for doing a little work for us. In arranging the letters use them only as many times as they appearand no letter can be used which does not appear. This and other most liberal offers are made to introduce one of the best NEW YORK STORY MAGAZINES into every home in the United States and Canada. WE DO NOT WANT ONE CENT OF YOUR MONEY. Send your solution to us plainly written on a postal card with your address in full and you will hear from us by RETURN MAIL. STICK TO IT AND TRY AND GET YOUR SHARE OF THE $1000. A copy of this celebrated NEW YORK MONTHLY MAGAZINE WILL BE SENT FREE to every one answering this advertisement. Do not delay. Send your answer immediately. Address THE PARAGON PUBLISHING CO., 22 North William Street, New York City.

DR. J. HARVEY MOORE,

EYE, EAR, NOSE
and THROAT....

648-649 CENTURY BUILDING,

HOURS: 10 to 3. SAINT LOUIS.

We find that this city (Des Moines) has doubled its population since our former residence here. Its growth during the last year or two, both in population and buildings erected, has been highly satisfactory. The moral and spiritual interests seem also to have kept pace with the material growth, judging from the number of large and elegant church buildings erected and their large increase of membership. The Central and University Place Christian Churches alone together have reached a membership of near 3,000. "The Home of the Aged," recently completed, and which is located a short distance west of Drake University, is a fine structure, the outgrowth of the benevolent impulses of some of the wealthier citizens of Iowa's capital city. Thus, when the material, educational, benevolent and religious status of this city is considered, none in the land has made a more enviable record during the decade. All things considered, its future is exceptionally promising.

Drake University has entered upon its spring term with an attendance larger than at any similar term in its history. Rapid progress is making in the erection of the new auditorium, the gift of Gen. Drake to the University. It is the purpose to have it completed before commencement in June.

Dean Everest, whose health, as you know, has been impaired for some time from brain trouble, has been much worse for the past week or two. His friends are much concerned about him.

Whether or not this shall be our home until life's course is run, or whether we shall return to the Coast, the climate of which we so much enjoyed, will depend on health and some minor considerations at present unforeseen.

Wishing the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST ever increasing prosperity and usefulness, and the editor and his assistants the unalloyed satisfaction of duty well done when the day is ended, I remain yours in Christ, F. M. KIRKHAM.

Des Moines, April 17.

Free Trial Lesson

In Bible course by mail. Take the course right at home, Diploma and degree when you finish. Terms only $1.00 per month. Write to Prof. C. J. Burton, Christian University, Canton, Mo.

Leaves from Mission Fields.

Such is the title-page of a charming volume from the press of our publishing house at St. Louis, and from the pen of one of our best preachers and writers; both have placed us under obligations for this valuable contribution to our church literature. The book in its mechanical make-up is a credit to the company, already well known for the excellence of its publications. In paper, letter, press and binding this book is the equal of the best issues of the best publishers of the country. It is no exaggeration to say that in these particulars it is seldom equaled, never surpassed, by works of its class, appearing in either England or America; and that is saying a good deal in praise of a book made made in this book-making age.

In addition to other excellences that make its perusal a luxury, the correct proof-reading is very noticeable—I had almost said faultless. Of course, to many this may seem a small matter; to the few who appreciate correctness in respect to orthography, punctuation, grammar, etc., even the punctilious will be gratified. It is hard to notice Bro. Ragland's production in these respects, and in respect to its spirit and literary style, without appearing to be fulsome in our praise of both author and publishers. We hope they will receive the recognition they so richly deserve for the way they have accomplished their task.

The author has been most fortunate in his theme, so suitable to his taste and his extensive reading, to which every page gives abundant evidence. During the past year our gifted brother wrote this series of memoirs for some of our papers, delighting thousands of readers in and out of our communion. We hoped then he would see his way clear to give them to the world in permanent form, and we are glad he has done so. We need at this junction of our history as a religious body just such books as this to imbue our people more and more with the missionary spirit and to place us in a proper light before our religious contempories. We always were a missionary people, but from lack of proper organization for work at home and abroad, epecially the latter, neither ourselves nor others appreciated it. We have now entered upon a new stage of our history and this volume, and others that we trust will follow in the same line and in the same spirit and style, will do much to place the Disciples where they justly belong in their missionary development.

None can peruse these pages without feeling his spirit inspired with renewed admiration for the men and women who have loved and lived and labored for the sinful, the sad and the lost the world over. O, the heroism of these five noble souls, who counted not their lives dear to themselves that they might carry the gospel of the grace of God, the love of the Redeemer and the revelation of the divine Spirit into dark places of the earth, the abodes of ignorance and superstition!

Hundreds will be encouraged to follow in their steps, and thousands will be stirred up to contribute more and more to spread the work till we shall be among the first in missionary fields in point of numbers, zeal and liberality. God speed the day, and God bless Bro. Ragland and such as he, who help its dawn. We need more such men and more such books to arouse us to an enthusiasm worthy of ourselves and the cause we plead.

We have written these few lines more as a commendation than a criticism of this charming volume, and to help place it in the hands and homes of our people, assured that if we succeed we shall have the thanks of all we induce to procure it. It may be had for $1 of the Christian Publishing Co., St. Louis, or from the author, N. M. Ragland, Fayetteville, Ark. R. GRAHAM.

A Trinity of Devotional Books.....

Uniform in Size and Binding.

The Heavenward Way.

A popular book addressed to young Christians, containing incentives and suggestions for spiritual growth, leading the young in the "Way of Life." Lately revised. 100 pages. Bound in cloth.

Half-Hour Studies at the Cross.

A series of devotional studies on the Death of Christ, designed to be helpful to those who preside at the Lord's Table, and a means of spiritual preparation for all who participate. 275 pages.

Alone With God.

A manual of devotions, containing forms of prayer suitable for private devotions, family worship and special occasions. It is adapted to the wants of Christian Endeavorers. The book contains 244 pages.

Price, per copy, cloth.....$ .75
" " morocco..... 1.25

Price, per set, cloth.....$2.00
" " morocco..... 3.25

Twenty-Five Thousand Copies Sold.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, -:- ST. LOUIS.

Kansas Christian Ministerial Institute.

Emporia, Kansas, is one hundred miles from the eastern line of the state and just half way from north to south. It is a beautiful little city with nine thousand people. The State Normal School is located here and a Presbyterian college. Its business interests seem large and active. The Church of Christ has a membership of more than five hundred, who have recently secured W. A. Parker as pastor to succeed L. E. Sellers, who accepted the work at Terre Haute, Ind. Bro. Parker is getting the work well in hand and has already won the affections of the congregation. It is with this church that the Kansas Ministerial Institute met on April 17-19.

The institute was remarkable in at least two respects. First, for its youth. The average age of the ministers present was certainly not over thirty-three years. Second, the addresses were unusually good for a ministry so young. Bro. Shrively and Bro. Ingles, of course, were much older than the average, but taking out these two brethren, with possibly one or two others, this institute was composed of very young, strong and capable men.

D. R. Dungan, St. Louis, was the chief speaker of the institute. He delivered addresses on the "Land and the Book," "The Office and Work of the Holy Spirit," "Inspiration," "The Preacher's Difficulties and How to Meet Them" and "The Work of the Reformers in Different Ages." These addresses were highly appreciated and elicited hearty applause. They were full of instruction to young men and will be a great help to them in their work for the Lord.

The addresses of the home forces were: "What Should Doctrinal Preaching Have in the Present Day," M. Moore: Review, F. H. Bently; "The Utility of Doctrine," W. S. Lowe; "Christ and the Pentateuch," D. H. Shields: Review, G. A. Hoffmann; "Christianity and Education," C. A. Finch; "The Superiority of God's Word," Geo. T. Smith; "Our Needs," D. Stewart: Review, O. P. Cook; "The Message and the Man," W. S. Priest; "Why More Men Are Not in the Church," Hon. Milton Brown; Review, R. E. Rosenstein; "Lessons From a Bold Statement of a Bold Preacher," A. E. Dubber.

This, you will notice, is quite an array of talent. Brethren Priest and Geo. T. Smith are two men of national reputation for their vigor of intellect and strength in the Lord's services. All the others are young men of strong convictions, splendid talents and a high degree of culture and education, a number of them having labored successfully in several states, while all are well known and are now doing excellent work in Kansas. This made the institute a very profitable one, and all seemed delighted and happy with the success of the meeting.

The church at Emporia and Bro. W. A. Parker, the pastor, did all in their power to make those in attendance perfectly at home. Their hospitality was free as the mountain air and their desire to please as intense and constant as Kansas energy. It was good to be there.

E. N. Phillips presided over the deliberations of the institute and F. W. Emerson acted as scribe. David Shields is the new president and the institute goes to Herrington next year. G. A. H.

Butler College at Bethany Park.

During the coming summer, while the Assembly at Bethany Park continues, Butler Bible College will give severaal courses of study.

The gentlemen who will be in charge of the movement and the subjects they will present are: Prof. Jabez Hall, on Pastoral Theology; Prof. Burris A. Jenkins, on the New Testament; Prof. John McKee, on the Old Testament, and Prof. C. B. Coleman, on Church History. Each will give one week's instruction.

The Christian Endeavor Cottage will be utilized as a place for instruction, and all who are interested in the subjects to be taught will have an opportunity to enter the classes. It is hoped that a large number of ministers, Sunday-school teachers and officers of Christian Endeavor Societies will take advantage of these courses, as the work promises to be deeply interesting and beneficial.

This is the first work of the kind undertaken by Butler, but those who have it in charge confidently expect that it will be greatly helpful both to the Bible College and to the Assembly.

Butler College will keep open house at Butler Cottage, which will be in charge of a member of the faculty of the college. This will make a good stopping place for all who take an interest in educational affairs, and all who visit it will be given a cordial greeting.

Preparations are being made for the celebration of Butler Day at Bethany Park in a more enthusiastic way than has heretofore been attempted. Fine music will be rendered and other features will be arranged to make it an event long to be remembered.

All the alumni of the college and their friends should make a special effort to be at Bethany on this day, if no other time, as a great treat will be in store for them. BURRIS A. JENKINS.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address,

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O

Sold by Druggists, 75c.
Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Notes and News.

The Easter work here by the Bible-school resulted in raising about $30 for the Orphans' Home. It may go a little over that amount.

E. J. LAMPTON.

Louisiana, Mo.

I have engaged to hold meetings during the summer in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia under the auspices of the Maritime Mission Board. Will begin in June. A. MARTIN.

Muncie, Ind.

The church at Mason City, Ia., raised in all departments last Lord's day $100 for state work. A fine interest prevails. An Endeavor rally is planned for the first week in May, with Wm. Orr, of Clarinda, state president of the C. E. Union, as chief speaker. RALPH C. SARGENT.

Mason City, Ia.

The camp meeting association of Walla Walla and adjoining counties, Wash., will hold their annual meeting this year at Waitsburg, beginning June 8, and lasting ten days. J. V. Updike, of Ohio, has been secured to assist in the preaching, and Singing Evangelist Webb and wife to lead the singing. A splendid meeting is expected.

L. C. MARTIN.

Elder G. T. Black, of Witchita, who is making a temperance lecturing tour through Kansas, lectured here last Thursday and Friday evenings to appreciative audiences. He is an earnest speaker and thoroughly stirred our people on the temperance question. Every church in the state should have him come and deliver his lecture. All he asks is the collections. Bro. Black is working with a view to organization. First organize the state, then the districts, counties and townships. Thus organized we can stand as a force between the two political parties, holding the balance of power and saying to them, Nominate true temperence men who will enforce the laws and we will support them. In this way we can fill our offices with good men, who will enforce our laws and drive the saloon from our state.

G. D. SELLERS.

Randall, Kan.

To Weak, Pastorless Churches.

I have had thirteen years' experience as a gospel singer with several of our leading evangelists and pastors. During these meetings almost 8,000 people have been added to the churches. Many of my friends urge me to enter the ministry. If any church not able to support a regular pastor and hire a singer for a meeting wishes to experiment with me for a meeting, I will be preacher and singer both. I furnish song books and my solo organ free. I will come for traveling expenses, entertainment and the free will offerings of the people. I will go any place. I am ready now. J. E. HAWES, Singing Evangelist.

Ada, Ohio.

Attention, Preachres of Indiana.

The state ministerial and missionary convention will meet at Valparaiso, May 15-18. First session will open Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock with a sermon by Bro. Jabez Hall. We are to have addresses by such men as J. A. Lord, B. A. Jenkins, J. H. McNeill, E. S. Ames, C. C. Rowlison, C. B. Coleman, Jas. Small, T. H. Kuhn, J. V. Coombs, G. P. Coler, J. P. Rice and many other of our strong men. A feature of the convention will be the morning chapel exercises at the Normal College with short talks by different brethren. It promises to be a great convention. Every church in the state ought to be represented. Reduced rates can be had within 100 miles of convention.

A. B. PHILPUTT.

A Splendid Issue.

DEAR CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST:—I congratulate you on your splendid Home Missions issue of April 19th inst. Last was a red-letter year for our beloved A. C. M. S., but this ought in no way fall behind it. How? Let every church and every individval give as much and more. The American Christian Missionary Society, of which all of us should be proud to be members, expects every man to do his duty. HIRAM VAN KIRK.

Chicago, Ill.

Illinois News.

To the Churches of Christ of the Fifth District:

DEAR BRETHREN—Our next district convention will be held at Virden, June 5-7. We are arranging a good program in which we will present the needs and deeds of the state and district work. It will be remembered that the convention was to go to Virginia this year, but the church there being at present without a preacher, was unable to take the convention.

There are many churches in the district that have not yet sent in their apportionment. The preacher or church member who reads this and knows his church is among this number will please consider it a personal matter to see that his church attends to this business before the district convention in June.

This is census year, and we are especially anxious to have every church in the district fill out the report blanks and send them to the district secretary. The county correspondents will assist the secretary in getting these reports made out. These statistical reports are of importance to us as a people, and there is no reason why any church should neglect or ignore them. So be good and thus save a great deal of trouble and prevent many mistakes and much righteous indignation.

PAUL H. CASTLE, Dist. Sec.

Virden, Ill.

Mass Convention.

Agreeable to a resolution adopted at our last state convention there will be held in Marshalltown, Iowa, May 8,9, a mass convention of our Iowa Bible-school workers to consider the Bible-school interests of Iowa.

Dear fellow-worker, we come to you in the name of this mass meeting and in the name of the most vital interests of our brotherhood in Iowa—our Bible-schools. At our recent district conventions no subject was received with greater interest than that of the coming state mass meeting.

The occasion is ripe for greater things for Iowa Bible-schools and our Iowa brotherhood, shall we not avail ourselves of it? What are you going to do about this mass convention?

Shall we have a distinctive work in Iowa for the Bible-schools? If so, what and how?

Dear brother, are YOU not thoroughly interested in this matter? Are we doing our best "to feed my lambs, to tend my sheep?" May we not depend on you for your co operative interest and attendance?

A fine progam, including some of our best Iowa talent, is in preparation, discussion of practical themes, conferences upon up-to date methods, etc. H. F. Davis, of St. Louis, state superintendent Missouri Bible-school work, will be in attendance to help. See program soon. Marshalltown Church invites. Reduced rates upon all railroads, upon the usual certificate plan, if possible. May we hear from you saying—We are coming to lift and learn? The most vital matter of the year, concerning the brotherhood of Iowa, is the mass convention at Marshalltown, May 8 and 9.

Com. { NELSON G. BROWN, JOHN B. WHITE, W. B. CLEMMER.

Notice.

Please allow me to call attention to the fact that I am the authorized field agent of the Christian Orphans' Home & B. A. C. C. in Missouri. Some may possibly mistake me for a "Dr. Dillard, D. D.," who has been in the field for the "Home Finding Society." I am not the man—I am not "Dr."—I make no pretentions to "D. D.," and wouldn't if I could. Pay no money to any one for the Home or Association unless known to be authorized as local vice-president or having the endorsement of some one well known. J. D. DILLARD.

Fredericktown, Mo.. April 24, 1900.

Atlanta, Kansas.

March 18 was a day of rejoicing for our brethren at Atlanta. Abouut six months ago our church there consisted of a few discouraged members, when I was called to hold them a meeting and take my chances on raising my support from the free will offerings. We succeeded in gaining 27 additions, which gave us strength sufficient to justify an effort to build a church house. So the necessary committees were selected and they went to work with the result that yesterday we had the pleasure of setting apart to the worship of Almighty God a neat little frame building, fully equipped for successful work for the Master. The money for the building had all been raised, with the exception of about $$100, which was needed for bell and other fixtures, and this was cheerfully given in response to call given after the morning service. The building consists of a main auditorium 28x40, with side room 12x16 and a 7x7 tower at corner of main room. We estimate the property to be worth at leat $1,000, with every cent of obligation fully paid.

The brethren there deserve credit for the way in which they have labored and sacrificed to obtain this building, and I fully believe that with such earnestness and consecration as has been displayed they will soon be numbered among the aggressive churches of our brotherhood in this state.

T. H. GUY.

Winfield, Kan.

The Ohio Convention.

Are you coming to Mansfield? We are expecting you. The Mansfield Church is busy making ready to entertain a thousand delegates. Will you not see to it that your church is one of one hundred to send ten? The state secretary, Bro. Bartlett, reports that the churches are responding to the call to send ten delegates and that they are coming May 21st a thousand strong.

This is your opportunity to attend the state convention. Mansfield is centrally located. The railroad accommodations are good. Rates have been secured. The church is prepared to make your stay pleasant. The attendance promises to be larger than at any previous convention. It will have the enthusiasm and power of numbers. The program is excellent. You should not miss the address of Bros. Power, Pounds, Miller and others. The program of the C. W. B. M. will be no less interesting and helpful. It will be your opportunity to hear and meet Adelaide Frost and Mary Graybiel. Can you afford not to come?

The secretaries have been working to bring Ohio missions to the front. They are coming. We need only the enthusiasm, the inspiration and spiritual power of a great convention to complete their work. Let us have it this year. We have the place (Mansfield), the enthusiastic secretaries, the program, and the churches have the delegates. We shall have a great convention at Mansfield May 21-24, 1900.

The church at Mansfield extends a cordial invitation to every Disciple in the state to attend this convention. We will be prepared to furnish lodging and breakfast for all who come. Will those expecting to attend please notify L. G. Bateman by postal card, so that entertainment may be provided? L. G. BATEMAN.

Mansfield, Mo.

Missouri Bible-school Notes.

Only eight weeks before the gathering of the clans at California. Are you planning to be with them?

The Twenty-fifth (Silver) Annual Bible school Convention Provisional Program will go to press this week.

Oak Grove, Calaway county, has a lady in charge, as have many other good schools, and so sends in the apportionment in full, and only makes the assistant wish that some other schools had lady superintendents.

Pleasant Union, Jackson county, has W. A. Nickle with them this year, and have just sent in the balance on their apportionment. If a Nickle can do that well, what of some other Missouri ministers?

We are to put before the coming convention a list of the schools and ministers, apportionments and amounts paid. How will your school stand on the record, and will you not help me make it perfect by sending in a list of schools and payments on the apportionments?

The first day this year is Endeavor Day, and opens at 2:30 P. M., June 11th, with "The Present —Its Outlook—Its Opportunies," by C. M. Chilton.

At the night session we are to have State Superintendent Claude E. Hill's report and address, followed by "The Bible Our Text-book," H. A. Northcutt giving us one of his best.

While a normal study, "The Relation of Bible Geography to Bible Teaching," by D. R. Dungan, who has been over the land, will greatly help every teacher in this year's work.

Gower goes to the head of the class this time in their missionary rally, meeting their apportionment in full for foreign, more than meeting that for general home, doubling that for state and state Bible-school work; so that Jno. P. Jessie and dear Bro. Poe believe in having one great, big day for missions, meeting all at once.

"What is the Endeavor Idea?" will be told us by E. J. Fenstermacher, making us the more devoted to its development than ever in the past.

Nine new Bible-schools put in by our field force during March. And yet your school has done nothing to keep this good work going!

"Practical Work an Endeavor Society May Do" will be an open conference, giving all an opportunity to tell what real good things are being done.

Faucett, where W. H. Moore superintends, and Jno. P. Jesse ministers, sends in its first offering to our work this year. So that the preacher does hold the key to the situation, and no excuse will go unless he so wills it.

"Wherein Does Christian Endeavor Help the Church?" an address by W. A. Moore, is just what every one of us ought to hear, and will at California, if there. Do not miss it.

The Camden Point rally was so planned by Prof. W. N. Stayner and so executed by the forces that it was made a great day to all and for all. The new house, at a cost of $2,000, was filled with people, happy in the part taken and in the enthusiasm quickened. Six of the teachers do their work with only Bibles in hand, as all ought to do, while the recitations, songs and primary work carried the people captive, hence every session was crowded. In consideration of the new house the giving to our work ($30) was most liberal, but was only as Camden Point has always done for us and the children. The Orphan School is closing the best year in its history, every room in the building used in the work, while all the people are grateful to A. O. Riall and his efficient corps of teachers. The Military School, under Prof. Stayner, is doing a great work for the young men.

The Endeavor Day at California closes with the report of our state Junior superintendent, Miss Mollie Hughes, and a conference on "Junior Work," conducted by Mrs. Pearl Lemmon Deerwester—fitting close to a joyous day.

Brethren, by vote at Plattsburg you commanded your treasurer to close the books May 31st, and to report all schools, persons, societies and classes paying after that as delinquents. I said, No. You said, Yes; and I am going to do it. Hear? It is my highest joy to report all debts paid, and must do it in four weeks, and you must help me by remitting your part of the $1,000 now due us. Will you? H. F. DAVIS.

Commercial Building, St. Louis.

THE SOCIETY OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR
"FOR CHRIST AND THE CHURCH."

Our Young Folks gives to this department of Church activity great prominence, recognizing in it a great Training School for Christian Workers. It has among its Staff and General Contributors, not only the foremost Endeavorers of the Disciples of Christ, but has also frequent contributions from the leading writers of other religious bodies.

1. SENIOR PRAYER-MEETING TOPICS.—An entire page in each number is devoted to an exposition of the Topics for the Weekly Prayer-Meeting, prepared by Frank G. Tyrrell, pastor of the First Christian Church, Chicago, one of the most forcible and polished writers, speakers and workers of the Church, giving Exegetical Notes, Daily Readings, Bible Lights, Illustrations, Applications, Question Hints, Quotations, and a great variety of other helps—more, in reality, than any other paper published. The Endeavorer who carefully reads this page is never at a loss for something suitable to say in prayer-meeting.

2. THE JUNIOR TOPICS.—A full page is also given each week to the Junior Society, embracing an exposition of the Topics, with Questions, Suggestions, Illustrations and Hints for Leaders, Superintendents, Officers and Members. This department is in special charge of J. C. B. Stivers, one of our foremost Junior Workers, who is assisted by special writers of great ability.

3. WAYS OF WORKING.—This is a principal feature of the Endeavor Department of OUR YOUNG FOLKS. The way to organize a Society, ways of creating and maintaining an interest, ways of conducting business-meetings, prayer-meetings, socials, etc., as well as methods of interesting outsiders, bringing in new members, and promoting the growth of the Society, are given attention in nearly every issue.

4. ESSAYS AND ADDRESSES.—The pages of OUR YOUNG FOLKS contain numerous essays and addresses of Endeavorers of world-wide reputation, delivered before National, State, District and Local Unions and Societies. These, in connection with the productions of our regular and special contributors, give the readers the best thoughts of the times, along this line of Christian activity.

5. SERIAL STORIES.—Considerable space in nearly every issue of OUR YOUNG FOLKS is given to interesting Serials by eminent authors, illustrating and enforcing the principles of Christian Endeavor, which always prove helpful. No young people's paper published has a more gifted line of contributors. Several serials, which have first appeared in its columns, have been printed in book-form and proved very popular.

The Church in Baltimore.

My esteemed brother, James Vernon, once pastor in the Monumental City, calls attention to certain alleged "inaccuracies" in my recent article on our beginnings in that place. The inaccuracies are his and not mine. I did not have his sermon before me. I have never seen it. My statements are first-hand, from Alexander Campbell. He says Mr. Campbell visited the church in Baltimore "in 1835, and not in 1833, as Brother Power's article has it." Now Mr. Campbell says his visit was in 1833, and my critic will find the history recorded in the Millennial Harbinger for 1834, page 13-15. He landed there from the Chesapeake Bay steamer Nov. 20, and spoke from Nov. 22 to 26.

Bro. Vernon says the meetings were "in Scotter's Hall, and not in Scott's Hall, as Brother Power has it." Here again he differs from Mr. Campbell, who tells us he preached in Scott's Hall, as I wrote it. My good brother may have had his facts from Samuel Sands and Henry Mentzel, but those good men trusted to memory, while Mr. Campbell put these things on record.

Bro. Vernon's other corrections are simply the typographical errors that occurred in transcribing names which were correctly given in my manuscript. His contention that there was a church in Baltimore in 1819 I do not dispute; in fact, my article credits its beginning two years earlier.

I am glad my friend calls attention to these matters, as it affords me an opportunity to assist him in revising that sermon. There were no inaccuracies in my article. F. D. POWER.

Washington, D. C., April 7, 1900.

TITHING SYSTEM—60 Cents to $79.50.

We offer a prize of $49.50 to $79.50 to the one of ten contesting Britannica purchasers giving the best answer to "How to use an Encyclopedia." Our Britannica is a reproduction of the latest Edinburg edition with 5 volumes of American additions ending with last October. The 30 Royal octavo volumes are printed from large clear type on good paper and well bound. They contain 23,418 pages, 12,000 illustrations, 571 maps and treat 250,000 topics. Including a bookcase and a guide to the study of the Britannica, our prices are, cloth, $49.50; three-fourths morocco, $64.50; sheep, $79.50.

We offer $1.50 to $12. to the one of ten contesting Bible purchasers giving the best answer to "How to use the Bible." Our Bibles are well worth the prices quoted. Large family Bibles, neat and durable, $2, $4, $6; elegant, $8, $10, $12. Teacher's Bibles, good type, paper and binding, $1.50, $2.50, $3.50; very fine, $7 and $8.

We offer 60 cents to $12 to the one of ten contesting history purchasers giving the best answer to "How to study History." Our Histories are printed from medium sized type, on good paper and well bound and illustrated. The volumes average about 450 octavo pages each and each History includes from 1 to 12 volumes at 60 cents per volume, cloth; or $1.00, half leather. Guizot's History of France 8 volumes, Menzel's Germany 4, Green's England 4, Hawthorne's U. S. 3, Prescott's Mexico 2, Prescott's Peru 2, Rombard's Russia 2, Wilberforce's Spain 1, Abbott's Austria 1, Abbott's Italy 1, Clark's Turkey 1, McCan's Egypt 1, Boulger's China 1, Dickson's Japan 1, Wheeler's India 2, Scott's Scotland 2, Kitto's Palestine 1, Grattan's Holland 1, Hawthorne's Spanish America 1, Theband's Ireland 1, Sorensen's Norway 1, Nilssen's Sweeden 1, Gibbon's Rome 6 Grote's Greece 12. On receipt of price we ship prepaid. We also give the address of the prize winner.

Write to-day or cut this out. Address,
UNIQUE ADVERTISING CO.,
301 W. Monroe St. Chicago, Ills.

Missionary.

The Ninety and Nine.

There are in round numbers 100,000,000 of people on the North American Continent. Of these there are 1,000,000 who professedly take the Bible alone as their rule of faith and practice; that is, in every 100 persons on the continent there is just one who is qualified to lead the remainder into the pure light of the gospel. Every one of us Disciples of Christ, then, has 99 other persons entirely dependent upon him for a knowledge of Bible truth. Unless I save my 99 Americans there is absolutely no one to whom they can turn, for all my brethren are busy with their own 99s. This is a case where one is "in the shelter of the fold," while ninety and nine are "on the hills away," and these ninety and nine are all Americans.

The world depends upon America for its Christianizing influences. We are taking the place of Great Britain as the world's supply station for manufactured articles, and the world is beginning to look to us for teaching in the science of government. Some thousands of Japanese and Chinese students are now studying in our universities and colleges. These nations will take their religion from the same country as gives them these more material blessings. When will we be fully qualified to teach them? Only when I (each individual Disciple) have converted my 99 Americans. At present I can do one man's work in converting the Chinese. By converting my 99 Americans I multiply my converting power in China by 100. The ends of the earth are coming to America, and America is going to the ends of the earth. Is it to be a Christian America.

We are sending more beer than Bibles to the Phillipines. Christianize America and the overflow of beer will cease. "Save American for the world's sake."

The government can foster our political and commercial interests abroad. Although all of these are based upon our religion it dare not spend one cent to establish our religion either at home or abroad. This interest, the most important of all, upon which the whole governmental fabric rests, depends entirely upon the liberality of the churches. Oh, Christians! for the world's sake save America. ALEX. McMILLAN.

Grand Rapids, Mich.

A Grand Monument.

In 1885 the Missouri Christian Missionary Society came into possession of $500, left by Sister Newell, of Paris, Mo., in her will, for state missions. The state mission board discussed the matter for some time as to which was better, to loan out the money and use the interest only, or use the whole amount in building up a congregation. The latter course was finally decided upon and Bowling Green, Mo., was named as the mission. It is now fifteen years since this mission was fostered by our state mission board. The results of this Home Mission work are as follows: A good $4,000 house of worship, pastoral work for all these years, several hundred added to the Church of God, a strong, active congregation in the community, and last, and possibly best, over $100 per annum contributed to our missionary work.

This is a grand monument to Sister Newell's love and devotion to the cause of Christ, and indicates the great work that a small amount of money will do in the Home Mission field. Had this money been put out at interest it would have yielded about $35 per annum with good management. As it is it has yielded over $100 per annum to our various missionary enterprises, besides giving us a strong, active congregation with a splendid influence.

Next Lord's day, the first in May, should reveal many gifts that would duplicate the above. Many strong churches can give $500 and some individuals could easily erect a grand monument, like this good sister hath done, that will be imperishable and as eternal as the love of God. The redeemed souls around the throne of our Father will bless and increase the joys of the missionary giver forevermore. G. A. HOFFMANN.

The A. C. M. S. in Michigan.

Two years ago Michigan was doing nothing, and the brethren were badly discouraged. The A. C. M. S. granted our state board $250. This enabled us to get upon our feet and pay off our debts in a little over a year, by employing a secretary to act as general adviser to the churches and help them to raise their missionary money. Now we employ two evangelists who are meeting with splendid success. We are strengthening the weak churches and planting new ones. We now have about 9,400 Disciples in the state and are increasing by at least 500 per year. A recent grant of $200 by the A. C. M. S. to our church at Mt. Pleasant will shortly put our work in the front rank in that educational center.

Earnest appeals to help establish the cause are now coming to us from all over the state. We must soon enter the Northern Peninsula. The great mining regions there are waiting for us, and we can accomplish much by even a small effort in that section.

Every dollar disbursed by the A. C. M. S. in Michigan will call forth at least five dollars on the ground. Many churches can be established with but a little assistance.

May the Lord put it in the hearts of the brethren to come to the assistance of Michigan and other states like her, according to the measure of their ability. ALEX. McMILLAN, Cor. Sec.

Saved.

The property of West Creighton Ave. Church of Christ, Ft. Wayne, Ind., has bean saved.

Our prayers have been answered and God has crowned our efforts with success. The members of the church have worked hard and sacrificed nobly, and God through his people has done the rest, thus teaching them that no labor in the Lord is in vain. Our people here have been made to realize the real presence of God in the work as never before. As pastor and people our hearts go out in gratitude and love to God for his goodness to us, and to him we give the praise, honor and glory.

Of the total amount, with interest for five months, amounting to $7,200, we still lack $6,500, but settlement has been made, the mortgage lifted and the debts paid.

How it was done: The church at home raised $3,122; the fifth district, $441; the state, $600; Church Extension, $3,000, by a five-year loan.

In this paper we want to express our thanks to all who have so generously helped us through the unequal struggle. And we hope and pray that in the year to come the church may prove itself worthy of the effort which it has cost, and as it remains to the cause of the plain, simple gospel, we trust it will prove a great power for good and truth.

As promised in the beginning of our efforts, we are arranging to publish the details of saving the church, in our state paper, and a copy will be sent to those who helped us in this matter.

ZACH A. HARRIS.

"IN HIS STEPS,"
"Robert Hardy's Seven Days," "Titus," "Pillar of Fire," Drummond's "Pax Vobiscum," "Greatest Thing, etc.," "Self Help," "Ruby," "Work and Wait," "Throne of David," 2 for 10cts., 6 for 27cts. "Manliness of Christ," "Crown of Wild Olives," "Dreams," "Mornings in Florence," 14cts. each. Catalog, 2cts. H. E. Erwin & Co., Little Rock, Ark.

Splendid Helpers.

The collection for Home Missions is one of the most important that can come to the church in the course of the year, and it is utterly impossible that we give the matter too much attention.

The record of Missouri churches on this great enterprise of the church has not been at all what it ought to be, only 133 churches giving at all for this work last year. It will be our shame if this is not largely increased this year. Certainly the church cannot any longer plead that it is necessarily ignorant of the largeness and importance of this work.

Our indefatigable corresponding secretary, B. L. Smith, has never before made such intelligent effort to push Home Missions to the front; then we have, in the person of Bro. M. J. Nicoson, one of the best of men to present this work especially to our Missouri churches. But above all our papers, the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST and the Register-Review, have given of their pages unstintedly to the furtherance of this great work. Last week each made its issue a Home Mission number. These mighty engines for the dissemination of truth cannot be commended too highly for their enterprise in thus helping on this work. If the preachers now will be as thorough and as efficient as our papers, the collection will be worthy of our numbers and wealth. We have the numbers, we have the wealth; now let us have the sacrifice, the consecration, and the result will be one of which our people in Missouri can be proud.

T. A. ABBOTT.

An Excellent Number.

The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is to be congratulated upon its excellent home missionary number. Such issues do great good. Our brotherhood is just beginning to awaken to the great need of American missions and to appreciate how irresistible are its appeals.

One of the best ways to catch the home missionary spirit is to study the lives and work of our pioneers. The account of Mr. Campbell's American missionary journeys reads like the Pauline travels. Through New York and New England, as far East as Boston; through Virginia and South Carolina, as far South as New Orleans; through Ohio, Indiana and the West to the Mississippi; preaching and lecturing tours that in those days of tedious transportation occupied weeks and months, and required a constitution of iron and the zeal possessed only by a true missionary of the gospel. Mr. Campbell and his brethren in the ministry were our first and greatest home missionary heroes, establishing churches everywhere at great personal cost and much arduous service.

The American Society is pleading that their heroic spirit and wise foresight must be perpetual in the church to-day; that what they did for Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Missouri and Kentucky we must now do for the great West, the emancipated South and the crowded city. The churches that possess this spirit will be heard from Sunday, May 6. J. E. LYNN.

Springfield, Ill.

For Foreign Missions.

Comparing the recipts for Foreign Missions for the week ending April 26, with the corresponding week, 1899, shows the following:

	1899	1900	Gain
No. Contrib. Churches	157	184	27
" " Sunday-schools	4	14	10
" " C. E. Societies	7	15	8
" " Indiv. Offerings	11	36	27
Amount	$2,781.68	$3,179,71	$398.03

Send to F. M. RAINS, Treas.
Box 884, Cincinnati, O.

Evangelistic.

UTAH.

Salt Lake City, April 17.—Seven added here since last report; one by baptism.—W. H. BAGBY.

INDIANA.

Greencastle, April 26.—One more added at Cayuga last Lord's day; six at Whitesville since last report.—L. V. BARBRE.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Beaver, April 23.—Twelve additions; 10 by baptism, one by letter, one by statement. Work prospering.—Z. E. BATES, pastor.

NEBRASKA.

Plattsmouth, April 23.—Large audiences yesterday and five additions at the morning service; two from the Baptists.—R. M. DUNGAN.

WASHINGTON.

Farmington, April 17.—We began here two weeks ago; 21 additions to date. House crowded, interest good.—STIVERS AND WEBB AND WIFE, evangelists.

TENNESSEE.

Nashville, April 25.—H. L. Calhoun recently conducted a very successful meeting at the Woodland Street Church, this city. Twenty were added to the congregation. Bro. Calhoun spoke also for the F. M. C. A. while here.—W. H. SHEFFER.

CUBA.

Havana, April 16.—We organized a Lord's day school yesterday in our home; 27 were enrolled, with which to begin. On April 8th we baptized five in the ocean's edge; one a sargent in the army. Our work is hopeful, pray for us.—LOWELL C. MCPHERSON.

TEXAS.

Whitesboro, April 16.—Wife and I have been ina meeting here about two weeks, with one addition to date. This church has been without a preacher for several months. Our cause here has suffered some from various causes. We hope to be able to help the Disciples here get into better shape, and may continue the work at this point for a year or longer.—FREDERICK F. WYATT.

FLORIDA.

Jacksonville, April 23.—One addition to the Adams Street Christian Church at our regular services yesterday. Audiences both morning and evenihg among the largest we have had since our organization. This new church is a united and devoted band. We are having additions nearly every week. The Easter and Home Mission numbers of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST were gems.—T. H. BLENUS, pastor.

MONTANA.

Deerlodge, April 24.—Came here from Ontario, Canada in February. Have had five confessions and baptisms at regular services. Good audiences and large Sunday-school attendance. Please report five additions here.—E. S. CRAWFORD, pastor.

Whitehall, April 24.—I have spent six weeks in Jefferson Valley and have provided for the support of a regular minister. Bro. B. L. Kline, of Hampton, Iowa, is here to take the work and I am showing him over the field. Three young ladies made the good confession at Whitehall. I will begin at Florence May 6th.—R. E. DUNLAP.

ILLINOIS.

Princeton, April 23.—Four additions to the church here yesterday. Last week Princeton honored itself by electing a temperance alderman, the first time for 22 years.—J. G. WAGGONER.

Sullivan, April 23.—Four were baptized yesterday, and there will be four more next week. We have contracted for an elegant pipe organ.—E. W. BRICKERT.

Jacksonville, April 23.—Geo. L. Smith, pastor of this church, preached two "orthodox" sermons to two great congregations yesterday. There was one adult addition.—A. C. ROACH, associate pastor.

Windsor, April 24.—There were two baptized at Arthur, at the regular appointment April 8, also two baptized Sunday, April 22, at Humbolt, and two confessions Tuesday night, who will be baptized at my next regular appointment. The churches at Arthur and Humbolt are doing excellent work, and we hope for good results the coming year.—A. H. HARRELL, pastor.

COLORADO.

Denver.—There have been additions to the Central Church of Denver every Sunday this year except one. Forty additions in less than four months. Twelve lodges of Odd-Fellows attended services last Lord's day. Our collection was $140. A few weeks ago a Presbyterian gentleman gave us $100 toward an individual communion set. Friends added $75 more and we now have a beautiful table and communion set. The gallery has been filled every Sunday evening for several weeks.

KANSAS.

Clay Center, April 23.—Easter program was well rendered. Contribution taken for Orphans' Home, 17 were added to our membership, 13 at the morning service and four in the evening; two confessions. The newly organized C. E. is increasing in numbers and spiritual power.—J. M. HARRIS.

Smith Center, April 20.—Just closed an 18 days' meeting at Elk, this state, with 24 additions. Both the superintendent and assistant of the M. E. S. S. came in during the meet. This church will co-operate with Elmdale, 10 miles distant, in employing a pastor. They can pay about $600 per year to the right man. Those wanting to locate write to E. V. Allen, Elmdale, Kan.—MILO G. CUMMINGS.

IOWA.

Weldon, April 23.—Four added Lord's day; a net gain of seven in April. Two were baptized in the evening. A very pretty deferred Easter exercise by the Junior Endeavorers was rendered in the evening, the house being packed.—I. W. CAMERON, pastor.

Murray, April 23.—Held a 12 days' meeting at Hopeville Church recently, with 10 conversions. Work here is making good progress. Workmen are painting church this week. Good Orphans' Home offering yesterday.—W. W. WHARTON.

Schaller, April 23.—Two confession; one by letter and one by statement since last report. We paid our respects to state work the first Lord's day in April, and took by far the largest offering ever made by this congregation to that work. The church has kindly granted the pastor and his family a vacation of a month, which they will use about July in a trip through Minnesota and Wisconsin, visiting relatives and friends.—E. M. MILLER, pastor.

Keokuk, April 23.—Three conversions at regular service yesterday at Golden's Point, Ill.—W. W. RUMSEY.

Mt. Ayr, April 23.—Our regular service yesterday resulted in three additions; one from Methodists, one by letter and one confession. Had postponed Easter service in evening by Junior Band. Good audience, good offering. We will improve our house of worship some this spring.—L. C. SWAN, pastor.

MISSOURI.

Glasgow.—The meeting in which E. M. Smith, of Centralia, assisted in at this place resulted in 12 addition; seven confessions.—K. W. WHITE, pastor.

Nevada, April 23.—Another confession at Richlands yesterday. Preparations are being made for Children's Day at this church the last Sunday in May.—S. MAGEE.

Bowling Green, April 23.—Three confessions at our regular services yesterday. I begin a meeting with the Ashley congregation Thursday evening, to continue over the first Lord's day in May.—S. WALLACE MARR

Grant City, April 23.—One confession here yesterday, an excellent young man. One addition from the Freewill Baptists Thursday evening at prayer meeting.—W. H. HARRIS.

Kirksville, April 26.—I have just returned from Springfield, where I assisted in a short meeting, which resulted in 65 additions to the church; over 50 of them by confession and baptism. Bro. D. W. Moore, the pastor, is doing a great work in that city.—H. A. NORTHCUTT.

Moberly, April 23.—We are having large congregations at the Central Church and have had 13 accessions the last three Sundays. There were eight confessions at yesterday's service. The work starts out auspiciously and the prospect for future success is flattering.—SAMUEL B. MOORE.

Springfield, April 28.—We have had another glorious meeting with 65 additions; 55 baptisms. Will have a public reception next Wednesday to receive them into the fellowship of the church.—D. W. MOORE.

IF YOU HAVE

Rheumatism

and drugs and doctors fail to cure you write to me, and I will send you free a trial package of a simple remedy, which cured me and thousands of others, among them cases of over 50 years' standing. This is no humbug or deception but an honest remedy that you can test without spending a cent. It recently cured a lady who had been an invalid for 52 years. Address

JOHN A. SMITH, 627 Germania Bldg., Milwaukee, Wis

Church, Peal and Chime Bells, Best Metal.
BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY,
THE E.W. VAN DUZEN CO. Cincinnati, O.

Largest Foundry on Earth making
CHURCH BELLS CHIMES & PEALS
Purest copper and tin only. Terms, etc., free.
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, Baltimore, Md.

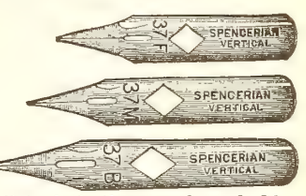
BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

"LIFE OF MOODY." Cloth, 358 Pages. 25 Cents, postpaid, of C. F. HOWARD. Windfall, Ind.
"DAILY BREAD." Cloth, 192 Pages 25 Cents, postpaid, of C. F. HOWARD, Windfall, Ind.
VEST-POCKET DICTIONARY, etc. Morocco, Gold Edges, Alphabetic, 194 Pages. 25 Cents, postpaid, of C. F. HOWARD, Windfall, Ind.
(Agents' Library.)

The Magic Darner

is a household necessity; mends any garment by weaving to match original warp; marvellous.
By Mail, 35 cents.
AGENTS WANTED—CITY AND COUNTRY—MANY QUICK SELLERS. Chas. H. Till, 207a Lake Street, Chicago.

Spencerian Pens
New Series No. 37.
See That Hole?



Insert a pencil to jerk the pen from holder. Prevents ink flowing back and soiling fingers. Samples on receipt of return postage. Ask for 37.
SPENCERIAN PEN CO., New York, N. Y.

Overcome Constipation

before you can expect to have good health. The thirty feet of intestines in the human body need careful attention, and thorough, but not violent, cleansing to insure health. All the impurities and disease germs are easily expelled by using

Dr. Peter's Blood Vitalizer

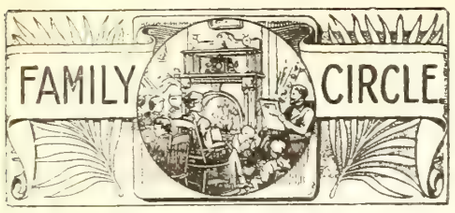
—Endorsed by four generations.

It is the discovery of an old German physician—has been in use for over a century and while it cleanses and tones the blood it invigorates and builds up the entire system.

No Drug-Store medicine; is sold only by regular Vitalizer agents.

Persons living where there are no agents for Dr. Peter's Blood Vitalizer can, by sending $2.00, obtain twelve 35-cent trial bottles direct from the proprietor. This offer can be obtained only once by the same person.

Write to DR. PETER FAHRNEY,
112-114 South Hoyne Ave., Chicago.



The Lost Emigrants.

BY R. H. JOHNSON.

CHAPTER XXVII.

As may be imagined, the departure of Bird and his party was a great relief to the remaining islanders. We had been kept in a state of constant worry and apprehension almost from the day of setting foot on the soil. The mysterious thieving had been a source of superstitious alarm, and the ruffian gang had been a perpetual cause of irritation, of destruction of property, and a menace to the lives of the colonists. All this was now happily over and we, relieved of a mighty incubus, were light-hearted and thankful.

Our emotions wisely taking the direction of a thanksgiving service, we devoutly rendered praise to a merciful Providence for our deliverance and as earnestly prayed for those who had so wickedly and defiantly abandoned us and gone out into the wide sea.

To me, who had long been a prey to suspense and fear, the exodus of these men was a wonderful relief, and the island was at once transformed from a prison to a paradise, and my heart was light and sang for joy under its azure skies.

One thing, however, in my calmer moments, oppressed me with gloomy forebodings. Mrs. Gray, in the long and hazardous journey to the mountain during Tony's illness, and in many another mission of mercy and helpfulness, had permitted her tender-hearted zeal to overtax her physical powers, which at best were incapable of great resistance. And now when, with the autumnal glow upon the island, we had hoped for a change for the better, she bade fair to fade with the fading leaves.

Tony, now fully recovered from the injury of the freshet, with a soulful gratitude to her who had been to him a ministering angel, ever upon the alert, lost no opportunity to minister to her wants. And it is needless to say that my pent-up emotions found vent in deeds of love and prayer and tears. All that love and sympathy could do was done. Yet, alas! her sweet life was slowly, surely passing away.

One morning, as I observed her growing feebleness, I was so oppressed with the sense of bereavement evidently near, when my second mother, the last earthly friend to whom I could reveal my secret thoughts and sorrows, should pass away, that I could not restrain my tears. Just then Dr. Andral came in to see his patient. He gave me a cheerful "Good morning!" then went to Mrs. Gray, made an examination, dealt out some medicine, and taking his hat, beckoned me to the door and said: "Mrs. Gray is not so well to-day." Then, surprised at the welling tears that his words, so in line with my own forebodings, had brought, he said: "You have my fullest sympathy, Miss Winston, in the probable coming of a great grief; but there is one upon this island who would gladly do everything in his power to comfort you."

I thought of dear, generous Jack Burton. I should ever hold him in the highest esteem, but that was all. Then, what right had the Doctor to make such a suggestion, and at such a time, when Jack had never spoken.

And somewhat curtly I said: "There is no one upon this island shall ever take her place in my heart." The Doctor seemed surprised, and slowly turned and walked way.

One day, when Mrs. Mrs. Gray was stronger and I more hopeful than usual, she beckoning me to a seat by the bedside said: "Dorothea, my daughter, do not be distressed that I am going away. Not even this sea-girt home, now so peaceful, with its bright sunshine and birds and flowers and loving friends is half so lovely as the beautiful home on the far-away shore. I love the dear people here with their unity of heart and soul and their sweet peace.

"Never before have I enjoyed the communion of saints as on this island, and it is because they are one, even as our dying Savior prayed.

"But beyond are beloved kindred and dear friends and my ineffably precious Redeemer, who beckon me to the other shore.

"Dorothea, the years fall lightly upon thy head. Some day Providence will open a way for thee to revisit thy native land. I charge thee to go, if but for a season, to tell the people the story of this colony, to the end that they, like us, may discard the wisdom of men with the errors and schisms that have grown through ages of theological speculation, and return to the simplicity of the ancient gospel; for 'the foolishnes of God is wiser than men.' If they will but prayerfully study the Bible without bigotry or prejudice, it will bring them to the truth, and they will be one, even as Jesus prayed; and they will be blessed with an hundredfold of religious strength and growth, and the world that now lieth in darkness will believe.

"And now, Dorothea—

> 'I hear a voice you cannot hear,
> Which says I must not stay;
> I see a hand you cannot see,
> Which beckons me away.'

"Stay thy rising tears. Think of me only going before to that beautiful land where the redeemed shall go in with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads and sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

"Be of good comfort, my daughter. Thee will be somewhat lonely for a season, but my heart tells me that Guy Andral would comfort thee. He is shy of thee and thee of him; but I think he loves thee and he is a good man and true, and the love of a good man is more precious than gold. He loves thee, and I think thee loves him, though thy heart has not yet even in secret confessed it. When I am gone, I trust he will comfort thee."

Pitying her in her erroneous impressions, and kissing her pale, sweet face, I said with brimming eyes: "My dear, dear mother; may it be many days before I am deprived of thy comfort. And, whatever may come, be assured that I neither need nor shall ever seek the comfort of Dr. Andral."

And now passed days of which I took no reckoning. Days of peace and calmness deep as the unruffled sea to her whose spirit lingered on the borderland. Poor Tony silently moved about the house like a troubled spirit, noiselessly appearing at her bedside at any hour, by day or night, gazing wistfully into the face lit up as by the dawn of the eternal morn, and then departing as silently as he came. Thus passed day after day, apparently without pain and with a serenity which comes only to one whose soul is stayed on God. At last the great change came. With tearful eyes we surrounded the dying bed, felt the feeble clasp of the dying hand, listened to the dying benediction, and then her face kindled with a brightness as of a light that is fairer than day, and she murmured: "Oh joy, they come! Farewell; home, blessed home!" The light faded and she was asleep to waken on the eternal shore.

In sorrow and in tears, yet with a joyous hopefulness, we laid her beloved form away on the green hillside, under the great trees, where the birds sing amid the branches and the flowers bloom and the ceaseless thunder of the deep sea goes up a mighty anthem to God.

Scarcely had I returned to the desolate home after the funeral when Jack Burton came to the door with the suggestion that a walk in the balmy air would do me good, after being so long pent up within doors.

Seizing my hat, we went on a long stroll down the cliff, and then on the hard beaten sands by the sea. There was a refreshing tonic in the salt sea air to my overtaxed nerves; but not half so much as in the generous sympathy and cheerful conversation of Jack.

Without the slightest appearance of seeking to cheer my depressed spirits, his kindly nature comforted and stimulated, so that the world did not look nearly so dark nor hopeless as it had an hour before, and there came to me a sense of exaltation in the mem-

Choose a Carriage

With the help of our catalogue. It offers a wider choice of vehicles, harness, robes, blankets and horse accessories than dealers carry in stock, at prices lower than any dealer can quote. We are carriage and harness makers on a big scale, with every facility for turning out the best work at the least cost.

You Save the Difference between the maker's and the dealer's price when you buy from us. Money returned and freight paid both ways if you are not satisfied with your purchase. Write for the catalogue—it's free.

THE COLUMBUS CARRIAGE & HARNESS CO., Columbus, Ohio.

No. 2016 Carriage. Price $98.00.

ory of her whose triumphant death had bereaved me, and in the thought of the many friends still left me. And then I found myself contemplating Jack and realizing as never before what a grand, good fellow he was, and I found comfort in the thought of the great privilege to have such a person as a friend—as a dear friend. But a vision came between him and me and I mentally said: 'Yes, as a friend—that is all.'

Bidding Jack adieu at the gate I stepped to the door. It was flung open and I fell into the arms of Maria Clarkson, and heard with a bounding heart her words: "It's all arranged and I have been asked to make my home with you and be your companion and sister."

I afterwards learned that Mrs. Gray, whose great heart could never overlook the smallest detail in what entered into the comfort of others, had requested her husband to make this arrangement after her funeral.

Many and pleasant were the days that followed in companionship with Maria. She was a dear, unselfish woman, and we were the most intimate of friends and confidants on every subject but one. We never divulged, or in the slightest manner hinted at our sentiments—if any we had other than ordinary friendship—toward Jack Burton and Dr. Andral.

Reverie.

J. ORVILLE WALTON.

How echoes from the distant hills of time
Hold converse with my soul, and I a word
Hear, wafted to me over Lethe's tide,
Which 'scaped like fledgelings from the parent bird,
Long years ago, and, like them, vanished, seemed Forever, till its tones return and tell
The story of a heart's fond hopes and fears
It once received by accent's potent spell.

Canton, Mo.

A Little Child Shall Lead Them.

We are aware that the little child is king or queen of the home. The smaller the child, the more true this statement. All bow down to the little child. His wants are the first to be looked after. When he smiles the whole family smiles. When he is sick, the whole family is eager to watch and help. When he dies, it seems like the light has gone out of the home. How true it is that "a little child shall lead them." How important it is that this little child shall be well trained in the principles of morality. There is no question but what the greatest agency for good to-day in the training of these children is the Sunday-school; and the great agency that keeps the Sunday-school ever to the front and trains it, is the State and International Sunday-school Convention system, of which our state is a part. No agency has done so much for our Sunday-schools as this. It is continent wide, and includes every state, territory and province. Mr. B. F. Jacobs, Atwood Building, Chicago, is the chairman of the International Executive Committee.

For Sleeplessness
Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. PATRICK BOOTH, Oxford, N. C., says: "It acts admirably in insomnia, especially of old people and convalescents."

The Winged Seed.

MRS. P. R. GIBSON.

A winged seed from a far mountain height
Was wafted out upon the summer air;
Purpose or power it had not in its flight;
It only drifted any—everywhere.

But gathering clouds around the mountain's brow
Threw their dark shadows on the vale beneath,
The winged seed, storm-tossed, fell far below,
Bruised, beaten down beneath the cold, gray earth.

But lo, a miracle! The bursting sod,
Kissed by the sun's warm ray, responsive gave
Again to life this winged thought of God—
A flower to bloom above its own dark grave.

So shall it be, tho' thine own winged thought
Shall aimless seem; if freighted with a seed
Of pure desire, by holy impulse wrought,
It yet shall bloom, somewhere, in kindly deed.

St. Louis, Mo.

Mother's House.

How many happy thoughts are called up by those two beautiful words!

Is there—can there be any place so full of pleasant nooks, beneath the waving palms of sunny isles, or in the chilling shadows of icy mountains?

Our heart turns with unchangeable love and longing to the dear old home which has sheltered us in childhood.

Kind friends may beckon us to newer scenes, and loving hearts may bind us fast to pleasant homes; but we are not satisfied with them alone, for there is one place more fair and lovely than them all, and that is the beloved mother's house.

Here we have watched life come and go.

Here we have folded still, cold hands over hearts as still, that once beat full of love for us.

Here we have welcomed brothers and sisters into life, watched for the first lisping words from baby-lips, guided the tottering baby-feet from helplessness to manhood, and here we have watched with aching hearts to see the dear ones turn from the home nest out into a world which has proved but a snare and a tempation to many wandering feet, and here we gather strength to take up our lives again and go on patiently unto the end.

But though the world calls us and we may find friends good and true, we turn to the dear old home when troubles come, for help and comfort.—The Roller Monthly.

A Cure for Wounds.

The following method of treating wounds where blood poisoning is threatened was recently published in the Chicago Record. Mrs. Darling, who describes the treatment, is well known in Painsville:

"I venture to ask you to publish the following simple but never-failing cure for wounds made by rusty nails, bites of angry animals, felons, wounds made by fireworks, inflamed and poisoned flesh wounds generally. I have saved several lives of persons and also of horses from wounds in the feet and from stepping on rusty nails, and one man from death from the bite of an angry cat, where blood poisoning threatened a quick death. It is an old Indian remedy, known in our family for several generations, and used so successfully that we have never had a felon or sore develop, as we used the cure in time. I am very anxious to have the remedy known; I wish it might reach every family in the land. Every time I hear of a death from lockjaw, caused by rusty nails, I feel guilty in not trying to tell people this simple and sure cure. Here is the remedy:

"Put equal parts of good, fresh wood ashes and hot water in a pail or pan large enough to more than cover the hand or foot hurt. Keep it in some time; when the water cools, put fresh water in as hot as can comfortably be used, sometimes renewing hot water and ashes both. After a short time a soothing sense of relief from pain will come, but keep the treatment going on until the pain is soothed, the inflammation gone and the pus comes from the would and the flesh is white and wrinkled as from hot suds.

"We keep a bag of good wood ashes in our home for times of need."

DRUNKENNESS CURED.

An eminent St. Louis physician has given a positive answer to the oft asked question, is drunkenness a disease, or is it simply a temptation that cannot be resisted by a vast number of the human race? The physician in question is Dr. Ozias Paquin, who for years has been a practicing physician in the City of St. Louis. He has answered this question by taking five of the worst drunkards that could be found and cured them of all further appetite for intoxicating drinks. The five cases were all beyond middle age and they had sunk into the deepest pit of drunkenness, with the odor of drink about them so obnoxious that it was almost impossible to stand within speaking distance. He not only cured them of all desire for intoxicating drink, but at the same time placed upon their cheek the flush of health and into their eyes the light of happiness, and took from their person the odor of whiskey. It was almost a miracle, for he had raised five cases from degradation into the sunshine of health and happiness. Dr. Paquin has cured hundreds of patients who were relapses from other treatments, and in every instance he cured these patients, and they have remained cured for months and years. It can therefore be said that the Paquin Treatment is a permanent cure, and not a temporary one, for the patient never relapses to his former condition. We know of no more humane work being done at the present time than that which Dr. Paquin is doing, and it is the duty of every reader to assist Dr. Ozias Paquin in his noble work, and if any reader has brother, sister, husband, father or friend in whose system lurks the disease of drunkenness, he should at once send their name to Dr. Paquin or see that they either visit or place themselves in communication with the Ozias Paquin Immune Co., Suite 1113 Chemical Bldg., St. Louis. The reader that does this will certainly be doing a christian act, for no matter how hopeless the case may seem, and no matter how many other treatments have unsuccessfully been tried, the method known as Ozias Paquin Treatment will perfect a cure, dispelling all desire for drink, and at the same time will place the constitution in a robust and healthy condition.

"Keep to the Right."

"Keep to the right," is the law of the road—
Make it a law of your moral code;
In whatso'er you determine to do,
Follow the road of the Good and True;
Follow and fear not by day and by night,
Uphill or downhill, "keep to the right."
Doubt will assail you, temptation will woo—
"Keep to the right," for the right is the true;
Doubt is a traitor, temptation a shame;
A heart that is honest, a life without blame,
Will rank you far higher, in worth and renown,
Then the grandest of kings, with his sceptre and crown.

"Keep to the right," in the journey of life,
There is crowding and jostling, trouble and strife;
The weak will succumb to the bold and the strong,
And many go under and many go wrong;
He will acquit himself best in the fight
Who shirks not his duty, and "keeps to the right."

"Keep to the right," and the right will keep you
In touch and accord with the Good and True;
These are the best things in life, after all;
They make it worth living, whatever befall,
And Death has no terrors, when he comes in sight,
For the man who determines to "keep to the right."

—Charles W. Hubner.

VITALITY low, debilitated or exhausted, cured by Dr. Kline's Invigorating Tonic. FREE $1. Trial Bottle containing 2 weeks' treatment. Dr. Kline's Institute, 931 Arch Street, Philadelphia. Founded 1871.

The Poet and His Song.

A song is but a little thing,
And yet what joy it is to sing!
In hours of toil it gives me zest,
And when at eve I long for rest;
When cows come home along the bars,
And in the fold I hear the bell,
As Night, the shepherd, herds his stars,
I sing my song, and all is well.

There are no ears to hear my lays,
No lips to lift a word of praise,
But still, with faith unfaltering,
I live and laugh and love and sing.
What matters yon unheeding throng?
They cannot feel my spirit's spell.
Since life is sweet and love is long,
I sing my song and all is well.

My days are never days of ease;
I till my ground and prune my trees.
When ripened gold is all the plain,
I put my sickle to the grain.
I labor hard, and toil and sweat,
While others dream within the dell;
But even while my brow is wet,
I sing my song, and all is well.

Sometimes the sun, unkindly hot,
My garden makes a desert spot;
Sometimes a blight upon the tree
Takes all my fruit away from me;
And then with throes of bitter pain
Rebellious passions rise and swell;
But—life is more than fruit or grain,
And so I sing, and all is well.

—Paul Laurence Dunbar, "The Robert Burns of the Negro Race," in The Watchword.

The Alps.

The Alps comprise about 180 mountains, from 4,000 to 15,732 feet high, the latter being the height of Mont Blanc, the highest spot in Europe. The summit is a sharp ridge, like the roof of a house, consisting of nearly vertical granite rocks. The ascent requires 2 days, 6 or 8 guides are required, and each guide is paid 100 francs ($20). It was ascended by two natives, Jacques Belmat and Dr. Packard, Aug. 8, 1786 at 6 A. M. They staid up 30 minutes with the thermometer 14 degrees below the freezing point. The provisions froze in their pockets; their faces were frost-bitten, lips swollen and their sight much weakened, but they soon recovered on their descent. De Saussure records in his ascent August 2, 1760, that the color of the sky was deep blue; the stars were visible in the shade, the barometer sunk to 16.08 inches (being 27.08 in Geneva); the thermometer was 26½ degrees, in the sun 29 degrees (being 87 degrees at Geneva). The thin air works the blood into a high fever, you feel as if you hardly touched the ground, and you can scarcely make yourself heard. A French woman, Mademoiselle d'Angeville, ascended in September, 1840, being dragged up the last 1,200 feet by guides, and crying out: "If I die carry me to the top." When there she made them lift her up that she might boast she had been higher then any man in Europe. The ascent of these awful solitudes is most perilous, owing to the narrow paths, tremendous ravines, icy barriers, precipices, etc. In many places the steps have to be cut in the ice, the party being tied to each other by ropes, so that if one slips he may be held up by the rest, and silence is enforced lest the noise of talking should dislodge the avalanches of the Aiguille du Midi. The view from the mountain is inexpressibly grand.

—Selected.

Women Who Should Never Marry.

The following is not proposed as a civil-service examination for prospective brides; probably most persons of that class would regard it as extremely uncivil, but it is a more profitable morsel to chew over than a wad of gum:

The woman who proudly declares that she cannot hem a pocket-handkerchief, never made up a bed in her life, and adds with a simper that she has "been in society ever since she was fifteen."

The woman who would rather nurse a pug dog than a baby.

The woman who thinks she can get $5,000 worth of style out of a $1,000 salary.

The woman who thinks that men are angels and demigods.

The woman who would rather die than wear a bonnet two seasons old.

The woman who thinks that the cook and nurse can keep house.

The woman who expects a declaration of love three times a day.

The woman who buys bric-a-brac for the parlor and borrows kitchen utensils from her neighbors.

The woman who wants things just because "other women" have them.

The woman who thinks she is an ornament to her sex if she wins a progressive eucher prize.—The Brotherhood Star.

The Law of Finding.

The law of finding is that the finder has a clear title against every one but the owner. The proprietor of a hotel or a shop has no right to demand the property or premises. Such proprietor may make regulations in regard to lost property which will bind their employes, but they cannot bind the public. The law of finding was declared by the King's Bench, over 100 years ago, in a case in which the facts were these:

A person found a wallet containing a sum of money on a shop floor. He handed the wallet and contents to the shopkeeper to be returned to the owner. After three years, during which the owner did not call for his property, the finder demanded the wallet and the money from the shopkeeper. The latter refused to deliver them up on the ground that they were found on the premises. The former then sued the shopkeeper, and it was held as above set forth, that against all the world but the owner the title of the finder is perfect. And the finder has been held to stand in place of the owner, so that he was permitted to prevail in an action against a person who found an article which the plaintiff had originally fouud, but subsequently lost. The police have no special rights in regard to articles lost, unless those rights are conferred by statute. Receivers of articles found are trustees for the owner or finder. They have no power in the absence of special statute to keep an article against the finder, any more than the finder has to retain an article against the owner.—Selected.

FITS Permanently Cured. No fits or nervousness after first day's use of Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. Send for FREE $2.00 trial bottle and treatise. DR. R. H. KLINE, Ltd., 931 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa

HEART DISEASE.

Some Facts Regarding the Rapid Increase of Heart Troubles.

Heart trouble, at least among the Americans, is certainly increasing, and while this may be largely due to the excitement and worry of American business life, it is more often the result of weak stomachs, of poor digestion.

Real organic disease is incurable; but not one case in a hundred of heart trouble is organic.

The close relation between heart trouble and poor digestion is because both organs are controlled by the same great nerves, the Sympathetic and the Pneumogastric.

In another way also the heart is affected by the form of poor digestion, which causes gas and fermentation from half digested food. There is a feeling of oppression and heaviness in the chest caused by pressure of the distended stomach on the heart and lungs, interfering with their action; hence arises palpitation and short breath.

Poor digestion poisons the blood, makes it thin and watery, which irritates and weakens the heart.

The most sensible treatment for heart trouble is to improve the digestion and to insure the prompt assimilation of food.

This can be done by the regular use after meals of some safe, pleasant and effective digestive preparation, like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which may be found in drug stores, and which contains valuable, harmless digestive elements in a pleasant, convenient form.

It is safe to say that the regular, persistent use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at meal time will cure any form of stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach.

My Prayer.

If there be some weaker one,
Give me strength to help him on;
If a blinder soul there be,
Let me guide him nearer Thee.
Make my mortal dreams come true
With the work I fain would do;
Clothe with life the weak intent,
Let me be the thing I meant;
Let me find in Thy employ
Peace that dearer is than joy;
Out of self to love be led,
And to heaven acclimated,
Until all things sweet and good
Seem my nature's habitude.

—Whittier.

"Fortune favors the brave." It is also favorable to those who purify their blood at this season by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

An All-Year Resort.

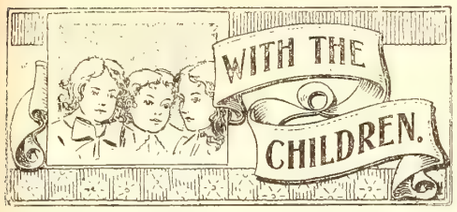
The Crescent Hotel, Eureka Springs, Ark. opens March 1, 1900. A most desirable, attractive and convenient resort for health and pleasure-seekers. Ideal climate, pure, sparkling water, best accommodations. Through Sleepers via Frisco Line. Write for particulars to Manager Hotel or to any representative of Frisco Line.

Daily Double Train Service to Portland,

Commencing April 22, Union Pacific Railroad Company, will run two daily trains from Chicago, Omaha, and Kansas City to Portland, Ore. These trains will be equipped with Buffet, Smoking, Library, and Dining Cars; Standard Sleepers, Ordinary Sleepers or Tourist Cars. Time from St. Louis to Portland via Omaha, 68 hours; from Chicago, 69 hours; from Omaha, 55 hours; from Kansas City, 68 hours. For particulars address E. L. Lomax, G. P. A., Omaha, or J. F. Aglar, Gen. Agt., 903 Century Building, St. Louis, Mo.

The Iron Mountain Shortens its Time to Texas.

Train No. 51 now leaves St. Louis 2:21 P. M. daily, shortens the time by several hours from St Louis to Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio Houston and Galveston. Through Pullman Buffet Sleeping Cars will be operated on this train from St. Louis to San Antonio, and reclining chair car service to Dallas and Fort Worth. A delightful feature of this train is the daylight ride along the Mississippi and through the beautiful Arcadia Valley. Time of other trains remain the same excepting train No. 57 for Delta, Columbus, Cairo and Shreveport which now leaves at 8:00 A. M.



The Advance Society.

J. BRECKENRIDGE ELLIS.

The Advance Society was organized for the benefit of all who wish to form the habit of good reading, yet who shall be allowed to choose their own books, just so they are histories, poems and books of the Bible. Thus our Honor List means something, and it is not easy to keep your name upon it. Now you must, in sending your reports, tell me what history and poetry you have read and how much of it. It is not enough to write: "Please put my name on the Honor List for the second quarter." You must send your report. After this I will put no one's name upon the list who does not comply with this rule. I have allowed names upon the list because I was sure they had read their quarter. But if it's too much trouble to tell me what you have read it's too much trouble to put you on the list. I have told you before to always do this, and I would make it plainer now if the English language was capable of helping me to do so. I have received a poem of 16 stanzas, "The Drunkard's Reform," with a request to publish it upon our page. The poem I have read with interest. But how can I put it on our page and leave any room for other people? I am very sorry about this, but if the author will send it to the editor's Family Circle, I have no doubt it will be received with joy. I understand they are looking for poems. Poetry takes up a lot of room because it has so many corners; and this page has no room for corners.

Laura Emery, Albia, Kan.: "I have made up my mind to join the Av. S. I will be nine on May 20." Arthur L. Patton, Amada, Mo.: "I joined March, 1899, and kept the rules faithfully for nine weeks, when I went to a show [I hope there was an elephant] and got home so late I forgot the Bible verse. [I've always heard Bibles and elephants don't go together.] I want to join again; I am 12." Lin Cartwright, Luther, Ia.: "I have decided to join. I would like to see the Red Box Clew in book form. My favorites are In His Steps and On the Rock. I am reading the Seven Churches of Asia." There are five in our family; all belong to the Christian Church. I would like to know about our badge and how to conduct a society. I am 13. One time when I wore 'dresses' I went to crawl through a barbed wire fence; I got caught on the barbs and just hung there and went to sleep." (This was a singular experience. I, too, have been caught on that kind of wire, and I, also, have "just hung there," but I did not go to sleep. Far from it. Our badge is red, white or blue, with "Av. S." worked on it in old-gold color. To organize a branch society, elect officers, as president, secretary, etc.; have quotations recited; read a chapter of a good story aloud—something none of the members have read; have speeches and music and debates and candy if you like—in short, anything to have a good time with a literary flavor about it. And once in a while a little picnic or stroll in the woods, with a big person along to tell you not to do this and not to do that, is a fine feature.)

Lila Dawson, Belton, Mo.: "I hardly know if my name should be on the Honor List, for the night my sister came home from college I was up very late. It was my habit to read my Bible verse before I went so bed, the last thing. Well, it was 12:15 when I read my verse that night. Papa and mamma say it would not be counted a mistake, for it was still night, because I hadn't gone to bed yet. But I wasn't sure. I thought I would let you act as judge. I do hope you will have the Red Box Clew published in book form, for I am anxious for a copy." Everett Bapp, Buffalo, Mo.: "I am reading the Footprints of Four Centuries for my history. I like the Red Box Clew very much. I can hardly wait for the next paper. I am glad Frank has found her mother, and I wish you would say something about Nance, that old woman with her nose." Stella Nichols, Stonefort, Ill.: "I am sorry to say I have not kept the rules this time. This winter I've read Shakespeare and also Dickens. I worship Uncle Tom's Cabin, and I think Lucile the best book published. I always like to draw and write, hoping I could succeed in both. Papa says it's bedtime, so I'll close." (I wish you great success in either of these arts; but I think both is a good deal to hope for.)

Florence Leavitt, Frankfort, S. D.: "When my grandma was three she stood watching her mother rinsing some clothes near a stream until she left the basket of clothes and went to the house. She told grandma to leave them alone, but as soon as she was out of sight grandma took them one by one and floated them down the stream. She was doing this to a large garment when she saw her mother coming. She started to run and fell into the water. She sank twice before her half-brother, who was near, could swim in and pull her out." (I am afraid Florence's grandma was a naughty little girl.) Cora Scribner, Billfry, Minn.: "Last Saturday we did not hold our meeting, but stayed with Hazel Pulver; she was sick. I think she will be able to come to our next meeting. We live in the country, and when it is stormy we cannot go to our meetings. We are reading the Red Box Clew in our meetings. We are going to have a picnic this summer in our grove. We are going to entertain all our friends. I think it will get more members." (A good plan. Nothing like a picnic to get new members.) Burleigh Cash, Pennville, Ind.: "This is my time to report, but I have been sick for two weeks and had to miss school and examinations. I am in the sixth year, and on account of missing I will not get promoted. I will begin new as soon as I am able." (Burleigh is one of our most faithful members, and I hope he is by this time able to go on with our work.)

CURED HER CANCER.

The Remarkable Cure of a Case that was Pronounced Hopeless. Dispels Cancer Without Pain.

Mrs. F. M. Wisner, a prominent lady of Forest, Lewis County, Washington, suffered for years with a cancer located almost in the eyeball; she tried everything without receiving benefit; her case was pronounced hopeless. Physicians stated that if her life were saved it would be a miracle, but that there was no earthly power that could save her eyesight. She was entirely cured without endangering either life or eyesight, and the cure was perfected without pain through the wonderful curative power of the combination of oils discovered by Dr. Bye. This remarkable remedial agent, which cures cancer, tumors, catarrh, piles, fistula, ulcers, eczema, and all skin and womb diseases, will go down into history as the most remarkable discovery of the age. For years it was thought a surgical operation was necessary to cure cancer. But in this glorious century, in which science has taken such rapid strides, it has been proven that a surgical operation will only relieve for a time, and the cancer will break forth again with greater pain and energy. Dr. Bye, the eminent physician of Kansas City, Mo., has discovered soothing, balmy oils that will positivly cure all cases of cancer, no matter where located or of how long standing, without the surgeon's knife or applying burning plasters. These soothing oils go directly to the root of the trouble and without pain remove this malignant affliction which is so dangerous and painful. Thousands of noble men and women throughout the country have sent words of gratitude and praise, stating that they owe their very life to this new discovery, which cured cancers physicians pronounced hopeless.

An illustrated book on cancers and a long list of testimonials, also much information on this grand discovery, will be sent any one writing to Dr. Bye, Room 109, 9th and Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

New Honor List: Mary Edna Long, Boydsville, Mo.; Maud Kelley (second quarter), Beardsley, Minn.; Nora Taylor, Manton, Cal.; D. H. McIntyre, Avalon, Mo.; Vera Davenport, Perry, Okla.; Julia Cox (sixth quarter), Cox, Mo.; Everett Bapp, (second quarter); Elmer C. Rinehart, Ridgeway, Mo., (second quarter); Lila Dawson; Melvin Ledden (third quarter), Ospur, Ill.; Harry Cash (sixth quarter), Pennville, Ind.; Ethel Taylor, Saybrook, Ill.; Florence Leavill (third quarter); Lola Cox (fifth quarter). I am not able to give all my good letters this week, but they will be printed later. The Red Box Clew will end in June.

Plattsburg, Mo.

Rest and Health to Mother and Child.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over FIFTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, with PERFECT SUCCESS. It SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHŒA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" and take no other kind. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Sunday - School.

W. F. RICHARDSON.

JESUS AT THE PHARISEE'S HOUSE.

The beautiful incident of our present lesson seems to have taken place shortly after the visit of the Baptist's disciples, and may have occurred in Nain, where the Master had just raised from the dead the son of the widow. Some think Capernaum was the place, while others, identifying the sinful woman of our lesson with Mary Magdalene, suppose the city to have been Magdala, located on the shore of the Sea of Galilee, between Tiberias and Capernaum. The place is uncertain. As to Mary Magdalene, the only ground for identifying her with this woman is the fact that she is first named immediately after this incident, among the women who followed Jesus from Galilee, and her after prominence might indicate that her deliverance by the Master was too notable an occurrence to be wholly omitted in the story of his life. Yet, there is no reason why she should be judged a sinful woman, unless we are to suppose that the possession of demons was but another name for moral depravity, and this has no support in the Scripture accounts of this form of affliction.

Jesus had been invited to dine at the house of a Pharisee, one of that self-righteous class whose zeal for form as against substance was so repugnant to the mind of the sincere and spiritual Teacher. He did not decline the invitation. He would not refuse to bring his message of truth and grace into any household, and counted it not waste to share his presence with even the hypocrite, if therby he might shame him into sincerity. Neither did he resent the scant courtesy with which Simon received him as a guest. The Pharisee could not bring himself to treat this peasant from Nazareth as an honored guest, whose feet should be bathed by his servant, whose head should receive the fragrant ointment, and on whose cheek should be pressed the kiss of welcome. It was honor enough to invite him, and further than this his reluctant respect would not go. He perhaps felt that he was conferring an honor, not receiving it, and doubted if, after all, he had not gone too far in asking Jesus to eat with him.

If such were his feelings, they were intensified by an incident that occurred while the dinner was in progress. After the captivity the Jews seemed to have copied from the Persians, Greeks and Romans the custom of reclining on couches at their meals. The table was set in a hollow square, around three sides of which were ranged the couches, the fourth side being left open that the servants might wait on the guests from within. Lying on the left side, supporting himself on his elbow, the guest would use his right hand to take food from the table. His feet would of course be at the outer end of the couch. The disciples were thus arranged about the table at the supper when Jesus washed their feet. It was while thus lying that the beloved disciple, John, laid his head upon the bosom of the Lord and asked who should betray him.

While the meal was in progress, there entered the room an unwelcome intruder. It was not so strange that a passer-by should make free to enter the door unbidden, for the customs of the Orient are unlike our own in this respect. But it was a serious offense that an abandoned woman, whose sinful life had marked her out for public scorn, should make free to come into a Pharisee's house, and in the presence of guests. The host would have harshly bidden her leave but for an act on her part, which so astounded him as to leave him without the power of utterance. Seeming to ignore the whole company, the woman hurried to the place where Jesus was reclining, and bent in an agony of tears over his feet. She had in her hand a small cruse of fragrant ointment, with which it was her evident purpose to anoint him. But her agitation was so great that she could scarcely open the cruse, and under the keen sense of her guilt, and perhaps the shame of the many eyes fixed upon her in contempt, she burst into tears so copious as to drench the feet of the Master. Her long hair fell in wild confusion about her face and neck, and gathering it in her hands she wiped dry the Master's feet. Forgetting herself in the tumult of emotions that surged through her soul, the poor woman bent lower still, until her lips touched the feet of the Master in repeated and tender kisses. When her confusion had somewhat subsided she poured over his feet the sweet ointment, whose fragrance filled the house. Then, standing erect, with bowed head, she silently wept, while the company looked on in amazement.

No more touching act of love was ever wrought by a sinful, repentant human heart. This woman had been hanging on the skirts of the crowd that ever pressed upon the steps of Jesus, and had heard with ever-increasing wonder and hope his tender appeals to holiness and trust. She had not dared to thrust her way into the midst lest she should meet with rude repulse. But perhaps his last sweet invitation had strengthened her resolution, and with the echo of his "come unto me all ye who labor and are heavily laden and I will give you rest" sounding in her ears, she had dared to bring her offering of penitential and grateful love. She could not pour the oil upon his head, as was customary, but she could find access to his feet—"those patient, tired, but never-resting feet which trod the dust of Palestine over in search of unhappy people whom he could comfort." When she found that he did not repel her, her grateful heart could not contain its joy and love, and what wonder that she kissed his feet—those beautiful feet, which brought unto her the tidings of peace, the news of salvation. Never was such anointing as that of this woman's tears. More fragrant were they to the Lord of life and love than rivers of oil or mountains of spices.

All this holy scene was wasted on the callous, selfish heart of the Pharisee. He was blind to the penitence and love, and saw only the social disgrace of a sinful woman's touch. In his heart he despised Jesus, and decided the question of his divine mission against him: "He is no prophet, or he would know what kind of a woman this is, and would have driven her from him." By a simple parable the Master rebukes his blindness and shows him that this poor woman, whom he has despised, is the object of divine grace, and that her conduct has been the result of a fervent love, such as only the pardoned sinner can experience. In contrast with her tender and worshipful ministry the cold neglect of the usual rites of hospitality on the part of the Pharisee reveals his utter lack of true respect for the Savior. No blessing waits for his empty heart. But to the overflowing soul of the poor penitent Jesus speaks in words of sweetest assurance: "Thy sins are forgiven. Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace." With what emotions of joy must she have heard those words of mercy and pardon. "Go into peace," was literally what Jesus said, and forth into a peace which the world could not give this poor creature passed—the peace which passed all understanding. "She felt like a grub to which in an instant God had given wings." Old things were passed away; behold, all things were become new. Life was suddenly transformed. Athwart the black and stormy sky of despair she saw the rainbow of hope stretching its radiant pathway.

"She sat and wept, and with her untressed hair
Still wiped the feet she was blessed to touch;
And he wiped off the soiling of despair
From her sweet soul, because she loved so much."

How base the spirit that could harden itself against so great mercy, and refuse to see in this gracious act of pardon the presence of a true interpreter of the Heavenly Father. But the Pharisees had already rejected the counsel of God against themselves, and every added proof of Christ's saving mission but increased the eagerness with which they sought to compass his death. We are not surprised, therefore, to find that after this beautiful exhibition of the divine favor to a sinner they go forth to pursue with greater virulence their plot for his destruction. O, thou Lamb of God, thy meekness and gentleness shall not save thee from the bloody altar! By the shedding of thy blood alone canst thou take away the sin of the world.

*Lesson for May 13—Luke 7:36-50.

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR, ECKSTEIN } Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC, BRADLEY, BROOKLYN, JEWETT, ULSTER, UNION } New York.
SOUTHERN, SHIPMAN } Chicago.
COLLIER, MISSOURI, RED SEAL, SOUTHERN } St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

WHAT is the value of a guarantee that a paint will last if at the end of the time it must be burned or scraped off before you can repaint.

The only paint that presents a perfect surface after long exposure, without special preparation, is Pure White Lead. Employ a practical painter to apply it and the result will please you.

FREE For colors use National Lead Company's Pure White Lead Tinting Colors. Any shade desired is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving full information and showing samples of Colors, also pamphlet entitled "Uncle Sam's Experience With Paints" forwarded upon application.

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

CHILDREN'S DAY SERVICES for the Sunday School.
GOLDEN SUNBEAMS music by Gabriel, Tindley and Rosene; words by Laura E. Newell. This service offers exceptional opportunities for decorative effects. The music is particularly bright and sparkling. Price 50c. per doz., $4 per 100, postpaid. Enclose 10c. in stamps for samples of our three latest services for Children's Day.
THE CHURCH CHOIR for May contains Children's Day music for the Choir. Enclose 10c. for sample copy.
GEO. F. ROSCHE & CO.
Chicago, 38 Randolph St. New York, 22 N. William St.

Christian Endeavor.

By Burris A. Jenkins.

TOPIC FOR MAY 13.

VISION AND SERVICE.

(Ex. 24:15-18; 32:19, 20; Matt. 17:1-8; 14-20.)

Many a Moses has gone up into the mount of God and come down to find those who ought to be engaged upon nobler service, worshiping foolishness. From the exaltation of a face shining with the lustre of God's presence, he has turned a face of anger upon sordid men whose sins he had to denounce. Many a worker in God's kingdom has been grieved, after a season of refreshing in his presence, at the faithlessness of those who ought to have borne with him the heat and burden of days of toil. Let such a one recall the discouragements and final success of others, from Moses on.

It is always difficult to come down from a mountain top of visions to a dead level of tasks. How many a business man, after a Lord's day when he feels he has been near to God, must turn on a Monday to the old office or store with its dingy monotony, with its worn places on floors and desks and counters, or to the old haunts of trade and competition with their smoke and dust and cobblestones! How many a one who has almost seen the vision of the Lord's face unveiled must now peer again into the dusty faces of busy men.

To such must come the realization that God is in the task quite as much as in the mountain top, in the service as in the vision. He must know that God is revealed, not only in the sunshine of Sunday, but also in the dust-clouds of week-days; that he is not only in the mountain, but in the tall building; not only in the volcano, but in the smoking chimney; not only in the ocean, but in tossing sea of humanity. It is man that above all else is made in the image of God; and among men there is none altogether common or unclean, but all are dignified and glorious with divine possibilities.

It took a vision to convince Peter of the glory of mankind. And when he came down from the house top he immediately found messengers waiting to call him to a task. Such is the true succession of experiences with us all—from the house top to the street, from the mountain to the plain. We have our seasons of exaltation, our moments on Sinai and on the mount of transfiguration, our glimpse of the celestial city from the Delectable Mountains where we talk with the shepherds and behold God's glory; then succeeding to these seasons come the monotony of tasks again.

The Gadarene who spent a day with Jesus—one glorious, free day—healed of all pains and the dreadful dreams of insane delirium, would fain have staid with the Master forever. He would follow Christ everywhere, just as Peter and the rest would have built tabernacles to abide on the mount of transfiguration. "No," said Jesus to the Gadarene, "back to thy father's house and show how great the things God hath done for thee!"

So have we not of us experienced the same desire to abide forever sitting in the heavenly places? But there comes to us all the inexorable voice of our necessity: "Back to thy father's house, to those who may not understand or sympathize with you, back to the old haunts and old companions and show by thy service that thy vision has been real."

There is no truer test of the reality of our religion than the use we make of it in home, in neighborhood, in circle of friends and associates. If there has been any uplift in the vision, let it be seen in the service following.

Bethany Reading Courses.

THE LORD'S TREASURY.

By F. D. Power, Director.

In Two Articles.—Article I.

In our study of Bible Doctrine for Young Disciples we would certainly include the teachings of the Bible concerning the treasury of the Lord. Who should give? When? How? To what? How much? Why? These are practical questions; what saith the Word of the Lord in answer to them? Benevolence, like faith, patience, gentleness, is a matter of education. The great peril of the church in our time is that it may become selfish, world-serving, money-loving. There is such a thing as being wickedly rich. God save us from such a crime! Let us learn our duty to the Lord's treasury.

1. Who are required to give? The people. "Jesus sat over against the treasury, and beheld how the people cast money into the treasury" (Mark 12:41). All the people. "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as the Lord has prospered him" (1 Cor. 16:2). Rich people and poor people. "Many that were rich cast in much, and there came a certain poor widow and she cast in two mites" (Mark 12:42; Luke 21:2). Both men and women. Some think only men are to give. Why, then, was Sapphira as well as Ananias doomed? Why does our Lord commend woman for doing her part? Religion is personal. Every one of us shall give an account of himself unto God. Giving is worship. A man can as well do his wife's praying as her giving; he can as soon go into heaven for them both as exercise the grace of benevolence for both. No Christian, whether rich or poor, man or woman, boy or girl, can fail to give to the cause of Christ and remain guiltless. In the first church I ever preached for, a poor country congregation, they used to give certain poor people money to give back to the church, because they said it educated them in the grace of giving.

2. What ought we to give? Such things as you have. "Give alms," said Jesus, "of such things as you have" (Luke 11:41). "For if there be first a willing mind it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not" (1 Cor. 8:12). Give money. "Jesus sat over against the treasury and beheld how the people cast money into the treasury." Give precious stones. "And they with whom precious stones were to be found gave them to the treasure of the house of the Lord" (1 Chron. 29:8). How much unused and profitless wealth do men and women bear about on their persons! How in emergency the Jewish women were willing to bring their jewels to the Lord's treasury! How, when the discovery of the Western Continent was at stake, a woman came with her jewels to the altar! How, when Luther found a much-prized medal in its hiding-place, he exclaimed: "What are you doing here? Come out and make yourself useful!" When Cromwell saw the silver statues of the apostles in the sanctuary, he cried: "Take them down and send them about doing good!" Why should the sons and daughters of God, who are kings and queens of heaven, hoard, when God's cause calls for sacrifice and self-denial?"

But what else shall we give? "The first fruits of all thy increase." "The first fruits of thy land," said Moses, "thou shalt bring into the house of the Lord thy God" (Ex. 23:19). Some think if they have no money they are not to give. Houses and lands, flocks and herds, stocks and bonds, jewels and produce—these do not count. Building is added to building, corner lot to corner lot, farm to farm, and merchandise to merchandise, but they never have gold, and so are not called upon to give. In fact, they will purposely invest and reinvest, and regard a personal debt as a personal blessing, that they may say: "I have no money; I am behindhand; I must be just before I am generous." Think who is your largest creditor. Hear the command: "Sell that thou hast and give" (Matt. 19:21).

3. When should we give? At every opportunity. "As we therefore have opportunity, let us do good unto all men" (Gal. 6:10). We should not wait until necessity drives us. How often men wait for the emergency, and then come grudgingly forward, while if we did our duty there would never have to be an urgent, special appeal for means to carry on God's work. Paul struck the keynote when he talked to the Corinthians about being "forward," "ready," "making up their bounty beforehand," that "the same might be ready," "ready a year ago," "upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God has prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come" (1 Cor. 16:2; 2 Cor. 9). Regular, punctual, systematic service; conscientious, faithful, weekly attention to this obligation; our offering to God as religiously remembered as prayer or praise—this will insure provision for all the needs of the Church of Christ.

4. How shall we give? There are two ways: one that God likes, the other he does not like. We are not to give ostentatiously. "Take heed that ye do not your alms before men to be seen of them" (Matt. 6:1-2). "Therefore, when thou doest alms, do not sound a trumpet before thee." Some give with a sort of a barnyard vulgarity, as the hen lays her egg and cackles until all the neighborhood joins in the chorus. "He that giveth, let him do it with simplicity" (Rom. 12:8).

We are not to give grudgingly. "Every man, as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, nor of necessity, for God loveth a cheerful giver;" that is an "hilarious" giver, a happy giver, one who gives with a swing (2 Cor. 9:7). "Thy people shall be a willing people in the day of thy power" (Ps. 110:3). "The fathers and princes of Israel, the captains of hundreds and thousands, offered willingly, and the people rejoiced, because with a perfect heart they offered willingly unto the Lord" (1 Chron, 29:6-12). And why should they not give willingly? David reasons: "For all things come from thee, and of thine have we given thee." How many give in a hedghog fashion! How many have never reached the height of such heroism that they can give a quarter and not wish it back again! How many give as old wells, with asthmatic wheeze and groan, rather than as springs gushing forth with gladness! We are not to give thoughtlessly, carelessly, without purpose. "Every one, as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." How many give without any thought of the seriousness of the act of devotion, any sense of its obligation as a devout and worshipful duty—give in a careless, perfunctory way, as they would toss up a penny to a beggar! We are not to give spasmodically. "Upon the first day of the week"—every first day. The Lord's treasury suggests system, regularity, a fixed and constant duty. It is the people who use the church envelopes and bring their offerings, however humble, on every first day of the week, who sustain the church. Said Russell Conwell to me: "We raised $40,000 last year here, for church purposes, and only two men gave as much as $500. Regular, systematic growth is the best growth. Regular, systematic attendance upon the worship and ordinances of God is the best attendance. Regular, systematic offering of our means to the Master's service is the best offering.

We are not to give in a worldly way. So much ice cream consumed, so much for the Lord; so many plates of oyster soup, so much for the cause of Christ, etc. Above all, we are to give as Christian men and women to Christ our Lord, as sacredly as the woman poured the costly spikenard upon his person.

Literature.

One of the most thorough treatments of the money question that we have yet seen is that of Prof. Frank Parsons, of the Boston University Law School, entitled "Rational Money." To one who has given no critical thought to this question this book will certainly be an eye-opener. The many phases of the money question to be considered in order to an intelligent understanding of this vexed question are clearly set forth in this book. The theory of the author is that a national currency should be controlled in the interest of the whole people, and this theory he supports with the most cogent arguments. It is not a political party document, but an independent scientific treatment on money, giving an account of all the important monetary systems of history, with special attention to the experiences of various countries with paper money. The book can be secured of "Equity Series," 1520 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa. Price, paper cover, 200 pages, 25 cents.

MAY MAGAZINES.

The opening article in the May edition of the Missionary Review of the World is the substance of the paper read before the Ecumenical Conference in New York, April 23, by the editor, Arthur T. Pierson, on "The Superintending Providence of God in Foreign Missions." The author says that God made use of the obscure Moravians, the despised Methodists and a little band of intercessors in Britain and America to introduce the century of modern missions. Out from these in one way or another have come the great work of missions that now encircle the globe. The article is deeply interesting from first to last, as is also the entire contents of this edition of this splendid missionary magazine.

Everybody's Magazine for May, while interesting from first to last, contains some leading articles of special interest, especially to the more studious and inquisitive class of readers. "The Greatest Shipyard in the World" is one of the best of its series of articles on the "biggest things" in American industries. One cannot read this article without wonder and admiration for the genius of man, the demands of commerce and the avenues of national wealth. But this article is not alone in interest. There is not a dull page in the book. The short stories are bright, original and good, and the entire contents both popular and instructive. A number that will delight the lover of good, fresh magazine literature.

The two leading articles in the Atlantic Monthly for May are sufficiently unique to command the attention and interest of any inquisitive mind. The first, "Nations and the Decalogue," by H. D. Sedgwick, Jr., is a fine study of controlling forces of nations—the belly and the conscience. The second, "The Milton Manuscripts at Trinity," by Edmund Gosse. It is interesting to see the workings of this great poet's mind as pointed out from the manuscripts by this writer as well as to know the history of these original documents. With these two articles for an index the May Atlantic Monthly is a number of unusual interest, and will be eagerly sought after by the best magazine readers of the nation.

Frank Leslie's for May opens with the diary of a man bound for the Klondike goldfields. Beginning with his going aboard the ship at Seattle, Wash., the chief incidents of each day until his arrival at Dawson is dramatically and sometimes thrillingly told. It is a splendid panoramic view of a long, tedious, perilous journey, full of hardships at its best. A glance at the remaining pages of this edition of this popular monthly promises to be of equal interest to the lover of good, up-to-date, popular literature. Its cover, in beautiful colors, is a handsome piece of work.

WALK ASHORE!

It all happened at one of those pleasant sea side resorts, where life is comedy from day to day and tragedy has no place. She just stepped on the raft which she thought was moored, and in pure idleness of mood fell to rocking it from side to side. But the raft was not moored. Her rocking had slowly dislodged it from the sand, on which it was grounded, and when she turned around, she was afloat and the shore a rod behind her. She cried for help and was heard by a lonely fisherman who sat at some distance on the beach mending his nets. How slowly he got up. How slowly he tramped across the sandy shore. And she was drifting, drifting, drifting! "Save me"! she cried, "save me"! as the old man came to the water's edge. The grizzled mariner raised his hand to the side of his mouth and cried hoarsely, "Walk ashore"!

That's all there was of it. She was still in shoal water. All she needed was the timely word of instruction and advice. But suppose it had not come? Suppose she had not heeded it? Was there no danger? The open sea, a frail raft, and a frailer woman!

The woman on the raft is a type of hundreds of thousands of her sex who are drifting into danger. Up to a definite day, they have been enjoying life in perfect security. Then, in a moment, a sense of impending danger comes. They are at the mercy of disease. Every day increases the danger. They are drifting, drifting, drifting. Then comes the cry for help. To thousands of appeals there has come the answer from Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.,

WALK ASHORE! WALK ASHORE!!

You are still in the shallow waters of disease. You can still get back without more than inconvenience to the land of health behind you. All you need is just the right word of advice and common sense instruction in time, and the grip of a helping hand. That is just what Dr. Pierce offers to every one suffering from disease; timely, health restoring, life saving advice, practical help. It requires some confidence to take advice when your own senses are against it. The woman on the raft could not see the bottom of the roily water, and the land looked so far away. So the woman in disease can't see how she can be cured, and recovery of health seems hopeless. And, perhaps, the very disease that has begun to threaten her is consumption, that dreadful disease regarded by millions as incurable. Her local doctors perhaps say, "we can make your suffering a little less, but there's no hope."

Does Dr. Pierce claim to cure consumption? That question isn't worth arguing Look at the record. Take a case in point.

Here is a man (or woman) with a hacking cough, a hectic flush, night-sweats, great emaciation or wasting of flesh, spitting of blood, shortness of breath and all the other symptoms. After every remedy and every local physician has failed, he, as a last resort, takes "Golden Medical Discovery" and the cough vanishes, the cheek gets back its natural color, sleep becomes sound and refreshing, the spitting of blood stops, flesh and muscles become firm, weight increases, and life goes along in quiet and comfort to the full limit of the three score years and ten.

But may be it wasn't consumption after all? May be it wasn't. You know it was something that was attacking the very citadel of life, and it was something that was cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. And Dr. Pierce is curing such "somethings" right along with a record of over a quarter of a million cases, and not more than three per cent. of failures.

One fact, at least, is well established. That the "Golden Medical Discovery" does cure weak lungs, bleeding from lungs, obstinate, lingering coughs, laryngitis, bronchitis, throat disease, and kindred affections of the air passages, which, if neglected or badly treated, lead up to consumption, can no longer be doubted in view of the many thousands of well established cures of such cases reported by the most trustworthy citizens. Many of these cases have been pronounced consumption—and incurable—by the best local physicians before the sufferers commenced the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Whether the doctors have erred in their judgment in these numerous cases or not is not for us to decide.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

LIFE OF MOODY," cloth, 318 pages, 25 cents, postpaid, of C. F. Howard, Windfall, Ind.

DAILY BREAD," cloth, 192 pages, 25 cents, postpaid, of C. F. Howard, Windfall, Ind.

VEST POCKET DICTIONARY, etc., Morocco, gold edges, alphabetic. 192 pages, 25 cents, postpaid, of C. F. Howard, Windfall, Ind.

A FOREMAN for the Southern Christian Institute printing office is wanted. A consecrated young man with a plain knowledge of plain printing is wanted. Address J. B. Lehman, Edwards, Miss.

FOR SALE: A good building lot 25x147 feet, near Beulah Christian Church, and also ten shares of Standard Adding Machine stock. Apply to "W. W." this office.

THE ACME SMELTING AND REFINING COMPANY, of Phœnix, Ariz., is controlled by Christian business men and offers for a short time excellent opportunities for either large or small investments. Write for full information. A thorough investigation is desired by the company.

MYSTERY OF THE GOLDEN CLOTH. The greatest book ever written on John's Revelation. Price, $1.50. Also Seer of Patmos, or John's Place in the Christian Economy. Price, 25cts. Address J. S. HUGHES, Station O, CHICAGO.

The Signs of His Coming is a neat booklet on "The Second Coming of Christ," by Peter Ainslie, Editor of Christian Tribune. Price, 10 cents. Christian Publishing Company, St. Louis.

Special Catalogue No. 22, just issued by the Christian Publishing Company, St. Louis, gives a long list of valuable books that may be had at greatly reduced rates. The company will be pleased to send it to any one asking for it.

Christian Science Dissected is a booklet now in the hands of the compositors at the office of the Christian Publishing Company, St. Louis, which will be ready early in May. Communities troubled with the teaching of Mrs. Eddy would do well to circulate this work freely. Price 25 cents.

Topical Outlines contain the Midweek Prayer-Meeting Themes, with Analysis and copious Scripture References, which are proving very helpful to leaders. Thirty-six pages, stitched and trimmed. Price, 25 cents per dozen. Christian Publishing Company, St. Louis.

B. & O. S-W.

"ROYAL BLUE SERVICE."

ST. LOUIS,
CINCINNATI,
LOUISVILLE,
COLUMBUS,
PITTSBURG,
WASHINGTON,
BALTIMORE,
PHILADELPHIA,
NEW YORK.

BEST LINE BETWEEN THE EAST AND WEST.

Luxurious Vestibuled Trains, Palatial Ladies' Coaches.
Pullman Drawing Room, Sleeping and Observation Cars.
B. & O. S-W. DINING CARS. Meals Served a la carte at POPULAR PRICES.

For Rates, Maps, Time-Tables or Sleeping Car Space—Call on any Ticket Agent or address

O. P. McCARTY,
General Passenger Agt.,
G. B. WARFEL, Cincinnati, Ohio
Asst. Gen'l Pass. Ag't, St. Louis, Mo.

Marriages.

CROSSFIELD — DUMOND. — Elk City, Kan., April 4, 1900, Wilburn Crossfield and Julia Dumond were united in marriage at the home of the bride; S. W. Nay, officiating.

HORNEY—CHAPMAN.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Weldon, Ia., April 18, 1900, Albert R. Horney to Miss Amy L. Chapman; I. W. Cameron officiating.

ISUM—JENSEN.—Married, at the Christian Church, Wakefield, Neb., April 9, 1900, at the close of the morning services, H. E. Isum and Anna Jensen, by J. B. White, pastor.

MERRITT — HUFFAKER. — Married, at the home of the bride's parents, near Savannah, Mo., April 8, 1900, Mr. Marvin Merritt and Miss Bartee Huffaker; A. R. Hunt, officiating.

MOURNING — BURFORD. — In the city of Macombville, April 19, 1900, by J. S. Gash, Mr. Luther R. Mourning and Miss Carrie C. Burford, both of Tennessee.

PRATT—PORTER.—The marriage of George Hequembourg Pratt and Miss Kate Deane Porter took place at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Mary Porter, of Clarksville, Pike county, Mo., April 19, at 2 P. M.

QUIMBY—SMITH.—Married, at the Christian Church, Wakefield, Neb., April 19, Ray B. Quimby and Georgia M. Smith; J. B. White, officiating.

SCOTT—ANDERSON.—At the residence of the officiating minister in Plattsburg, Mo., March 21, Mr. Eugene M. Scott and Miss Eve Lena Anderson, both of Lathrop, Mo.; Wm. C. Thompson, offiating.

SEARS—BROWN.—Elk City Kan., April 22, 1900, William T. Sears and Jessie Brown were united in marriage at the Heckard House; S. W. Nay, officiating.

SIMPSON—JOHNSON.—At the residence of the bride's parents, five miles north of Plattsburg, Mo., on April 8, Mr. Ross A. Simpson and Miss Lizzie Johnson; Wm. C. Thompson, of Plattsburg, officiating.

TANNER—BRYANT.—At the residence of the bride's father, near Paris, Mo., April 8, 1900, Mr. DeWitt Tanner to Miss Minnie F. Bryant; C. H. Strawn officiating.

Obituaries.

ATHERTON.

Sister Mary Atherton was born August 4, 1854; died April 2, 1900. She was the daughter of Brother Cornelius and Sophia Shoemaker. She became a Christian in her girlhood and was an honor to the profession that she made. To know her was to love her, and those that knew her most intimately loved her most dearly. The funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. Wagoner. She leaves a husband, one son, three sisters and three brothers, and a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn her departure. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

S. M. D.

Thompson, Ill.

COY.

Mrs. Henry Coy died at her home in Polo, Ill., April 7, 1900. Sister Coy lived her threescore years and ten, having been born in 1829 in Washington County, Md. Her life was gentle, her faith bright, her death that of a saint. The writer conducted the services. D. T. SEYSTER.

FOSTER.

Mrs. Mary A. Foster was born in Spencer Co., Ky., Aug. 27, 1821, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. L. O. Hawk, in Niantic, Ill., March 26, 1900. Her parents located in Macoupin Co., Ill., in 1833, and Dec. 20, 1838, their daughter, Mary, was married to Robert Foster, then a pioneer preacher of the Disciples in that section of Illinois. She leaves a son, Dr. A. C. Foster, of Blue Mound, Ill., who is also a preacher of more than ordinary ability, and three daughters, Mrs. E. H. Gardener, of Girard, Ill.. Mrs. I. N. Vance, of Springfield, Ill., and Mrs. L. O. Hawk, of Niantic. The younger son, W. B. Foster, who was a very successful minister in the Christian Church, died during his pastorate at Red Bluff, Cal., in 1885. Also a grandson, Charles McElroy, of Springfield, though a printer by trade, is a young man of considerable power in the pulpit. Sister Foster was a great friend of the Ministerial Relief Fund and received many letters and substantial favors from our lamented Bro. Atkinson. She attended the dedication of our new house of worship on Sunday, was taken ill on Monday morning and fell quietly asleep in Jesus that afternoon. Funeral services on Wednesday by the writer. J. R. PARKER.

GLINES.

Sister Lizzie Glines was born June 6, 1867. Her maiden name was was Baugher. Sister Glines united with the Christian Church at Liberty, Ill., at the age of 16. She was married to Wm. O. Glines Oct. 12, 1887, and moved to Ashley, Ill., in the spring of 1899. She departed this life at Ashley, Ill., April 19, 1900, aged 32 years, 10 months and 13 days. The interment was at the I. O. O. F. Cemetery. The funeral services were held at the Christian Church in Ashley, conducted by the writer. Sister Glines was esteemed by all who knew her and Bro. Glines and family have the sympathy of all the community in their bereavement. Sister Glines lived a Christian and died in the triumphs of a living faith. F. M. MORGAN.

HAGLER.

Mrs. Martha J. Hagler was born March 5, 1843, and departed this life April 7, 1900, at her home near Niantic, Ill. She was a member of the Christian Church and during the few months she had resided in this community proved herself rich in faith, though poor in what the world calls riches. Funeral by the writer Sunday, April 8, 1900. J. R. PARKER.

NEWKIRK.

W. C. Newkirk was born at Leesville, Ind., Mar. 26, 1838, and died at his home in Elk City, Kan., April 9, 1900. He was a captain in the 50th Ind. during the Civil War and since has held various places of trust. S. W. NAY.

PHILLIPS.

Emma Marshall was born in Ohio, July 19, 1851. At four years of age she moved with her parents to Clark county, Ia., where she lived until she was married to A. J. Phillips, of Liberty, Ia. After a short residence in Nebraska Mr. and Mrs. Phillips made their home in Des Moines, Ia., where the family still reside. There were seven children—girls—of whom six, with their father, are living. Sister Phillips became a Christian when quite young and was faitful until death. Toward the last of her sickness she said: "Everything is so bright. Jesus is calling me." She died March 30, 1900, at her home in this city. J. M. LOWE.

PILE.

After weeks and months of wasting illness death came on Monday evening to release William S. Pile from his couch of weariness and pain. Mr. Pile was born in Macomb, McDonough county, Ill. He enlisted in May, 1861, in the 16th Illinois Infantry, but was discharged for disability in August of the year following. As soon as his health was partially restored he re-enlisted at Nashville, Tenn., serving in the quartermaster's department until the close of the war. In 1867, at Macomb, he was united in marriage to Miss Mary M. Walker, and continued to make his home near that place, engaged in farming and stock-raising until 1882, when the family moved to Kansas. In 1886 they removed to this county and until 1893 resided on a farm north of Wellington, when the condition of Mr. Pile's health compelled him to give up farm work and move to town. The family of the deceased consists of his wife, five sons and one daughter. One son, Clarence, is now completing a theological course at Drake University, Des Moines, Ia., and the other four, Shelby, Bird, Clyde and John, are young men residing here, as is the daughter Angeline. Mr. Pile was a member of the Christian Church, with which he united in boyhood, and for many years filled the office of elder. The services will take place at the Christian Church at 2:30 o'clock this (Wednesday) afternoon, conducted by the pastor, Rev. T. A. West, assisted by Rev. Z. T. Houston.—Wellington Press.

[The date of the paper from which the above obituary was taken was unfortunately overlooked at the time, but was received at this office last week.—EDITOR.]

STEELE.

Mrs. Livonia Steele died at her home in Breckenridge, Mo., Tuesday morning April 17, 1900. Mrs. Steele's maiden name was Livonia McDowell. She was born in Nicholas County, Ky., Nov. 10, 1827. With her parents she moved to Cloverdale, Putnam County, Ind., when she was five years old. There she grew up to womanhood. Her young years were spent in attending school and on her father's farm. She grew up accustomed to hard toil. At the age of 22, on the 22nd day of October, 1849, she was married to James M. Steele. A few years after they moved to Corydon, Iowa, where they lived until 1863, when they moved to Ray County, Mo., where the family lived until they came to Breckenridge in 1882. Mrs. Steele had lived a widow since her husband's death in 1865. She lived devoted to her family. She had a self-sacrificing nature. She literally gave her life to her family and friends. She will be sadly missed in her family, in her large circle of friends and most of all by the church, of which she was a devoted member. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

LAWRENCE F. MCCRAY.

STARK.

Mrs. J. T. Stark was born Oct. 18, 1852, and died at home, Elk City, Kan., April 14, 1900. She has been an active and consecrated worker in the service of Christ for the last 20 years.

S. W. NAY.

STERLING.

Died, near Retreat, Vernon County, Wisconsin, Lee Grand Sterling, March 31, 1900. He had not been well for about two years. But through all his suffering he was kind and patient. He was born in Kentucky, in 1818, and was of the pioneer settlers in Vernon County, Wis., where he has been a great help to the small band of struggling Disciples at Retreat. He more than any one else was instrumental in building our house of worship. He has been a faithful follower of the Master for over 60 years and is a great loss to the church and the community. He leaves a loving wife and four children to mourn his loss. He was respected and beloved by all who knew him. F. E. RUTTER.

WERNER.

The infant daughter, Mary Elizabeth, of Bro. and Sister Frank S. Werner, of Elgin, Texas, died Sunday morning, April 15, at 2 o'clock, on the train en route to San Antonio, where she was being taken for treatment. She had been sick but a few days. She was buried on Monday in the Huntsville Cemetery, where others of the kindred sleep, and we sought to minister to wounded hearts the balm of Gilead. "He giveth his beloved sleep." EDWIN C. BOYNTON.

WILLIAMS.

Died, at the home of her brother, near Greenton, Mo., April 14, Mrs. Sallie A. Williams, in her 78th year. She leaves one son, C. B. Williams, of Scott county, Ky., and a host of relatives and friends in Lafayette county, Mo., to mourn her loss. Of her we can say truly, A good woman has gone to rest. She had been a member of the Christian Church for 65 years.

R. H. BENTON.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE.

Even Bright's Disease is no Longer Regarded as Hopeless.

If you are suffering from kidney, bladder or uric acid trouble, and have despaired of getting help, you should try Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy. Every reader of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST may obtain a sample bottle free by mail, so you may test it for yourself and fully realize the truth of what your friends and fellow-citizens say as regards its marvelous efficacy and worth.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root has been tried and tested by thousands who stand high in this community. It is not recommended for everything, but if you have kidney, bladder or uric acid trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It brings back the rosy flush of health and strength: it is a purifier and rebuilder, and is a boon to the weak and ailing.

To be confronted suddenly with the knowledge that Bright's disease had hold of one was, at one time, equivalent to hearing a death warrant read; but to-day, thanks to the discoveries of science and the researches of Dr. Kilmer, no case is entirely hopeless. Even those in advanced stages have been rescued and life prolonged by Swamp-Root.

This great remedy is purely vegetable and contains nothing that could harm the most delicate child. It is pleasant to take and the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes are sold by all druggists.

Send your name and address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and a sample bottle and a book telling all about Swamp Root and its wonderful cures will be sent to you free.

A PURE GRAPE CREAM OF TARTAR POWDER
NO ALUM - NO AMMONIA

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

Superior to all others in purity, richness and leavening strength.

Highest Honors, World's Fair
Gold Medal, Midwinter Fair

Ohio State Convention.

Program of the State Convention of the Ohio Christian Missionary Society, to be held at Mansfield Tuesday, May 22nd to Thursday, May 24th, 1900.

TUESDAY EVENING.

7:00—Song Service. Musical Director, A. L. Fillmore, Alleghany, Pa.
7:15—Report of the Board.
7:45—President's address, "Ohio Missions to the Front." Benjamin L. Smith, Cincinnati.
8:15—Devotional Bible Study. W. J. Lhamon, Alleghany, Pa.
General theme, "Nails Fastened by the Master." Eccl. 12:11.
First study, "Our Father as He is Revealed in Our Brother, or God in Christ."

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

9:30—Song Service.
9:40—Reports of educational secretary and superintendents of Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor.
10:00—Itnroduction of our missionaries by the state secretary. Each will give a two-minute report of the conditions of his field.
10:30—Address, "The Paramount Importance of State Mission Work." F. A. Bright, Painesville.
11:00—Address, "The Measure of Giving." W. W. Sniff, Cleveland.
11:30—Devotional Bible Study. W. J. Lhamon. "Faith and Prayer as Exemplified in Christ, or Temptation and Transfiguration."

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

1:30—Song Service.
1:40—Church Extension. G. W. Muckley, Kansas City, Mo.
2:10—Address, "The Endeavor Principle." Geo. A. Miller, Covington, Ky.
2:40—Round Table, conducted by C. W. Huffer, Toledo.
3:10—Address, "The Sunday-school as a Factor in Building up the Church." W. A. Harp, Springfield.
3:45—Devotional Bible Study. W. J. Lhamon. "Repentance and Forgivenesss as Taught by Christ, or the Way of Atonement."

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

7:00—Song Service.
7:10—Address, "City Problems: The Slums and the Suburbs." John E. Pounds, Cleveland.
7:40—Sermon, "The Plea for the Normal New Testament Church." W. J. Lhamon.

THURSDAY MORNING.

8:30—Business.
10:00—Our Foreign Populations." R. Timme, Cleveland.
10:15—Conference, "Open Doors in Ohio," led by H. F. McLane, Toledo.
10:45—Address, "The Preacher and Ohio Missions." M. L. Bates, Newark, O.
11:00—Address, "Ohio and the World's Redemption." C A. Freer, Columbus.
11:15—Address, "Boys' and Girls' Rally Day for America." Chas. Fillmore, Carthage.
11:30- Devotional Bible Study. W. J. Lhamon. "Baptism and the Lord's Supper as Bequests from Christ, or Recreation and Sustentation."

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

1:30—Song Service.
1:45—Address to Preachers. F. D. Power, Washington, D. C.
2:15—Address, "The Duty of the Church to the College." Pres. E. V. Zollars, Hiram.
2:45—Address, "Highest Education in its Relation to the Church." Prof. Chas. Louis Loos, Lexington, Ky.
3:15—Address, Colleges and Missions," Pres. J. M. Kersey, Bethany, W Va.
3:45—Devotional Bible Study. W. J. Lhamon. "The Holy Spirit as Promised by Christ, or Comforter, Teacher and Remembrancer."

THURSDAY EVENING.

7:00—Praise Service.
7:30—Address, F. D. Power.

Reduced rates have been granted on all railroads. The church at Mansfield will entertain all who attend for lodging and breakfast.

S. H. BARTLETT, Cor. Sec.
240 Bell Ave., Cleveland, O.

Book Notes.

The Standard Dictionary, two volumes complete, bound in full morocco, for $13 00—publisher's price, $26.00!

We think we are justified in placing an exclamation point after that announcement. Our offer means just what it says. Several persons have written us asking us for "full particulars" of this dictionary. We infer that they cannot believe that we are offering the bona fide, genuine Standard Dictionary at such a price, but are trying to sell a cheap edition. Nothing of the kind! Our offer is genuine. We have a few copies of this great work—undoubtedly the greatest lexicon of our language—and while they last they go for $13.00.

Thousands of readers of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST enjoyed W. E. Garrison's letters from abroad, entitled "Wheeling Throngh Europe." The author has revised and amplified these letters, and they are just issued in book form. "Wheeling Through Europe" is a beautiful volume of 263 pages, bound in cloth and illustrated with a number of full-page half-tone plates, made by photographs taken by the author. We know of no book of travel more interesting, entertaining and instructive than this. We believe this book should have and will have a large circulation.

On page 2 of this issue will be found an offer of four splendid biographical works. If the readers of this paper could file through our book rooms and see these volumes, our stock would be exhausted long before one-half of them had passed. For example, the "Memoirs of Gen. W. T. Sherman" is a book of 522 pages. It is approximately 12x7 inches. It is printed on the finest book paper and handsomely and substantially bound. How can we afford to sell such a book for 75 cents? Because it cost us a little less than that. We secured several hundred in a bankrupt stock, and are giving our patrons the benefit of our bargain. What we have said of this book is equally true of the other three volumes offered. They are cheap only in price, and are actually worth much more than we are selling them for.

We are preparing and will have ready in a few days little booklets containing sample pages of "The Gospel Call," "Silver and Gold" and "Tidings of Salvation," the three popular song books. If you are thinking of purchasing new hymnals, just drop us a postal card, and let us send you these samples, free of charge.

"Missionary Addresses," by A. McLean, is a work that has had a fair sale, but not commensurate with its worth and value. We have lately reduced the price from $1 to 60 cents. This is a very low price for such a volume, well bound, well printed, on fine paper and illustrated with half-tone portraits of about 70 of our missionaries. The 14 addresses in the book are of the greatest value. Mr. McLean never writes a sentence that does not say something, and these addresses are full of exhortation concerning the evangelization of the world. We should sell thousands of copies before the summer is over.

Imitation being the sincerest flattery, we are much gratified to note that of some our colaborers in the work of distributing good literature are faithfully copying our ideas and plans. There cannot be too many good books sold and read, and therefore we are glad to have other publishers and booksellers copy our advertisements, book notes, catalogues, etc., etc. Let the good work go on! Meanwhile, permit us to reiterate the fact that the Christian Publishing Company owns, publishes and sells the great majority of the books and tracts of the Disciples of Christ.

We have printed and distributed already 10,000 copies of "Special Catalogue No. 22." The possession of a copy of this catalogue may prevent you from paying some dealer $2 for a book that we are selling for 75 cents. If you have not received a copy, drop us a postal card, and it will be promptly forwarded, free of charge.

THE CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.

Should be an Inspiration.

DEAR CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST:—You are always attractive and beautiful in thought and dress, but never more so than in your special issue pertaining to Home Missions. The CHRISTIAN-EVANGLIST of April 19 is, indeed, a home missionary number and should inspire your thousands of readers to great liberality in the work of saving America. As a religious people we occupy a Bible position, and should make the power of our plea felt throughout this great commonwealth. The hand of God has been in our religious movement from the beginning, solving the problem of unity on the original basis and constitution of the church. Our plea is adapted to the wants of a divided Christendom. There is a moving away from old standards. Old beliefs and old themes are boldly challenged. Men are claiming the right to think for themselves. The spirit of inquiry is abroad. That which harmonizes with the truest rationality is most readily accepted. And here is the strength of our plea. It captivates, it wins. The people are susceptible to the molding influence of these grand principles. Shall we not be active in making them known to others? Let us heartily co-operate with the Home Society in this great work. May God help us to come up to the full measure of our obligation. W. J. RUSSELL.

Rushville, Ind.

"An Eagle Brand Baby."

A Mother in Kirkville, Mo., writes: "My little daughter, Miriam, is an Eagle Brand Baby. At four months of age she was thin and white and I realize now was slowly starving, because Nature's food and other foods did not nourish her. I then began to give her EAGLE BRAND CONDENSED MILK which she drank with eagerness and soon began to grow fat and well. During the period of seven months (she is now eleven months old), she has taken twelve dozen cans and has never been sick a day."

Reduced Rates to Colorado.

Union Pacific Railroad will make One Fare plus $2.00, or $19.00 for the Round Trip from Kansas City or Omaha to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, on May 1st and 15th, June 5th and 9th. For particulars address J. F. Aglar, Gen'l Agt., St. Louis, Mo.

DIVINITY SCHOOL
—OF—
HARVARD UNIVERSITY
CAMBRIDGE, MASS.
AN UNDENOMINATIONAL SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.
ANNOUNCEMENT FOR 1900-01, NOW READY

POSITIONS GUARANTEED under reasonable conditions; car fare paid; board, $10-$11; catalog free; no vacation.
DRAUGHON'S PRACTICAL BUS. Colleges.
St. Louis; Nashville, Tenn.; Savannah, Ga.; Montgomery, Ala.; Galveston, Tex.; Fort Worth, Tex.; Little Rock, Ark.; Shreveport, La. Indorsed by merchants and bankers. Best patronized in South. Bookkeeping, Shorthand, etc., taught by mail. Begin any time. Address (at either place) Draughon's College.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

A WEEKLY FAMILY AND RELIGIOUS JOURNAL.

Vol. xxxvii | May 10, 1900 | No. 19

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:

Current Events....579
Some Results and Impressions of the Ecumenical Conference....580
Disciples of Christ and the Ecumenical Conference....581
The Lord's Supper....582
Editor's Easy Chair....583

ORIGINAL CONTRIBUTIONS:

The Origin of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society.—W. T. Moore....584
The Everlasting Life.—Bruce Brown....585
Our First Congress.—A. B. Jones....586
The Law of Expedients.—E. E. Hartley..587

CORRESPONDENCE:

English Topics....592
New York Letter....593
B. B. Tyler's Letter....594
Texas Letter....595
An Alarm and an Appeal....595
William B. Hunt....596
A Protest Against a Memorial to Beer...596

FAMILY CIRCLE:

Unrecognized Blessings (poem)....600
The Lost Emigrants....600
Teddy's Lesson....601
Anti-Cigarette Law Upheld....602

MISCELLANEOUS:

Our Budget....588
Personal Mention....590
Notes and News....597
Announcements....598
Evangelistic....599
With the Children....603
Sunday-school....604
Christian Endeavor....605
Bethany Reading Courses....605
Literature....606
Marriages and Obituaries....607
Book Notes....608

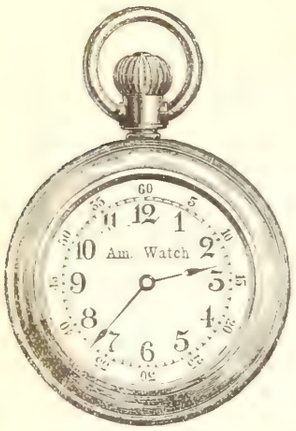
Subscription $1.50

W. O. MOORE. (See Page 590.)

PUBLISHED BY

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY

1522 LOCUST ST., ST. LOUIS



Ladies' Watch.
Actual Size.

OFFER EXTRAORDINARY!

An Opportunity Which is Yours Now, But May Never Come Again. . . . . .

We have secured a limited number of Watches manufactured by the W. F. Doll Mfg. Co., New York City, the cases of which are made from the steel recovered from the wreck of the Battleship Maine and contain a special movement made for them by the American Waltham Watch Co. The steel in the cases is highly oxidized and is as beautiful and black as ebony. These watches are splendid time-keepers, the guarantee of the manfacturers going with each watch. We have both Ladies' and Gentlemen's watches, but

We Have Only a Very Limited Number.

The Manufacturers presented one of these watches to Admiral George Dewey, Captain C. D. Sigsbee, Miss Helen M. Gould and Lieut. Richard P. Hobson, all of whom are unreserved in their praises of the beautiful and useful souvenirs.

With each Gentlemen's Watch we send a Fac-simile Copy of the Letters of Acknowledgment from Admiral Dewey and Capt. Sigsbee; and with each Ladies' Watch the letters received from Miss Gould and Lieut. Hobson.

And Now to the Point!

We desire to give you one of these Watches Free! Do you want it?

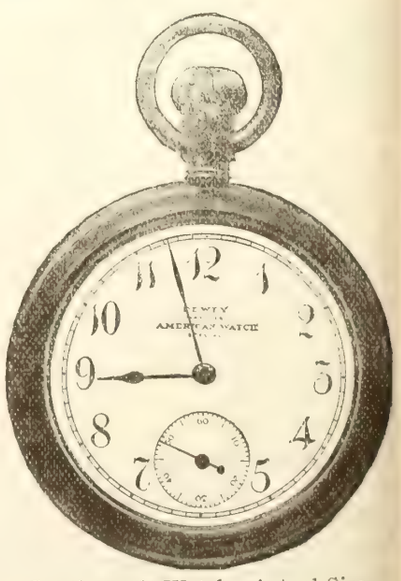
If you do, arm yourself with a few sample copies of The Christian-Evangelist (we'll furnish them upon request), sally forth and in an hour or so secure

Five New Subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST at the Regular Subscription Price of $1.50 a Year,

Send us the names and addresses plainly written, together with Draft, Money Order or Post Office Order for Seven Dollars and Fifty Cents to pay for the five new subscriptions, and we will send you by registered mail

ONE OF THESE SPLENDID DEWEY WATCHES

Without cost to you. Surely nothing could be easier or more satisfactory Why do we make this offer? Because we do not want the readers of The Christian-Evangelist to miss any good thing and this is really more than ordinarily good. You are safe in taking our word for it. We have a reputation to maintain. And then as stated in the beginning of the season, we are determined to double the circulation of the Christian Evangelist and are not stopping to count the cost too closely this year.



Gentlemen's Watch—Actual Size.

JUST ONE WORD MORE.

It may be that you are so situated that you cannot possibly secure subscribers. In that event, send us $5.00 for One Year's Credit on your own paper and one of these Splendid Watches. These watches are exactly the same as those advertised by a watch club in a prominent Eastern magazine for Fifteen Dollars.

Remember that our Stock of Watches is not Large and

UNLESS YOU ACT QUICKLY YOU WILL BE TOO LATE.

ADDRESS COMMUNICATIONS TO

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, ST. LOUIS, MO.

THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST

"IN FAITH, UNITY; IN OPINION AND METHODS, LIBERTY; IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY."

Vol. xxxvii. St. Louis, Mo., Thursday, May 10, 1900. No. 19.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The latest advices from South Africa indicate that the great turning movement of Lord Roberts has been successfully carried out, and that at present the British forces are moving toward the goal, Pretoria, following very closely the retreating Boers. Both Brandfort and Winburg have fallen into the possession of the British after some sharp fighting, and it is not believed that the Boer army will make a stand on this side of Kroonstad. It appears that the garrison at Brandfort was taken by surprise. The British forces engaged in the battle were those under Generals Tucker, Pole-Carew and Hutton. Lord Roberts' army seems to be advancing in three main columns, covering a breadth of about forty miles. The British are said to be making large use of cavalry and mounted infantry, of which it seems to be well supplied. This, no doubt, was the purpose of the delay at Bloemfontein. It is generally understood, also, that a relief column has been sent to Mafeking under Gen. Hunter, and it is believed that the long seige at this place will be raised before many days. As the war can have but one possible termination without the intervention of other nations, which is not at all probable, it would seem best for all parties that it should terminate as speedily as possible. The Boers have shown themselves as brave fighters and cunning strategists and their struggle has won the admiration of the world. But it ought to be apparent to them, as it is to the rest of the world, that successful resistance to the powerful, well disciplined army of the British, under one of the greatest Generals of modern times, is impossible.

General Otis who has been in command of the Philippines since the beginning of military operations there, as well as civil Governor, has, at his own request, been relieved from his position, to take effect on the 5th of May, at which time he was to sail for the United States. His position, as Commander and Governor, has been one of great responsibility, involving duties of the most difficult and delicate nature. He is an officer of untiring industry and has given himself unreservedly to the work of putting down the insurrection among the Tagals and restoring order throughout the islands. In a dispatch from Manila, dated May the 4th, he reports as captures from the enemy, during the month of April, 30 pieces of artillery, 1,209 rifles, considerable ammunition and large stores of property. He also reports a slight casualty list among our soldiers, with a much greater loss among the insurgents. He adds that leading Filipinos expressed confidence in the early pacification of the islands. They say the war has terminated; leading insurgents are surrendering. There may remain, for some time, more or less Guerilla warfare in remote parts of the island, but there seems no reason to doubt that there is no longer any organized resistance to the authority of the Government. The new Commission has sailed from San Francisco to enter upon its work of putting into operation the machinery of Civil Government that will insure justice and protection, and promote the peace and progress of the people of these islands. What the American people desire concerning these islands is that the people thereof may be allowed to exercise the largest amount of self-govenment of which they are capable, and when the Filipinos come to understand this, in spite of declarations to the contrary by a certain class of politicians, there will be no further resistance to our national authority.

Admiral Dewey, accompanied by his wife and his private secretary, reached St. Louis Thursday evening and left on Sunday morning. His presence in our city has been the occasion of an almost unprecedented display of patriotic enthusiasm. The Admiral has received an ovation from the people wherever he has gone. On Change, in the midst of business men of our city, in the Coliseum, filled with thousands of enthusiastic children and young people, who greeted him with songs and waving flags, and in a monster parade through the city, with the streets lined with applauding thousands—everywhere he has received abundant evidence that he is still the hero and the idol of the American people. His fame as the hero of Manila is destined to endure long after his little mistakes have been forgotten. No one has taken seriously his alleged candidacy for the office of President, and it is generally understood that his consent to be considered in the race for such nomination was the result, not of his own good sense, but of the influence of others over him. There is evidence, too, at present, that this ambitious dream of designing persons is to be abandoned, and the people be allowed to forget it. Let us hope that such is the case. The place which Admiral Dewey holds in the affections of the American people, regardless of party or section, is altogether unique, and it would be a great mistake for him to abandon such a position to enter the fierce conflict for a political position which, even if gained, could add nothing to the lustre of his name or give him a higher niche in the Temple of Fame. In a great crisis of his country's history, at a moment of supreme interest, he manifested those qualities of heroism, of genius and of lofty patriotism, which are the marks of a great commander, and achieved a victory which opened a new chapter of history for the nation he loved and served. This is his title to the nation's gratitude and to the admiration of the world, and on this foundation his fame rests secure through all the coming years.

A strike has been declared by the employees of the St. Louis Transit Co., embracing all the street car lines of St. Louis except the Suburban and Western Line. A strike has been in progress for some time on the latter line, although the Company is succeeding in running its cars at present with more or less regularity. There had been a recent agreement entered into between the employees of the Transit Co. and the Managers, but the employees of the Company have requested that this agreement be abrogated, and they demand a new agreement with the Company. While there is considerable contradiction between the statement of the situation on the part of the Amalgamated Association, which represents the employees of the Company, and that of the President of the Transit Co., so far as we can understand, the question of difference does not refer to the matter of wages, but to the scope and power of the Association of employees. Their demand seems to be that the Transit Co. shall employ only members of the Association, and if any member of the Association should, through non-payment of dues, or other cause, be dropped from the membership of the Association, he must also be dropped from the employment of the Company. The Directors of the Company, with a good deal of reason, as it seems to us, declare that this would be to take the management of the Company out of their hands and put it into the hands of the Association, which has no responsibility to the public for its proper management. This they have declined to consider. It is claimed, on the other hand, by the men that the Company is using all its influence against the Association, and that their aim is to secure a proper recognition of the same. While this dispute is being fought out between the Transit Co. and its employees, the people of the city, who are the chief sufferers, have no voice whatever in the settlement of the trouble. There ought to be some tribunal whose duty it would be to look into the facts of this case, and every similar case, and properly distribute the blame for such misunderstanding, and indicate an equitable basis of settlement. If the business of our cities is to be continually at the mercy of one or two men representing organized capital or organized labor, it will not be long until the people will decide that the municipal ownership of Street Railways is a necessity.

One by one the great Democratic leaders, whose attitude towards Mr. Bryan during the last Presidential campaign was either that of open hostility or of doubtful sympathy, are falling into the procession under his magnetic leadership, and the present indications are that Democracy is to present a much more united front in the coming Presidential campaign than it did in the preceding one. David B. Hill, of New York, has expressed his purpose to support Mr. Bryan's candidacy, with or without the free silver plank in the platform, while Mr. John R. McLean, who has been suspected of being behind Admiral Dewey's presidential boom, has lately declared himself in favor of Mr. Bryan, as the nominee for the Presidency. Whatever else may be said of Mr. Bryan, he has certainly manifested some of the highest qualities of leadership in maintaining his hold upon his party, and in uniting its opposing elements for the coming contest. He has shown himself to be a man of convictions, and who has the courage to stand by them, through good and through evil report, and this is a quality which most people admire. It will be interesting to watch the developments in political circles during the next few months, during which the leaders will be named and the issues stated upon which the next great political battle is to be fought. At the present time it seems certain that the questions of imperialism and trusts will constitute the main issues, with the money question in the background. It may have a prominent place in the platform, but in the actual campaign it is likely to be relegated to a subordinate place. All the parties will probably declare against trusts and imperialism, but these questions will, nevertheless, constitute the main issues.

On May first a most deplorable accident occurred in Pleasant Valley coal mines one hundred miles south of Salt Lake City. An explosion in tunnel number four, in which it is now feared that three hundred men lost their lives. It is estimated that 390 men entered the tunnel on that morning and that probably 300 of these perished. At this writing 178 bodies have been recovered. The cause of the explosion is yet problematical, but it is supposed that some Finns, recently imported to work in the mines, took giant powder down with them to assist in their work, and who were anxious to make as good a showing as well as to increase their earnings. It is thought that when the giant powder was exploded the dust common to coal mines was also ignited. The explosion at all events was one of the most terrific yet known in mining industry, lifting such a tremendous weight as it did and throwing immense bodies hundreds of feet. Besides the killed in the mine a large number of miners were maimed and injured.

On the 28th of May an event of sepecial interest to astronomers in the nature of a total eclipse of the sun will occur. The line of totality will extend from Norfolk, Va., to New Orleans and north or south of this line the eclipse will begin at 6:43 A. M. and end at 8:55, being visible a little over two hours. Tha nearest approach to totality at this point will be 7:09 A. M. In an article on eclipses of the sun in the Youth's Companion for March 3, Sir Norman Lockyer relates some singular things. For instance, he says the United States has witnessed an eclipse of the sun in the years 1869, 1878, 1880 and 1889, and now in 1900, and will be likewise visited in 1905, 1918, and 1959, whereas England has not witnessed a total eclipse since May 1724 and will have to continue to wait until the year 1927 before the event will occur again. Londoners, he says, have seen only one total solar eclipse since the 12th century and will not witness such an event again until the 25th century. But every such phenomenon wherever visible is watched with the greatest interest by astronomers from all the leading universities of the world. During a total eclipse of the sun, if on a clear day, the moon appears in a crown of light, the stars shine out in the heavens, and the "world is wrapped in the sable gloom of nocturnal darkness." It is not only an interesting phenomenon, but one of the most sublime and awe-inspiring sights ever beheld by the eye of man. The impression is never forgotten.

One of the first acts of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church on assembling in Chicago last week was to admit the laity to equal representation in its sessions. This question has agitated every General Conference for more than a quarter of a century and its settlement as stated will mark an epoch in the history of Methodism in America. Hereafter the laity will have equal voice with the ministry in the affairs of the church, and this new feature promises to be of far-reaching results in the future of the church.

The Eddy bill throwing open to the public millions of acres of land in Oklahoma, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Montana and Oregon for homestead purposes has passed the House and it is thought will pass the Senate before the close of the present session of Congress. These are lands obtained by agreement from the Indians, but do not include reservations belonging to Indians who have not entered into agreement with the United States. In case this bill becomes a law all settlers already on the land under the homestead law having entered the same in good faith will be given patents for their land without further charges other than the customary land office fees.

SOME RESULTS AND IMPRESSIONS OF THE ECUMENICAL CONFERENCE.

The great Ecumenical Conference which has just closed its sessions in New York City was, of course, too large to be reported here in anything like detail. Our readers must wait for the printed volume, containing the full reports of the Conference, before they can appreciate the magnitude of the meeting and of the work accomplished. It is our purpose in this article to give only a few of the general impressions which we received from the Conference, and some of its probable results.

In the first place, the Conference itself was an object-lesson of the first magnitude. The fact that it is possible to convene so large a delegated body, representing so many different religious bodies, so many widely separated countries and so many missionary organizations in one great assembly, lasting through ten days, with unflagging interest, is itself a sign of tremendous significance. It means that the church universal is awakening to a sense of its responsibility in evangelizing the world. It means a larger and clearer vision on the part of the church of its mission in the world. It means, too, a new era of missionary activity, if we mistake not. It cannot be that all the splendid literature produced by this Conference and all the enthusiasm awakened by the presence of hundreds of active missionaries from the field, as well as native converts, can fail to intensify missionary zeal and activity among the churches. Never has the conviction been so universal as it is now that the one supreme task that Jesus Christ laid upon his church is that it should publish the glad tidings of salvation through Him to the whole world. This Conference will be sure to result in deepening and spreading this conviction throughout the church.

Not only will missionary zeal and activity be increased by the Conference, but our missionary activities will be more wisely directed in the future than in the past. Many difficult problems which arise on the mission field were discussed during this Conference, and the light that was thrown upon them by the united experiences of workers in different fields will go far to solving many of these perplexing questions. Some of these questions were how best to present the gospel to these untaught peoples in pagan lands. What is the distinctive aim of missionary work? What attitude shall missionaries assume toward the political and social life of the peoples among whom they labor, and their customs and costumes? Shall they attempt to Americanize or Anglicize or Germanize the peoples of these pagan countries? Are the missionaries to go as social reformers, or simply as the heralds of the gospel of Christ? What attitude shall the missionaries assume towards the religions of these pagan peoples? Shall it be one of indiscriminate antagonism, or shall they rather seek to find out points of contact between these religions and the Christian religion, and show the superiority of the latter to meet human needs without unnecessarily antagonizing their ancient beliefs? Shall mission churches in heathen fields be made self-supporting from the beginning, or should they be assisted by the mission boards in paying native pastors? And then there is the question of schools, of hospitals, of medical missionaries, of woman's work, of the place of literature in evangelistic work, and a score of other problems scarcely less important. These were made the subjects of special papers and discussions in the afternoons of each day when the Conference was broken up into sections in order to give greater scope to its work. When these reports are all printed they will constitute a compendium of information on the various phases of mission work that will be of great importance to mission boards and to missionaries in carrying forward the great enterprise of world-wide evangelization.

There were some problems, too, which relate to the church at home which were no less important than those indicated above. The question of comity, to which much attention was given, is far more a problem for the home church to consider than the missionaries in the field. One thing clearly brought out in the Conference was that the missionaries who are laboring in the foreign field are much better prepared for Christian co-operation and the ignoring of mere denominational limitations than the mission boards at home. More than one missionary intimated that if the missionaries were allowed to have their way without let or hinprance from the boards at home, they would have very little difficulty in getting along with each other. So the question of Christian comity, as it appeared on the program, deepened into the question of Christian unity in actual discussion before the Conference. It was widely felt that comity was not the word that met the demands of the situation; that nothing short of the unity for which Jesus prayed would meet the demands of the case. It was a most noticeable fact, and one to which Dr. Huntington, presiding over one of the later meetings, called attention, that while statements relating to Christian comity were received favorably, every expression in favor of Christian unity was received with enthusiasm by the great audience. This is a sign of the times of which the leaders of denominationalism can hardly fail to take notice. We left the Conference with the conviction deepened in our own mind that the next great forward step of the church in the work of accomplishing its mission at home and abroad is the federation of its forces in such a union as will secure the advantage of co-operation and avoid the weakness and confusion which come from denominational strife and rivalry. The steps by which such a federation may be reached may not all be apparent as yet, but as we begin to take the steps that are clear, no doubt the way will open before us for other steps until we shall come, at last, to that unity for which the Master prayed in order that the world might be converted.

Of course, one of the great problems before the Conference was how to enlist a sufficient number of consecrated and properly equipped missionaries to carry forward this work with increasing success. The Student's Volunteer Movement, which was presented by a number of young men, showing the work that was being done among the young men and women of our institutions of learning, was seen to be one of the providential agencies for awakening greater missionary enthusiasm among the young, and in leading a larger number of young men and women to devote their lives to mission work. The Sunday-school, the Christian Endeavor Societies and the work of Christian women in Junior Societies, were all mentioned as potent factors in solving the problem of the supply of missionaries for the work of the future. One felt, as he listened to all that was said on this subject and heard an account of all that was being done, that there would be no lack of qualified candidates for the mission field in the years to come.

One of the deepest impressions left upon our mind after seeing and hearing the distinguished men and women who have devoted their lives to work in the mission fields is how God honors those who give themselves to this blessed work and seek not honor from man. There were hoary-headed veterans of the mission fields before whom we could stand with bared head because of lives unselfishly given to the salvation of the race. The great missionaries of the past, how brightly their names shone and how illustrious their deeds appeared terough-out the proceedings of this great conference! How it must have delighted their souls to look down from above upon such a gathering! The true heroes and heroines of the future will be those who, at home or abroad give themselves unselfishly to the service of God and of humanity, and who live for the betterment of the world.

Finally, we have the feeling which amounts to a conviction that the church is upon the eve of a great missionary revival, and that it is to move forward with gigantic strides in bringing this world in subjection to Christ. We have this conviction, too, in reference to the churches associated with this Reformation. While pleading for a return to that unity and simplicity which marked the early church, we are compelled by our allegiance to the personal Christ to be in the very vanguard of this great modern movement for the conquest of the world for Him. The signs of promise that such a growth of missionary interest is imminent are on every hand. The Spirit of God is moving upon our churches and our ministry, and ere long we believe that those who are willing to be known as Disciples of Christ, or Christians, will be found in the front of the battle with their brethren of other religious bodies, struggling to hasten that day when all the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. We were never made to realize, in a convention of our own, so much as in this Ecumenical Conference, the vantage ground we occupy as a free, untrammeled people, committed only to Christ and to the great work of making Him known to all the kindreds, tribes and tongues of earth.

DISCIPLES OF CHRIST AND THE ECUMENICAL CONFERENCE.

No small part of the editor's pleasure in his visit to the East, during the Ecumenical Conference, was the opportunity he enjoyed of visiting and preaching for most of our New York churches. He spent one Lord's day morning with the church at Brooklyn, and preached for Bro. M. E. Harlan, the present pastor. Bro. J. Z. Tyler had been announced, but owing to the condition of his health, was not permitted to be present. A noticeable feature of the congregation was a large number of orphan boys and girls from one of the Institutions near by, and their remarkably good behavior during the services. The church at Brooklyn has had a somewhat checkered career, with the usual ups and downs. The problem of building up a church of our kind there is not without serious difficulties, but faith and courage can overcome these and succeed. Bro. Harlan, having made a successful record in the West, has taken up the work there with courage and confidence, and the interest is growing under his labors. We feel sure that if the membership of the church will stand by him and his good wife in their united labors, a strong church can eventually be established in that city of churches. It was our pleasure, after the morning service, to dine with Bro. and Sister Martin, prominent members of the church. Bro. Martin is the engineer of the famous Brooklyn bridge that spans East River.

In the evening of the same Lord's day, we attended the service at the West 56th St. church, in New York, and heard a very excellent discourse by the pastor, B. Q. Denham. There was a good night audience, for a city, and evidence of much interest in the church. Members spoke to us most encouragingly of Bro. Denham's work and of the outlook for large usefulness and prosperity for the congregation. Brother Denham has only been a few months there, but seems to be getting hold of the lines of work in good shape and himself feels encouraged with the outlook. The 56th St. Church, being located near Carnegie Hall, where the Conference was held, was much in use during its sessions, especially for stereopticon lectures on various mission fields. Next door to it there was an exhibit of articles from the various mission fields which was visited by thousands every day. It was quite a museum of curiosities, and when there was some one present to explain the uses of the various articles it was very instructive.

On Sunday morning the following Lord's day, we preached for Bro. Willis, our New York correspondent, at the 169th St. Church. It will give our readers an idea of distance in the city, when we tell them that from where we took the Elevated train on 9th street we had to ride 160 blocks to reach this congregation. We noticed that, since our last visit, this part of the city has been built up with a good class of people. The audience was not large in the morning, as this church has its best audience at night. Brother Willis has been laboring ten years with this congregation. A good part of the time he has been engaged in completing his education, and while he has been offered a much larger salary elsewhere, he rightly feels that the church which gave him time for his studies for a number of years is entitled to his services for a number of years yet, when he is able to give them his whole time. He is much loved by his people and the community. He is doing considerable literary work for eastern Journals and Magazines and his influence is in every way helpful for our cause.

On the evening of the same Lord's day, we attended service at Bro. J. M. Philputt's congregation on 119th street. This church has made great progress since our last visit to it eight years ago. It has gotten out of the hall in which it was then meeting into a very commodious, beautiful church, with all the modern facilities for church work. In addition to this there have been added to it some of the most substantial members we have in the city and its prospect for future growth is most encouraging. Sister Moses, Corresponding Secretary of the C. W. B. M., was announced to speak in the evening, and at her request and that of the pastor, we occupied a few minutes before her address by way of extending our greetings to the congregation. We had been announced to preach the Sunday before, but not being aware of the fact, were not present. We were delighted with the large Sunday evening audience present, both at the Endeavor meeting and at the preaching service, and with the general spirit of earnestness and consecration which marked the service. This church has one of the best fields in the city, and if its financial plans work out as expected, we believe it has a very bright future. The attitude of this congregation has been somewhat misunderstood in the past, through the custom which it adopted early in its history of distinguishing between the congregation and the church proper. This custom, while very common in England, is unusual in this country, and led to some misunderstanding. By reason of this it has been abandoned and the church at preseut is perfectly regular in its method of receiving members into its fellowship.

Speaking of the address of Sister Moses, both on this and other occasions when we heard her in the East, we should say that the more of our churches she can visit, the better it will be for the cause which she so ably represents. We are sure the Disciples in the East were profoundly impressed with the importance of the work which the Christian Woman's Board of Missions is doing, by her addresses. There is a beautiful blending of the intellectual and the spiritual, the thought and the fervor, in her addresses, which make them very effective. Her special concern now, as it is, I believe, of all our Christian women who are actively connected with the C. W. B. M., is that a very much greater proportio of our women be enlisted in the auxiliaries, receiving therein the spiritual training which is so essential to the development of Christian faith and character, as well as aiding in that way the work of the C. W. B. M. When we see what this work has accomplished for the Christian women who have engaged in it, and for the fields in which they have labored, it is a matter of profound regret that so many of our Christian women, in our various congregations, are not members of the auxiliaries of this organization. Sister Lois White was also present at the Conference, and spoke at these various meetings of the Disciples of the work of Christian women. She has lost none of her zeal for the success of this work.

While we are safe, perhaps, in saying that our cause in New York was probably never on a better footing than at present, there is no blinking the fact that the conditions to be overcome in that field are of a grave character. In the first place, we are a feeble folk in the East, and are unknown, not only to the great mass of Christian people, but even to the religious leaders, many of whom have the vaguest sort of conception of who we are and what we are seeking to accomplish in the world. Not being strong in New York, it is natural for New Yorkers to conclude that we do not amount to very much anywhere. In addition to this fact, we regret to say that it is the testimony of our preachers there that a great many of our members who go from other states to that city to live seem to lose their interest in religion and forsake the church. They, perhaps, attend once after they are visited by the pastor, and are then heard of roaming the streets on Sunday, seeing the sights, or running off to some of the Seaside Resorts, instead of being found in the House of God. It takes a stronger and more robust type of faith to stand against the wiles of the devil in New York City than it does in the average country church, or smaller town or city. For this reason some of the members of these city churches are the best type of Christians we have, but the falling away of those who go there from other places is one of the saddest experiences of our city pastors. This is true, in a measure, of every large city in the country.

We have already referred to the fact, in a former issue, that those of our members who were present at the Conference, felt that our representation on the platform was meagre. It had been planned originally Bro. McLean, our Corresponding Secretary, should deliver an address on the Literature of Missions. When he found that his duties would not permit him to go, he wrote to the editor of this paper, as he was going to be present, to take his place and give an address on Christian Union and Missions. He wrote to the secretary of the Conference to make this change. After our arrival at the Conference, the matter was mentioned to the secretary and two or three of the members of the general committee, each of whom made a memorandum and promised to see about the matter and let us know. They had our address in the city, but no word was received from the committee. The bulletin for Monday, the 30th, the day on which Mr. McLean had been asked to speak, contained neither Mr. McLean's name, nor that of the substitute which he had selected, and which he had asked the committee to appoint in his place. We have not, to this day, learned whether the ommission was through oversight, or whether it was intentional. We went to the meeting, however, notified the chairman of the meeting before it began, of the omission, through some cause, and he inserted our name. At the proper time we were called and delivered the address which was well received by the audience. In the evening we wrote Mr. Grant, the assistant secretary, with whom Bro. McLean had corresponded, and with whom Bro. Willis had conferred, calling his attention to the ommission, and saying, that if it was through oversight, we had nothing more to say, but that if it were intentional, some explanation was due to us and the people we represented. To this we have received no reply, and perhaps will not. Bro. Willis, however, who is a member of the general committee, but who, on account of illness in his family was unable to attend its meetings during the Conference, will no doubt, be able to ascertain the facts and report the same. We adhere to the opinion, however, that there was no intention to discriminate against the Disciples.

Editor's Easy Chair.

There is something very striking, picturesque and significant about the departure of one of our great Atlantic liners for its ocean voyage. The Easy Chair witnessed such a scene a few days ago. It was on a beautiful Saturday afternoon. The "Palatia" was due to sail from her Hoboken pier at three P. M., and, like time and tide, these steamers "wait for no man." A few minutes before the time for sailing the steamer presented a scene of great animation, being filled, not only with the passengers, but with their friends who had come to see them off, and who were engaged in the few last, parting words. Of course, crossing the Atlantic now is not what it used to be, but it is, after all, not without some little trace of anxiety that we see our friends and loved ones commit themselves to the great deep, at the mercy of wind and wave, which are always unknown quantities. A few minutes prior to loosing the cable and drawing in the gangplank all but the passengers left the vessel, and took their position on the pier near by to watch the gallant vessel as she passed by and to wave a farewell to their friends. As the "Palatia" steamed by her passengers, crowding the decks and waving handkerchiefs, the band playing, the national colors flying in the breeze, she presented a beautiful spectacle, while the fluttering handkerchiefs on shore indicated that separation of friends which is so marked a feature of human life. The vessel sailed proudly down the bay and out toward the vast ocean, and will not touch land again until she reaches Cherbourg, France.

Such a scene as the above must have been in the mind of Paul when he said to Timothy, in the last letter he ever wrote: "The time of my departure is come." The original word here signifies loosing the moorings, and was used in connection with the departure of vessels. In his missionary travels Paul had a good deal of experience with sailors and ships. He knew what it was to weigh anchor, or loose the cable, and see the vessel move out from the shore to some distant haven. He remembered his experiences on the Mediterranean in the sailing vessels of those times, in which navigation must have had far more terrors for landsmen than it has at the present time. But the general features were the same then as now. As the end drew near his mind turned once more to the sea. The great missionary hero was thinking of the voyage across the unknown sea to the haven of rest. To him death was but setting sail from the shores of time for a "better country" and an 'abiding city." It was no uncertain voyage. It had a distinct destination. He was going home to be with the Lord. He would be leaving friends behind, but there were many who had gone before whom he would be joining. What a comforting view this is of our departure from this world! Farewells here, but greetings there. Blessed will it be for us if, when the time for our departure comes, we shall be ready to face the voyage with a calm, serene, unshaken faith.

Hero worship is not yet dead, nor is it likely to die while human nature remains as it is. We love to celebrate the heroic deeds of our great men, and we love to express our enthusiasm for the heroes themselves. No one could witness the enthusiasm displayed in this city a few days since over the presence of Admiral Dewey without realizing that he is, in a pre-eminent degree, our greatest living national hero. His popularity is limited neither by sectional nor by party lines. There is something in his personal appearance that generates enthusiasm. His face is a superb one. No picture which we have ever seen of him does him justice. He fulfills all the conditions of a popular hero. If he will drop his presidential aspirations, which we do not believe are his, but somebody else's, and will be content to remain Admiral Dewey, he will continue to be the nation's hero as long as he lives. One of the most impressive scenes during his visit to this city was his appearance in the Coliseum, which was packed with Sunday. school children, each of whom held a flag and waved it as the whole multitude sang our national, patriotic airs, together with many religious hymns. One could not witness the enthusiasm of the young people without feeling that it was worth while to give an occasion for this outburst of patriotic pride, for the purpose of fostering that spirit of patriotism which, more than standing armies or floating navies, is our nationa safeguard.

Hour of Prayer.

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

(1 Corinthians, 10:16,17; 11:23-29.)

(Uniform Midweek Prayer-meeting Topic, May 16.)

CENTRAL TRUTH: The Lord's Supper is both a manifestation of our unity with Christ and with one another, and a memorial of our Lord's death "for us men and our salvation."

The Apostle Paul had a clear understanding, under the illumination of the Spirit, of the meaning and uses of the two ordinances ordained by Christ, baptism and the Lord's Supper. He made practical use of their meaning and significance as arguments and incentives for Christian living. When some were arguing that since "where sin abounds, grace doth much more abound, why not continue in sin that grace might abound," he answered their fallacy by saying: "We who died to sin, how shall we any longer live therein? Or, are ye ignorant that all we who were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into His death? We were buried, therefore, with Him through baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we might also walk in newness of life" (Romans 6:2 4). In other words, he reminded them that the very significance of their baptism, which indicated a burial and a resurrection, is that the old life of sin has ended, and a new life of righteousness has begun. If this be so, how is it possible for us to "continue in sin?"

So, now, in the Scripture above cited, he is warning the Corinthians against the sin of idolatry. He exhorts them as follows: "Wherefore, my beloved, flee from idolatry. I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say. The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not a communion of the blood of Christ? The bread of which we partake, is it not a communion of the body of Christ? Seeing that we, who are many, are one bread, one body; for we all partake of the one bread."

The argument is clear and convincing. What, he asks, is the meaning of the cup of blessing—this memorial cup of which we partake? Is it not a communion or a common participation in the blood of Christ? And the bread which we partake, is it not also a mutual participation of the body of Christ? Do not these emblems signify to us the closest unity and fellowship with Christ? And is not our own unity with each other, as members of the body of Christ, brought about by our union with Christ? "For we all partake of the one bread." How, then, is it possible for you, who are thus united with your Lord, to be joined also to idols? And since our oneness with each other results from our union with Christ, how can that union be maintained, if we are separated from Him by our fellowship with idols?

It is clear that the argument which the apostle makes from the meaning of the Lord's Supper applies equally to the sins of our day. If the same apostle were writing to the Christians who live in this closing year of the nineteenth century, could he not point out many practices in which they engage, which are incompatible with their fellowship with Christ, as set forth in their participation of the Lord's Supper? Whatever dishonors the name of Christ, or brings his cause into disrepute, or causes His church to be evilly spoken of, or whatever weans the soul away from Christ and alienates it from the life of God—all this is inconsistent with our relation to Christ as set forth by our participation in the Lord's Supper.

In the second citation, given above, the apostle tells how he received from the Lord Himself an account of the institution of the Lord's Supper and its memorial character. "This do in remembrance of me." It was to be a memorial to the disciples, in all time, of His death in their behalf. "For as often as ye eat this bread and drink the cup, ye proclaim the Lord's death till he come." The act of participation itself, of the Lord's Supper, is a proclamation, to all who witness it, of Christ's death.

The memorial feature of the Lord's Supper, then, is clearly designed to make real and vivid to our minds the great fact of the death of Christ for our sins—a fact which, if kept in memory, ought certainly to lead to the deepest sense of gratitude to Him "by whose stripes we are healed." The fact that it was to serve this purpose "till He come" indicates the perpetuity of the institution throughout the present dispensation.

The admonition of the apostle against an unworthy participation in this sacred ordinance is needed to-day quite as much, perhaps, as when it was originally given. It is to be feared that many approach the Lord's table without a proper realization of the meaning and solemn significance of the ordinance; that they fail to discern in the emblems the Lord's body and the Lord's blood, and so they partake unworthily.

Let us see that we come to the table of the Lord with severe self-judgment, and with sincere contrition for all our trespasses and shortcomings, seeking in the right observance of this institution a renewal of that fellowship with Christ which is our only source of safety and happiness. So shall we be able to realize with the poet:

"Sweet the moments, rich in blessing,
Which before the cross I spend;
Peace and love and joy possessing
From the sinner's dying Friend."

PRAYER.

O, thou loving and gracious Father, who didst give us thine only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish, but have everlasting life, we thank Thee for the feast of love and memory which Thou hast provided Thy church, by which we may renew our allegiance to our dear Lord, and show forth his death for us and our unity in Him and with one another. We pray Thee, that we may have a right appreciation of the deep meaning and spiritual significance of this institution, to the end that we may so partake thereof that our spiritual life may be nurtured and renewed, and that our daily living may be consistent with this communion of the body and the blood of Christ. And we beseech Thee, dear Father, that at last we all may be permitted to sit down at the great marriage feast of the Lamb, to participate in all the joys and blessings of that sacred feast, and to go out from Thy presence no more forever. In Christ's name. Amen!

THE ORIGIN OF THE FOREIGN CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

W. T. MOORE.

Now that we are approaching the Silver Jubilee of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society it is well, I think, to have an accurate account of the origin of that society. It is a misfortune that the first meeting held to inaugurate the society seems to have kept no minutes of the proceedings, or else these minutes have in some way been lost. This fact has resulted in misstatements as to the origin of the society, or has led to practically no statements at all with respect to the important preliminary meeting to which reference has been made.

As it is probable I am the only person now living who has had a perfect understanding of this whole matter from the beginning, I have thought it would be proper, in the interest of trustworthy history, if I should give a somewhat detailed account of just how the Foreign Society came to be inaugurated. I do this all the more willingly because I believe the facts will show that the society was the creation of Providence rather than the result of any human wisdom.

The first definite step was taken at a meeting of the General Convention, held in the Richmond Street Church, Cincinnati, October, 1874. Of course, there had been much earnest discussion, prior to this time, respecting the importance of Foreign Missions. It is well known that the General Society had experimented a little in that direction. The missions in Jerusalem and Jamaica had created considerable interest, but these missions having been practically abandoned, the Disciples found themselves, in 1874, without even a testimony in foreign fields worthy of the name. However, on Wednesday, October 22, at the morning session, a paper was read, by Joseph King, of Pennsylvania, on the subject of Foreign Missions. In the afternoon this address was discussed by R. R. Sloan, Enos Campbell, O. A. Burgess, Thos. Munnell, C. D. Hurlbut, Isaac Errett, D. M. Graham, W. T. Moore, H. S. Earl, and W. K. Pendleton, the latter closing his remarks with the following resolution:

"Resolved, That we fully acknowledge the obligation to preach the gospel to every nation, and that we will by earnest prayer, exhortation and persistent appeal to the brotherhood do all in our power to hasten the day when we shall renew our missionary efforts in foreign lands."

After some further discussion by brothers Lane, Burgess and Pendleton this resolution was unanimously adopted.

It is proper to state, just here, that during the discussion I was the only speaker who took definite and square ground that we had reached the time when nothing but a separate movement would save us from lasting disgrace with respect to foreign missions. I insisted that no compromise resolution, which simply put the matter off by decently burying it, would answer the purpose or meet the crying demands which were at that time made upon us. Indeed, I do not think that at that particular moment any one besides myself seriously thought of a foreign society. There had been plenty of suggestions made that the General Society ought to take up the work, and some of the speakers proposed that a separate board to manage the foreign missions might be necessary; but no one except myself advocated the inauguration of a Foreign Missionary Society. This I did because I had no faith that the General Society could or would do the work. Consequently, when the Pendleton resolution was carried without any dissenting votes I made up my mind that something else must be done at once, or we would continue our failure in the foreign fields. Accordingly, I deliberately walked down stairs into the basement of the church and for some little time thought the matter carefully over and then began to invite such brethren as I thought would sympathize with the movement to meet me in the basement at an hour specified. I invited only such brethren as I felt sure would sympathize with the movement when it was fully explained. About twenty-five met me. I presided at the meeting and spent considerable time in giving my views with respect to the needs of the hour. I distinctly told those present that the Pendleton resolution, which had been passed, was simply a compromise to get over the difficulties that had been precipitated with respect to foreign missions. I then proposed that we take steps to form a Foreign Christian Missionary Society, as this seemed to me to be the only possible chance of doing anything in the direction of foreign missions. I stated that I had great faith that such a society would stimulate our mission work at home as well as abroad, and that upon the whole it would be helpful to the General Society rather than a disadvantage to it.

After a free interchange of opinion, in which many of those present participated, it was resolved to take the necessary steps to organize a Foreign Christian Missionary Society, and accordingly a committee was appointed to prepare a constitution, and to take such other steps as might be deemed important, and report finally at the annual meeting of the General Society in 1875. I was appointed chairman of this committee. During the year we had a meeting at Indianapolis, where everything was practically settled as to the constitution, etc., etc.

At the October meeting of the General Society, held at Louisville, Ky., 1875, this committee made a final report to a meeting of the friends of the enterprise, held in the basement of the church where the convention met. The constitution was adopted and officers elected accordingly. As I had been prominent in inaugurating the society there was a strong feeling among some that I ought to be its first president. This honor I emphatically and persistently declined, and urged upon the committee that had the matter in hand to report the name of Isaac Errett for president. This I believed to be not only right in itself, but I felt sure it was good policy as well, as I had faith that Bro. Errett's name would give more strength to the movement than my own. Nevertheless, it is only right that the facts should be made clear as to how these early acts took place.

The committee in charge of the organization of the new society had arranged for a place on the program of the General Society, and after the definite organization of the Foreign Society, at one of the evening sessions, I had the pleasure of making the first address ever made before that society. This address was published in the Christian Standard the week after the convention. The following extract from it will enable the reader to understand something of the spirit which animated those of us who were chiefly instrumental in starting the Foreign Christian Missionary Society:

"But away with all petty excuses that stand between the Disciples of Christ and the great work of converting the world. The time has come to end this discussion concerning the difference between tweedledee and tweedledum. It is work that we need now instead of controversy. Then let the Macedonian cry, which comes up from all quarters of the globe, so completely drown the noise of our fruitless discussions that all along the army of the Lord nothing shall be heard but the stirring command of 'Forward to the conquest of the nations.'

"But if there are those who are unwilling to work in any way, I think we ought to say to all such that we cannot wait on them any longer. For the last twenty-five years we have been trying to get forward; but surely, our progress has not been all that we could desire. And it seems to me that part of our trouble has been that those among us, who have had a true vision of our responsibilities, and who have always been willing to make real sacrifices in order to push on the work, have been largely spending their time in fruitless efforts to conciliate certain brethren who oppose all co-operative missionary labor. I say 'fruitless efforts,' for there never was a more profitless controversy than that which has been going on between our missionary and antimissionary men. If the difficulty with those who oppose us was only an intellectual aberration, then might we hope to correct it by discussion; but as long as it remains true that selfishness is at the bottom of all antimissionary logic it is worse than useless to try to overcome prejudice against us by an appeal to the reasonableness of our cause.

"It ought to be evident by this time that if the work is ever done we must do it ourselves. We cannot hope for the co-operation of those who will not co-operate in anything unless it be opposition to all that means success. Nor can we delay any longer in this matter, brethren. If we do not act now, God will give the work into other hands; for you may rest assured he will not leave himself without a faithful witness to the nations of the plea which we to-day represent."

In closing what I have to say at present I wish to indicate the following facts:

(1) The Foreign Society had its origin in spite of the conservatism which seemed determined to keep the foreign work in the hands of the General Society.

(2) It was owing to a weakness in the general missionary plan which made me lose faith in the possibilities of the General Society to do the foreign work. This weakness in what was called the "Louisville plan" was owing to the fact that the whole soul was taken out of that plan by a motion of Bro. McGarvey, which prevailed at the time the plan was adopted. I will have something to say about this matter at another time.

(3) I had prepared the way for precisely the move which I made by an article in the October number of the Christian Quarterly for 1874, which came out just before the assembling of the convention. This article was entitled "Forward or Backward—Which?" At another sitting I will give some further facts with respect to these early days.

THE EVERLASTING LIFE.

BRUCE BROWN.

"And this is life eternal, to know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."

Knowing God means very much, embracing far more than the simple acknowledgment of his existence. The young mother fondly watches for the first gleam of recognition in the eyes of her child. But when it has learned to lisp the sweetest of all words, how little it yet knows of its mother! When she answers its terrified cry at night it knows her better, and with her cool hand smoothes the pain from the fevered brow, it knows her better still. When she has lived to serve, when she is laid to rest, she is known better than ever before. Likewise we come to know God by submitting to his will and by entering into fellowship with his plans. It is only through Christ that we can come into this relationship.

Knowing God is the source of eternal life, Spencer said that a man could live forever in this world if he only knew how to adapt himself to his environment. The average length of human life has been steadily increasing with advancing civilization, despite the enervating influence of modern society and the fact that in primitive times weaklings and cripples were strangled at birth. We learn to live as we learn to know.

The love of life is God-implanted in the human heart. Men cling to life when it would seem to be a burden and a struggle to keep the flame alive within the bosom in the face of poverty and affliction and every earthly disappointment. If such an effort is made to keep alive this piece of clay, how much more earnestly should men strive to possess the pearl of greatest price!

It is very plainly stated in the Scriptures that everlasting life has its genesis in this world. It is very certain that we can never go to heaven unless we take heaven with us. How important, then, that we begin that life now! If death were but the door to immortal glory we could well afford to put away all preparation until the final hour, but since this life is but a getting into harmony with God and the development of a new set of faculties that will make us feel at home in heaven it is imperatively necessary that we enter into this work at once. We live in deeds, not in years, in heart-throbs, not in figures on the dial, and by this criterion many a man who died at thirty lived longer than Methuselah. The everlasting life is a life of everlasting service.

Yet, in a larger sense, those who shall stand at the Savior's right hand in the court of final appeal, when the books of judgment shall be opened, shall "go into everlasting life." The caterpillar, that crawls the earth, has within itself all the elements of a higher life, but it is only when the body is laid aside that it is clothed in the colors of the early morning and can drink the dew from the bosom of the rose. In the same sense the limitations of this life must be laid aside before we can enter into the enjoyment of the pleasures of the better world.

The highest evidence of the inspiration of the Scriptures is found in its pictures of a future life, free from all carnal and material desires. The Greeks sang of the elysian fields and the ancient Germans pictured heaven as a great battlefield, on which they should drink to their god, Odin, from the skulls of their slaughtered foes. The Mohammedan heaven is called a harem, and the Indian dreamed of a happy hunting ground, where he would pursue the buffalo and the deer through an unending day. But, after twenty centuries of progress, we yearn for the vision of the future life, painted by the unlettered man of Nazareth, as a child reaches for the moon.

Everlasting life is far more than meer existence. Tithomes begged the gods that he might never die, and his request was granted, but he forgot to ask for perennial youth and he soon became old and infirm and was glad to be changed into a locust. Heaven will be a place of the highest activities, where the soul will reach its best development. Everlasting life will mean freedom from the galling dominion of sin, which is continually mutilating and corrupting our fondest hopes and noblest purposes. Even the mighty apostle of the Gentiles was compelled to confess that he did the very things that he ought not to do, and this sad refrain is a discord in the melody of every life.

Everlasting life will mean the absence of all that has distressed. The invalid will be healed of his disease, the cripple will receive his strength and the aged will drink at the fountain of eternal youth. The tongue of the dumb will sing and God shall wipe away all tears from our eyes.

Everlasting life will mean freedom from imprisonment. When I was a child terror filled my soul when I thought of leaving this earthly body, but since then it has pained me so often and cost me so much trouble to keep it in repair and still persists in plaguing me with ugly passions and evil thoughts that I shall be glad to be clothed upon with a better medium for the expression of life's motives. This tongue refuses to sing the songs that I have in my soul and this hand will not write down my best thoughts. I long for the day when I can do what I want to do and be what I want to be.

Everlasting life will mean a development of all our present faculties. With the telescope our vision is enlarged and the heavens are adorned with new and unnumbered worlds. Under the power of the microscope a new world is discovered in every grain of sand. A new world populated by thousands of living creatures is found in a drop of water, all of them so very small that it would take a year for one to circumnavigate its tiny globe. Like an ox in a meadow, only seeing the grass to eat, we pass through this marvelous and beautiful world with blinded eyes. Our dumb ears only catch the coarsest sound vibrations while we ought to hear the singing of the morning stars and the music of the spheres. Life will be magnified a millionfold when heaven has taught us to feel and see and hear.

Liberated from the cell house of this body, the soul will be endowed with new faculties. Of a few of these science is already giving us a foretaste. The wireless telegraph prophecies the wireless telephone and that will be a presage of omnipresence and the railroads are helping in this by annihilating space and distance. The harnessing of Niagara and the chaining of the lightning to obey the will of man is a token of omnipotence when infinite power can be generated by a softly spoken word. Astronomy, which can tell of an eclipse a million years hence, betokens omniscience, when we shall know even as we ourselves are known, and all the future will be as legible as the past. What a happy day it will be when all our struggling for knowledge and groping for light will be over! A dog was chloroformed in Cincinnati and in a perfectly unconscious state was taken 300 miles south and resuscitated and liberated. Within ten minutes it had swung around a half circle and headed for home, and in sixty hours it was whining at its master's door. Without a teacher the bee makes its honey and the bird builds its nest. The soul of man is to be unfettered and endowed with new and higher faculties, and then "a day in the courts of the Lord will be better than a thousand."

But our only hope of everlasting life rests on the resurrection of Christ. "Any theory of the future state founded on human wisdom or science, wanting the sanction of divine authority, can afford neither confidence nor comfort to any reflecting mind."—A. Campbell. "The world by wisdom knew not God" and the future must be unknown until it is read in the light of heaven's message.

While the future is very largely, and for our own good, enveloped in mystery, this should not deter us from the preparation for its enjoyment. The sun is one of the profoundest mysteries of the universe, but the drooping flower gladly lifts its face to receive into its bosom genial warmth and radiance. We may not know all that eternity holds in store, but we may turn our faces toward the early morning and behold the Sun of Righteousness as he rises with healing in his wings.

Denver, Col.

OUR FIRST CONGRESS.

Method of the Holy Spirit's Operation in Salvation.

A. B. JONES.

On this "crucial point" Mr. Mathews has given us the most thoroughly competent, exhaustive, up-to-date discussion that has ever appeared from one of our writers, as the matter appears to the present critic. This treatment is analytical, philosophical and eminently scriptural. It is a matter of satisfaction that he finished that task before his death and left that article to bear testimony to the world of his ability to thus bear witness to the truth. This whole essay of Mr. Mathews must not be simply read, but must be studied with Bible in hand, to be understood and appreciated.

Mr. Ellis dissents, in a very pronounced way, from the position of Mr. Mathews, but in the opinion of the present writer he fails to grapple with Mr. Mathews on the vital points of the argument. This attempt to fortify himself against the reasoning of Mr. Mathews and to ward off the blows given by Mr. M, finds its greatest plausibility and potency—let us rather say its greatest plausible potency—in quoting from Alexander Campbell some of his utterances on this subject. And, as it appears to me, he has done Mr. Campbell, Mr. Mathews and himself injustice by these quotations. The gist of this discussion can be best reached and made manifest by considering Mr. Campbell's quoted declarations in the light of Mr. Campbell himself. One brief quotation will make bare the real issue:

"I believe the Spirit accompanies the Word, is always present with the Word, and actually and personally works through it upon the moral nature of man, but not without it."

Now there are two ways of interpreting that sentence: 1. The Spirit operates upon the moral nature of man, using the truth in his actual, personal operations; 2. The Word of God was inspired by the Holy Spirit, and this Word alone operates upon the moral nature of man.

As I understand these two essayists, Mr. Mathews holds to the first statement and Mr. Ellis holds to the second. Mr. Ellis adroitly dodges the issue and plays the sophist when he says: "We must still hold with the fathers, as a truth, that the Holy Spirit operates in salvation not without the Word of truth." Mr. Mathews made no such contention as that. Mr. Ellis changes the point of discussion. There are three positions on this question: 1. The Holy Spirit without the truth converts and saves men; 2. The Word of truth without the Spirit converts and saves men; 3. The Spirit and the truth, operating together, both operating, convert and save men.

Calvinists hold to the first statement. Mr. Ellis and his school of thinkers hold to the second statement. Mr. Mathews and Mr. Campbell hold to the third. Let us be done with this unmanly playing "hide-and-seek" on this question. The Spirit operates through the truth, is one proposition. The Spirit operates without the truth, is another proposition. The truth operates without the Spirit, is still another proposition. Where do we all stand? It is not difficult to find where Mr. Campbell stood. Hear him. In 1842, in the Mill. Harbinger, he says: "The Scriptures teach the gracious agency of the Holy Spirit in the conversion of sinners in every age. . . . . I have no doubt that some of our brethren may have so expressed themselves as if in the conversion of sinners it was all Word and no Spirit; nay, indeed, that the Word and Spirit are identical. I have on various occasions had to repudiate such an idea." And a full page of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST might be occupied with quotations from Mr. C. of similar import.

F. N. CALVIN'S SUPPLEMENTARY STATEMENT ON CRUCIAL POINTS CONCERNING THE HOLY SPIRIT.

The committee that arranged the program of "Our First Congress" was happy in its appointments and provisions for the discussion of the subject of the Holy Spirit. It would have been difficult to plan more wisely than they did in order to a full development of the subject in all its phases. It would have been difficult to have found three men more competent for their respective duties than Messrs. Mathews, Ellis and Calvin.

Messrs. Mathews and Ellis cross swords and test by argument, by severe logic, the pros and cons of the subject. While Mr. Calvin gives a "Supplementary Statement," designed to bring out the practical phases of the matter, the practical, crucial points concerning the Holy Spirit. No man can read his statement without being impressed with his ability as a man of thought, a man of strong intellectual and religious character. Mr. Calvin believes his Bible. The teachings of the New Testament concerning the Holy Spirit he accepts, in the same way and to the same extent that he accepts its teachings about baptism. With open mind and open heart he appears to say: "Yea, Lord, speak, for thy servant heareth." It is refreshing to find a full or big man, a man who is not lopsided in his make-up and consequently dwarfed in his Christian stature. When the Scriptures say: "Repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins," Mr. Calvin accepts it. And when it is said: "You shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit," he accepts that. When it is said: "Faith comes by hearing the Word of God," he accepts it. When it is said: "Received ye the Spirit since ye believed?" he accepts that. He sees in the doctrine of the Holy Spirit the greenest pastures of the New Testament—greenest because the incarnation, the atonement, the resurrection and the glorification of Christ all find their culmination, confirmation and beatification in the subsequent work of the Spirit.

Mr. Calvin believes in the Holy Spirit, in the personal ministry of the Holy Spirit, in "a realization of the Holy Spirit," in "a realization of the realization of the Holy Spirit." He insists that "one of three things must be true: 1. Our teachings are not sustained by the Bible promises; or, 2. The Bible promises are not true; or, 3. The Christian world is living far below its privileges and possibilities."

Hear him again in his own words: "In our study of the limitations of the Spirit, let us consider carefully whether God has limited the Spirit so that he cannot make his presence known to us except by a correct exegesis of the Scriptures, or whether we, by our own actions, are limiting him, and in this way preventing his becoming to us an actual experience. It matters little to me whether you call it a possession of the Spirit, an enduement of the Spirit or a baptism of the Spirit. The important thing to me is to know whether there be any Holy Spirit promised and whether that promise has been fulfilled in me. Does he actually dwell in me and help me? If not, why not?"

Hear Mr. Calvin again: "It seems to me that we are forced to one of three positions: 1. To a readjustment of our interpretation of the Scriptures on this subject; or, 2. Accept the rationalistic view; or, 3. Begin a new crusade for a larger spiritual experience than we have ever yet enjoyed. This is to be done by first opening our own hearts for an infilling."

And now hear his searching questions: "Why this spiritual dearth? Who is responsible for this state of affairs? Largely, the ministry. 1. The evangelists; 2. The pastors. Much evangelism has been to depreciate the work of the Holy Spirit. I have heard more sermons telling what the Holy Spirit does not do than I ever heard telling what he may do." Mr. Calvin then speaks of the phrase "born of water and of the Spirit" and says: "There are two extremes relative to this doctrine. The mystics make it all Holy Spirit baptism. Rationalists leave out all practical ideas of the Holy Spirit's part. Some churches have too many mystics; but I fear that we have too many Rationalists, who have been born of water only."

He finally arraigns our pastors for not bringing themselves to realize and experience, and for not expounding to their congregations the meaning of such Scriptures as the following: "In one Spirit were we all baptized into one body." "He shall be in you." "How much more shall your Father in heaven give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him." "Be not drunk with wine, wherein is riot, but be filled with the Holy Spirit." "Ye were washed, ye were sanctified, ye were justified in the name of the Lord Jesus and by the Spirit of our God." "The kingdom of God is righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Spirit." "Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that you may abound in hope through the power of the Holy Spirit." "The Spirit helps our infirmities, for we know not what we should pray for as we ought; but the Spirit also himself maketh intercession for us with groanings that cannot be uttered. And he that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit; because he maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God." "And because ye are sons, God has sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts crying, Abba, Father."

Let every young preacher who would be wiser and better secure this book and read it and study it, and preach on the above texts.

Liberty, Mo.

THE LAW OF EXPEDIENTS.

E. E. HARTLEY.

1. Their place in the church.

How much we are under bondage to this law may be understood better when we enumerate some of the accepted expedients. The meeting house, which our most conservative brethren admit is a necessity, is yet only an expedient. Others, whose propriety can scarcely be questioned, are the church books, the clerk, the treasurer, hiring a preacher by the year, etc. These and many more are used by the most conservative with no hesitation. That expedients are necessary to successful church work must be universally admitted.

2. What are expedients?

That the New Testaments does not detail the methods of required works is apparent. And it is this fact which stamps it as the text-book of the only universal religion. All other so-called Bibles do so, and thus exalt forms and ceremonies above principles, while at the same time the religion is bound down to a particular age and nation. But in the fullness of time God judged that man had come into his full estate of manhood and gave to him the true system of religious principles, leaving the working rules to the judgment and character of every age and race. This makes scriptural ritualism impossible and classes everything not strictly religious as expedients, subject to the judgment of the church.

3. The mistake of the conservatives.

The effort of our brethren, as well as of many other Protestant bodies, to follow exactly the proverb adopted by Thomas Campbell: "Where the Bible speaks we speak, where the Bible is silent we are silent," has always produced disastrous results. Our most radical "antis" have never dreamed of following the proverb literally, even though one of our foremost papers for years has always carried it as a motto on the title-page. For instance, in opposing the organs and societies for church work they have really been "innovators" all the time in that they did not oppose meeting houses. The Plymouth Brethren have been more consistent in that they meet only from house to house, refuse to keep records, and lists of names, etc., for want of a "Thus saith the Lord." Of course, this sect has never done any work for the Master, for want of methods of work. And our "antis" would have been equally fruitless in labor had they been as consistent as this sect. As it is, the great growth of our people, a hundred per cent. in two decades, has been almost entirely among the progressive churches.

4. The cause of the mistake.

It is noticeable that when any one first sees the errors of sectarianism he swings far to the other extreme. That the son should have corrected the extreme position of his father was but to have been expected, and thus Alexander, and not Thomas Campbell, gives to the world the correct view of the apostolic writings. But our persistency in refusing to read Campbell's books is most remarkable and unfortunate, too, because no one who studies "The Christian System" can ever train the "antis." In this book is a limiting clause, oft repeated, which alone solves all questions of expediency, settles logically and forever all discord between "antis" and "progressives," and furnishes a basis for right methods in good works. What a mistake to have neglected such writings!

5. Our true position.

"In every article of faith, and all matters of religious practice, where the Bible speaks, we speak, and where the Bible is silent we are silent." This is the proverb, with its limiting clause, which appears frequently in "The Christian System," and is so exclusive and inclusive that when understood and applied it will allow us the most perfect system of church government with which to preach the gospel of the apostles. Every other attempt to limit Thomas Campbell's proverb has failed, and our brethren have adopted Bible-schools, C. E. and missionary societies, organs, etc., with many qualms of conscience and a feeling that they were compromising the gospel. All this may now cease.

6. The clause explained.

"In every article of faith" covers the whole ground of truth and doctrine. It allows no additions to or subtractions from the apostolic writings. It forbids the formation of a creed composed of selected excerpts from these writings. It requires us to use as our creed only what the apostles used, and to use that as they used it.

While faith is certainly a unit, practice or works is evidently of at least two orders. "And all matters of religious" practice implies that there must be church work which can scarcely be called "religious." Of course it could not be "irreligious" work, so the distinction must be made in another way. Certain things are commended and these we will call "religious" practice, but as methods are never given we must call all methods of work "business" practice. We will be clear then on the law of expediency, and the discord during the past forty years may cease.

7. The law applied.

Business methods in the church may be determined as follows: "Forsake not the the assembling of yourselves together" is a commandment, therefore "religious" practice; but the place of meeting is left entirely to our business sense. "Lay by in store" is "religious" practice. How to collect and expend is an expedient, or "business" practice. "Go into all the world and preach" is "religious," while the method of managing the affairs of those who go is "business" practice. "Bring up the children" is commanded, and schools and C. E. Societies as means thereto are expedients. "Singing and making melody" is religious practice, while the method of starting the tune and carrying it, by guess, tuning fork or organ, is simply an expedient and to be determined by the singers alone. These and all expedients in church work should be left to those who work, and neither elders nor churches as such have any right to pass judgment on them. Rather than this, elders should diligently seek out the best methods of work and adopt them, whether new or old.

Finally, brethren, I exhort you all that hereafter we may never hear, either in sermon, convention address or paper, the impossible proverb of Thomas Campbell, but in its stead the better one of Alexander Campbell, by which it will be possible to bring all right-minded people into the one fold, with its one shepherd, even Jesus Christ our Lord.

Toledo, O.

[The positions taken above concerning the law of expedients are, we believe, impregnable. We do not think this view of the use of use of expedients, however, is in the slightest antagonism with the motto of Thomas Campbell. "Where the Scriptures speak we speak, and where the Scriptures are silent we are silent." That motto has been grossly abused by the opponents of the expedients mentioned above. It was intended to be a declaration of freedom, not a chain of bondage. The motto means that where the Word of the Lord binds us we are willing to be bound, but where it leaves us free we propose to remain free. The teaching of Christ does not bind us in the matter of methods or expedients; we are, therefore, at liberty to use such as we find beneficial. The motto is all right; it is the abuse of it that has wrought mischief. —EDITOR.]

Will Go With America.

DEAR BRO. GARRISON:—I want to congratulate you on the Home Mission number of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. It will certainly contribute much toward making the May offering the largest in our history.

It is indeed most gratifying to note the steadily growing interest in the work of evangelizing America. To our people this work is manifestly of primary importance. It is true that the world will go as America goes. It is not less true that America's future will be determined by the action or inaction of the forces of Christianity. What is the destiny of America—of the world? Let the churches answer. But the Christian religion fettered by human creeds and bound by ecclesiastical rules will never be able to win this country or any other to Christ. If the gospel is to run and be glorified it must be free. In the providence of God the Disciples of Christ have been commissioned to proclaim an unfettered meesage. The inevitable conclusion to which all this leads us would stagger even a brave heart if it were not for the promise accompanying the commission: "Lo, I am with you alway." In the the strength of this promise and with a burning sense of the importance of our plea to this and to all the nations of the world it is the sacred duty and the blessed privilege of every Church of Christ and every believer in the land to rally to the support of Home Missions on the first Lord's day in May and send a worthy offering to Brethren Smith as soon thereafter as a draft can be secured. Let the offering be commensurate with the responsibility laid upon us. P. J. RICE.

South Bend, Ind.

Our Budget.

—Time for May offering continues till you take it.

—If last Lord's day proved unfavorble, try again.

—Great strike on among the street car employes of this city. St. Louisans will have an opportunity of practicing the noble art of pedestrianism.

A note from Secretary B. L. Smith announces rainy Sunday through a large part of the Mississippi Valley on Sunday last, and expresses the hope that no church will allow this to interfere with the annual offering for Home Missions.

The Oklahoma Ministerial Institute holds its meeting on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week, at Norman. The editor of this paper has promised to be with them and deliver some lectures.

—The twelfth anniversary of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip was celebrated by appropriate services in many places throughout the country on last Sunday. For literature and information about this brotherhood address C. E. Wycoff, Irvington, N. J.

—The Missionary Voice, just out, is a Children's Day number and filled with vigorously written paragraphs and strikingly illustrated. Churches that have taken the offering for Home Missions may now send on to A. McLean and F. M. Rains for literature for Children's Day, but by no means overlook or postpone the offering for Home Missions.

—We are glad to learn that W. F. Richardson, of Kansas City, Mo., is to assist J. P. Pinkerton in a meeting in Jefferson City, Mo. This is one of the churches in the state of Missouri that ought to be raised up to a church of commanding influence and power, located, as it is, in the capital of a great state. Bro. Pinkerton is doing a good work there. He understands the wants of the church and should have the assistance needed to make it what it ought to be, and we are glad that Bro. Richardson is going to his assistance.

—W. E. Harlow, of Parsons, Kansas, has disposed of his entire interest in the School of Suggestive Therapeutics, with a view of devoting himself wholly to the work of the ministry, in which he has been remarkably successful in the past It gives us great pleasure to make this announcement, for we are sure Brother Harlow will be able to accomplish much more good by giving his undivided time to the ministry than in any other calling. Brother Harlow has made a brilliant record, both as an evangelist and as a pastor, and brethren having need of either will make no mistake by giving him a call.

—We call the attention of the readers of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST in St. Louis and vicinity to the program of our next Bible-school convention at California, Mo., as published in this number of this paper. It is confidently expected that as it marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of our Bible-school organization in this state it will be a sort of jubilee convention and will be long remembered for its enthusiastic helpfulness. The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has made arrangement for a special coach to be attached to the Missouri Pacific train, which leaves St. Louis Monday morning, June 11, at 9 o'clock. All who are interested in the Bible-schools of St. Louis and those who can conveniently come by way of this city are invited to join the party. If you expect to go with us please send your name and address at once to W. D. Cree, in care of this office. This is necessary because the special coach will be furnished only provided a sufficient number of passengers to justify its use is assured.

—We call the careful attention of our readers to page 589, where will be found our announcement of Alexander Campbell's works at greatly reduced prices. Our offers cannot be duplicated by any other publishing house. Campbell's complete works for eight dollars is a phenomenal bargain.

—Last Saturday morning (May 5) we received orders for twenty-six copies of Campbell's "Christion Baptism." The orders came from points as widely separated as California and Nova Scotia. This is the volume (444 pages) that we offer for 50 cents.

—The following addition for St. Louis were reported in this office on last Monday: East St. Louis, W. A. Melvan, three; Mt. Cabanne, D. R. Dungan, three; Ellendale, A. J. Marshall, 11; Central, Baxter Waters, five; Second, W. D. Pittman, one; Fifth, W. F. Hamann, one.

—We are receiving many graceful letters of thanks and appreciation of our late offers of book bargains. We are glad to know that we have enabled many Disciples to secure longed-for volumes. We purpose to continue the good work, and are grateful for the encouragement we are receiving from all quarters.

—We regret to learn that the Colorado state paper, The Way, has had to suspend. The paper was ably edited by Leonard G. Thompson and ought to have been more liberally patronized by our Colorado brethren. A state can hardly do its work in these days without a state organ to assist. It is a connecting link between the state board and the people, without which both the board and the people are at a great disadvantage.

—Among all the other political conventions which are to be held during the coming summer, the Prohibition State Convention will be held at Mexico, June 13-15. National Chairman Oliver W. Stewart and Messrs. Woolley and Howard will deliver addresses. Mr. Stewart is widely known as a minister of the Christian Church and is an able speaker, as are also the other two gentlemen mentioned.

—"I'll tell you what," said Billy, the foreman of the mailing department, as we passed through his room awhile ago, "there's been a powerful sight of new names added to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST list, lately; I can see the difference in mailing very plainly. And the same thing is true, too, of the Sunday-school papers." And the faithful man seemed as pleased at this increase of work as the president of the company could be.

—The Brandur Co., New York, has issued a book, by Orlando J. Smith, entitled "The Coming Democracy," in which he suggests a simple and unique plan of city government. His proposition is to have each city elect annually a board of trustees and then place the entire government of the city in the hands of this board. The unique feature of his plan, however, consists in the method of electing this board. In the first place, the number of trustees determined upon in a given city are to be divided to each political party according to its voting strength, so that at an election the voter simply selects a ticket representing the party to which he belongs, or with which he votes, and then on this ticket writes the name of any man in his judgment best fitted for a place on the board. The names in each party receiving the largest number of votes up to the number of the trustees to which each party is entitled in the board are to be declared elected. In this way all primary elections and nominating conventions are avoided and political bosses, cliques, rings and machines defeated, in the judgment of Mr. Smith. The plan is certainly a simple one and worthy of the serious consideration of our statesmen and municipal reformers.

—We are just in receipt of information of the death of the aged patriarch, Philander Green, who departed this life on the 18th of last month. In our next week's issue we will give a portrait and sketch of this father in Israel. In a note from his son, F. M. Green, he says: "There are only two of his companions in pioneer life now living, J. Harrison Jones and W. A. Belding." One by one the pioneers of those early days are leaving us to join their fellow-laborers who have passed on before them into the unseen world. Let us cherish their memory and seek to emulate their example of fidelity and heroism.

—The new church building in Bethany, Mo., built by the Church of Christ, was dedicated on last Sunday. Dr. H. O. Breeden, of Des Moines, Iowa, preached the dedicatory. A fine program had been prepared and the day was one of great interest and pleasure to the people of Bethany.

—Chas. A. Burton, pastor of the church at Benton, Ill, having resigned, the church at Benton is in need of a new pastor and for a suitable man they can pay a fair salary for full time. Correspondence should be addressed to W. R. Ward. Elder Burton did a good work while there, but was called to LaHarpe, Hancock, County, Ill., in which place he has a larger field of work.

—In this paper elsewhere will be found a tribute to elder Wm. B. Hunt that will be of unusual interest because of his association with and part in the Restorative movement. The life of this man is being written by his son, John N. Hunt, of New York City, a loyal Disciple of Christ and of national reputation as an educator.

—"Leaves from Mission Fields," by N. M. Ragland ($1.00), and "Missionary Addresses," by A. McLean ($ .60), are two volumes that are essential to the well-equipped preacher.

—The Chautauqua Assembly season opens June 22nd, and it is said promises to surpass any previous season in its program. The scope of its educational courses and variety of entertainment set forth in the descriptive catalogue for 1900 offer rare inducements to those seeking the combination of both profit and pleasure for the summer. The summer schools for 1900 will be of exceptional value this year. The descriptive circular entitled "Pictorial Chautauqua" is a fine piece of work and invitingly presents the interests of the schools, lectures and entertainments of this popular resort for the summer.

—A. B. Jones, of Liberty, Mo., has furnished us with four articles on "Our First Congress," two of which appeared in our issue of last week and the remainining two this week. Being short, we put two together under one heading last week and the remaining two this week. This will explain the apparent conclusion of the writer at the close of the first part of the article last week. The words, "enough for one sitting" etc., being followed immediately with the "next week" article should have been omitted, but was overlooked in this office.

—A dispatch from Davis, I. T., May 5, states that Hugh Myers, city marshal, of Davis, was shot and killed on that date by two desperate negroes who, in leaving the town, began firing off their pistols. Myers, in the discharge of his official duties, went to investigate the trouble and overtook the negroes a half mile from the business part of the town, when the negroes began shooting at him. Some of the shots took effect in the abdomen, and he lived only a few minutes. Myers, the dispatch states, was a brave and efficient officer and very popular in the town. He leaves a wife and several children to mourn his loss. Mr. Myers was a brother of T. M. and J. S. Myers, preachers who are widely known among us.

—One of the means of enlarging the work of the Orphans' Home of the B. A. C. C. is that of eight persons jointly pledging $10 each for the support of a child in the home one year, and Iowa is the first state to furnish a pledge of this kind. The names of the Iowa list on this joint pledge of ten dollars each are J. M. Hoffmann, Boone; Walter Wheelon, Rock Rapids; M. E. Beeney, Flora Shaver and Mrs. V. B. Browning of Frank Pierce; J. H. McDowell and Adam Decker, of Bladensburg, and Ella Plaxton, of Greeley. This is a good plan for equalizing the burden and ought to become a popular one because of the nature of the work.

—To get Church Extension news down to date you want to read the March and April number of Business and Christianity, a copy of which has just reached our table. Our Church Extension secretary, G. W. Muckley, knows how to present church extension through the press as well as the pulpit and is making good use of this magazine in this much-needed department of our Home Mission work.

—The Sunday-school Times, April 28, contains a very suggestive editorial on "Called to be Laymen," a call that is too frequently overlooked and unappreciated. Why is not a call to be a so-called "lay worker" as essential and as divine as any other call, and if better heeded would not only prevent many embarrassments and failures, but greatly improve the efficiency of both the pulpit and the pew.

—No more ietters need to be sent to J. G. M. enquiring after the lantern he advertised for sale in our Subscribers' Want column. The lantern is sold. Thus we are continually assured of the value of our columns for advertising purposes. If you have a legitimate article for sale at a reasonable price you cannot find a better medium through which to reach the best of people than the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

—Mrs. J. H. McKay has resigned her position with the State Female College at Memphis, Tenn., to take charge of the school in the Leath Orphan Asylum in the same city. Sister McKay is the widow of the late J. H. McKay, is a loyal, earnest Disciple, an active advocate of first-class religious literature. To her efforts we owe much of the splendid growth of the circulation of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST in the great Tennessee metropolis.

—Geo. C. Stoll, a preacher who recently came to us from "The Church of God," read an interesting paper before our ministerial association on last Monday on "Modern Spiritualism." Bro. Stoll has had an opportunity of knowing the inside of modern Spiritualism, or rather Spiritism, and does not hesitate to pronounce it a deception and a fraud. He believes it a poisonous, ruinous doctrine and is prepared to show that its phenomena is of human origin only. Modern Spiritism is by no means a dead issue and must be met or its pernicious effects will increase in the land. If any church or community would know the true character of this dangerous doctrine or so-called philosophy, Brother Stoll could be secured to enlighten them on its so-called mysteries. It would be difficult for Spiritualism to flourish in a community where its frauds can be exposed as Bro. Stoll can expose them. His address is 3443 Laclede Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

—With the issue of the Christian Century for May 3rd Geo. A. Campbell ceases to be its editor, and is succeeded in the editorial chair by C. A. Young. We know of no paper in our brotherhood that has improved in its literary tone and spirit more rapidly than the Christian Century, and no small degree of this improvement is due to the studious care of its retiring editor. That there will be no backward step in this change is assured in the name of its new editor. Charles A. Young is known throughout the brotherhood as a preacher, lecturer and writer of a high order and will seek to enlarge the influence of the Century. We are particularly impressed with the following prophetic words from the retiring editor's closing address:

Some day we will have great religious papers, papers compared with which the present representatives will appear but feeble attempts. Some day it may be borne in upon the consciousness of Christians that the religious press must be viewed as are colleges and missionary societies—an essential institution of the church, to be supported by a liberal endowment. That time may be near, but it is not yet.

"Deeds Are Better Than Words."

What does Hood's Sarsaparilla do? The answer comes full-throated from a gigantic chorus of healthy men and happy women. "It does just what it claims to do." It purifies the blood as nothing else can. The number of those who answer thus is legion and their sentiment is unanimous.

Kidney Trouble—"Grip left me with severe pains in my back and kidneys. Could not walk without support. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and was soon relieved. Am also cured of catarrh and indigestion." W. A. Reed, 17 Mowry Avenue, East Providence, R. I.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

THE WORKS OF ALEXANDER CAMPBELL

THE CHRISTIAN SYSTEM.

358 pages, 12mo, cloth. A digest of the Christianity of Christ, and of the faith and practice of the primitive church. Price, $1.00.

POPULAR LECTURES AND ADDRESSES.

649 pages, 8vo, cloth. A splendid volume, now offered at a reduced price for the first time. Formerly sold at $3.00. Price, $2.00.

LECTURES ON THE PENTATEUCH.

Delivered at Bethany. Edited by W. T. Moore. The book includes portrait and sketch of Mr. Campbell. 379 pages, cloth. Price, $1.00.

THE CHRISTIAN BAPTIST.

New edition; seven volumes in one! 680 pages, 8vo. Bound in leather. Now offered at a reduced price for the first time. Price, $2.00.

CAMPBELL-PURCELL DEBATE.

Romanism against Protestantism. A battle of giants. 360 pages, cloth, red edges. Price recently reduced from $1.50 to $1.00.

CAMPBELL-OWEN DEBATE.

A discussion on the evidences of Christianity with the noted infidel, Mr. Robert Owen. Price recently reduced from $1.50 to $1.00.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM.

A very full and able treatise on the action, design and subjects of baptism. 444 pages; bound in leather or half-leather. Price, $ .50.

LIVING ORACLES.

The New Testament, translated by Drs. Campbell, McKnight and Doddridge. Notes, emendations, appendix, etc. 336 pages, cloth. Price, $ .50.

The CAMPBELL LIBRARY, complete as above, together with Mr. Campbell's "Life and Death," "Sermon on the Law," and "Letters to a Skeptic" (pamphlets), sent for only EIGHT DOLLARS. This includes all of Campbell's works, except the Campbell-Rice Debate, which is out of print. At former prices these works cost fourteen dollars. These books were never before offered so cheaply. Any volume sent singly on receipt of the price named, or the entire list of eight volumes and three pamphlets for only EIGHT DOLLARS. Tbis offer will not soon be equaled.

THE CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Personal Mention.

J. B. Corwine and H. F. Davis spent a day in this office last week looking up the history of the Missouri Bible work in the files of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

J. Fraise Richard has been chosen to deliver the address on Decoration Day at Fayette, Ohio, and also the address to the students of the Fayette Normal University on commencement day in June.

Joel Brown, field agent for the B. A. C. C. and Orphans' Home for Iowa and other states, called at this office while in the city last week and related many encouraging incidents of his work.

The Methodist Gleaner devotes two whole pages to the life and work of Bro. Lotz, who recently died at West Plains, Mo. The same number also makes extended notice of the recent lecture of Geo. Hall, of Decatur, Ill., in that city.

Bro. Wm. Branch, one of our well-known Illinois preachers is spending some time in Central Kentucky, and churches wishing his services for one or more Lord's days are requested to address him at once at Danville, Ky.

In stepping from a street car in Kansas City, April 24, our state secretary, T. A. Abbott, fell and received some very painful bruises, from which he was laid up for a few days but he is now about well again.

T. A. Hedges expects to enter the evangelistic field, at the end of his engagement with the Missouri state board, and requests that parties desiring his services in meetings or institutes should write him at La Grange, Mo.

We regret to learn that the health of Alexander Procter, Independence, Mo., is again in a low state. But whatever his physical condition n thing ever clouds his buoyant, hopeful spirit. He is pre-eminently a man of faith and trust, and never complains at the will of his Heavenly Father.

Dr. R. A. Jesse, president of the University of Missouri, has been elected a member of the General Committee of the American Group of the International Association for the Advancement of Science, Arts and Education. The president is Leon Bourgeois, of France, the vice-presidents, James Bruce, Archibald Giekie and W. T. Harris.

C. W. Gard reports $10 contributed by the church and Sunday-school at Douglas, Kan., for the famine sufferer in India, at his regular appointment, April 29th. Also $1.32 from the Y. P. S. C. E. of the same place for the same purpose. He addressed the W. C. T. U. Institute by invitation in the M. E. Church Sunday night. The city election in Douglas, he says, favored the prohibition law.

George Darsie, of Frankfort, Ky., was one of the delegates to the Ecumenical Conference and stopped at the same hotel with Bro. Rains and the editor of this paper. Both these brethren left before we did, but their stay with us relieved the tedium of hotel life very much. Bro. Darsie was to engage in a meeting at Frankfort on his return home without waiting for the decision of the gubernatorial question.

T. M. Burgess, for the past two years Supt. of the Public Schools, Gardner City, Ill., will resume his studies at Eureka College, this fall. He would like to preach for some church in Illinois within reach of Eureka. He has had some experience in the ministry and can furnish testimonials. The high school commencement occurs on June 8th, after which time he is open for engagement. Any church in need of a preacher for part time would do well to correspond with Bro. Burgess.

F. E. Meigs, who has returned to this country for a rest, after an absence of eight years, reached New York City in time to attend the sessions of the great Ecumenical Conference. He made one of the volunteer speeches at the session on Christian Literature. He sent his family directly to this country while he came by way of Palestine, Egypt and through some of the leading European cities. We had the pleasure of having him for a traveling companion from New York to Cincinnati, on his way to Holden, Mo., where he will join his family, and where his address will be during his sojourn in this country. When he is rested a little he will be ready to respond to the calls of churches to lecture on China or presnt the claims of that great mission field. Those who have heard Bro. Meigs count his addresses among the most interesting and valuable of those made by our missionaries.

"Sing His Praises."

A Service of Song for Children's Day.

By F. S. Shepard and L. E. Jones.

Contains the following songs, written for this work: "Brightest of the Festal Days," "Remember Thy Creator," "Children's Day," "Gladsome Days," "Do Something for Somebody, Quick!" "Little Workers," "We're Singing," "Swing Song," etc., etc. Recitations, Responsive Readings, etc.

5 CENTS PER COPY; 50 CENTS PER DOZEN.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, ST. LOUIS, MO.

F. M. Rains, treasurer of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society, has gone to the sanitarium at Battle Creek, Michigan, with his family, for a complete rest, for a few weeks or months, with the hope of finding relief from his facial paralysis. We are sure our readers will join us in a sincere wish and prayer that he may be fully restored to health soon.

CHANGES.

H. C. Carter, Colchester, Ill., to Frankfort, Ind.
E. A. Cantrell, Chicago, Ill., to Washington, Ind.
Frank Hollingsworth, Sidney to Alvin, Ill.
W. F. Flower, Cherry Vale to Peru, Kan.
W. C. German, Pardee, Kan., to Atwood, Col.
E. F. Randall, Swampscott, Mass., to Troy, Penn.
Morgan Morgans, Brownwood to Richland Springs, Tex.
F. A. Sheetz, Fontanell to Casey, Ia.
W. T. Maupin, Forest City to Oregon, Mo.
A. C. Maupin, Indian Mills to Ballards, W. Va.
E. F. Keran, Kansas to Inclose, Ill.
I. H. Decker, Eldorado Springs, Mo., to Pond Creek, O. T.

A Letter From Aunt Hetty.

I have recently received a letter from Sister Hetty Keiser, of Bloomington, Ill., in which, among other interesting things, she tells of Brother Willett's lectures there. As Mrs. Keiser is 92 years of age I am confident that the following verbatim copy of parts of her letter will be of interest to the readers of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST:

"It now seems to me that Brother Willett must have had a hypnotic influence over the large audiences that crowded the house every night. I have never seen such rapt attention by any other audience as was evidenced by the entire congregation, made up largely of the denominations and the world. Even this aged woman was in her place night after night, never missed a sentence or thought of being weary, and not only not weary, but so absorbed 'that this dry old heart' was so stirred that tears would flow long after the speaker's voice was silent. . . . Brother Willett gave one lecture in the First Presbyterian Church, by request of the pastor of that church on "Higher Criticism," which was in every respect equal to any in his regular course. He has no fears of criticism, whether higher or lower. I have not heard a word of criticism on any of his utterances or position, while here. . . . . One good thing has resulted from my hearing these lectures. I have read the New Testament with renewed interest."

This letter is interesting to me, not simply because it comes from Aunt Hetty, a woman of rare intellect and strong faith, who has ever believed in contending for the faith once delivered to the saints, but also because of her testimony as to the result of hearing Brother Willett's lectures. She says they prompted her to read the New Testament with added interest. I am glad to say that I find this to be the effect upon all with whom I have talked that had the pleasure of hearing Brother Willett's Bible lectures. Brother Willett's learning, his reverence for the truth and ability as a speaker, enable him to open up new fields of thought in a most interesting way and impart an additional charm to Bible study. I have known Brother Willett intimately for over fourteen years and have learned to value him more highly as the days go by. The recognition his scholarship and ability as a speaker are receiving, both in this country and England, is certainly very gratifying to his many friends. May he live long to declare, in his own matchless way, the truth which our blessed Lord would have all men enjoy to the end that they may be free. S. M. COOPER.

DR. J. HARVEY MOORE,

EYE, EAR, NOSE and THROAT....

648-649 CENTURY BUILDING,

HOURS: 10 to 3. SAINT LOUIS.

W. O. Moore.

Webster Oliver Moore, whose portrait adorns the first page of this issue, was born in Rupert, Vt., June 24, 1840, and is consequently now just about completing his sixtieth year. His early boyhood was not unlike that of thousands of others who were born among the New England hills and were compelled to begin to work at an early age. During his early life, the religious influences surrounding him were Congregationalism and Universalism, but in 1860 he learned the way of the Lord more perfectly through the preaching of W. L. Hayden, and was baptized by him in November of that year. He immediately determined to become a preacher and with this end in view, began to secure an education. He attended the Burr and Burton Academy, at Manchester, Vt., for two years, and afterwards spent a year in two other Eastern institutions. In 1864, he entered Hiram College, where he remained some time. He afterwards attended Hillsdale College and Butler University. In 1866 he began to preach and do pastoral work. He first labored for nine years in the state of New York. He then removed to Northern Ohio, preaching at Perry, Newton Falls, Fowler, Solon, Wauseon and Elmore. He is now located in Indianapolis, Ind.

September 7, 1871, he was married to Miss Annie Van Deusen, of New York City. Their married life has been a happy one. They have one child.

Brother Moore is well known as a frequent contributor to several of our religious periodicals. His style is clear, concise and didactic, and his articles, like his sermons, are clear and scriptural and are filled with information. He is prudent in counsel and pure in life, and the peace of God has rested upon the communities where he has preached.

A sister writes us to know if we cannot utter a word of caution to ministers of the gospel about exercising more discrimination in the kind of meetings or entertainments they admit to the house of God. She especially deprecates the idea of admitting other meetings to take the place of the prayer-meeting, such as a lecture or a musical, or something of that kind. A word to the wise will perhaps be sufficient. It is certainly worth while for preachers to exercise great caution in permitting their regular hours of worship to be interfered with by meetings that are not distinctly religious in their character. Nothing should be admitted to the church that is inconsistent with the great object and aims of Christianty.

Our Last May Offering of This Century.

If the rank and file of the million and more of our brethren, who stand for the restoration of primitive Christianity, the Christianity of Christ and his apostles, in its doctrine, ordinances and fruits, were as faithful to the cause of missions as our leading church papers, the coming collection would be a revelation and an uplift such as we have never experienced.

The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is entitled to the congratulations and gratitude of the entire brotherhood for the unwavering and invaluable advocacy of missions. Its "Home Mission Number," of April 19th, is an inspiration to the good work and ought to increase the offering by thousands of dollars. There is no reason why this offering should not be made at least a quarter of a million dollars. There are many reasons why we should make it more, and others why we should be ashamed to make it less. If the million of membership were all properly taught, every one of them would be ashamed of the pittance of a quarter of a million. If we were, in our capacity of "children of light," as wise as we are in our capacity of "children of this world," we would not be at all satisfied with raising a quarter of a million.

The work is heaven-born, the field is world-wide (since "as goes America so goes the world"), the people under special obligation to do it are a million strong, and the wealth with which God has intrusted us as his stewards is abundant.

New Albany, Ind. A. J. THOMSON.

Zeal for Home Missions.

Accept my congratulations upon your splendid Home Mission number of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. It is an excellent contribution to the effort now being made to bring Home Missions to the front to stay. The enthusiasm of our Home Mission secretaries is contagious. Many souls are being aroused and fired with zeal for the evangelization of our country. Every consideration of our common faith, of patriotism and of the plea we make for the restoration of primitive Christianity urges us to large endeavor in behalf of national missions. We neglect this work at our peril. Let every congregation participate in the May offering. If prevented from taking it on the first Lord's day, let it be taken sometime during the month. The day is not so important as the offering. Let there be a forward movement all along the line to take America for Christ.

LEONARD G. THOMPSON, State Evangelist.

Denver, Col.

The seventieth anniversary exercises of the Academy for Young Women and School of Fine Arts, and the twenty-ninth anniversary of the Illinois Conservatory of Music, Jacksonville, Ill., will be held May 18 23. The baccalaureate sermon will be preached by Rev. Thos. D. Logan, D. D., pastor First Presbyterian Church, Springfield, Illinois.

"Special Catalogue No. 22"

A neat booklet containing a large number of Book Bargains. Send us a postal card and we will send you a copy — free. You ought to know what books we are selling at Half Price — and sometimes less.

The Christian Pub. Co.
St. Louis.

Sedalia, Missouri.

Last Sunday, Easter, was a good day for First Church, Sedalia, Mo. We had about 400 in our Sunday-school; class offering, $70. Bro. Putman preached two splendid sermons. Had nine additions. Easter offerings, in church and Sunday-school, $1,191.50. We gave about $500 of it for missions. I do not think we forgot any of them. Bro. Putman is preaching very acceptably to our people. Our prayer-meetings are the best in the history of our church. JOHN N. DALBY.

Illinois District Convention.

The fifth Illinois district convention meets at Virden, Ill., June 5-7. The program will appear soon. Brethren, let us have the largest and best district convention in our history. The church at Virden is making preparations for all delegates who may come. Send your name ahead to Paul H. Castle and procure entertainment. State when you will come and how long you will stay. Remember that the music of the convention will be under the direction of Singing Evangelist Guy B. Williamson. PAUL H. CASTLE, Dist. Sec'y.

Virden, Ill.

Our Aged Ministers.

"Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel" (1 Cor. 9:14) is the plain interpretation our apostle placed on the writings of Moses in reference to the support of the priests, and he declared to the Corinthians that God had so ordained the support of the preachers of the gospel. Could language be plainer as to the maintenance of the men who preach the gospel in this age? The sin in this matter, upon the part of our worthy old ministers, lies in the fact that they did not teach much on this point, hence the brotherhood to-day will not so readily contribute to the needs of these grand old servants.

But will the men and women who comprise the body of people known as Christians or Disciples refuse to help the men who made it possible for them to attain the high standing as a church they now occupy? While others are devoting their time to raising money to support missionaries at home and abroad, permit me to call attention to the men whose lives have been given to advancing the Reformation in our own country. Many of these honest and earnest ministers are now in need of help. Will not each reader of this article inclose as large a contribution as possible to Howard Cale, president of the Board of Ministerial Relief of the Church of Christ, Indianapolis, Ind., who will faithfully dispose of it in helping these worthy men and their aged wives.

J. K. SPEER.

Clinton, Mo.

The great manufacturing house of J. C. Ayer Company, Lowell, Mass., recently celebrated the completion of the remodeling of its immense plant by giving a banquet to a large number of guests. Something of the magnitude of this house may be imagined when we learn that ten thousand feet of floor space, filled with the most improved printing machinery, is devoted to its printing necessities, and that fifteen tons of paper are consumed daily in this department, principally, we presume, in almanacs. In this room they have one press alone that eats up ten tons of paper per day. A house as old as this one could hardly have been so prosperous throughout its history in the manufacture of remedies for the ills of the flesh unless these remedies were meritorious and capable of standing the test of actual use by the people.

Mother's Love

Is boundless. Yet it is utterly helpless to give strength to the child born with a low vitality. The time to give strength to the child is before birth and to impart this gift the mother herself must be strong. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription gives strength to mothers. It preserves them in robust health in the months before baby comes. It practically does away with the pains of motherhood, and enables the mother to endow her child with a healthy body and a happy disposition. "Favorite Prescription" contains no alcohol and is absolutely free from opium and cocaine.

"I consider Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription the best medicine made," writes Mrs. Mary Murdock, of 220 Taylor St., Topeka, Kansas. "I know it has no equal. I am the mother of ten children and only one living—the tenth one. She is one year old and is as well and hearty as can be. She is a beauty. Of my other babies, some were born at right time, but dead, others were premature births; one lived to be one year old but she was always feeble. I tried different doctors but none of them could tell what my trouble was. I was examined by surgeons but they found nothing wrong. I did not know what to do, so I thought this last time I would try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I took it the entire nine months and now have a fine baby girl, and I can not praise your medicine enough for the good it did me."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure heart-burn.

Most people like an enclosure about their home. They like that delicious sense of exclusion, security and ownership that comes from being free from intrusion of men and animals. Many of us have been troubled in the past in the selection of an appropriate fence for surrounding the home. The board and wood picket fences are objectionable because of their great cost, because they decay rapidly under shade, because they are expensive to keep in repair and above all because they obscure the beauty or the surroundings and add nothing in attractiveness. A modern up-to-date fence which is free from all objections and which is superior from every point of view is the Hartman Steel Rod Picket Fence, manufactured by the Hartman Mfg. Co., of Ellwood City, Pa. It is strong, durable and long-lived, and when accompanied with the Hartman Ornamental Steel Gates adds very materially to the beauty of an enclosure. It is ideal for all kinds of public enclosures, as cemeteries, school grounds, public squares, parks, churchyards, etc. The cost is inconsiderable when you take into account the beauty and utility of the fence. Write these people for illustrated catalogue. Address them at Ellwood City, Pa., or 309 Broadway, New York.

Recognition of Quality.

The Philadelphia Export Exposition of 1899 is now a thing of the past, but the honors conferred by its Jury of Awards are lasting. It is for the public good that it should be known to all that the very highest honors were awarded to the Mason & Hamlin pianos and organs, such honors as were awarded to the instruments of no other maker. This significant fact is a guide to all intending purchasers.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Cures scalp diseases & hair falling. 50c, and $1.00 at Druggists

Correspondence.

English Topics.

ENGLAND'S GREATEST PREACHER.

Without any doubt the greatest pulpit power of our time in England is Dr. Joseph Parker. This popular preacher was seventy years of age last Sunday. Nobody would believe it. He is no septuagenarian, either, to look at or listen to. His eye is not dim, nor his strength of body or mind abated, nor his magnificent voice impaired, nor his mental acumen blunted. Last Monday, April 9, was the seventieth anniversary of the birth of this gifted man, who began life as the son of a poor, working stonemason in a small town in the north of England. He was born in Hexham, April 9, 1830, two years before Spurgeon was born. He is admittedly the first of living English preachers, and it is an evidence of his fine personality that he was never more eloquent, forceful and effective than at threescore years and ten. To sickness he is almost absolutely a stranger. The City Temple is the most attractive religious resort in London, and has been since the lamented death of Spurgeon, who eclipsed every rival as long as he lived. But he was always for years more or less of an invalid, suffering constitutionally from rheumatic gout. No ailment ever touches Joseph Parker. He is an incarnate contradiction of the verdict on old age of the psalmist, and seems to sum up in his daily life all the delights long ago depicted by Cicero in the most enchanting treatise ever written on the pleasures of senility. On the classic "De Senectute" Dr. Parker is a walking commentary. I am not altogether an admirer of his theology, and I do not at all like his style of diction, but I acknowledge his immense ability and his popular power. I do not expect that Dr. Parker will speedily surrender his stronghold or that he will for years take the opportunity of retirement.

NOT A THEOLOGIAN.

It is a singular thing that some of the greatest of preachers of our time never, as students, saw the inside of a college. Parker, Spurgeon and John McNeill never had the advantage of any theological training. Joseph Parker did, however, attend classes at University College, London, but no theology is taught there. He is not in the true sense a theologian at all. It would be impossible to learn systematically or clearly what the Christian religion means by listening to his preaching. This is eloquent, electrifying, astonishing, amusing, sarcastic, overwhelming. It is never really expository, nor critical, nor learned. Dr. Parker always strikes me as a man of singularly little erudition or information. But his style is yet very reflective. He does not teach anything at all, but goes on for nearly an hour blurting out spasms in the shape of a series of smart, original, witty, pungent sayings. His sentences are often verbal pistol shots. He makes the nerves creep. Nobody can sleep in the City Temple. Dr. Parker roars like a bull of Bashan in one sentence and coos like a dove in the next. I do not enjoy my theological diet administered to me in whispers sandwiched between thunderbolts. Dr. Parker lives close to the precipice over which many a preacher has fallen, but he himself never falls over. He keeps just within the verge of the pulpit proprieties. He is frequently heard perpetrating a witticism, but though it may be startling it is never irreverent. He terribly offended many of his most attached hearers when he shrieked out: "God damn the Sultan!" I was present on that memorable occasion, and sat under the tremendous cataract that was poured down from the pulpit. The eloquence of that morning all led up to that fearful climax of invective, and many of the congregation seemed wrought up to an almost hysterical pitch of excitement. Dr. Parker is as indefinite in his divinity as was Beecher, but he considers himself distinctly evangelical. There is nothing distinctly latitudinarian in his preaching, and the pietistic tone prevails. But there is an utter lack of close and consistent scriptural exegesis or exposition. He is constantly substituting his own ethical conceptions and pungent epigrams for the dicta of the apostles. Therefore, when Dr. Parker disappears, as I trust he will not for many years, London will lose its most striking pulpit figure, but the gospel will not suffer in the slightest degree! The way of salvation is much more clearly taught by many men whose names are never mentioned beyond their own humble spheres of work. It is the large number of insignificant men who after all are of the most precious value to the church.

THE PULPIT OF THE FUTURE.

Dr. Parker has of course been interviewed on his septuagenarian birthday. The interview as reported is intensely interesting. He says that he is continually thinking of retiring from his function, but the City Temple pulpit is much harder to get out of than it was to get into. Again and again he has announced his intention to quit, but his deacons always greet the intimation with incredulous laughter. He has the idea that the pulpit of the future will be superior to that of the present. Indeed, it will be immeasurably greater. We are now, thinks Dr. Parker, in a kind of transition state. The great preachers have all to come or are just coming. But this last sentence is just a typical specimen of the paradoxical Parkeresque. I do not myself see many signs of the rise of a great race of preachers. I cannot imagine what ground Dr. Parker has for his expectation. It appears to me that there is at this time a terrible need for a very different race of pulpit orators in his own denomination from the great majority of the young men who are occupying the positions which give them splendid opportunities. For instance, I was recently in the north of England and was talking with one of the most intelligent men I know, who is attending the services at a wealthy Congregational Church. He says that the minister, a very cultured young man, is constantly reciting poetical strains from Browning and Tennyson, and on the previous Sunday evening this gentleman went in fine elocutionary style through Byron's magnificent poem on the Destruction of Sennacherib's Host. This in a sermon was felt by my friend to be a sinful waste of time. The Congregationalists in England have come to value fine buildings, painted windows, great organs, splendid choirs and polished sermons far more than the genuine ancient gospel, and therefore, if they are going to grow a better race of preachers I am perplexed, in spite of Dr. Parker's optimism, to know how the process of production is to be accomplished. The more I learn of what is going on all around us, the more need I perceive for the propagation of our own principles as Disciples of Christ.

THE END OF ENGLAND.

I am sorry to have to make such a portentious announcement, but there is no help for it. It is said to be all over with poor old England. I do not know how many people in the United States will be glad to hear it, but I trust there are at least a few Americans extant who will regret this cataclysm. I thought myself that England, though she has been a nation for over a thousand years, was only just beginning her history. But then I am only one of the race of these "no-good Britishers." Our French neighbors have proclaimed the finale for "perfide Albion." "To-day England exists no more." That is just what I have been reading in Le Monde Illustre, a very able French journal. Within three months from now, we are told by the kind-hearted French editor, the face of the world will be changed, peace assured for a century at least, the Russians on the banks of the Indus, Menelik at Fashoda and master of the Nile, Egypt freed, the Transvaal saved, Ireland a republic, on all sides oppressed races restored to their destinies, the world as it were enlightened, humanity suddenly improved, here the Asiatic less treacherous, there the black man less murderous; near us, Italy wiser, Germany pacific, the Balkans quiet, Turkey soon to be civilized: on the other side of the ocean the United States calm; in a word, the whole race disposed to good will. Here is the state of the world! We are assured this is all just about to come to pass, and it is all to happen immediately because England is just on the edge of her everlasting ruin. Everywhere the Frenchman sees the English sowing seeds of discord and fomenting trouble. The Gallic editor admits this all sounds like a dream, but he goes on coolly to ask, Who knows but it may be true? Well, of course, no Britisher can venture to say what may be in store for us. But there is one thing which I would point out for the consolation of you Americans. "The United States calm!" That is a very nice attitude for America to take. It seems that if poor little England is about to be snuffed out America will not feel the smallest concern. But this lovely America "calm" seems to me the most extraordinary imagination of all the Frenchman's dream. It would not be long before the wiping out of England led to a nice conspiracy on the part of the carnal despots of the old militarisms of Europe against the very existence of Columbia. The Continental tyrants who grind down their own peoples under their autocracies hate America as intensely as they do England. One day this will appear. A fair premonition was afforded during the Spanish-American conflict.

W. DURBAN.

43 Park Rd., South Tottenham, Londan, April 14, 1900.

Meat or Cereals.

A QUESTION OF INTEREST TO ALL CAREFUL PERSONS.

The arguments on food are interesting. Many persons adopt a vegetarian diet on the ground that they do not like to feel that life has been taken to feed them, nor do they fancy the thought of eating dead meat.

On the other hand, too great consumption of partly cooked, starchy oats and wheat, or bread, pastry, etc., produces serious bowel troubles, because the bowel digestive organs (where starch should be digested) are overtaxed and the food ferments, producing gas, and microbes generate in the decayed food, frequently bringing on peritonitis and appendicitis.

Starchy food is absolutely essential to the human body. Its best form is shown in the food "Grape-Nuts," where the starch is changed into grape sugar during the process of its manufacture. In this way, the required food is presented to the system in a pre-digested form and is immediately made into blood and tissue, without taxing the digestive organs.

A remarkable result in nourishment is gained; the person using Grape-Nuts gains quickly in physical and mental strength. Why in mental? Because the food contains delicate particles of Phosphate of Potash, obtained from the grains. This unites with the albumen of all food and the combination is what nature uses to rebuild worn-out cells in the brain. This is a scientific fact that can be easily proven by ten days' use of Grape-Nuts. Never eat beyond three or four heaping teaspoonfuls at a meal.

New York Letter.

The great Ecumenical Missionary Conference is now a matter of history. It was a success, a magnificent success, in every sense of the word. The opening sessions of welcome were characterized by popular enthusiasm, which was well sustained throughout. President McKinley, ex-President Harrison and Governor Roosevelt made addresses of welcome and response, which were most vociferously received. The President's speech was pleasing to the ear and the circumstances inspiring to look upon, but there was nothing in particular in his address for the mind to grasp and wrestle with. It consisted chiefly in glittering generalities. His presence contributed more to the conference than his speech. This cannot be truthfully said of ex-President Harrison, however, whose appearance in the conference more than once was the signal for hearty applause, and whose addresses touched upon several vital and important matters. Governor Roosevelt is not a fluent speaker, but he is a practical man, and spoke out of his experience among the Indians of the West, to the delight of the conference. It is no small matter for these distinguished men of political rather than religious responsibilities to leave their posts of duty and come to tender the welcome of our city, state and nation to the honored visitors within our gates—the Christian missionaries.

But why should they not do so? For these men and women are ambassadors of the King of kings and Lord of lords. There were perhaps some 2,500 missionaries and delegates in attendance, who represent the missionary enterprises of all the world. Dr. James S. Dennis, in his statistical survey of the fields and forces of all the world, put the total income given last year for the conversion of all the world at $19,126,120 and the total number of communicants enrolled in the native mission churches of all the world at 1,317,684. The number of souls in nominal adherence to Christianity, or the "native Christian community," is estimated at 4,414,236. These all may be said to be within direct touch of gospel agencies, but the outer circle of those reached by the indirect influence of the gospel cannot be estimated, and the number ever increases. Though many are ever passing from the remote into the closer circle of the friends of Jesus, the outer circle of the adherents of Christianity continually widens. But I cannot attempt to report the Ecumenical Missionary Conference in the New York Letter. Suffice it to say that the price of the report to be published in two cloth-bound volumns, has been reduced to one dollar. Every minister among us should procure a copy and study it. I have the report of the conference held in London in 1888 and have found it of great value along missionary lines.

The sessions in Carnegie Hall were attended by enthusiastic throngs eager to catch every word. The sectional meetings were also popular in almost every instance. The missionary exhibit was in its interesting elaboration a genuine surprise even to those who expected a fine display. Most of the articles in this exhibition will be put into a permanent missionary museum here in New York, and will be another attraction to visitors and Christian workers in our city in the future. The missionaries made the articles especially interesting by their explanation of what these things signify. The stereopticon lectures on various mission fields, given twice each day at the Church of the Disciples of Christ on West 56th Street, were popular, the attendance usually filling the house.

But to many of us the session at the Central Presbyterian Church, on Monday morning, April 30th, was in some respects the most interesting of all. It was the only meeting at which the programme committee had assigned a Disciple of Christ to speak. Bro. A. McLean's name appeared on the list of speakers for that session, but as he could not attend, he asked Bro. J. H. Garrison to read a paper, which he did on "Christian Union and Missions," and for once the fundamental plea of the Disciples of Christ was placed before the conference in a most pleasing and forceful style. It was noticeable that many distinguished men who listened to the paper were deeply interested in the message it presented. The paper will no doubt appear in the published proceedings of the conference.

But the Disciple sessions arranged for and held by the Disciples of Christ at our churches in New York were, I think, the most delightful of all the meetings. The church on 169th Street led the way by giving at the church on Tuesday evening, the 24th, a supper and reception in honor of our visiting brethren in the city. From six to eight we enjoyed a social season while the delegates were assembling, when old acquaintances were renewed and new ones formed. At eight the good women of the church invited us to the lecture room, were we were served with supper, after which a number of short, crisp, stirring speeches were made. Dr. W. A. Belding spoke on "The Fathers and World-Evangelism," these last two words being the topic of the evening. Bro. Garrison gave a toast on the religious paper in this work, George Darsie spoke of what the churches ought to do, Mark Collis told what the colleges ought to do, W. J. Lhamon called our attention to the need of the best missionary literature, F. D. Power spoke of the privilege of coming up to the $200,000 mark in missionary offerings this year. Bro. F. M. Rains was present and expressed his delight at what was said. Dr. Ross, of Champaign, Ill., was also present and told of his work in behalf of missionaries. Miss Lois A. White also gave us a few inspiring words. Among the missionaries who were present and spoke were F. E. Meigs, E. S. Stevens, Mary Graybiel, Emma A. Lyon, John McGavran and Frank T. Lea, representing China, India, Japan and Africa. It was to our church and people a most delightful occasion, full of inspiration, instruction, encouragement and hope. We feel under obligations to our brethren for their presence and the blessing they brought.

The C. W. B. M. Auxiliary of the Sterling Place Church, Brooklyn, gave a delightful luncheon at the church on W. 56th Street, on Friday, the 27th, and afterward a cordial reception to the delegates. A number of men and women made pleasing addresses under the efficient management of Mrs. A. M. Rummell, district president. On Monday evening the C. W. B. M., of the 56th Street church, held another pleasant meeting, at which Mrs. F. A. Moore presided. Mrs. Helen E. Moses and Miss Mary Graybiel delivered addresses and a number of others made short talks, followed by refreshments.

Beside those already mentioned the following Disciples also were in attendance. S. M. Hunt, of Springfield, Mass.; S. H. Mohortor, Boston; B. B. Tyler and wife, of Chicago; E. R. Edwards, Miss Jennie Encell, Mrs. Van Warner and Miss Lena Rogers, of Syracuse; J. H. Litchenburger, of Buffalo, W. W. Sniff and Mrs. Gerauld, of Cleveland; E. V. Zallors, D. G. Hertzog and A. P. Frost and wife of Hiram, Ohio, and their daughter, Adelaid Gail Frost, of India; Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Cramblett and Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Theergood, of Pittsburg; A. M. Hurd, of Pompey, N. Y.; Miss Sue Sublette and Mrs. Yancy, of Lexington, Ky.; R. W. Clymer, of Scranton, Pa.; Ben Hurr (real) of Norfolk; B. P. Smith, Charlottsville; Cary Morgan and wife, of Richmond, Va.; George Anderson, of Youngstown, Ohio; W. E. Garrison, St. Louis, and Miss Mattie Bergess, St. Joseph, Mo.; Mrs. E. S. Stevens, of Japan and perhaps others who I do not recall.

There were some sixty visiting Disciples in the city. We had a feast of good things served from the pulpit of the 169th Street Church during the conference. Bro. Mark Collis, of the Broadway Church, Lexington, Ky., gave us a splendid discourse Lord's day morning, April 22, on "Union With Christ. In the evening Miss Lois A. White and Miss Lyon spoke to a full house gathered to celebrate the 10th anniversary of our Christian Endeavor Society. Lord's day morning, the 29th, Bro. Garrison, of the EVANGELIST delivered a fine sermon on "The Humiliation of Christ," which our people greatly enjoyed, and in the evening Bro. B. B. Tyler, an old-time favorite of this people, preached one of his very best sermons to a large and deeply interested congregation. The conference has been a great blessing to us, and we thank the Lord for it.

S. T. WILLIS.

1281 Union Ave.

INDIGESTION

If you have it, you know it. You know all about the heavy feeling in the stomach, the formation of gas, the nausea, sick headache, and general weakness of the whole body.

You can't have it a week without your blood being impure and your nerves all exhausted. There's just one remedy for you——

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

There's nothing new about it. Your grandparents took it. 'Twas an old Sarsaparilla before other sarsaparillas were known. It made the word "Sarsaparilla" famous over the whole world.

There's no other sarsaparilla like it. In age and power to cure it's "The leader of them all."

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

Ayer's Pills cure constipation.

"After suffering terribly I was induced to try your Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles and now feel like a new man. I would advise all my fellow creatures to try this medicine, for it has stood the test of time and its curative power cannot be excelled." I. D. GOOD,
Jan. 30, 1899. Browntown, Va.

Write the Doctor.

If you have any complaint whatever and desire the best medical advice you can possibly receive, write the doctor freely. You will receive a prompt reply, without cost. Address,
DR. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.

After A Day's Hard Work Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

It is a grateful tonic, relieving fatigue and depression, so common in midsummer.

B. B. Tyler's Letter.

There are a half dozen towns in the United States named Danbury. This letter has to do with Danbury, Connecticut. The name of this original United States Danbury was taken from a town in England. The original spelling was Danebury, meaning a camp or town of the Danes. The Danbury of which I write is about fifty miles from New York, in a northeast direction. It has a population of about 20,000. The Indian name was Pahquioque; which name continues to be used in the place to this day. There is, for instance, the Pahquioque Hotel and the Pahquioque Bank. Its nickname was Beantown. There is a tradition that the site of the place was bought from the Indians for a peck of beans. It is also said that large quantities of a superior quality of beans were raised in the place by the early settlers. The chief industry now is the manufacture of hats. It is claimed that the first hat ever made in this country was made in Danbury. Hats are manufactured here by the million. The first settlement in Danbury was made in 1684. In 1685 there were eight families. The British burned the town in 1777—April twenty-seventh. The colonists, at that time, had goods for their army stored in Danbury. There were destroyed—3,000 barrels of pork, more than 1,000 barrels of flour, several hundred barrels of beef, 2,000 bushels of grain, etc., etc. The private losses were estimated, by a committee appointed for the purpose, at almost seventeen thousand pounds sterling.

P. T. Barnum was born at Bethel, originally a part of the town of Danbury, and spent his youth there. It was here that he had his first experience as a newspaper editor. He was the editor of the Herald of Freedom. He used his freedom so indiscreetly that he was found guilty of libel, was sentenced to thirty days' imprisonment, and to pay a fine of one hundred dollars. He continued to edit his paper while in jail.

But "religion" was "the chief concern" of the New England fathers. The time when the first church was organized in Danbury is not known. The Rev. Mr. Shove was ordained to the pastorate of the "First Church," as the the congregation is called to this day, in 1796. It is probable that the church was previously organized. The people were eminent in those early days for morality and religion. In a sermon delivered by the Rev. Thomas Robbins, in 1801, it is said that "in no town in this state has there been more religious controversy than in this."

Mr. Robert Sandeman, a native of Scotland came to Danbury and organized a church in 1765, He died and was buried in the town in 1771. There is no Sandemanian church now in Danbury—nor, so far as is known, in the United States. In 1888 Dr. Whitsitt, of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, published a little book on the "Origin of the Disciples," in which he attempted to fasten on us the name "Sandemanians." The chief reasons for this were, first, it is an ugly name, and second, hardly any person knew what it meant. This book has gone the way of the "Sandemanians." A second edition never appeared. Dr. Whitsitt is a good man, a scholar and a Christian gentleman. His friends never could understand why he wrote such a book. It is probable that he was at the time suffering from indigestion.

The congregation of Disciples in Danbury is one of our pioneer churches. It began in 1817. The church in New York began in October, 1810. The charter members in Danbury were Levi Osborne and W. Wildman and their wives. Levi Osborne was baptized by Henry Errett, the father of Isaac Errett, in New York, in 1817. Mr. Osborne returned to Danbury and baptized his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Wildman. John Abbot and wife united with the little company in 1819. He was for several years the minister of the church. Mr. Abbot died in 1865; his wife died in 1895.

E. Jay Teagarden is now postor—the fifteenth in the order of succession. On account of his work Bro. Teagarden deserves more than a passing notice.

He was born in New Cumberland, W. Va., Oct. 2, 1861. His father was S. B. Teagarden, who entered into rest at Craig, Colorado, in 1897, and who in his day was a useful preacher. I remember to have heard him say that in the beginning of his ministry it was his custom to read the New Testament through every week. It is said that at the time of his death he had read the Bible through from Genesis to Revelation one hundred times. Much of the Bible he could recite from memory. Such a father had E. Jay Teagarden.

Bro. Teagarden was educated at the Ohio Normal College, Kentucky University, and Yale. He came from Yale to the Danbury Church. Before he accepted his present pastorate he preached at Glenville, Ohio, and Dover, Ky. When he became pastor of the Danbury congregation there were 280 members; there are now 750. Since his coming one of the most commodious and best arranged houses of worship in the brotherhood has been built. The property is worth probably $35,000. There is a debt of less than $5,000.

Bro. Teagarden and his people believe in protracted meetings—occasionally. They also believe in caring for the converts. W. L. Bowell assisted in a meeting in 1893, during which 100 persons confessed Christ. In '96 R. A. Nichols held two meetings—one in the early part of the year, in the church, in which 125 persons confessed Christ, and one later in the year, in a tent, in Bethel, where 50 confessed the Lord Jesus. Bro. Fred Nichols, a brother of R. A., assisted in a meeting in '97, when there were 50 confessions.

The following young men have gone out from the Danbury church, during the last few years, to preach the Christ: Charles C. Waite, Sharon, Pa.; Foster F. Fuller, Nelsonville, Ohio; Charles Darsie, Newport, Ky., and Clyde Darsie, Pueblo, Col., sons of J. L. Darsie. Geo. H. Brown is in Hiram, preparing to preach.

During the last ten years the church has raised for all purposes, $58,378.72. Its contributions to aid the cause of missions have been, during this period, $5,123.99—an average of more than $500 a year. This church also gave Miss Hattie L. Judson, to India. Her picture hangs in the lecture room of the church with the following words below:

"To India for Christ, Dec. 7, 1892."
"From India to Christ, Oct. 6, 1897."

Miss Kate Davis, a daughter of Deacon Alex. Davis, married E. B. Redd, pastor at Platte City, Mo., where she died suddenly last Thanksgiving day. Her memory is precious in Danbury, where she was born, grew to womanhood and gave herself to Christ.

Miss Lucy M. Osborne, a daughter of Levi Osborne, who was one of the charter members, still lives, and attends the meetings of the church, at the age of 92. She says that she remembers the Erretts, Owingtons, Hatfields, Hendricksons, and Dr. Barker, names familiar to those who are acquainted with the early history of the New York church.

There is one of the most wide-awake Endeavor Societies in the Danbury church that I have seen, with a membership of 125. The Sunday-school has an average attendance of about 200—probably a little above this number. The Christian Woman's Board of Missions Auxiliary has a membership of 60. It is most efficient.

Bro. Teagarden is supported in his work, officially, by elders E. S. Morris and E. A. Mallory, and deacons W. H. Stevens, W. H. Young, Alexander Davis, David Hawley, Theo. Raymond, Elbridge Gerry, Frank L. Hatch, James E. Peck, Charles Elwell, S. A. Davis, Arthur Cattermole, J. Wesley Kirk, Eugene Taylor and Charles West—while he has the unofficial, personal support of the entire church. The congregation of Disciples in Danbury is almost a model of what a church of Christ should be. Its pastor has been absent from his pulpit only thirty-five Lord's days in ten years, and these include his vacations and attendance on conventions. E. Jay Teagarden attends to his own business, and herein lies, in large part, the secret of his wonderful success in this staid old New England town. Such pastors need to be multiplied many fold.

In a recent meeting of ten days, for worship and Bible study, Albert Bellingham, of Worcester, Mass., led the singing, and he did it well, too. Bro. Bellingham was brought up in the English Church. He became a Baptist. He united with the Disciples about six years ago. He was for two years in evangelistic work. He is a fine leader in the service of song—a modest young man and a devout Christian.

B. B. T.

Cure Your Liver

and be free from that lazy, tired feeling, backache and other symptoms due to urinal affections, before the disease gets too strong a hold on you and becomes chronic and incurable.

The best, surest, easiest-to-take regulator for all kidney troubles is

Dr. Peter's Blood Vitalizer

—The remedy of a Century.

It is an honest Swiss-German preparation in use more than 100 years. It relieves the body of all refuse matter, while it tones and invigorates the system. It is an almost infallible remedy for all diseases caused by impure or impoverished blood or from a disordered stomach.

No Drug-Store medicine; is sold only by regular Vitalizer agents.

Persons living where there are no agents for Dr. Peter's Blood Vitalizer can, by sending $2.00, obtain twelve 35 cent trial bottles direct from the proprietor. This offer can be obtained only once by the same person.

Write to DR. PETER FAHRNEY,
112-114 South Hoyne Ave., Chicago.

TITHING SYSTEM—60 Cents to $79.50.

We offer a prize of $49.50 to $79.50 to the one of ten contesting Britannica purchasers giving the best answer to "How to use an Encyclopedia" Our Britannica is a reproduction of the latest Edinburg edition with 5 volumes of American additions ending with last October. The 30 Royal octavo volumes are printed from large clear type on good paper and well bound. They contain 23,418 pages, 12,000 illustrations, 571 maps and treat 250,000 topics. Including a bookcase and a guide to the study of the Britannica, our prices are, cloth, $49.50; three-fourths morocco, $64.50; sheep, $79.50.

We offer $1.50 to $12. to the one of ten contesting Bible purchasers giving the best answer to "How to use the Bible." Our Bibles are well worth the prices quoted. Large family Bibles, neat and durable, $2, $4, $6; elegant, $8, $10, $12. Teacher's Bibles, good type, paper and binding, $1.50, $2.50, $3.50; very fine, $7 and $8.

We offer 60 cents to $12 to the one of ten contesting history purchasers giving the best answer to "How to study History." Our Histories are printed from medium sized type, on good paper and well bound and illustrated. The volumes average about 450 octavo pages each and each History includes from 1 to 12 volumes at 60 cents per volume, cloth; or $1.00, half leather. Guizot's History of France 8 volumes, Menzel's Germany 4, Green's England 4, Hawthorne's U. S. 3. Prescott's Mexico 2. Prescott's Peru 2, Rombard's Russia 2, Wilberforce's Spain 1, Abbott's Austria 1, Abbott's Italy 1, Clark's Turkey 1. McCann's Egypt 1, Boulger's China 1, Dickson's Japan 1, Wheeler's India 2, Scott's Scotland 2, Kitto's Palestine 1, Grattan's Holland 1, Hawthorne's Spanish America 1, Theband's Ireland 1, Sorensen's Norway 1, Nilssen's Sweeden 1, Gibbon's Rome 6 Grote's Greece 12. On receipt of price we ship prepaid. We also give the address of the prize winner.

Write to-day or cut this out. Address,

UNIQUE ADVERTISING CO.,
301 W. Monroe St. Chicago, Ills

Texas Letter.

"Our First Congress" is one of the best books I've read for a year. It is from the press of the Christian Publishing Company, St. Louis, bound in cloth, and has 246 pages. It is made up of the "leading papers" of the first Congress of our people, which was successfully held in St. Louis in April, 1899. This Congress was not for the making of laws for the church, but for the study of the law already given. It was not for legislation, but for investigation. And whether or not you agree with all that is said by the different speakers, you respect them for the strength and spirit with which they speak; and it is inconceivable that any one should study the book without much profit.

I regret that I have not space to give such a review as the work deserves. It opens with "An Introductory Address," by the president, J. H. Garrison, which, of course, is just the proper thing. "The Value of Theology" is a vigorous paper from the pen of Prof. Edward S. Ames. Here is a sample sentence: "Theology simply means the results of thoroughgoing and systematic thinking upon divine things. It is distinguished from the every-day thought of the plain man in degree, not in kind." A man who has that conception of theology is apt to prove himself a helpful teacher. "The Cry, 'Back to Christ,'" is treated in his usual elegant and forceful style by J. J. Haley; and his paper is followed by two worthy reviews from two strong men: J. B. Briney and W. J. Lhamon. "Crucial Points Concerning the Holy Spirit" comes next. The leading paper is from the late R. T. Mathews, and while I do not agree with it in every point, it is a helpful study of a great theme. W. E. Ellis and F. N. Calvin, as reviewers of this paper, do their work well. Allan B. Philputt has a valuable treatise on "Organization, and its Adaptation to Present Needs of the Church," which is briefly reviewed by W. F. Richardson. But many will think the best wine is kept for the last in the elegant, pointed, practical, sweet-spirited address from Mrs. Ida Withers Harrison, on the subject: "The Enrichment of Public Worship Among the Disciples." This chapter alone is well worth the price of the book. Reader, send for a copy of this up-to-date work and you will be pleased and profited.

Henry Rosenberg is a man whom the world will not forget. He was born in Switzerland in 1824, and came to Texas when 19 years of age. He worked hard and managed well, and gold flowed into his coffers. He was generous with it. He built a chapel in his native village in Switzerland, and one in Galveston, his adopted home—Eaton Memorial Chapel. In 1888 he gave to the children of Galveston the Rosenberg free school building, which has a seating capacity of 1,000, and cost $80,000.

On May 12, 1893, Mr. Rosenberg died, leaving a large estate. About a half million was left to his widow. With the remainder he is blessing the world to-day. Letitia Rosenberg Home for Women and the Galveston Orphans' Home were the first buildings to rise after his death. Soon after Grace Episcopal Church, a splendid stone buidling and the handsome home of the Y. M. C. A. followed. Next came seventeen drinking fountains of granite and bronze, for man and beast, were distributed throughout the city. The will sent back to his native land $80,000 for charitable and educational purposes. The Jewish Orphans' Home of Galveston got $30,000, and the Ladies' Aid Society of the German Lutheran Church got $10,000. And just now a monument to the Texas heroes of 1836 has been completed at a cost of $50,000. It is 74 feet high, and one of the handsomest in the land. It stands in the city of Galveston, at the intersection of Broadway and Rosenberg Avenue. Some may think it strange that a foreigner should rear this monument. But when it is remembered that he came from Switzerland, the cradle of liberty long before the birth of the American Republic, and that he inherited to the fullest the patriotism of his countrymen and that his entire manhood was spent here, his act is as natural as it is noble and beautiful. But his greatest deed remains to be noted—the public library of Galveston. He left $750,000 for this purpose; and the building will soon be under way. "Though dead, he yet speaketh."

Mrs. Persis L. Christian spent the winter in our genial clime, and on her return home she gave us a few days. Her body is frail, but her faith is strong, her hope is bright, and she is the same bright, sweet-spirited Christian that she was when in health. The Lord speed her permanent recovery, is the prayer of all who know her.

David R. Pickens is a strange genius. He has been a preacher more than a quarter of a century, and yet he has money. He and his wife have given another $5,000 to Church Extension, making $10,000 to that worthy cause within a year.

S. D. Perkinson is having a vision. He is our Denton pastor, and one of the best in the state. He sees in the near future a new church building. One man heads the list with a $1,500 pledge, which alone ought to guarantee the enterprise.

Russell B. Briney leaves Amarillo for Monroe City, Mo., and we regret it. We had hoped he was here to stay; and we venture the prediction that he will return again.

Important: Texas State Convention, Paris, June 11-15. Send name to J. N. Crutcher.

M. M. DAVIS.

833 Live Oak Street, Dallas, Tex.

The Children All Say
That the best thing they know is the new wafer—
Uneeda Jinjer Wayfer
Get a box and try them. The air tight and moisture proof box keeps in the goodness—keeps them fresh and crisp until you want them.
Have you tried Uneeda Biscuit?
NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY.

An Alarm and an Appeal.

We are notoriously weak in the great cities of our country. In none of the five or six principal cities are we proportionately represented. I do not know of a city with upwards of one-half a million population in which we have a single representative church building. As long as this is true our talk about taking America for Christ is mere wind-eloquence.

Not only are we ourselves weak, but our common Christianity is weak. In this country one in five of the population is a Christian. In the city one in twenty-five, and what is even sadder still, this one in twenty-five is rarely if ever a workingman. Religion is confined to the salaried and capitalist classes. Whenever and wherever this is the case religion itself degenerates. God is no respecter of persons; but can we say the same of our leaders in evangelization?

It is needless to dwell upon social conditions in the city. Rags and gaudy splendor in apparel are seen in striking contrast. It is often but a stone's throw from the palace to the tenement. Human beings swarm in vermin-infested cellars and rotten tenements. Thousands of people of both sexes are kept out of marriage by industrial conditions. There are whole factories that employ nothing but girls—huge industrial nunneries. The lot of many of our fellowmen is worse than that of the chattel slave. These conditions can not endure forever. They forebode a modern French Revolution, which is as sure as fate, unless the Church of Christ realizes her responsibility and takes hold with a firm hand and a lofty faith to discharge it. My appeal is for heroic men and women to enter the crowded cities as Paul entered Corinth, if need be working with their own hands while they preach the gospel of redeeming ove. Our Home Missionary Society, with its limited resources can scarcely touch more than the fringe of municipal darkness. The churches ought to double and quadruple their offerings in order to make more effective and vigorous the splendid work of the Home Society. Can we not do more than this? Are there not churches with consecrated young men and women ready to pour out their lives as soldiers of the cross? Let the churches give a life for Home Missions, just as they do for Foreign Missions. Many a country church could accomplish this. They can easily keep in correspondence with such representatives. They can ship them almost their entire provisions, so as to reduce the cost of living; they can receive and care for in their own homes the starved and sick denizens of the slums during the heat of summer.

The Chicago Christian Missionary Society could direct an army of five hundred such soldiers at once. The darkness is as dense as anywhere in all pagandom. The cry is as pathetic and sorrowful as was heard from black slaves whipped to death in the cottonfields. Will the churches rise to meet the emergency? Are there not young people who would volunteer? It is a call to the service as daring and heroic as ever a soldier saw.

FRANK G. TYRRELL.

Good News

Pike County, with a population of 33,000, and 25 towns, has not a saloon within its borders. All voted out this year. There are 3,000 Disciples here, and their work and influence counted for much in the work for temperance. The preachers of Pike County are aggressive. R. F. THRAPP.

Pittsfield, Ill.

William B. Hunt.

A PIONEER DISCIPLE.

On Saturday morning, March 31, 1900, after a short illness, Elder Wm. B. Hunt died at his home in Hopedale, Ohio, being in the 85th year of his age, "an old man and full of years; and was gathered unto his people." He was born in Lancaster county, Virginia, in September, 1815. In 1836 he was united in marriage with Julia Ann Mott Fletcher, of Baltimore, Md., who still survives him, after a happy union of nearly 64 years. Ten children blessed this union, all of whom are yet living. He came to Ohio in 1843, first locating at Barnesville, but after a temporary residence in this and other places, he finally came to Hopedale, where he has ever since resided—a period of 45 years. Here he divided his labors between his trade and the ministry of the Word.

He early became acquainted with Alexander Campbell and his work, which won him from the Baptist denomination to his ably filled place in the great religious reformation of the century. Mr. Campbell regarded him as a remarkable man. There are many reasons for this high estimation.

Elder Hunt enjoyed but few educational advantages. But he was a tireless and great reader, drinking deep from the fountain of the best English literature of his day, and although having never studied grammar in a technical sense a day in his life, he soon became one of the best linguists that ever spoke the English language. His native ability to analyze and retain was rare, and this, combined with his pleasing personality, made him strong in public address.

In the pulpit he was at home. His strong social qualities always won for him many friends. Naturally optimistic, he carried sunshine everywhere. His evangelistic work resulted in the conversion of hundreds of souls—often in midwinter cutting the ice to baptize the people. In his palmy days his pulpit work was with great power. He preached the Word; God gave the increase.

He was a public-spirited man. He took great interest in his country and was a true patriot. On the question of American slavery, although a Virginian, he was a radical abolitionist, keeping in personal correspondence with such men as Wendell Phillips, John G. Whittier and Hon. John A. Bingham. With Judge Bingham he was a lifelong friend, who preceded him but a few days into the presence of the great King. When it meant public scorn, persecution and peril of life, William Hunt, implacably, in public and in private, stood up and hurled his anathemas against that "sum of all villainies"—American slavery—as he was wont to term it. He gave two sons to his country in that awful civil conflict. All this time he continued his public lectures, and when those boys came home with the nation's victorious armies they found a father with a glad heart to make them welcome to the "home of the brave and free."

Elder Hunt was also a strong temperance worker. In coming to his conclusion on any problem of the day he was always directed by the motto: "What is right?" regardless of popular applause. This is seen in the fact that he at one time waged anti-slavery lectures in the face of the most violent demonstrations against him. He never learned what it was to fear. Considering the saloon as a giant curse he was not long in determining what he conceived to be his only path of duty. In this he was very active.

But to him the church was the pillar and ground of truth, no matter what the question at issue. He understood the meaning and aim of the church of the New Testament as fully in this present century as in the first. The current restoration, which he ever labored to promote ,was to him the wor ' only hope. He held in the highest possible estimation, not only the Church of Christ, but its absolute necessity as the only means of the world's escape from the slavery of human creeds and sectarian churchism. He believed that in a vital sense the coming glory of the religion of Jesus was hinged upon the fact of his church being restored to the world in its primitive order. He grasped with remarkable clearness the great religious force in which the current restoration was bound to culminate as a factor in all great world-problems. With the Word of God to guide him into all truth he never deviated.

His character was pure as the light of morning, his judgment was sound and his faith was strong. He came to the end as one who comes down to pleasant dreams from a long journey. Conscientious in the light of God's Word, courageous with the bravery of a lion, charitable toward all who asked consideration, Christian in all that goes to make a well-rounded life, childlike in the blessed grace of humility, courteous and chaste, Elder William Hunt, the pionoer and patriot, fell asleep, taking up to God a blood-washed soul, and leaving to posterity the rich legacy of an exemplary life. We laid his mortal remains to rest on the Lord's day following his demise, placing his head toward the setting sun that in the resurrection of the last day he shall arise to behold the Sun of Righteousness arising out of the east with healing in his wings. Truly, it might be written on his gravestone: "The dead in Christ shall rise first." LUTHER MOORE.

A Protest Against a Memorial to Beer.

It is not often that I feel called upon to write on a matter of public concern. But here is something that should engage the attention of every Christian citizen within the limits of the state that believes in moral decency and political integrity.

In the St. Louis Republic of the 19th inst. a special from Columbia, Mo., says:

"Through J. F. Gmelich, of Boonville, a member of the Board of Curators of the University of Missouri, Adolphus Busch, of St. Louis, has agreed to give to the University $5,000 for the purpose of constructing the clinical amphitheater of the Parker Memoriai Hospital.

"The hospital is now being built upon the university campus. It was made possible by the gift of $15,000 from William L. Parker, of Columbia, supplemented by $10,000 from the state. When the plans for the hospital were completed it was found that it would be impossible to complete an adequate clinical amphitheater or operating room with the funds at hand. This the gift of Mr. Busch makes possible. The amphitheater will be named "The Adolphus Busch Clinic.' It will be begun at once."

I believe that every Christian citizen of Missouri should send in to the president of the Board of Curators, Rev. John D. Vincil, St. Louis, Mo., a most earnest protest against the erection of a monument to a brewery man and beer on the campus of our State University. Mr. Douglas Stewart, one of our leading citizens, though not a church member nor even a "temperance" man, sent the following letter of protest to the president of the University:

R. H. JESSE, President M. S. U.:

My Dear Sir—I see in yesterday's St. Louis Republic that Adolphus Busch, of St. Louis, has donated $5,000 to complete the "Parker Hospital," and by reason of such gift the operating room is to be called "The Adolphus Busch Clinic."

Is it possible that the University of the State of Missouri is contemplating the erection of a monument to this the prince of Brewers?

I as a citizen of this state and a patron of the university enter my solemn protest against this. We have been and are proud of our university and will feel humiliated to know that for a paltry $5,000 she would drag her skirts through such slime and besmirch her fair name.

Very truly, DOUGLAS STEWART.
Chillicothe, Mo.

Mason & Hamlin
Church, Chapel, Lodge, ORGANS School and Home.
THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD.
Catalog free. 146 Boylston St., Boston, Mass.

ESTEY PIANOS AND ORGANS
Excel in Superior Tone, Perfect Construction and Great Durability.
THE ESTEY CO., 916 OLIVE ST., ST. LOUIS, MO

FACTS ABOUT PAINT
SUTCLIFFE & CO., Louisville, Ky.
Publish a book on use, selection and application of paint. It is of great value to anyone having painting to do. Our readers can procure a copy by writing this firm for Book No. 94.

Mr. Stewart called my attention to the article and showed me a copy of his letter. I think that vigorous and immediate action should be taken to prevent, if possible, the naming of a building or any part of a building to perpetuate the name and honor an occupation that has fattened on the ruination of men and homes and social decency. It would be a sad comment on our social morality and a sickening sight to see at the very heart of our educational system a monument erected and named to advertise, popularize and perpetuate such a baneful business.

The whole liquor traffic has been outlawed by almost every eminent judge and jurist, reformer and preacher in Christendom. Is it possible that that murderous business, through one of its representatives, shall be permitted to have an honored place in the midst of our all but sacred institution of higher learning? It would be a disgrace, handed down to posterity, that ought not to be tolerated—no, not for a moment—in this age of a rising temperance sentiment.

The drink traffic and all of its adjuncts are the enemies of education and all it stands for and sustains. It unfits men for industrial, political, social and religious duties. It makes men dishonest and unreliable. It corrupts politics and debauches the administration of law. It is a green-eyed monster that seeks to destroy all that is good and enthrone all that is bad. It has no regard for childhood, womanhood or manhood. It defies law and violates decency. It is a Niagara of ruin, riot and rot poured out to ravish and wreck our ship of state. Shall Christian men and women be indifferent and allow this accursed traffic to be flaunted in the faces of ourselves, our children and our posterity? Shall it be permitted to memioralize itself on the campus of our State University? What an awful degradation! What an insult to the Christian purity and temperance sentiment of Missouri to have a monument to a brewer and beer, and hence indirectly to all the associated villainies and vicious scroundrelism that is extant in the land.

Let Christian sentiment assert itself. Let letters of protest be sent at once from preachers and teachers and parents and patrons and students, urging the board to refuse the name of Mr. Busch a place on any building, in any manner for any consideration. LAWRENCE F. MCCRAY.

[We heartily endorse this protest. The name of Adolphus Busch is associated with but one thing, and if our university authorities build this monument to his memory they not only advertise beer, but their own financial straits or low ideals. We trust the curators will spare the state and the university this dishonor.—EDITOR.

FITS Permanently Cured. No fits or nervousness after first day's use of Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. Send for FREE $2.00 trial bottle and treatise. DR. R. H. KLINE, Ltd., 931 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa

Notes and News.

The Christian Sunday-school's Easter collection or the Orphans' Home this year amounted to 46.40. MRS. E. E. LITTLEPAGE.

Girard, Ill.

The Easter offering of the Fourth Church Sunday-school, this city, for the Orphans' Home was 59.24. R. H.

St. Louis, Mo.

Malden Public School Board, Malden, Mo., is desirous of employing one principal and four assistant teachers for the ensuing year, beginning in September, and would be glad if they were members of the Christian Church. The principal must be able to visit them before they can employ him. Applicants should address John W. Morris, Malden, Mo.

The church in Peckham, Oklahoma Territory, is in need of a preacher. They can pay about $25 per month for half time. They have a good building. New Kirk, the county seat, is also in need of a preacher. The two places are seven miles apart. Here is evidently a good opening for some man. Address J. W. Browning, Peckham, I. T.

You have a valuable thing in the Campbell-Purcell Debate, and I trust it will help your circulation. I should not be unwilling to freely recommend it in the Christian Messenger if it is possible for you to send me a review copy. If you have anything you would like me to publish send along with the book. Do this only if entirely agreeable. I enjoy the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST and recognize the highest literary value amongst our publications. Wish it circulated more freely in Ontario, where, let me say, too, our Messenger is prospering. There should be room for both. This last part is cheerfully contributed without regard to the first one.

R. BUTCHART.

Toronto, Canada.

California Ladies'

EXPERIENCE WITH DRINK.

"While using Mocha and Java coffee I was finally thrown into a serious case of nervous prostration, with heart trouble and dizzy headaches. My husband also had most serious stomach trouble for years. We finally gave up coffee and began the use of Postum. Both husband and myself have now been perfectly well for three years.

"Mrs. C. R. Holmes of 1946 Adair St., and Mrs. Ade Leonard, 234 Twenty-seventh St., Los Angeles, both tried Postum Food Coffee but did not boil it fifteen minutes, according to directions, and therefore did not like it. I made a cup for each of them the right way and now they use it daily and like it very much.

"Mrs. Ida Sherman, of 6113 Wentworth Ave., Chicago, had been quite ill for years with dyspepsia and nervousness and I urged her to leave off coffee and take Postum Food Coffee. She now writes me that she is entirely cured.

"Mrs. Julia Moore, of Riverside, Cal., and also Mrs. Lily Staldn, of Riverside, were both ill for some years with heart trouble. I told them of my experience with coffee and induced them to drop coffee and take up Postum Food Coffee. Mrs. Moore was cured and in three months after making the change Mrs. Staldn wrote that she had been relieved more from leaving off coffee and using Postum than she had obtained from any medicines. "I am naturally a strong advocate of Postum." Mrs. Maud Magee, 122 N. Johnson St., E. Los Angeles, California.

Closed the first year's work here April 20. The church has given more for missions than in any previous year and met all bills. I preached during the year here and at Shaw and other mission points. Have had 74 additions. Preached the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of Erie High School April 29, and will preach the memorial sermon at Shaw May 27.

W. H. SCRIVNER.

Erie, Kan.

Missouri Bible School Notes.

Six new Bible-schools organized thus far in the month of April is not a bad showing, but a new house which increases the probability of the school being permanent is much better, and this two of our evangelists are now seeking to do in their respective districts.

By the way, the report of the church house at Russ, under the auspices of this board, was possibly my mistake, and is regretted, as we seek to give only the facts in our work. But the house is there, just the same. No matter whether Paul planted or Apolos watered.

If you think the Endeavor program of the coming Bible-school convention is good, just wait until you see that of the convention proper, for in it is clearly manifest the wisdom of the program committee. You will see it in the Missionary Magazine and the weeklies soon. Our first address on "The Possibilities of the Bible-school Work in Missouri," by W. T. Henson, will justify coming some distance and remaining some time, if you had to do so, to hear. It is a treat in store for you.

Nothing is more pleasing than to learn that Lindley, near Buffalo, Dallas County, is on the road to possess one of our banners, and if the children and J. M. Wise are given half a chance will possess it, too.

By the way, if you say your apportionment is too large after making good effort to meet it, I am sure the board will scale accordingly. Write us fully. Mrs. Davis will answer some way, for that's what she is here for, and will serve.

At Weston we hit the bad spell of weather that hindered so many from being with us, but we had a happy time in the rally, and the last night we had a goodly number from Salem. Two men at Salem have seen to our work, J. H. Hardesty and R. H. Fife. The parsonage is hard by the synagogue, and is a credit to the Weston brethren. The brethren will help us this year again, and will continue to do so while the present men are at the head.

To all county superintendents: The schools now have their blank reports, samples of which have been sent you, and they should send you one of the cards when filled and the other to this office. If any others are needed you can now have them. Let us perfect our statistics this year, so that we can turn them over to Brother Abbott for his July report.

Report all schools in which we are working, giving the number of our force only, and remember that the banners are awarded on the reports sent in, and on no others, so that if your school is not reported, a wrong is done them.

T. A. Hedges has just closed institutes at Montgomery City and Jonesburg, all being pleased with his work. Interest in the church and school was increased and the brethren are glad of his visit, just as those knowing him knew they would be. To miss his helpfulness is your great disadvantage. Antioch and Howell are rejoicing in a new house, now well on the way, and when ready will insure more Bible-school work in South Missouri. They grow all the time.

Sedalia has just served us very generously, as brethren Putman and Dalby said they would, and when the preacher and leader says so, so it is. But what are others doing that promised so much and have done so little? H. F. DAVIS.

Commercial Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY

invites you to send for descriptive circulars of these and other of their books certain to be of interest to you.

THE...

REVELATION OF JESUS,

A STUDY OF THE PRIMARY SOURCES OF CHRISTIANITY

By the Rev. GEORGE HOLLEY GILBERT,
Chicago Theological Seminary,
Author of "The Student's Life of Paul" and "The Student's Life of Christ."

Cloth, - $1.25, net.

"This is the most noteworthy historical study of the New Testament Sources of Christian doctrine that has appeared in English since the publication of Professor McGiffert's 'The Apostolic Age.'"—The Outlook.

"No better illustration could be offered of the distinctly modern way of treating the more occult questions of theology."—The Inter-Ocean, Chicago.

ONE YEAR OF SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSONS FOR YOUNG CHILDREN.

A MANUAL FOR TEACHERS AND PARENTS .....

By FLORENCE U. PALMER.

Cloth, Small 4to. Illustrated. $1.00

The aim is to present to the child a principle of right living within his daily experience, giving him, not only a story to enjoy, but something to do.

Bishop JOHN H. VINCENT, Chancellor of the Chautauqua Circles, writes: "This book is sure to be in every way a blessing to mother, father, older brothers and sisters, the very little folks and to the Sunday-school primary classes and intermediate teachers. . . . It helps to self-help. . . . It should find its way into thousands of homes."

THE MACMILLAN CO.,
66 Fifth Avenue, New York.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

Miscellaneous wants and notices will be inserted in this department at the rate of one cent a word, each insertion, all words, large or small, to be counted, and two initials stand for one word. Please accompany notice with corresponding remittance, to save bookkeeping

48 FINE plain Slides, illustrating "In His Steps," good as new, for sale at a bargain. Charles Bloom, Cato, N. Y.

180 SONGS for 10 cents. J. G. Miller, Elk Mills, Tenn.

SALESMEN WANTED.—Mell's self-selling novelties are a gold mine. Particulars free. Mell Manufacturing Co., Dep't J, Minneapolis, Minn.

LIFE OF MOODY," cloth, 318 pages, 25 cents, postpaid, of C. F. Howard, Windfall, Ind.

DAILY BREAD," cloth, 192 pages, 25 cents, postpaid, of C. F. Howard, Windfall, Ind.

VEST POCKET DICTIONARY, etc., Morocco, gold edges, alphabetic. 192 pages, 25 cents, postpaid, of C. F. Howard, Windfall, Ind.

THE ACME SMELTING AND REFINING COMPANY, of Phœnix, Ariz., is controlled by Christian business men and offers for a short time excellent opportunities for either large or small investments. Write for full information. A thorough investigation is desired by the company.

MYSTERY OF THE GOLDEN CLOTH. The greatest book ever written on John's Revelation. Price, $1.50. Also Seer of Patmos, or John's Place in the Christian Economy. Price, 25cts. Address J. S. HUGHES, Station O, CHICAGO.

In the Lake Country

of Northern Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan, there are hundreds of the most charming Summer Resorts awaiting the arrival of thousands of tourists from the South and East.

Among the list of near-by places are Fox Lake, Delavan, Lauderdale, Waukesha, Oconomowoc, Palmyra. The Dells at Kilbourne, Elkhart and Madison, while a little further off are Minocqua, Star Lake, Frontenac, White Bear, Minnetonka and Marquette on Lake Superior.

For pamphlet of "Summer Homes for 1900," or for copy of our handsomely illustrated Summer Book, entitled "In the Lake Country," apply to nearest ticket agent or address with four cents in postage, Geo. H. Heafford, General Passenger Agent, Old Colony Building, Chicago, Ill.

Announcements.

Program.

The Missouri Christian Bible-school Co-operation will be held in California, June 11-14, 1900.
Musical Director, W. E. M. Hackleman, Indianapolis, Ind.

FIRST SESSION.

Under the auspices of Claude E. Hill, State Superintendent of Endeavor. "We are laborers together with God."

MONDAY AFTERNOON.

2:30. Praise Service, led by D. C. Peters, Holden.
3:00. Words of Greeting, Miss Myrtle Wood, California.
3:10. Response, O. A. Ishmael, Drexel.
3:25. Appointment of Committees.
3:30. Address, "The Present—Its Outlook, Its Opportunities," C. M. Chilton, St. Joseph.
4:00. Adjournment and Social Hour.

SECOND SESSION.

MONDAY EVENING.

7:30. Service of Song, led by F. A. Mayhall, Vandalia.
8:00. State Superintendent's Report and Address, Claude E. Hill, Pleasant Hill.
8:30 Address, "The Bible Our Text-book," H. A. Northcutt, Kirksville.
9:15. Announcements. Adjournment.

THIRD SESSION.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God."

TUESDAY MORNING.

8:00 Normal Study, "The Relation of Bible Geography to Bible Teaching," D R. Dungan, St. Louis.
8:30. Devotional, led by Jno. W. Coggins, Odessa.
9:00. Address, "The Endeavor Idea," E. J. Fenstermacher, Lexington.
9:25. Conference, "Practical Work an Endeavor Society May Do," conducted by Miss Minnie Shaffer, Sedalia.
10:00. Reports of District Superintendents.
10:30. "Wherein Does Christian Endeavor Help the Church?" W. A Moore, St. Louis.
11:00. Report of State Superintendent of Junior Work, Miss Mollie Hughes, Independence.
11:10. Conference of Junior Work, conducted by Mrs. Pearl Lemmon Deerwester, Warrensburg.
12:00. Announcements. Adjournment.

FOURTH SESSION.

"He that receiveth seed into good ground is he that heareth the Word and understandeth it, and which also beareth fruit."

Bible-school Convention.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

2:00. Devotions, led by F. L. Reynolds, Clearmont.
2:10. Committee Vacancies Supplied.
2:15. President's Address, C. C. Hill, California.
2:25. Reports of (1) the Board; (2) the Treasurer; (3) the Fieldmen.
3:20. Suggestions from the Floor.
3:30. Address, "The Possibilities of Bible-school Work in Missouri," W. T. Henson, Lathrop.
4:00. Address, "The Agencies for Success in Bible-school Work," by Zuinglius Moore, Albany.
4:30. Business. Adjournment.

FIFTH SESSION.

"Not that we are sufficient unto ourselves; but our sufficiency is of God."

TUESDAY EVENING

German Evangelical Church.

7:30. Praise Service, led by G. L. Cook, of St. Louis.
8:00. Address, "Bible-school Needs of Missouri," Davis Errett, Canton.
8:30. Responses from the Convention.
9:30. Adjournment.

Christian Church.

7:30. Prayer and Praise, led by King Starke, Lamonte.
8:00. Address, "Co-workers with Him," L. H. Otto, Higginsville.
8:30. Query, "Are We?" W. F. Richardson Kansas City.
9:30. Adjournment.

SIXTH SESSION.

"They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament."

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

8:00. Normal Study, "The Four Evangelists," Clinton Lockhart, Canton.
8:30. Devotional, led by H. F. Ritz, Canton.
8:45 Reports of Committees.
9:00. Open Conference, "How I Interest the Boys of my School," conducted by J. M. Hosmer, Maryville.
9:30. Conference, "Teachers' Meetings," led by P. W. Harding, Mexico
(1) "What a Teachers' Meeting is Not," W. F. Turner, Joplin.
(2) "What a Teachers' Meeting Is," Geo. L. Bush, Windsor.
(3) "Why We do not have Them," C. H. Winders, Columbia.
(4) "Why we Should Have Them," S. W. Marr, Bowling Green.
(5) "How Conduct Them," J. W. Ellis, Plattsburg.
10:10. Conference, "The Home Department," led by M. J. Nicoson, Monroe City.
(1) "What Is It?" M. J. Nicoson, Monroe City.
(2) "How It Works," F. M. Rogers, Webb City.
(3) "Can We Adopt It?" G. E. Shanklin, Stanberry.
(4) Review, Jno. P. Jesse, Gower.
11:00. Address, "Boys' and Girls' Rally Day for America," J. T. Ogle, Carrollton.
11:30. Address, "Twenty-four Years' Work," T. P. Haley, Kansas City.
12:00. Announcements. Adjournment.

SEVENTH SESSION.

"Suffer little children to come unto me."

Under auspices of Mrs. Mary Wisdom Grant, State Superintendent of Primary Work.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

2:00. Devotional, led by Miss Nora Kiernan, Huntsville.
2:15. Open Conference, "Problems in Primary Work," led by Mrs. C. H. Brown, Nevada.
2:45. Open Conference, "Practical Primary Methods," led by Miss Maud E. Cole, Mound City.
3:15. Open Conference, "Primary Work without a separate Class Room," led by Mrs. Lou B. Goodnow, Kingston.
3:40. "My Class," J. M. Daloy, Sedalia.
4:10. "How to Teach the Lesson," Mrs. F. P. Grant, Jefferson City.
4:30. Business. Adjournment.

EIGHTH SESSION.

"My soul, wait thou only upon God, for my expectation is from him."

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

German Evangelical Church.

7:30. Song Service, led by J. H Allen, Bunceton.
8:00. Address, "A Great Work of God," R L. Cave, Independence.
8:45. Announcements. Adjournment.

Christian Church.

7:30 Service of Song, led by S. J. Cophe Moberly.
8:00. Address, "The Bible-school of the Twentie Century." Geo. H. Combs, Kansas City.
8:45. Adjournment.

NINTH SESSION.

"If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God a it shall be given him."

THURSDAY MORNING.

8:00. Normal Study, "Next Sunday's Less Taught," D R. Dungan, St. Louis.
8:30. Devotional, led by R. L. Wilson, Kans City.
9:00. Committee Reports. Miscellaneous.
9:15. Conference, "The Work of the Superinten ent," led by B. L Glahn, Palmyra.
(1) "The General Exercises," T. J. Smirl, Cra
(2) "School Management," A. R. Hunt, Savanna
(3) "Securing Teachers," B. L. Dawson, Belt
(4) "Grading and Other Problems," W. E. Bo ton, Mound City.
9:45. Conference, "The Work of the Teache led by S. J. White, Cameron.
(1) "Securing a Class," H. S. Saxby, Kearney.
(2) "The Work of the Teacher before the Clas L. F. McCray, Chillicothe.
(3) "The Work of the Teacher with the Parent J. M. Vawter, Lawson.
(4) "Lesson Preparation," J. B. Jones, Fulton.
10:15. Address, "The Great Teacher," J. H. Ga rison, St. Louis.
10:45. "Banners and Medals Awarded," J. Myers, Clarksville.

H. F. DAVIS, Cor. Sec

$1000 IN GOLD FREE

FOR BRAINY PEOPLE

14	5	23	25	15	18	11
23	1	19	8	9	14	7	20	15	14
3	8	9	3	1	7	15

FOR BRAINY PEOPLE

Each one of the above three lines of figures spells the name of a great city in the United States. This is a brand new puzzle and can be solved with a little study, as follows: There are twenty-six letters in the alphabet, and we have used figures in spelling the cities instead of letters. Letter A is number 1, B number 2, C number 3, etc., throughout the entire alphabet. IF YOU CAN SPELL OUT THESE THREE CITIES YOU MAY SHARE IN THE DISTRIBUTION OF $1,000 WHICH WE ARE GIVING AWAY for doing a little work for us. This you can do in less than one hour of your time. This and other most liberal offers are made to introduce one of the very best New York magazines into every home in the United States and Canada. WE DO NOT WANT ONE CENT OF YOUR MONEY. When you have made out the names of these three cities, write them plainly on a postal card and send it to us, and you will hear from us promptly BY RETURN MAIL. It may take an entire evening to solve the three names, but STICK TO IT AND TRY TO GET YOUR SHARE OF THE $1,000. A copy of this high-class ONE DOLLAR MAGAZINE WILL BE SENT FREE to everyone answering this advertisement. Do not delay. Send your answer in immediately. Address ROBINSON PUBLISHING CO., 24 North William Street, New York City.

MAP OF THE TRAVELS OF JESUS

NOTA BENE: A few weeks ago we advertised that we had several hundred copies Stout's Map of the Travels of Jesus, which we would sell, while they lasted, at the duced price of Three Dollars per copy. This offer was appreciated, and we have alrea sold about half our stock. The remainder will not remain long on our hands. Wh they are gone, the price will go back to Five Dollars. If you wish this map, or quickly.

TOO GOOD TO LAST.

We secured our present stock of these maps in a bankrupt stock, at a price considerably below the regular wholesale price. We are sharing the benefit of our bargain with the Sunday-schools. We cannot get any more as cheaply as we got these, and so cannot sell any more as cheaply as these are being sold. The former price was Five Dollars, and that will be the price when those now on hand have been taken.

AN INDISPENSABLE AID.

The International Sunday-school lesso will continue on the Life of Christ un the Third Quarter of 1901, Fifteen Mont from now. You need this map in order properly teach these lessons to the ch dren. By its help the teacher can begin Bethlehem and follow Jesus through earthly ministry, pointing out every s where the foot of the Savior trod, up the Mount of Transfiguration.

JUST WHAT THE MAP IS.

It is a handsome map, mounted on cloth, varnished, with rollers, all ready to hang It is six feet long and three feet wide. It is a carefully corrected map of Palestine at time of Christ. Colored lines show the journeys of Jesus. Every spot which He visi is shown in its proper chronological order. Accompanying the map is a chart, whi gives in proper order, the places visited by Jesus. The plan is so simple that a ch can easily comprehend and use the map.

The Map of the Travels of Jesus is the result of many years of study and research Rev. A. P. Stout. It is a better map than others which are being sold for twice money. Our price for this map, until the present stock is exhausted, is Three Dolla charges prepaid. Send your order at once.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, ST LOUIS, M

Evangelistic.

IOWA.

Ames, May 2.—Have had one or more additions the church every Sunday this year except four. e outlook is good.—JAMES R. MCINTIRE.

NEBRASKA.

Waterloo, April 30.—Three young men made e good confession at regular morning services sterday. This makes five confessions in the nth of April.—A. O. SWARTWOOD.

CALIFORNIA.

Eureka.—Work here is in excellent shape and osperous. Many good workers are being added our number weekly by letter and obedience. er $100 for missionary work this year and more follow.—E. L. BURCH.

TENNESSEE.

Chattanooga, April 30.—Highland Park Church l three baptisms Sunday night. Our pastor, W. Taylor and wife, were granted a month's vaca-n, which will be spent in Denver, Col., where . Taylor will occupy the pulpit of Broadway urch. They left for the West Monday.—H. J. FARLAND.

ILLINOIS.

Roseville.—Closed my work here to accept call Ocala, Florida. Full house and one confession the morning service, also one not previously orted.—W. H. COLEMAN.

Niantic, April 30.—Three additions to the urch here yesterday; two others recently. The rk moves along nicely here, and we hope for at things this year.—J. R. PARKER.

INDIAN TERRITORY.

Miami, April 30.—At our regular service last rd's day the writer took for his subject "Roman-n and the Bible." The discourse was a reply to hop Meesrchant, who preached several discourses the Catholic Church last week. I had an-nced through the papers that I would reply to discourse that day. I had a large, attentive ience, several of whom were Catholics. Three itions by baptism and one by letter.—S. O. RKS.

INDIANA.

Union City, May 1.—I am helping my brother hew in a short meeting here. There have n 20 added the first week, mostly by confes-n. Bro. Z. T. Sweeney preached a few sermons he beginning of the meeting. His work was d and great all the time he could remain.—J.S.

Indianapolis, May 1.—I assisted Bro. Willa-gh in a meeting in Montezuma, Ind. The rch was put in order and 22 were added during meeting.—J. M. CANFIELD.

Lowell, May 3.—We have just closed a three ks' meeting here. Bro. T. J. Shuey, our dis-t evangelist, did the preaching for us. While y four were added, I am sure that those who already enlisted in the great army, gained h courage with which to meet the conflicts of Christian warfare. Bro. Shuey is a preacher nore than ordinary ability. He is essentially astor, however, his efforts in the evangelistic l have been crowned with marked success. For past 16 months he has been our evangelist in (2nd) district. During this time 379 have n added to the faith, and the churches and r pastors have been greatly strengthened. He es with us in the autumn, when he proposes eave the evangelistic field and become a pas-once more. Bro. Shuey is a man who has had e experience, has traveled extensively and is nently fitted to serve his fellowmen.—W. D. N VOORHIS.

KENTUCKY.

Henderson, May 1.—We have just closed a good ting of nine days. E. L. Powell, of Louisville, some very fine preaching for us. The le city was delighted with the attractive way hich he told the "old story." Twenty-two e added to our roll. About 140 have been add-o our membership in the past two and one-half s.—E. J. WILLIS.

Carlisle, April 30.—We closed a happy meeting wo weeks on Sunday night at Seymour, Ind., 28 additions. Miss Lillian Pearl Perrin, of natown, Ind, conducted the singing, to the de-t of every one. H. L. Veach is the accepta-minister.—F. M. TINDER.

Lexington.—The Central Church meeting closed Wednesday night, after continuing 25 days. Forty-one persons came forward during that time either to confess Christ or to unite with the church. Five of the number united by letter or statement. Five are yet to be baptized. The other 31 are to be received into the church to-morrow. A. P. Cobb preached 29 earnest and able sermons which were listened to by large audiences. Those who accepted the invitation, during the meeting, were nearly all members of the Sunday-school. It will be easier, therefore, for them to begin the Christian life. The sermon to-morrow morning is intended to be particularly helpful to the new converts. To-morrow night the sermon will be evangelistic, on "What Must I do to be Saved?"—I. J. SPENCER.

WHY PAY $60.00 MORE for a surrey than is actually necessary. If you buy a job as good as good from a dealer or agent he will charge you about that amount in commission. Buy direct from our factory and save it. We are the largest manufacturers of Vehicles and Harness in the world selling to the consumer exclusively.

No. 77 Single Surrey Harness. Price, $17.50. Equal to those selling for $10 more.

WE HAVE NO AGENTS.

We make 178 styles of vehicles and 65 styles of harness and ship anywhere for examination, guaranteeing safe delivery. You take no risk, as all our work is guaranteed as to quality, style and finish. You have the advantage of the largest stock in the country to select from. Don't buy a vehicle or harness of any kind until you get a free copy of our large illustrated catalogue.

No. 911—Canopy top Surrey, has long-distance axles, open rubber head springs and Bradley quick couplers. Price, complete with curtains, storm apron, sun shade and fine lamps $135. As good as others sell for $50 more than our price.

Elkhart Carriage and Harness Mfg. Co., W. B. PRATT, Sec'y. Elkhart, Ind.

KANSAS.

Herington, May 1.—Two baptisms and four by letter since taking the work here March 1.—IMRI ZUMWALT.

Kansas City, May 3.—Meeting at the South Side Church is doing well. Good interest and eight additions to date. Close Sunday night. The church here has given me a unanimous call to become their minister. I will decide in a few days. T. L. NOBLITT.

Osawatomie, April 30.—It is quite generally regarded that we had the most spiritual meetings yesterday that we have had in the 14½ months of my pastorate here. There was one addition by letter in the morning and two from the Baptists in the evening, a man and wife about 50 years of age. With these there have been seven additions in the last two months at our regular preaching services and prayer-meetings.—S. H. GIVLER.

Sedgewick, April 21.—Evangelist D. D. Boyle has closed here with 38 added. The meeting was very successful considering the fact that the M. E.s and Congregationalists have been here for 30 years and our people just organized four years ago. As all added were grown people, and the majority came from other churches, we consider it a decided victory for primitive Christianity in this place. Among the number who united with us was Bro. L. A. Pocock, who has been a minister in the Newlight Church for years. He has been one of their most active preachers in Kansas and will certainly prove to be a man of usefulness among our churches. He is not only well read and intelligent, but he is a man of good moral character. Bro. P. desires to get to work immediately.—E. M. HAILE, pastor.

ARKANSAS.

Pine Bluff, May 4.—One to confess last Lord's day morning and one the Lord's day morning before. We had a beautiful baptismal service last Sunday night. Two ladies—teachers in our city schools—witnessed for the first time an immersion. I know of two others who will be baptized, and of three others who will take membership. I think some of the shoddy elite of Pine Bluff will find out that immersion is not "practiced only by the niggers." While no formal action has been taken the official board say the desire that I continue to labor for the church is unanimous. But for the General Missionary Society and the Church Extension fund our cause would not be represented in Pine Bluff. As yet I am the only preacher and this the only church in the county, and this a city of 20,000 souls. Next week I go to assist Bro. Breeden at Camden.—A. W. CRUTCHER.

Pearidge, April 24.—I closed my sixth year's work with the Rocky Comfort Church—Missouri—last year and turned over the work to young Bro. Detherage, a worthy and able young brother. I still preach at Pearidge once a month. Had four additions last month. I have been preaching here over seven years. Because of our college here our numerical strength is difficult to hold.—S. R. BEAMAN.

Arkadelphia, May 4.—I have just returned from holding a meeting at Pike City, resulting in an organization of 21 members. A building committee was appointed and a good start made securing pledges to build a house.—E. S. ALLHANDS.

Newport, May 5.—There were a number turned away at the first service here. Prospects are good for an ingathering.—JORDAN AND RIDENOUR.

MISSOURI.

East Sixth Street, Kansas City, May 5.—Have been here 18 days and have had 104 added. Working with Geo. H. Combs and this grand church of royal men and devoted women. Twenty came out for Christ Sunday. Bro. Wilson conducts the music. We are working for greater victories.—CHAS. REIGN SCOVILLE.

Springfield, May 2.—Thirty additions—19 confessions—during meeting at the First Church.—E. W. BOWERS, pastor, 4698 Elm Street.

Hannibal, May 4.—The church here enjoyed the assistance of Bro. H. A. Denton, of Warrensburg, in conducting a short meeting of two weeks. He is a direct, clear and earnest speaker. Every sermon was a good one and well received. The interest increased till the last, when he gave a stirring and effective discourse on "The Safeguard of the Soul." His series on "The Plea of the Disciples of Christ" was very helpful and did great good. There was a number of accessions to the church, but the ingathering from the meeting will continue for a long time. It was a pleasure to have Bro. Denton in our home and to show him the natural scenery about the city, than which there is none more beautiful in America.—LEVI MARSHALL.

Cameron, May 2.—Four additions at our regular services Sunday.—S. J. WHITE.

Nevada, April 30.—Five accessions yesterday, one two weeks ago not reported, making six for April. Work moving along nicely.—B. F. HILL.

Paris, May 3.—J. V. Updike was with us here 18 days, during which time 50 were added to the church; 48 by baptism. The preaching was strong, at times powerful. The truth was fearlessly presented, and we hope for rich returns yet from the seed sown during the meeting.—W. N. BRINEY.

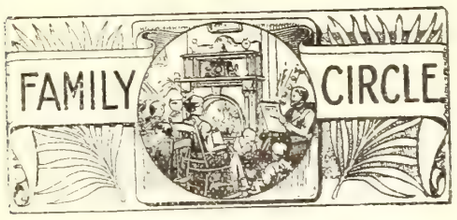
Kansas City, April 30.—Our meeting at the Sixth and Prospect Church starts with splendid interest. This church gave me the largest first audience that I ever addressed. Two young men made the confession at the first service, and Bro. Combs has thoroughly organized and drilled the committees according to the instructions sent ahead. He is a most royal man and has done all in his power to make Bro. Wilson and myself happy and to bring the work before this city. Have been here 13 days and have 68 additions; 20 added yesterday, and packed and crowded house at both services. Spoke to an audience of men only at Y. M. C. A. rooms, Sunday at 4 P. M., and extra chairs were brought in to accommodate the crowd. Spoke at the far-famed Kansas City Stockyards Lot, at 11 A. M., to an audience that used the utmost capacity of the room, and we go there thus at 1 P. M. again. We praise the Lord of victories for 735 additions in the first four months of 1900. This church passed the 1,000 mark in membership Friday night, and is said to be the only church in Kansas City entirely out of debt. We ask the prayers of our brethren, believing that the effectual fervent prayers of righteous men availeth much.—CHAS. REIGN SCOVILLE.

"IN HIS STEPS,"

"Robert Hardy's Seven Days," "Titus," "Pillar of Fire," Drummond's "Pax Vobiscum," "Greatest Thing, etc.," "Self Help," "Ruby," "Work and Wait," "Throne of David," 2 for 10cts., 6 for 27cts. "Manliness of Christ," "Crown of Wild Olives," "Dreams," "Mornings in Florence," 14cts. each. Catalog, 2cts. H. E. Erwin & Co., Little Rock, Ark.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE TABLETS. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. GROVE'S signature on each box. 25c.



Unrecognized Blessings.

J. ORVILLE WALTON.

See the sunbeam army driving
With its sword of rainbow bright
Back the dark, tear laden nimbus
That has ruled the world by night;
While the bright sun mounts, triumphant,
To his throne of ruddy light,
And the monarch of the shadows
Hides himself in western flight.

Or, expanding like the petals
When the calyces are drawn,
Now has opened wide the morning
From its bud of earliest dawn.
And the guests of spring are coming,
Crowding up where'er is room,
Anxious for a sip of fragrance
At the fountain of perfume.

Hear the robin mid the branches
Gaily calling to his mate,
While the daisy hides her nightcap,
Half ashamed at being late.
Surely, now, it seems that nature
All might join the glad refrain,
But we hear one note discordant
In the morning choral strain.

At our side a flower is speaking
And we list to what is said
To the raindrop on it resting,
Weighing down its dainty head.
"Yester-morn the bright sun raised me
From the earth as he passed by
And he painted my blue petals
From the palette of the sky;"

"Then he whispered, when he left me,
'Little flower, ready be
With a smile to greet my coming
When again I visit thee.'
Now he comes and I no greeting
Offer from this burdened head,
Better far, O cruel raindrop!
I should brokon lie, and dead."

How I long to know the sequel
Of the mischief now begun,
For I know that truant raindrop
Has been plotting with the sun.
There! I saw it catch a message
From the telegraph of light—
And an answer it returneth
With a flash, as jewel, bright.

Now the raindrop breaks its clinging
And it drops into the ground,
While the flower lifts its petals
And, in gaily looking round
Soon forgets the heavy burden
That so grievously it bore—
Soon forgets the sparkling raindrop
That has sought its rootlets' door.

Once again, a fair morn breaking.
We its beauties would explore,
So we seek the meadow ramble
That has wooed our feet before.
Here, beside us, is the flower
With a wreath of daystars fair
In the place of the lone blossom
Which before had rested there.

Now we know that glist'ning raindrop
Was a courier to tell
To the rootlets lying hidden
That the sun they had pleased well,
And to speak this cheering message:
"Thou shalt yet have blossoms more,
And their tints shall be as pleasing
As the bud thou hadst before."

How like life has been our fable,
O, how often we may find,
When the drops of disappointment
Come the buds of hope to bind,
That the hearts from scenes of trouble
To the light again may rise,
And may find the deep affliction
But a blessing in disguise!

The Lost Emigrants.

R. H. JOHNSON.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Two or three weeks later the Doctor and Jack—I must continue to call him Jack, though now our minister—invited Maria and myself to a day's outing on the top of Castle Mountain. We girls had often looked up to its cragged summit, sometimes beaten by the scurrying clouds, at others golden with the beams of the rising sun, or towering like a mighty silver column by moonlight, and longed for its conquest; and the more so, that our imaginations of the grandeur of the outlook from its kingly crest had been excited by the description of the view by our proposed companions, who had previously made the ascent.

Accordingly, with a well-filled lunch basket and much enthusiasm, and accoutered for rugged climbing, we left the village in the early morning.

It was a long and difficult undertaking to scale the mountain. But under the guidance and with the ready assistance of our companions over the difficult places we, at last the conquerors, trod the summit beneath our feet.

Before us was a scene of transcendent beauty. The coastline on every side was distinctly visible. To the windward the heavy breakers coming in beat with a thunder on the shore that came up to our far-off ears like the diapason of a mighty orchestra of the fabled god of the sea.

Looking down the mountain's beetling side, in calm beauty lay our island home, clad in living green, save where it was touched with the hues of scarlet and gold by the matchless pencil of autumn.

This emerald island gleamed a solitary gem in the azure setting of a shoreless sea, which melted in dreamy grandeur, until on the far horizon's rim the skylike sea and sealike sky seemed blended into one.

Long we gazed on the sea without a sail, and the lonely isle with but a single wreath of smoke to tell that human outcasts had ever been tossed by old ocean's storms on this hidden spot of earth.

It was a fitting time for lofty thoughts, and if we could not manufacture we at least could borrow them. Presently Mr. Burton said:

" 'To recount Almighty works,
What words or tongue of seraph can suffice,
Or heart of man suffice to comprehend?' "

"They are ineffably and immeasurably glorious," said Dr. Andral, "and lead the thoughtful observer through nature up to nature's God; and he necessarily exclaims with the Father of our race:

" 'These are thy glorious works, Parent of good;
Almighty, thine this universal frame,
Thyself, how wondrous, then!' "

"And," added Miss Clarkson, "they lead us back to the days of world-building by the Omnipotent, when he said: 'Let there be, and there was;' of which Bishop Heber sings:

" 'Then towered the palace, then in awful state
The temple reared its everlasting gate;
No workman's steel, no ponderous axes rung;
Like some tall palm the noiseless fabric sprung.' "

"And," said I, "these works that cam from the Almighty Hand still speak an ever will speak of his matchless power an wisdom.

" 'The heavens declare the glory of God,
The firmament showeth his handiwork,
Day unto day uttereth speech,
And night unto night showeth knowledge.'

"And thus heaven and earth, and day an night, and all things, speak of God."

"Yes," said Burton—

" 'A voice is in the winds I do not know,
A meaning on the face of the high hills
Whose utterance I cannot comprehend,
A something is behind them; that is God.'

"Yet, alas! there are many who are obliv ous to the something that is behind then many who do not look through nature up t nature's God; many who can look upon h stupendous works, not only unmoved, b even deny the Author."

"True," said the Doctor; "and such unbeli comes from shallow souls and shallo thinking."

"Yes, and from callow souls and callo thinking," said Maria. "But out of t sophomoric stage, with profounder thinkin they often vanish."

"And you, therefore," the Doctor replie "agree with Lord Bacon: 'Though a sm draught of philosophy may lead a man atheism, a deep draught will certain bring him back again to faith in God.' "

"To my trusting nature," she replied, do not see how it can be otherwise."

There was a pause, and the Doctor said:

"While the lofty thoughts of toweri minds may be appropriate food for aspiri souls on this lofty summit, let us not forg the lower demands of our inferior natur which, being interpreted, is: I am hungr

"We are all agreed to the interpretati thereof, if I may judge the feeling of t others by my own," Jack responded. T long walk and steep ascent and the cri mountain air having greatly sharpened o appetites, we were in no mood for del and accordingly, we speedily arranged o luncheon and proceeded to do it ample j tice.

This over, and an hour devoted to re Miss Clarkson and I determined to gath some floral specimens peculiar to the mo tain summit, and soon were eagerly engag in the work. We wandered hither and y der, and soon were separated. Presently saw some brilliant little flowers of an u known variety in a sheltered nook seve feet below me. But how was I to rea them? The descent was sheer and a fathom least. There was a bush near the edge w long, tough branches. I hesitated. I look at the tempting, bewitching flowers. yielded.

Grasping the bush, I let myself do without difficulty, and eagerly pounced u the little witches. After collecting th I turned for the more arduous work of ascent, but alas! my enthusiasm had out my discretion.

I had neglected to secure the branch t let me down and it had sprung back bey my reach. I searched for another way but in vain.

I was in a little niche. On one side was a beetling precipice, on the other a smooth wall of rock. I sprang into the air in a vain attempt to reach the branch by which I descended—"so near and yet so far." I thought of Virgil's lines that I read when a schoolgirl, and forgot, with the Latin, long ago; but I fancy they meant: "It is easy to descend into the pit, but to get out again—that's the difficulty."

Indeed, the getting back was the alarming thing with me. The top of a mountain is generally much larger than it looks to be, and my companions were some distance away. Then I was entirely concealed from view in my little niche.

For a moment the horrifying picture of a skeleton, polished by mountain rodents and bleached by storm and sun for many a week, met my mental gaze.

But this by a strong effort I dismissed. No, my friends would not relinquish search until they found me. In one way I could aid them. I could use my voice. Accordingly, I at once called it into service. I shouted lustily for some minutes, with no other results than an irritation of my throat. I then took to calling only at frequent intervals. This I did for what seemed an immense lapse of time, but which was probably in reality not more than thirty minutes, when I fancied I heard an answering call. Calling again, I distinctly heard a response, soon followed by approaching footsteps, and in a moment the manly form of Dr. Andral was bending over the edge of the rocks. Taking in the situation in an instant, he seized the shrub that had ensnared me, and grasping with his free hand my upstretched arm, lifted me from my prison. I gratefully thanked him for his timely delivery; to which he responded that he was only too happy for being the means of rescuing me from my peril, and added: "I assure you, Miss Winston, it would afford me the greatest possible pleasure to be the means of assisting you, as far as in my power, over every danger and rough passage of life."

For this surprising speech I was totally unprepared, and my only answer was a confused silence. In a moment I said: "Let us go at once and remove the suspense of the others."

We presently saw Jack and Maria searching for me near the spot where I had last been seen.

We called to them and they expressed their great relief, as they had feared that I might have fallen over a precipice.

As our return to the village had been somewhat delayed by this mishap, the others, who were near the path down the mountain, called to us to follow, which we did, but saw them no more on the way to the village.

The Doctor and I proceeded in silence, or discoursed in monosyllables. Presently we found ourselves away from the path and on the brink of a precipice. He begged me to save needless fatigue by remaining where I was until he discovered the path. Shortly he came back and reported that he had found the way. I said: "You have placed me under a twofold obligation; first, as a deliverer, and secondly, as a pathfinder." "I thank you," said he, "that you are too generous to reproach me with the fact that I was also your pathloser. I much prefer the other attributes you have ascribed to me." And then, after a solemn pause: "I assure you, Miss Winston—and this is no momentary impulse—I could wish no happier lot than to be a deliverer and pathfinder for you through all your life."

How was I to answer? He had seriously and manfully revealed his heart to me. My first impulse was to answer favorably. And then I thought of Maria—of the very great friendship between him and her—and I remembered my solemn resolve to suffer in silence if need be, but never in any way to obtrude myself between her and her interests; and I said: "Dr. Andral, you have compelled me to speak plainly. I have long known of the friendship between you and Maria, and I believe she loves you. Let us dismiss the subject." To my surprise, instead of discomfiture, his face became radiant, and seizing my hand he said: "So that is the barrier between us, is it, Dora? There are several obstacles in my way there. Maria and I are the best of friends, but she wouldn't have me. I have no desire to marry her; and Jack Burton wouldn't give me the slightest show if I desired it ever so much. And now, Dora, shall I find the path for you?" And with a great brightening of the skies I said: "Yes, with my whole heart, through all the long, long way."

I pass over the remaining incidents of the journey, for which, O, gentle reader, be thankful! Permit me, however, to add that when I reached home, on opening the door, I fell into Maria's arms, and the following conversation occurred—the most intensely surcharged with meaning that ever one woman uses to another: "O, Dora!" "O, Maria!" and she knew and I knew, each that the other had had a delightful day upon the mountain, and that every downward step on the return was an upward step toward the rosy-peaked summits of the mountains of Beulah.

And oh, how bright our simply furnished room appeared! The furniture seemed varnished with a cordial smile. The clock ticked a "wel-come, wel-come, wel-come," and the old cat rubbed her sides against our feet and softly purred a maternal benediction, as if to say: "Heaven bless you, my children!"

LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE
THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.
All dishes, such as soups, fish, meats, gravy, game, salads etc. are doubly appetizing and digestible when flavored with — Lea & Perrins' sauce.
BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.
SIGNATURE On Every Bottle.
Lea & Perrins
John Duncan's Sons Agents-New York.

Free Trial Lesson

In Bible course by mail. Take the course right at home, Diploma and degree when you finish. Terms only $1.00 per month. Write to Prof. C. J. Burton, Christian University, Canton, Mo.

Teddy's Lesson.

"Come, Teddy," said Mrs. West; "it's time for the cows to come home."

But Teddy was reading about a shipwreck and did not want to be disturbed just then.

"O, mother, wait a little while," he said.

A little later Hester came to thee door.

"Teddy, you ought to get the cows," she said.

"Bother the cows!" replied Teddy, crossly; and his sister went away.

Soon a man's face appeared at the window.

"Edward, the cows!" said Mr. West; and when his father spoke like that, Teddy lost no time in obeying.

Sulkily he laid down his book and walked through the kitchen, where his mother and sister were cooking the supper and his father was piling up the kindling wood for the morning's fire.

"I hate cows!" Teddy grumbled, as he walked slowly across the pine floor. "They're a bother, and I wish we didn't have any. I wish nobody had any. Cows are no good, anyway—just in the way. I hate cows!"

An hour later the cows were safe in the barn for the night, and Teddy was in better humor. He was hungry, too, after the walk to the meadow and back in the fresh, bracing air.

A fine round of meat was smoking on the table, but there was none on Teddy's plate.

"This is beef," said Mr. West. "I did not give you any because you hate cows, Teddy."

Teddy opened his mouth, and then closed it again without a word.

"I won't give you any butter, Teddy," said Mrs. West, "because we get our butter from the cows; and you hate them so."

Hester poured out the milk for the other childred, but to Teddy she gave a glass of water.

"Cows are such a bother," she said, soberly. "I know you don't want any milk."

Teddy looked wistfully at the plate of creamy cheese, but it was passed to every one but him. But, worst of all, when the custards were brought in, sweet and brown in their little white cups, Teddy was passed by.

"Of course, you wouldn't eat custards, for they are made mostly of milk," said Aunt Hetty.

Teddy looked as if he would cry.

"I—I haven't had anything to eat," he blurted. "I wish I hadn't said those thing about the cows."

Everybody smiled then, and no one objected when Hester slyly passed to him a cup of custard.—Presbyterian Banner.

Anti-Cigarette Law Upheld.

Chicago's anti-cigarette law was vindicated by Justice Peckham, of the United States Supreme Court, in a decision handed down yesterday, and hereafter the cigarette seller must pay a penalty license of $100 per annum or go to jail. The case was that of Gundling vs. city of Chicago, in which the tax was attacked as unconstitutional. Having established the validity of its pet law, the Anti-Cigarette League is now going after the cigarette smoker with a sharp stick.

The league is carrying the war into the enemy's country by inducing banks, mercantile houses and firms of all sorts to taboo those applicants for work who smoke the deadly dainties, and to forbid employes the habit under penalty of dismissal. Half a dozen banks have placed themselves on the anti-cigarette platform, and last night the league sent out 2,000 letters to as many firms urging them to back up the good work.

In the last six months the work of the league has been carried into nearly every state in the union. Lucy Page Gaston is now traveling in Missouri and Kansas, establishing branch leagues among the schoolchildren. The public schools of Chicago are nearly all represented, the Von Humboldt school thus far showing the banner membership, with a total of 300 boys who have taken the anti-cigarette pledge and are wearing its button.—Chicago Record.

About Women.

The amount of national bank stock held by women in America is estimated at $130,000,000, and the amount of private and state bank stock at $137,000,000.

Mrs. Carrie Thomas Alexander, of Belleville, a representative woman of Southern Illinois, is a candidate for the nomination for trustee of the Illinois State University at Champaign.

In the declamation contest held recently at the University of Illinois for three prizes offered by the University, Miss Elma A. Rugg, of Urbana, received first prize, in competition with twenty contestants.

Mrs. Phœbe A. Hearst has decided to establish a museum of art and archæology at the University of California. She has planned for the collection on a large scale of objects illustrating the history of fine arts throughout the world.

—Union Signal.

His Fifteen Pleas.

Dr. Robert Wallace tells a story of an ingenious beggar whom he used often to see when he was a student of the university of which in later life he was so distinguished an ornament.

Outside of the college gates there stood an old soldier who earned a living from the charity of the passers-by. The more effectively to excite their generosity he bore upon his breast a placard with this moving appeal: "Battles, four; wounds, five; children, six; total, fifteen.

Fifteen such claims to sympathy were truly irresistible.—Selected.

The Lord's Prayer in Chinese.

Ngo foo choy t'ien	Our Father which is in heaven
Yuen yee meng sing	Hallowed be thy name
Yee kwok lum gak	Thy kingdom come
Yee jee tak sing	Thy will be done
Choy tay yok t'ien	On earth as it is in heaven
Sor sooey jee leung	Give us this day
Kom yat ch'ih ngo	Our daily bread
Ngo ming yen foo	Forgive us our debts
Kao ming ngo foo	As we forgive our debtors
Mat pai ngo se	Lead us not into temptation
Jing ngo ch' ut ok	But deliver us from evil
Yukwok k' uen wing	Kingdom, power and glory
Gar ye so yau	Be thine
Lum gap sy sy	Forever and ever
Ku so yuin yar	Amen.

Mr. Poole is now at work on the preparation of a "Teacher's Handbook," which he hopes soon to publish. It will consit of useful phrases and sentences, hymns, etc., especially prepared for the use of teachers of the Chinese. The above translation of the Lord's prayer, by Mr. Poole, will be a part of the book.—Sunday-school Times.

Success Without Money.

The consoling discovery is made by Senator Mason, of Illinois, that money is not essential to the attainment of success, for he says this in the April Success:

"One of the most successful men I ever knew, never had a thousand dollars ahead in his life. He had no aptitude for making money, yet he continually tried to. During financial panics and failures he kept his spirit unchanged and unbroken. He never held an office of any kind in his life. Litigation he avoided wholly, and he never indulged in controversies. He had as few acquaintances, I think, as any man I ever knew. I regarded him as successful because he was always cheerful, industrious and temperate, always temperate, always thoughtful of those about him, and, in a matter of conviction, was absolutely fearless. To others he gave the same liberty of thought that he demanded for himself. His motto was: 'Principle, not expediency.' When he died he left barely enough to pay for his funeral expenses, and yet I maintain that he was successful. His conscientious living was an example to others. He was generous to a fault, and probably would have died in better circumstances if he had not been.

"The dollar mark is not the stamp of success. You may attain far greater success than that, and leave a larger legacy."—The Watchword.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address,

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O

Sold by Druggists, 75c.
Hall's Family Pills are the best.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful it is in Preserving Health and Beauty

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is t safest and most efficient disinfectant and purif in nature, but few realize its value when taken to the human system for the same cleansing p pose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take it the better, it is not a drug at all, but simply a sorbs the gases and impurities always present the stomach and intestines and carries them o of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smokin drinking or after eating onions and other odor vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves t complexion, it whitens the teeth and further a as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mou and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or a other, but probably the best charcoal and the m for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozeng they are composed of the finest powdered Will charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tab form or rather in the form of large, pleasant ta ing lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with hon

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell a much improved condition of the general heal better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blo and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm c result from their continued use, but on the co trary great benefit.

A Buffalo physician, in speaking of the bene of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbe Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in t stomach and bowels, and to clear the complex and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I a believe the liver is greatly benefited by the da use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a t at drug stores, and although in some sense a p ent preparation. yet I believe I get more and b ter charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges th in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets.

B. & O. S-W.

"ROYAL BLUE SERVICE."

ST. LOUIS,
CINCINNATI,
LOUISVILLE,
COLUMBUS,
PITTSBUR
WASHINGTON,
BALTIMORE,
PHILADELPHIA,
NEW YOR

BEST LINE BETWEEN THE EAST AND WEST

Luxurious Vestibuled Trains, Palatial Ladi Coaches.
Pullman Drawing Room, Sleeping and Obs vation Cars.
B. & O. S-W. DINING CARS. Meals Served la carte at POPULAR PRICES.

For Rates, Maps, Time-Tables or Sleeping C Space—Call on any Ticket Agent or addres

O. P. McCARTY,
General Passenger Agt.,
G. B. WARFEL, Cincinnati, Oh
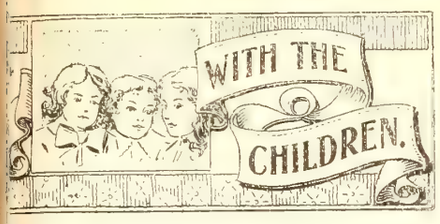
Asst. Gen'l Pass. Ag't, St. Louis, Mo.

The Iron Mountain Shortens it Time to Texas.

Train No. 51 now leaves St. Louis 2:21 P. daily, shortens the time by several hours from Louis to Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin, San Antor Houston and Galveston. Through Pullman B fet Sleeping Cars will be operated on this tr from St. Louis to San Antonio, and reclining ch car service to Dallas and Fort Worth. A lightful feature of this train is the daylight r along the Mississippi and through the beauti Arcadia Valley. Time of other trains rema the same excepting train No. 57 for Delta, Colu bus, Cairo and Shreveport which now leaves 8:00 A. M.



The Red Box Clew.

J. BRECKENRIDGE ELLIS.

CHAPTER XXIII.

In the moment of excitement Mr. Douglas l not know what he would do when he ached the yard and captured old Nance.
did not think of that. All his thought as bent on making her his prisoner. He shed through the dark little hall and unced upon the front door. But this ont door had a peculiar way of locking elf when it was shut, and the way to unk it was to turn a little brass button. It as a very simple thing to do if you knew out the button. Mr. Douglas didn't. He ook the door and looked for the key and ied to force his way out, but it was no
e. Then he called Frank, but she was so ightened she was a good while coming.
last, however, he coaxed her to show him
e combination, assuring her he was in no nger from one weak old woman. (Frank d her own opinion about Nance being ak.) So at last the front door was rown open and Mr. Douglas rushed into e yard. A woman stood upon the path d he seized her roughly by the arm.
h, it is Mrs. Dew!" cried Frank. Then . Douglas let go in some confusion, and ich more confusion followed, for Mrs.
uglas ventured out, and the housekeeper as told in one breath that Nance had been en peering through the window; and in e next breath she was informed that these angers were Frank's long-sought parents.
Mrs. Dew was alarmed at the coming of nce, and at the same time thrilled with azement and joy at Frank's great good tune. She told them she had just rerned from a home where she had gone to some sewing; she had seen nothing of e wicked old nurse. After a thorough rch of the premises Mr. Douglas came to e conclusion that Frank had only imagined
e wicked face looking through the window;
d if she had seen anybody, he reasoned it
ust have been Mrs. Dew passing by. Well, ank was so afraid of Nance that she nted to think her father was right about and at last she persuaded herself that it as all a mistake. How they all settled wn to the state of enjoying their dinner, ter that, is a matter of wonder. But it certain that they did. And there was oiled beefsteak, worth going a mile just smell, and hot biscuits, not white and mmy, looking like flower that had got ck together and had crawled out of the urbarrel by mistake; no, but biscuits th a brown top and the same kind of a ttom, and not a huge quantity of dough tween. And there were fried potatoes in g strips, thin and crisp, without any rnt corners or white, gluey edges; and ere was no sign of lightbread on the premises. So it was a very simple repast, only there was a pie after it—an apple pie. And after that a great watermelon, as red inside as it was green without, and the seeds were black and not slick.

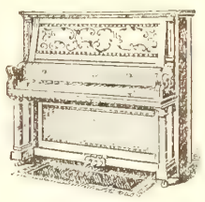
After dinner they entered into plans for the future. There is no other enjoyment that will come up to that sort of thing, especially when you have the means to carry out your plans. So they talked and talked, and I wish you had been there to hear them, for I can't repeat their cheery words—there must be some way of bringing this story to an end! The substance of their discussion was this: Mr. and Mrs. Douglas would stay till Mrs. Dew finished her engagements; that would take about a week, then all of them would leave that village. Yes, Mrs. Dew must go to Kentucky and live with the Douglases. Nobody thought of questioning that proposition; not even Mrs. Dew herself. So a whole week went by, the sweetest week in the life of Frank Douglas. For she went walking and driving and fishing with her father and mother, and they told her more and more of their history, and she told them more and more of herself, till it seemed they had lived together always. And not once did they find a trace of Nance; so the child became more sure that she had not seen the wicked face at the widow. And—oh, yes! Frank was to start to school just as soon as they reached home. How she loved to say that word, "home!" At first it brought the tears to her eyes, but they were glad tears. And how did the house look? And was there a front yard? Because, you know, many nice city houses have no front yards. But oh, yes, this one had; and they watered the flowers with a hose, and the street wasn't muddy when it rained. And this home was in Lexington, and it was on Broadway. The week came to an end and everything was packed up. All four—for Mrs. Dew made one of them—took a last trip to the creek where they had fished so many happy hours; and they hadn't caught anything either, but a turtle and some crayfish, only in this locality they were not called crayfish, but "crawdaddies"—even a baby crayfish is given this name. One day the train came to the village and took them away to St. Louis. They spent a day with Bro. Wilton at his boarding house, and when they left him the old gentleman felt quite lonesome and homesick. For there are times when you even get tired of a big hotel, and you don't care if they bring your dinner to you in twenty round thick saucers, with a lump of ice everywhere it ought to be. At such a time you long for a home of your own, and you wouldn't look out of the window then—not if you heard a band coming round the corner, and knew there might be banners and uniforms.

Rest and Health to Mother and Child.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over FIFTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, with PERFECT SUCCESS. It SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHŒA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" and take no other kind. Twenty-five cents a bottle.



JESSE FRENCH PIANOS

AND ORGANS HAVE BEEN RECOGNIZED AS THE MOST POPULAR INSTRUMENTS IN THE WHOLE SOUTHWEST FOR NEARLY THIRTY YEARS.

Our FACTORIES are among the LARGEST in the U. S.

CATALOGS FREE

Jesse French Piano & Organ Co.

HOME OFFICE ST. LOUIS MISSOURI

Branches, Agents & Representatives in all LARGE CITIES

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS. UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. CATALOGUE FREE THIS WAY.

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Church, Peal and Chime Bells, Best Metal.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY

THE E. W. VAN DUZEN CO. Cincinnati

Do You Suffer With PILES

Send us your name and address, and let us mail you our Booklet—"FACTS," about MERTANNO the only specific for the non-surgical treatment of PILES.

Our Guarantee: We will refund the price paid for this remedy in any case of Piles it fails to relieve or cure.

MERTANNO PHARMACAL CO., 416 Scott Street, Covington, Ky., U. S. A.

WATCH AND CHAIN FOR ONE DAY'S WORK.

Boys and Girls can get a Nickel-Plated Watch, also a Chain and Charm for selling 1½ doz. Packages of Bluine at 10 cents each. Send your full address by return mail and we will forward the Bluine, post-paid, and a large Premium List. No money required.

BLUINE CO. Box 3, Concord Junction, Mass.

AULT & WIBORG COMPANY

Manufacturers of Printing Inks.

CINCINNATI. NEW YORK.
CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

This Paper printed with Ault & Wiborg Ink

AMERICA'S MOST POPULAR RAILROAD

CHICAGO & ALTON RAILROAD.

PERFECT PASSENGER SERVICE BETWEEN

ST. LOUIS AND CHICAGO.
ST. LOUIS AND KANSAS CITY.
ST. LOUIS AND PEORIA.
KANSAS CITY AND CHICAGO.

Direct connections at terminals and at junction points with through trains of connecting lines for

ALL POINTS NORTH, WEST AND EAST.

If you are contemplating a trip, any portion of which can be made over the Chicago & Alton, it will pay you to write to the undersigned for maps, pamphlets, rates, time tables, etc.

D. BOWES, General Western Passenger Agent, 216 North Broadway, ST. LOUIS, MO.

GEO. J. CHARLTON, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Sunday-School.

W. F. RICHARDSON.

PARABLE OF THE SOWER.

After the incident of our last lesson, Jesus made a brief tour of the cities around Capernaum, accompanied by the twelve, and certain of the women who had been the objects of his healing grace. His growing popularity was manifest from the crowds that everywhere wa'ted upon his ministry, and began hailing him as one sent of God. It was no longer possible for the Pharisees and scribes to deny that Jesus wrought miracles. Especially did his power over demons put them to confusion, for the evil spirits were wont to cry out in anguish at his approach, and call him the Son of God. There was but one resort to retain their fast-waning influence with the multitude, and that was in persuading them that the power of Jesus was satanic in its origin, that he cast out demons through the power of the chief of demons. The Master threw the vile accusation back in their faces, with the unanswerable challenge: "How can Satan cast out Satan? Will he defeat his own subordinates by driving them from their thrones in the hearts of men?" Only stubborn and unholy prejudice could offer such an explanation of the blessed work the Christ was doing for the suffering and dying multitude. It proved the hopeless condition of their hearts, that the very work of the Spirit of God could be attributed to the evil one. For such a sin there could be no hope, since the divine resources were exhausted with the ministry of the Spirit of truth and grace. "It was of no avail that light streamed in on them; for bigotry, like the pupil of the eye, contracts in proportion to the outward brightness."

It was now become manifest that there were many among his hearers who would not receive the teachings of Jesus, however simply and gently he might utter them. Henceforth he made frequent use of the parable, in which the lessons he desired his disciples to learn could be taught to them in graphic form, yet with enough of mystery to awake their closer attention and draw forth their spirit of inquiry. The careless listener would fall away from the throng of followers, and the eager searcher for truth would have closer access to the Teacher. The parable was a common mode of teaching in the Orient, but never was it used with such effect as by the Savior. No such exquisite comparisons are found elsewhere in literature as are found in the gospels. Jesus saw into the heart of things, and read the souls of men as no other ever did; and all subsequent efforts to imitate his parables have ended in confusion.

The first of the group of parables given us by Matthew seems to have been spoken by the Lord on the shore of Galilee, as he sat in a boat and the multitude stood on the beach. It was in the spring and the plain of Gennesareth was a mass of beautiful colors. The fields were green with their growing wheat and barley, and the beaten paths that wound their way through them had been trodden by the feet of the very company to which he spake. Here and there amid the green appeared the yellow or gray spots where the shallow soil gave scant sustenance to the grain, which was being burned up by the hot sun. In other places the thorns grew so thickly amid the grain as to choke its growth and make its thin, half-forming heads a dismal prophecy of scant harvest. To the eyes of the Master the scene was strangely significant, and he read its lesson for his disciples and for all who should afterwards seek to know and do the truth. Let us look briefly at his meaning.

The one lesson Jesus meant to teach by this parable was that the result of truth depends upon its reception and use by the human heart. The word of God, which is the true seed, or the form truth takes in its supreme revelation in Christ, will be of little or much avail, as it is rightly or wrongly received by us. Hearts are divided into four classes: careless, shallow, preoccupied and consecrated. The careless heart is like the beaten road or path. No seed of truth can penetrate its surface. A Felix may tremble beneath the message of Paul, but he will not yield to the appeal of righteousness. An Agrippa my feel for a moment an impulse of good, but habit cannot be overcome by an hour of listless hearing, and he goes on in his career of shame and sin. The stony ground represents the shallow hearer, one who lacks earnest purpose and deep sincerity. On the surface there is a slight soil of good intention; but beneath lies the stratum of hard, unyielding selfishness, through which the roots of the new life cannot penetrate. After a brief show of religion, the stony hearted convert goes back into the old life of sin. The thorny ground in its turn represents the heart that is not careless of life's duties, nor shallow in purpose, but, it may be, most earnest and industrious in the pursuit of success. It is conscious of a noble nature, richly endowed and capable of high and honorable achievements. But alas! this heart is already occupied by the thorns of worldly ambition, social vanity or sensual pleasure, and the truth of God finds little place within it. How many men and women of royal attributes are wasting their superb powers upon a merely worldly life. Of how much eloquence, grace, leadership, business tact the church of Christ is robbed by the claim which the world has made upon her members. O, for the consecrated heart, tender and soft to receive the Word of God; deep and earnest in purpose to retain it; clean from worldliness and from lust, its rich stores given to the growth of that truth into character and service. Such a heart will produce a life fruitful of good, making its possessor happy and the whole world better.

It is interesting to note the various devices adopted by the enemy of the truth to prevent its bearing fruit in the life of men. They are three in number. His first attempt is to steal the Word of God out of the heart. If the seed can be kept entirely off the ground, there is no possibility of its growing. If men can be kept from reading or hearing the Word of God, they can easily be kept from becoming Christians. While the novel, t theater and society can be made to engross t thought of the young, with a constant round gayeties and excitements, the few stray grains truth that fall upon their ears will accompli nothing. Failing in this, Satan seeks to bring naught the Word of God by starving it. If m will hear it and profess their readiness to obey he will seek to persuade them that it is enough make a profession of religion; he will indu them, if possible, to give only the outside of the conduct to it, not the depths of their natur Members of the church—yes; earnest and devot Christians—no. How many stony hearts are th being deceived, and are starving the precio Word of God, which would, if permitted, fe upon the riches of their nature, and bring for fruit to glory and honor and joy eternal. foiled at this point, Satan does not yet despa Men may hold fast the truth, that it cannot stolen away from their hearts. They may ma its reception more than a mere profession, a deeply feel the obligation for its growth with the life. What then? Satan will make a la effort to defeat the truth by strangling it. I will bring around it so many and diverse interes for the soul to follow that in the attempt compass all the affairs of life the supreme o will be overgrown by a network of worldly care The thorns will choke the Word, and it will b come unfruitful. "This one thing I do," is good motto for the Christian, when Satan see to thwart the blessed office of the Word of God his life. Let him neither steal it away, starve nor strangle it; but let it dwell richly within u feeding upon our richest thought, our deepe emotions, our holiest purposes, our most arde endeavors, and it will surely bring forth fru thirty, sixty or a hundredfold.

*Lesson for May 20—Matt. 13:1-8, 18-23. Parallel passages—Mark 4:1-20; Luke 8:4-15.

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR, ECKSTEIN } Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC, BRADLEY, BROOKLYN, JEWETT, ULSTER, UNION } New York.
SOUTHERN, SHIPMAN } Chicag.
COLLIER, MISSOURI, RED SEAL, SOUTHERN } St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

HALF the trouble people have with paint, nowadays, is because they hurry the painter. If you want the old-fashioned kind of painting — the kind that lasts — employ a competent painter and see that he uses Pure "old Dutch process" White Lead [these in margin are genuine brands] and allow time enough between coats for the paint to dry.

FREE For colors use National Lead Company's Pure White Lead Tinting Colors. Any shade desired is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving full information and showing samples of Colors, also pamphlet entitled "Uncle Sam's Experience With Paints" forwarded upon application.

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

"Of a Good Beginning cometh a go end." When you take Hood's Sarsaparilla to pu fy your blood you are making a good beginnin and the good end will be health and happiness. never disappoints.

Sick headache is cured by Hood's Pills. 25c.

CHILDREN'S DAY SERVICES for U Sunday Schools.
GOLDEN SUNBEAMS music by Gabriel, Thiel a Roscoe; words by Laura L. Newell. This service offe exceptional opportunities for decorative effects. T music is particularly bright and sparkling. Price 60 per doz., $4 per 100, postpaid. Enclose 10c. in stamps f samples of our three latest services for Children's Da
THE CHURCH CHOIR for May contains Children Day music for the Choir. Enclose 10c. for sample cop
GEO. F. ROSCHE & CO.
Chicago, 38 Randolph St. New York, 22 N. William S

Christian Endeavor.

By Burris A. Jenkins.

TOPIC FOR MAY 13.

THE POWER OF A TEMPERATE LIFE.

(Dan. 1:1-17.)

(Quarterly Temperance Meeting.)

There is no doubt that a life temperate in all things is powerful in proportion to its temperance. One who takes no stimulants, who does not consume his tissues with hurry and nervousness, who never burns up with anger or other passion; who, in short, is self-contained and calm, will triumph where others fail, because of his reserve force.

It was said of Napoleon that he always knew the right moment to bring up his reserves. Let us say of all men that happy are they who have any reserves to bring up. Some of us are constantly spending all our forces instead of holding something in store for a time of need.

Naturally, a body that is kept under the tense strain of stimulants all the while, whether those stimulants come from within or without, cannot bear the sudden shock of some new strain with any fortitude. In the machinery of the great cable railway powerhouses of our cities is a vast balancewheel, weighing sometimes as much as forty tons. This wheel, with ponderous, calm revolutions, holds all the machinery steady, no matter how sudden and severe a strain may come. Every car on the line may grip the cable or let it go at once, and there is no jerk or jar to the machinery. What that great balancewheel is to the machinery, temperance in all things is to the power of a life.

Recently, in a famous hospital of the East, I saw a famous surgeon* perform four dangerous and delicate operations in less than three hours. Large, massive, calm was the skillful workman. There was no tremendous hurry, but there was steady and increasing rapidity of movement. It is said that, in the time it takes some men to open the abdomen he will perform a complete abdominal operation. All the movements and the words of the man, in and out of the operating room, are characterized by the same self-contained but purposeful equipoise. He works unceasingly but never overworks. A fifth operation was in store for him that day, but he postponed it. Four was enough, handrunning. He is temperate, even in work.

It is scarcely needful to add that this celebrated surgeon drinks no strong drink, smokes no nerve-shaking narcotic, and even refuses the ordinary stimulant of the breakfast table, coffee or tea. He has great need of steady nerve. But who has not in this world of ours?

A very significant passage was that in Mr. Kipling's recent account of a hospital train in South Africa, in which he refers to the prime condition of the constitutions of wounded men. They have every chance for getting well, because for weeks and months they had been off their liquor and their systems are sound and ready to respond to needed stimulants. So, when a man expects to meet shocks and strains upon his constitution—as in arctic exploration or army campaigning—let him beware of stimulants. And since a large part of this life is made up of the shocks of some sort of exploration or campaigning, it is worth while to avoid overstimulation of all kinds. Such temperance will increase power.

Nothing need be added regarding the influence of a temperate life over others. No one can pass into the presence of that great surgeon without being led to say: "I will be a calmer, a more temperate, a better man." The power of such temperance is the "power of an endless life."

*The surgeon here referred to is Dr. E. E. Montgomery, a Disciple, a member of the First Church in Philadelphia.

Bethany Reading Courses.

THE LORD'S TREASURY.

By F. D. Power, Director.

In Two Articles.—Article II.

Having considered the Bible teaching as to (1) the who, (2) the what, (3) the when and (4) the how of Christian giving, let us with open Bibles now seek divine instruction as to the objects to which we should give, and some of the reasons why we should give.

5. To what shall we give? To the expenses of the sanctuary. The church must be sustained. While the gospel is without money and without price, the laborer is worthy of his hire, and God hath ordained that they which preach the gospel should live by the gospel (Luke 10:7; 1 Cor. 9:14). In all organizations all members are expected to pay their part of all expenses. No organization so patiently and quietly submits to do-nothingism and pay-nothingism as does the church. Is not a man's debt here as binding as anywhere? Should not a man's promise here be kept, even more sacredly than his promise to his fellowman? Can a man expect his brother to pay his gospel bills any more than his grocery bills? Should a man feel any greater sensitiveness if his attention is called here to any failure on his part to meet his obligations than he feels when his gas bill is thrust under his door, or the newspaper man calls for his monthly dues, or when the railroad conductor cries: "Ticket, sir!" The Lord's business is business.

Again, we are to give to the poor. We had almost forgotten the poor. Among the first things taught in the apostolic church was the duty of Christians to the poor. "Blessed is he that considereth the poor." "Go sell that thou hast and give to the poor" (Ps. 41:1; Matt. 19:21). The churches of Macedonia are praised for their liberality to the poor. The churches of Corinth are enjoined to take an offering on every Lord's day for the poor. The churches in Jerusalem had all things in common, sold their possessions and goods and parted to all "as every man had need." A family was suffering. One of the children wrote a letter telling how poor and sick and hungry they were. He directed it to the "Good God in Heaven" and dropped it into the charity box of the church. Where else should it have gone? O, the opportunity of the church thus to reach thousands! O, the obligation of the church to care for the needy! O, the power of the church when she shall be filled with the spirit of kindness, goodness, compassion, mercy, helpfulness, that belonged to our Lord! Who are the millions and hundreds of millions in heathen lands to-day, but the poor—God's poor?

We are to give to missions. "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." "How can they call on him in whom they have not believed, or believe in him of whom they have not heard, or hear without a preacher, or preach except they be sent?" No power can ever bring the heathen nations to God but the gospel, and no institution is intrusted with this treasure but the church. The apostolic churches were missionary churches. The Christians in Jerusalem went everywhere preaching the Word. The Corinthians are exhorted by Paul to preach the gospel in the regions beyond them. The churches in Macedonia, when less than a year old, supported a foreign missionary. The harvest is truly plenteous, but the laborers are few. The man of Macedonia calls from every quarter. We are debtors, not to our city only, not to our nation only, but to Greeks and barbarians, to the lost of Europe, Asia and Africa, to the islands of the sea. "Ye are the light of the world." "Ye are the salt of the earth." "Enlarge the place of thy tent. Lengthen thy cords and strengthen thy stakes." Attempt great things for God and expect great things from him.

We can afford to be men of one idea if that idea be the conversion of the world to Christ. We can afford to make missions the first work of our churches, for if we get this spirit into our people it exorcises the spirit of selfishness. No trouble about the pastor's salary, no trouble about caring for the poor, no trouble about securing funds for local needs in a church that reaches out to India and China and Africa and the uttermost parts of the earth in its sympathies and with its help. O for the spirit of Paul! (Rom. 1:16; Phil. 4:12; 1 Cor. 4:11-13.)

6. How much shall we give? What is the Bible answer? "See that ye abound in this grace also" (2 Cor. 8:7). Abound is to flow over, go beyond all bounds. "He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly, and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully" (2 Cor. 9:6). "As God hath prospered" (1 Cor. 16:2). This is always a just measure. "Every man as God hath prospered him." "Unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall much be required" (Luke 12:48).

Dives needs looking after. Lazarus has had his turn. The greatest question of the age is: "What shall we do with Dives?" "What shall we do with our millionaires and our billionaires." Dives is under indictment as a thief. Five thousand works on Socialism are afloat, all of which agree in saying: "Dives is a thief!" "Property is theft!" We do not say this is true. We believe men have a right to their property, and in a sense every man may do what he will with his own. But we believe also that men are stewards; that all wealth is fiduciary and must be used for the benefit of the community; that every man is answerable to One who commands: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind," and "thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" (Matt. 22:37-9); and that which men are to give voluntarily, he that is intrusted with much must give much.

But Lazarus is under indictment also. Millions are poor, not from any oppression of Dives. Gather up all the money that the working classes have spent for rum the last thirty years, and I will build for every man a house, and lay out for him a garden, and clothe his wife and children in the best, and give him a policy of life insurance so that his home may be well maintained after he is dead. Lazarus might have to give. The widows of Zarephat, the widows with the two mites, the poor, captive, robbed Jews had to give. And after all, it was the man with the one talent who went and hid his Lord's money. The Jews gave one-tenth; the Christians should at least equal the child of Israel in the measure of his offering.

7. Finally, why should we give? God's honor requires it. "Honor the Lord with thy substance and with the first fruits of thine increase" (Prov. 3:9). "To do good and to communicate forget not, for with such sacrifices God is well pleased" (Heb. 13:16). Gratitude demands it. "Ye know the contribution of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich" (2 Cor. 8:9). Conversion involves it. "Whoso hath this world's goods and seeth his brother in need and shutteth up his bowels from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" (1 John 41:7.) Heaven is not entered without it. No stingy man shall see God. "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven" (Matt. 6:19-21). "Be a good man, my dear," said Walter Scott, when dying, to Lockhart. "Be a good man!"

VITALITY low, debilitated or exhausted, cured by Dr. Kline's Invigorating Tonic. FREE $1. Trial Bottle containing 2 weeks' treatment. Dr. Kline's Institute, 931 Arch Street, Philadelphia. Founded 1871.

Literature.

The Dead Hand is the title of a brief sketch of the relation between church and state with regard to ecclesiastical property and the religious orders by Henry Charles Lea, LL. D.* This treatise is called out and of interest because of the ecclesiastical property question in our new possessions and recites some peculiar facts in the history of this question in some of the European countries.

Faithfulness and Romanism is the title of a tract of thirty-two pages published by Jas. W. Zachary, Lexington, Ky. Another tract of forty-eight pages by the same author is entitled Old Kentucky Whisky. This latter tract contains the gist of some of Brother Zachary's strong temperance lectures. We are glad to know that both of these messengers of good are heartily received by the people who love truth and righteousness. Price, ten cents each.

Volume second of the "Shorter Life of D. L. Moody," by Paul Dwight Moody and Arthur Percy Fitt, has been issued and deals more largely with his public life and works. These shorter biographies of Mr. Moody are issued by the Bible Institute Colportage Association, Chicago, and may be obtained of booksellers. The complete and authentic life of Moody by his son, W. R Moody, is now out, but to be had only from the institute or an agent. The "shorter life" editions are more convenient for mailing; the authentic, for the library.

A somewhat unique book called "The Pastor's Helper" is now before the public. Its peculiar feature is a complete ritual each for Baptist, Congregationalist, Methodist, Unitarian and Universalist preachers. Such a book seems to be quite prophetic of that long-sought day of Christian unity. It is at least suggestive of a time wherein preachers shall become interchangeable factors. The book is small, convenient and in good style, but we fear that it has been born out of due season. However, if it shall contribute to a better acquaintance and a more fraternal spirit between the religious bodies named it has come for a good purpose. The book is by Rev. N. T. Whitaker, and published by Lee and Shepherd, Boston. Price, cloth, $1.00.

Professor Fiske has undeniably earned a right to the title of dean of American historical writers. His large and important contribution to American history is to receive a valuable addition in a history of "The Mississippi Valley in the Civil War." The volume will be brought out in the spring by Houghton, Mifflin & Co. With the exception of a treatment of the Civil War, such as was necessary for his school history of the United States, the forthcoming volume marks his first entrance into this important field of historical research and writing. The struggle for the possession of the Mississippi Valley was a life-and death struggle for the Confederacy, and its history in Mr. Fiske's hands should be of the utmost importance and interest.

The American Newspaper Annual for 1900, by N. W. Ayer & Son, Philadelphia, is a prodigious affair. It reminds one of the directory of a large city and greatly emphasizes the magnitude to which American journalism has grown. There is little information you want about any publication in North America, the West Indies and our new possessions, or the town, city or county in which it is published, not contained in this volume. And then everything is so well classified and indexed that it is no trouble to find any publication about which you desire information. In addition there are 46 colored railroad maps, the vote of 1896 by counties and states, separate lists of religious and agricultural publications and other valuable facts and figures, thus greatly extending the usefulness and value of the book.

*Published by William J. Dorman, Philadelphia.

Bulbs and Blossoms, an Easter story, by Amy Le Feuore. Price, cloth, 50 cents. Fleming H. Revell Company, Chicago, publishers.

MAGAZINES.

The Alkehest, in its quest for literature worthily representative of the South, has found in Captain W. P. Usina, that brave old Confederate naval officer, a rare fund of thrilling stories of those stormy days of '64, when blockade runners crept up and dashed through triple lines of Federal warships, anchored with steam up, before Charleston and Wilmington. The various departments of this growing magazine are well sustained, especially in the last number.

The Woman's Home Companion for May is exceptionally rich in themes of a practical, domestic nature, such as "Child-life in the Home," "Schools for Domestic Science," "Beauty and Bad Temper," etc. One of the secrets of success of this journal is the attention it has given to variety in its columns. All are not of one taste in intellectual food any more than in the physical domain, and hence the wide adaptation of its literature. The May number is a model number in this respect.

Not for a long while have we seen and handled a more interesting magazine than the Ladies' Home Journal for May. No more fitting testimony to its popularity can be adduced than the rapid increase of its circulation, having now passed the nine hundred thousand limit. The increased circulation for this journal for the past four months is said to be over thirty-six thousand copies per month. And as to the contents of the May number we have not seen a more inviting outlay from any magazine this year.

Among the important article in the Century for May is an essay by Andrew Carnegie, entitled "Popular Illusions About Trusts," in which he contends that the popular welfare is increased by trusts; also, that such aggregations of capital are usually short-lived. The only people who have reason to fear trusts, he says, are those who trust them. An editorial in the same number entitled "The Real Danger of Trusts," agrees with Mr. Carnegie as to their material advantage, but shows wherein they are a menace to the independence of the individual and the state. These two views of this great subject are certainly timely and important, and cannot fail of a wide interest. They are valuable contributions to one of our greatest national problems. The entire contents of the May Century are likewise timely and interesting.

Scribner's for May deals with some themes of living, throbbing interest, among which may be named the "Paris Exposition," "Rapid Transit in New York" and "Cripple Creek." The latter article, by Francis Lynde, in its illustrated description of this great goldfield, the Randt of America, is almost enough to create a stampede from farm and city to these inestimable treasures of hidden wealth. It is hard to realize that almost within the geographical heart of the United States there exists such rich veins of gold. But a hint at the wealth of the Cripple Creek mines is not the only interesting feature in this article. It presents in a measure something of the influence of the yellow metal upon the mind and morals of those in possession and in search of it. It is something of a philosophical as well as a descriptive article. But this, of course, is not the only article of interest in this number of this popular magazine. Its leaders, its fiction and its poetry are all refreshing and attractive. It is a restful, stimulating, profitable number and fully abreast of any of its predecessors.

DESERVES IT.

Remarkable Success of a New Treatment for Piles.

For many years it has been supposed that the only absolute sure cure for piles was by surgical operation, but the danger to life and the pain and expense has been so great that many thousands suffer for years rather than submit to this last resort; or they seek the temporary relief in the many remedies claimed to relieve piles and rectal troubles, salves, ointments and similar simple remedies which give only slight and very temporary relief.

A new preparation which is painless and harmless, but which affords immediate relief and in many cases a complete cure in a very short time, is sold by druggists under the name of Pyramid Pile Cure.

It is in suppository form, used at night and its regular use has cured thousands of obstinate, long-standing cases, and it seems to be equally effective in all the various forms of piles, whether itching, bleeding or protruding.

The Pyramid Pile Cure allays the inflammation and intolerable itching, reduces the tumors and its astringent properties cause the enlarged blood-vessels to contract to a normal, healthy condition.

A Baltimore gentleman relates his experience with the Pyramid Pile Cure in these words:

"It affords me unusual pleasure to add my endorsement to those of others relative to your really wonderful pile remedy. I was a sufferer for years until told by a fellow salesman of the Pyramid Pile Cure. It has entirely cured me and I cheerfully send this for publication if you wish to use it in that direction. I wish you would send me one of your little books on cause and cure of piles, I desire to show it to some friends."

Any pile sufferer may use the Pyramid with certainty that it will give instant relief and regular use a permanent cure and the still further certainty that it contains no cocaine, morphine or metallic or mineral poison.

All druggists sell Pyramid Pile Cure, 50 cents for full sized treatment.

POSITIONS GUARANTEED under reasonable conditions; car fare paid; board, $10-$11; catalog free; no vacation.
DRAUGHON'S PRACTICAL BUS. Colleges,
St. Louis; Nashville, Tenn.; Savannah, Ga.; Montgomery, Ala.; Galveston, Tex.; Fort Worth, Tex.; Little Rock, Ark.; Shreveport, La. Indorsed by merchants and bankers. Best patronized in South. Bookkeeping, Shorthand, etc., taught by mail. Begin any time. Address (at either place) Draughon's College.

DIVINITY SCHOOL
—OF—
HARVARD UNIVERSITY
CAMBRIDGE, MASS.
AN UNDENOMINATIONAL SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.
ANNOUNCEMENT FOR 1900-01, NOW READY

"LIFE OF MOODY." Cloth, 358 Pages. 25 Cents, postpaid, of C. F. HOWARD. Windfall, Ind.
"DAILY BREAD." Cloth, 192 Pages 25 Cents, postpaid, of C. F. HOWARD, Windfall, Ind.
VEST-POCKET DICTIONARY, etc. Morocco, Gold Edges, Alphabetic, 194 Pages. 25 Cents, postpaid, of C. F. HOWARD, Windfall, Ind.
(Agents' Library.)

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

Marriages.

DEMEM—DYER.—At the home of Dr. J. L. Edwards, in Florence, Col., on April 23, 1900, Mr. L. S. Demem and Miss Maud Dyer, both of Canon. City, Col.; Daniel Trundle, officiating.

SWETT—DYER.—At the home of Mr. W. A. Ingersoll, April 25, in Florence, Col., Mr. F. M. Swett and Miss Maud Dyer, both of Florence, Col.; Daniel Trundle, officiating.

Obituaries.

HAWES.

John Washington Hawes, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of this city, and one of the most devoted and earnest Christians I have ever known, passed to his well-earned reward April 21st, 1900, at his home in this city. He was 84 years of age and had been from early life a devoted and consistent Christian. Bro. Hawes was of a family distinguished for honesty and integrity, and his death was a great loss to our church and to the community. But he will be missed most of all by his widow and his son, who mourn his death. The church will miss him at her services and his friends will see his face no more on this side of the dark river; but in that land of brightness and beauty, where sorrow and sin, sickness and death are unknown, we shall have a glorious and happy reunion and amid the ecstasy of that meeting all our earthly troubles shall be forgotten as we join in the songs of the redeemed around the great white throne.

"Peace to the just man's memory; let it grow
Greener with the years and blossom through the flight
Of ages; let the mimic canvas show
His calm, benevolent features; let the light
Stream on his deeds of love, that shunned the sight
Of all but heaven, and in the book of fame
The glorious record of his virtues write,
And hold it up to men and bid them claim
A palm like his, and catch from him the hallowed flame."

W. R. JINNETT.

Atlanta, Ill., April 25, 1900.

HOUTCHEN.

Elijah Davis Houtchen was born in Nelson county, Ky., Oct. 26, 1869. He united with the Old Bedford Church, December, 1888. On Feb. 14, 1893, he was united in marriage to Emma Links. To them were born three boys, all living. He died at the Cottage Hospital, Galesburg, Ill., April 11, 1900. He bore his sickness with Christian fortitude. So intense was his suffering, yet he was patient, hopeful. His manly heart is greatly missed. Funeral services at the Old Bedford Church. L. F. DAVIS.

Blandinsville, Ill.

LOTZ.

Died, in this city, on Thursday the 19th inst., Bro. Robert L. Lotz, age 54 years and six months. Deceased was born in Daviess County, Mo., and at the age of 20 years united with the Church of Christ, and at once entered Christian University at Canton, Mo., to prepare himself for his life work in the service of his Master. While at college he supported himself, like his Master, at the carpenter's bench and by preaching in the surrounding country. After spending four years at college he graduated with high honors and at once entered the ministry as an evangelist. He has also held some of the most important pastorates in Missouri, Kansas, Ohio and the far Northwest; and wherever he has labored the cause of Christ has been greatly strengthened. He had been our pastor in this city since last November, and all had learned to love him dearly for the purity of his life and his faithfulness as a Christian educator. He literally died with "the harness on," as he did not miss a single Lord's day service before his death. On the last Lord's day evening he spent on earth, he preached on "New Testament Conversions" and plead with the sinner to accept Christ, whom he had so long and faithfully served. His funeral services were conducted by the Ministers' Alliance of this city, and the body sent to Bethany, Mo., his old home, for burial. He leaves a wife and six children to mourn his loss. But they do not mourn as those without hope, but with full assurance that if they follow in his footsteps they will meet him in that city where death cannot enter. His noble wife, the faithful companion of his life, and his dear little girls, have the unbounded sympathy of the congregation to whom he so faithfully ministered during his short pastorate here.

M. E. M.

West Plains, Mo.

NEELY.

Mrs. Mary Atwater Neely died at Bower, N. C., April 12, 1900. She was the daughter of Elder Darwin Atwater, and was born at Mantua, Ohio, Oct. 11, 1835. Her brothers, Elder O. C. Atwater, now of Bethany, Neb., Pres. John M. Atwater, deceased, of Hiram College, of Oskaloosa College, Iowa, and other institutions, and Amzi Atwater, lately of Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind., have been widely known for their work, both in the ministry and in educational fields. She was a student at Hiram in 1851, the second year of the Eclectic Institute, and was a pupil and friend of that wonderful teacher, Miss Almeda A. Booth, and later of James A. Garfield, who entered Hiram as a student the same fall term. She graduated at Oberlin in 1859. Miss Atwater was fortunate both as to the place and the persons affecting her education. At Hiram she had the strongest and most brilliant teacher among the Disciples—Garfield, Miss Booth and H. W. Everest. At Oberlin she drank deeply the spirit of that institution and was largely influenced by the noble band of professors that gathered about their noted president, Charles G. Finney. After teaching in various places in Ohio she went South after the war (1867) to teach among the freedmen, visiting on her way the colored school at Nashville, Tenn., which afterward became Fisk University. After teaching for sometime in Alabama she was married Jan. 22, 1870, to Elder Geo. W. Neely, who was at the time county superintendent of education. Mr. and Mrs. Neely traveled extensively in the South, he preaching and she teaching in many localities, which greatly needed both gospel preaching and common-school education. They finally settled on a farm of their own in North Carolina, his native state. Mrs. Neely had a great desire to see a college founded in North Carolina by the Disciples of Christ. She corresponded much on the subject, and at one time, having enlisted others in the enterprise, she seemed not far from realizing her hopes. Though not succeeding in that effort, she held a school at her own house for many years which did great good and was the means of largely educating several able young men for the ministry. These and many young people who have felt the inspiration of her teaching, her piety and her Christian zeal now rise up and call her blessed. She came North at the time of the World's Fair at Chicago, and wrote many letters on the great exposition for publication in the South. Elder Neely having died last September, she had remained quietly at her pleasant country home and her faiends fondly hoped that she had many years of a useful life yet before her. Her stepchildren, Mrs. Prof. W. R. Houghton, of Connersville, Ind., and Arthur C. Neely, and F. T. Neely, the publisher of New York and Chicago, whom she had educated with loving care, have dutifully cared for her in her last days. "Give her of the work of her hands and let her own works praise her in the gates."

AMZI ATWATER.

Bloomington, Ind., April 28.

PETER.

Sister Julietta Peter, wife of George Edward Peter, "fell asleep in Jesus" on the afternoon of April 14, 1900, at her home in Saginaw, Mich. She had been a sufferer many weeks, but finally yielded up her life at the command of the dread destroyer, pneumonia. Through all her suffering there was never a murmur nor complaint, but rather urged that as medicine seemed to do her so little good she might be allowed to go and be at rest. She was born in Canada and brought up under the teachings of the Christian Church, having been baptized at the age of 18. She had been a member of the church 33 years. There were few who were as faithful in attendance upon all the services of the Lord's house. Such earnest, faithful workers are sadly missed, and the large attendance of neighbors and church people to pay a last tribute of respect to the memory of our departed sister is evidence of the high esteem in which she was held by all who knew her. The funeral was conducted by the writer who, while comforting sorrowing friends and relatives, yet found cause for great joy in the promise that "there shall be no night there." S. W. P.

Saginaw, Mich., April 27, 1900.

DRUNKENNESS CURED.

An eminent St. Louis physician has given a positive answer to the oft asked question, is drunkenness a disease, or is it simply a temptation that cannot be resisted by a vast number of the human race? The physician in question is Dr. Ozias Paquin, who for years has been a practicing physician in the City of St. Louis. He has answered this question by taking five of the worst drunkards that could be found and cured them of all further appetite for intoxicating drinks. The five cases were all beyond middle age and they had sunk into the deepest pit of drunkenness, with the odor of drink about them so obnoxious that it was almost impossible to stand within speaking distance. He not only cured them of all desire for intoxicating drink, but at the same time placed upon their cheek the flush of health and into their eyes the light of happiness, and took from their person the odor of whiskey. It was almost a miracle, for he had raised five cases from degradation into the sunshine of health and happiness. Dr. Paquin has cured hundreds of patients who were relapses from other treatments, and in every instance he cured these patients, and they have remained cured for months and years. It can therefore be said that the Paquin Treatment is a permanent cure, and not a temporary one, for the patient never relapses to his former condition. We know of no more humane work being done at the present time than that which Dr. Paquin is doing, and it is the duty of every reader to assist Dr. Ozias Paquin in his noble work, and if any reader has brother, sister, husband, father or friend in whose system lurks the disease of drunkenness, he should at once send their name to Dr. Paquin or see that they either visit or place themselves in communication with the Ozias Paquin Immune Co., Suite 1113 Chemical Bldg., St. Louis. The reader that does this will certainly be doing a christian act, for no matter how hopeless the case may seem, and no matter how many other treatments have unsuccessfully been tried, the method known as Ozias Paquin Treatment will perfect a cure, dispelling all desire for drink, and at the same time will place the constitution in a robust and healthy condition.

SAUL.

Miss Olive A. Castleton was born in Elkville, Ill., September 1, 1874. She became a Christian in 1886. Was married to Mr. J. A. Saul May 25, 1892. She came to Centralia, Ill, soon after her marriage and united with the Christian Church, of which she was an honored member till she fell asleep in Jesus, April 25, 1900. She leaves a husband, two little boys, her father and mother, two sisters and six brothers who mourn her departure. She was a noble Christian woman. Her last words to her husband were: "Live a true Christian life, and bring our boys up in the Christian faith." J. H. SMART.

Centralia, Illinois.

Difficulties give way to diligence," and disease germs and blood humors disappear when Hood's Sarsaparilla is faithfully taken.

Reduced Rates to Colorado.

Union Pacific Railroad will make One Fare plus $2.00, or $19.00 for the Round Trip from Kansas City or Omaha to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, on May 1st and 15th, June 5th and 9th. For particulars address J. F. Aglar, Gen'l Agt., St. Louis, Mo.

An All-Year Resort.

The Crescent Hotel, Eureka Springs, Ark. opens March 1, 1900. A most desirable, attractive and convenient resort for health and pleasure-seekers. Ideal climate, pure, sparkling water, best accommodations. Through Sleepers via Frisco Line. Write for particulars to Manager Hotel or to any representative of Frisco Line.

Reduced Rates to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo.

May 15, June 5 and 19, the Union Pacific will sell round trip tickets from St. Louis and Kansas City or Omaha to above points at one fare plus $2.00. Illustrated publications, time tables and any desired information address J. F. Aglar, Gen'l Agent, St. Louis.

Daily Double Train Service to Portland,

Commencing April 22, Union Pacific Railroad Company, will run two daily trains from Chicago, Omaha, and Kansas City to Portland, Ore. These trains will be equipped with Buffet, Smoking, Library, and Dining Cars; Standard Sleepers, Ordinary Sleepers or Tourist Cars. Time from St. Louis to Portland via Omaha, 68 hours; from Chicago, 69 hours; from Omaha, 55 hours; from Kansas City, 68 hours. For particulars address E. L. Lomax, G. P. A., Omaha, or J. F. Aglar, Gen. Agt., 903 Century Building, St. Louis, Mo.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the standard. A Pure Cream of Tartar Powder. Superior to every other known. Makes delicious cake and pastry, light, flaky biscuit, griddle cakes — palatable and wholesome.

PRICE BAKING POWDER CO., CHICAGO.

NOTE.—Avoid baking powders made from alum. They look like pure powders, and may raise the cakes, but alum is a poison and no one can eat food mixed with it without injury to health.

The Difference.

"What's the difference between wit and humor?"

"If a man says humorous things about you, it makes you laugh; if he says witty things about you, it makes you mad."

An Impossibility.

Mrs. Poplin. Mr. Chiffon may be a very wealthy man, as you say, but I know this much, that his wife does not have money enough to dress on. Mr. Poplin. Of course not. No woman ever did.

THE ORIGINAL. THE BEST.
TRADE MARK.
GAIL BORDEN
AVOID UNKNOWN BRANDS.
EAGLE
BRAND
Condensed Milk
HAS NO EQUAL AS AN INFANT FOOD.
SEND FOR "BABIES" A BOOK FOR MOTHERS. — Borden's Condensed Milk Co. New York.

Book Notes.

"Christian Science Dissected" is now ready for delivery. It was announced for May 1, but has been unavoidably delayed a few days. A large number of orders for this work were received in advance of publication, and it promises to have an unusually large circulation. Have you a friend who has been deceived by the sophistries of the Eddyites? A copy of this little book will show that friend the folly, the infidelity, the insanity of the doctrines and theories of the Christian Scientists. The price, postpaid, is only 25 cents.

Our splendid offer of the works of Alexander Campbell is certain to attract wide attention. A few weeks ago we reduced the price of the Campbell-Purcell Debate, Campbell-Owen Debate and Christian Baptism. We have now reduced prices on the Christian Baptist, Popular Lectures and Addresses, the Christian System and Familiar Lectures on the Pentateuch, one-third each. No other publisher can duplicate this offer—Alexander Campbell's Complete Works for Eight Dollars! The Campbell-Rice Debate is out of print, and has been for years, but otherwise our list is complete.

We have said nothing for several weeks concerning our Map of the Travels of Jesus, for the Sunday-school. Nevertheless, orders have been coming in steadily. Now that the International Sunday-school Lessons are on the life of Christ and will continue along the same line for more than a year yet to come, this map is especially valuable. Indeed, these lessons cannot be properly taught to the children without it. The map is six feet long, three feet wide, mounted on cloth, varnished, placed on rollers, all ready to hang up. The price was formerly $5, but has been reduced to $3.

The second edition of "Special Catalogue, No. 22," is nearly exhausted, and we are preparing a third. This little book is a descriptive list of about 175 different volumes that we are offering at reduced prices. The average reduction amounts to little more than one half. We have sent out many thousands of copies, but if you have not received one, drop us a card and inform us, and you will receive a copy, free.

We have a fine assortment of Children's Day exercises, concert services, etc. Children's Day is the first Sunday in June. It is high time your Sunday-school was preparing for the day. Write us about it.

San Antonio, Texas.

In November last I started a mission Sunday-school in the toughest part of San Antonio, near the Sunset Depot. I now have an enrollment of 40; the children are very poor, the majority never were in a church in their lives. When I commenced there was a baseball ground near, where some forty or fifty boys of all ages from eight to sixteen would congregate on Sunday evening at the hour my Sunday-school opened, 3:30 o'clock to play ball. I have now some ten to fifteen of those rough boys in my school and the ball game has been broken up. I have attending the school, Catholic children and one or two Jew boys. I feel confident the Lord will bless this work and that I will be able to lead many children out of darkness into light. I rented a hall for which I pay $4 per month, bought an organ on installment, which I now have paid for. The children are so poor that I have no collections of consequence and the burden is more than I can bare alone. So will be forced to give up the work unless I can get some assistance. I feel sure there are Endeavor Societies in our brotherhood that will assist me, also brethren. I will appreciate any assistance I can get, for I would regret to have to give up.

LEE D. MARTIN.

THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

A WEEKLY FAMILY AND RELIGIOUS JOURNAL.

Vol. xxxvii May 17, 1900 No. 20

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
- Current Events....611
- The Gospel at the Paris Exposition....613
- Public and Private Rights....613
- Mr. Campbell and His Work....613
- Joshua—A Character Sketch....614
- Questions and Answers....614

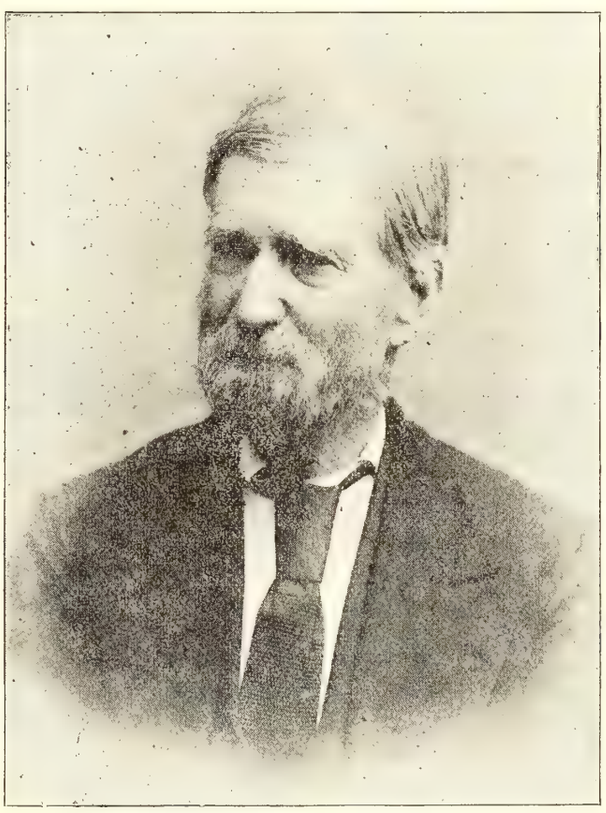
ORIGINAL CONTRIBUTIONS:
- The Spiritual Side of Our Plea.—A. B. Jones....616
- Religious World Moving Toward a Common Center.—A. D. Wickizer....616
- Indifference Among Christians.—Mrs. Cornelius McKay....617
- Elevating the Law Above the Lawgiver.—Joseph Fort Newton....618
- Newspaper Reform.—Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, Ph. D....618

CORRESPONDENCE:
- B. B. Tyler's Letter....623
- Chicago Letter....624
- Colorado Springs Letter....624
- California Tourists....624
- Ohio Notes....625
- Salt Lake City Letter....626
- Los Angeles Letter....626
- Springfield, Mo....627

FAMILY CIRCLE:
- The Lost Emigrants....631
- Egyptian Impressions....633
- God's Temple (poem)....634
- The Open Mouth....634
- The Liquor Question in Japan....635

MISCELLANEOUS:
- Our Budget....619
- Personal Mention....621
- Notes and News....628
- Evangelistic....630
- With the Children....636
- Sunday-school....637
- Christian Endeavor....638
- Bethany Reading Courses....638
- Obituaries....639
- Book Notes....640

Subscription $1.50



PHILANDER GREEN. (See Page 621.)

PUBLISHED BY

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY

1522 LOCUST ST., ST. LOUIS

THE
Christian - Evangelist.

J. H. GARRISON, Editor.
W. W. HOPKINS, W. E. GARRISON,
Assistant Editors.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTIONS:

Single subscriptions, new or old ..... $1.50 each
Ministers ..... 1.00 "

CLUB RATES.

25 or more copies ..... $1.00 each

All subscriptions payable in advance. Label shows the month up to the first day of which your subscription is paid. If an earlier date than the present is shown, you are in arrears. Paper will be discontinued at end of time paid for if express orders to that effect accompany payment of subscription. Arrears should be paid when discontinuance is ordered.

If paper fails to reach you regularly please notify us at once.

In ordering a change of post office, please give the OLD as well as the NEW address.

Do not send local check, but use Post Office or Express Money Order, or Draft on St. Louis, Chicago or New York, in remitting.

ADDRESS, CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.,
1522 Locust St. St. Louis, Mo.

A WATCH
FOR FIVE SUBSCRIBERS to
The Christian-Evangelist
AT REGULAR RATE
$1.50 A YEAR.

Case made of steel from the Battleship Maine, beautifully oxidized and neatly fashioned. Guaranteed American Works. See 2nd page of the Christian-Evangelist of May 10.

The best of literature is not too good for the Disciples of Christ. Are you helping to demonstrate it?

Look at the label on your paper. If it is an echo from the past, please remit.

Redlands, Cal., sends us twelve new subscribers —a gain of twelve hundred per cent. Taking the size of the congregation into consideration the list is hard to beat.

Our Offer of a cloth-bound copy of Sheldon's "In His Steps" free to all new subscribers paying one year's subscription ($1.50) and to all old subscribers paying to date (May 1, 1900) and one year in advance at regular rate still holds good. Our stock of books, however, is rapidly diminishing. If you want one of these books, do not procrastinate.

Webster City, Ia., sends us thirty-seven new subscribers. That's doing well; but Webster City is a great church. We shall hope to double our present list there before another year. All we ask is for the present subscribers to read carefully our journal and tell their friends their sincere impressions concerning it.

A Watch made from the hull of the battleship Maine would be valuable as a souvenir if for no other reason. When a case of this kind encloses a splendid timekeeping movement it becomes useful as well as interesting. Five Dollars will advance your subscription to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST one year and secure one of these watches for you.

Shelbyville, Ind., is just beginning to appreciate the merits of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST, as a list of eleven subscribers just received testifies. These will study the paper and the list will grow.

Free copies of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST for distribution with a view to increasing our circulation can be had upon request. All we ask is that they be judiciously used and that their distribution be followed by a personal canvass.

Every one should have a copy of Sheldon's "In His Steps." It will do you good to read it. If your subscription is paid up to date or beyond send One Dollar and Fifty Cents for another year's credit and we will send you a cloth-bound copy of this most celebrated book.

As a Premium nothing could be better than the Dewey watch which we are offering for five subscribers at One Dollar and Fifty Cents each. The beautiful oxidized steel case made from the hull of the Maine contains a thoroughly reliable and guaranteed movement made especially for this watch by the American Waltham Watch Co. An Eastern Watch Club sells this identical watch for fifteen dollars. Readers of the CHRISTIAN EVANGELIST can obtain one by putting forth a little exertion in behalf of good literature.

FIVE DOLLARS.....

Will pay your Subscription to the
CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST
For one year and secure
A DEWEY WATCH.

A splendid time piece and a valuable souvenir of the wreck of the Maine. An eastern Watch Club sells these same watches for Fifteen Dollars.

ALEXANDER CAMPBELL'S WORKS.

THE CHRISTIAN SYSTEM.
358 pages, 12mo, cloth. A digest of the Christianity of Christ, and of the faith and practice of the primitive church.
Price, $1.00.

POPULAR LECTURES AND ADDRESSES.
649 pages, 8vo, cloth. A splendid volume, now offered at a reduced price for the first time. Formerly sold at $3.00.
Price, $2.00.

LECTURES ON THE PENTATEUCH.
Delivered at Bethany. Edited by W. T. Moore. The book includes portrait and sketch of Mr. Campbell. 379 pages, cloth.
Price, $1.00.

THE CHRISTIAN BAPTIST.
New edition; seven volumes in one! 680 pages, 8vo. Bound in leather. Now offered at a reduced price for the first time.
Price, $2.00.

CAMPBELL-PURCELL DEBATE.
Romanism against Protestantism. A battle of giants. 360 pages, cloth, red edges. Price recently reduced from $1.50 to $1.00.

CAMPBELL-OWEN DEBATE.
A discussion on the evidences of Christianity with the noted infidel, Mr. Robert Owen. Price recently reduced from $1.50 to $1.00.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM.
A very full and able treatise on the action, design and subjects of baptism. 444 pages; bound in leather or half-leather.
Price, $ .50.

LIVING ORACLES.
The New Testament, translated by Drs. Campbell, McKnight and Doddridge. Notes, emendations, appendix, etc. 336 pages, cloth.
Price, $ .50.

The CAMPBELL LIBRARY, complete as above, together with Mr. Campbell's "Life and Death," "Sermon on the Law," and "Letters to a Skeptic" (pamphlets), sent for only EIGHT DOLLARS. This includes all of Campbell's works, except the Campbell-Rice Debate, which is out of print. At former prices these works cost fourteen dollars. These books were never before offered so cheaply. Any volume sent singly on receipt of the price named, or the entire list of eight volumes and three pamphlets for only EIGHT DOLLARS. This offer will not soon be equaled.

THE CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, ST. LOUIS, MO.

THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST

"IN FAITH, UNITY; IN OPINION AND METHODS, LIBERTY; IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY."

Vol. xxxvii. St. Louis, Mo., Thursday, May 17, 1900. No. 20.

CURRENT EVENTS.

There is now a bill before Congress known as the Postal Check Currency Bill which is of far greater value to the public than the public realizes. The bill proposes that all one, two and five-dollar bills be reprinted in such a way as to leave blank signature lines whereby any such bill may be converted into a safe money order for transmission through the mail without additional precaution other than by simply writing the name of the receiver and sender of the bill on the bill so transmitted. This will not only be a great convenience to the public, but a much cheaper way of sending money by mail than the present expensive system. It is to be devoutly hoped that the bill will become a law and the present expensive method be laid aside. These postal bills, so long as unsigned, are to pass at face value as any other currency. But the moment one is signed and stamped it can be of value only to the person to whom it is sent, who may exchange it for a new bill of like value. In this way our paper money will be continually renewed, thus keeping it clean and crisp. But convenience and economy in transmitting money through the mails are its chief commendations. Ask your congressman to vote for the bill.

On Saturday, May 12, Lord Roberts entered Kroonstad without opposition. So well planned and timed were Lord Roberts' flanking armies that the Boers became disheartened and evacuated the place. The quarrel between the Transvaalers and the Free Staters seems to have been an additional disheartening element, and resulted in a separation of their army, General Botha and the Transvaalers trekking toward Pretoria and Pres. Steyn and a part of the Free Staters to Heilbrun. The evacuation of Kroonstad practically seals the fate of the South African Republics. Further resistance to Lord Roberts' superior and well-organized army seems wholly useless. But whatever resistance there may be at Pretoria, it is to be hoped that the further slaughter of men, such as has been in this war, will be avoided. And now that England is about to be given an opportunity to show her magnanimity, it is to be hoped that she will not be deprived of the privilege by any spirit of revenge or mercenary motives.

The tie-up of the street cars in this city last week shows how vital a part of city life the street car service has become. Business in a large measure is paralyzed. Some of the streets are more thronged with vehicles than before the strike, but they are largely conveyances brought out as a substitute for the street cars, and their variety is simply marvelous. All ideas of comfort are laid aside and the one thing sought after is transportation to and from places of business and work. Everybody, however, seems to be taking the inconvenience good-naturedly and making the best of the situation. Beyond expressions of opinion pro and con there is little disposition to indulge in hot or lengthy arguments over the matter. The older residents are reminded of the days when street cars were unknown, and a tramp of three or four miles to work was among the higher privileges of the day. But there is little comfort in those things now. We have passed into conditions which cannot be met by primitive methods and everybody is hoping for an early and satisfactory close of the strike.

Charles F. Neely, Treasurer of the Cuban Postal Department, is said to have defrauded the government out of over $100,000 in his official capacity. The defalctions throw a shadow over others officially associated with him and has created no small degree of excitement in Havana and in Washington. The disgrace is one of great humiliation to the administration and to the nation, but the matter is to be probed to the bottom and all implicated in the scandal will be punished. Director of the Posts, Mr. Rathbone, has been suspended and Mr. Neely is to be taken back from the United States to Havana for trial. The uncovering of such a fraud at the commencement of our government in Cuba is not likely to impress the Cubans favorably as to the change from Spanish to American rule, but punisnment of the guilty parties will relieve the government of the disgrace and will doubtless have a wholesome effect upon the Cubans and others.

Considerable headway has been made by the special committee on the World's Fair bill and final action is expected by the committee on the 22nd of the present month when the bill, all are confident, will be reported to the House. Some changes have to be made in the wording of different parts of the bill so that when it is presented it is thought that it will pass without further material changes. Those who are looking after the bill in the hands of the committee now feel reasonably sure of favorable action of the House and Senate before adjournment in June. The time is short and there is yet much more preliminary work to be done, so that unless action is taken this session of Congress, it is hardly possible for the enterprise to survive. But with favorable action things will take on new life in St. Louis and all will look forward to the great exposition with enthusiasm and joyful contemplation.

A very good indication of the rapid development of the South is the fact that the B. F. Johnson Publishing Co., of Richmond, Va., has been compelled to enlarge its capital and plant to meet the demands of its rapidly increasing business, having recently developed an extensive schoolbook trade in addition to its subscription book department. The capital of the reorganized company will be $1,250,000 and applications for stock have come from 21 states. "If any one had predicted a dozen years ago that the time would soon come when Southern school children would study their lessons from schoolbooks written by Southern authors and printed by a publishing house located in the South, he would have been set down as a dreamer rather than a prophet. But the publishing house is here and the books are almost everywhere, and at the present rate of progress, it is said that it will be but a short time before they will be found in every schoolhouse in the South."

Not a street car was run in St. Louis on last Sunday. The policemen having been on duty continuously from the commencement of the strike needed rest and were withdrawn from strike service for that purpose and in consequence of this the railroad companies decided not to attempt to run any cars during the day. The tie-up of the street car service since May 8th has been the greatest and probably the most complete in the history of the city. There are nearly 4,000 street car men out on the strike and out of 800 street cars that should run daily it is stated that less than 75 cars have been operated on any one day since the strike began and those only at irregular periods during the day and not at all at night. There has been but one life taken as yet, although several persons have been wounded. Neither has there been any great destruction of property—mostly broken windows—but the loss to the strikers in wages and to the company in fares is heavy to say nothing of the injury to the business interests of the city.

The attempted purchase of the Danish West Indies by Germany has been the cause of no small degree of alarm at Washington. Not that war is in sight, but that there are indications of an attempt to encroach upon or break down the Monroe doctrine, and this the people of the United States would not tolerate. Not long ago Secretary Root said some very startling things on this subject in a speech in New York, and now Senator Lodge is reaffirming the danger in his defense of the bill for the purchase of armor-plate. In a speech in the Senate last week he strongly insisted upon our present and growing need of a stronger navy, giving as a reason therefor the defense of the Monroe doctrine and the yet-to-be Nicaraguan Canal. The way to keep down complications and to keep war in the background, in the opinion of Senator Lodge, is to build up a navy that will be able to meet any probable foe in the respects named. He is in favor of the increase of the navy as rapidly as possible until what might be called the safety point is reached. But due allowance must be made for the political uses of all such remarks on the eve of a presidential campaign.

During the past few days several political conventions of importance have been held. The Republicans of Illinois met in state convention at Peoria and nominated Richard Yates, of Jacksonville, for governor. Mr. Yates is a son of the famous war governor, "Dick" Yates. The platform indorses the present administration, approves the financial legislation of the present Congress, and and declares against trusts and in favor of the expansion policy of the President. The Iowa Republicans met at Des Moines, elected their delegates to the Philadelphia convention, and set forth their political faith in a platform which indorses the present financial policy, favors legislation that will effectually protect the public from the evils of combinations in restraint of trade, and "the extension of self-government to all the peoples that have lately come under the protection of this country as rapidly as they demonstate their capacity to exercise it." The brevity of this platform in contrast with some others is one of its striking features. The Republicans in Colorado, Utah and Oklahoma have also held their conventions, appointed their delegates to the national convention, and adopted platforms endorsing the President and the policy he has pursued toward our new possessions. There have been enough of these state conventions of both parties now held to indicate what are to be the leading issues in the campaign. The battle will be fought over what is called "imperialism," trusts, the money question and the tariff, particularly as it relates to our new possessions. The real issue to be decided under the term "imperialism" is, not whether this government will or should govern these islands without regard to their rights and interest, as permanently subject provinces, for no party in this country endorses such a policy; but it is, whether the fact of their coming under our protection gives them at once all the rights of citizenship which any other citizens possess, or whether we have the right and duty to adapt the form of government to their capacity, and extend to them self-government just as they are able to govern themselves. Is it better at once to throw these peoples on their own responsibility, and leave them to work out their own political salvation, or should we help them until they can stand alone? This is a great question and a new question for this nation, and the right solution of it demands the wisest statesmanship we can bring to bear upon it.

The People's party is represented this year in two sections, both of which held their national conventions during the past week. What is known as the Middle-of-the-Road wing of the party held its convention at Cincinnati, and nominated as its standard-bearers Wharton Barker for President and Ignatius Donnelly as Vice-President. This wing of the party differs from the other chiefly in being opposed to fusion with any other party. The fusionists met in national convention at Sioux Falls, S. D. Senators Butler, of Alabama, and Allen, of Nebraska, Gen. Weaver, of Iowa, and Congresaman Jerry Simpson, of Kansas, were the leading spirits in this convention. W. J. Bryan was nominated for President by acclamation, and then arose the first point of difference. Some favored making no nomination for Vice-President, but, instead, authorizing the national committee to attend the Kansas City convention, confer with its leaders and endorse such nomination for Vice-President as that convention might make. Others favored nominating five men, out of which number the Kansas City convention might make a selection. Both these plans were intended to avoid two Vice-Presidential nominees, which proved a handicap during the last campaign. But the majority favored nominating a Vice-President then and there, and the honor fell on Charles A. Towne, of Minnesota. The platform committee, of which Jerry Simpson was chairman, presented a lengthy platform, which was adopted. It denounces the whole monetary theory and practice of the party in power, declares in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, denounces the administration for "changing a war of humanity into a war of conquest," asserts that the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence are inseparable, demands the stoppage of the Philippine war, sympathizes with the Boers of South Africa, favors electing United States senators and all other officials, as far as possible, by a direct vote of the people, endorses the initiative and referendum, condemns the wholesale system of disfranchisement practiced in some of the states, and the redtape method of administering the pension office. The platform was unanimously adopted. Mr. Bryan's nomination was accompanied by a remarkable outburst of enthusiasm, which lasted several minutes.

On Monday evening the striking employees of the Suburban Railroad, this city, and its management agreed to arbitrate their differences, and on Tuesday morning the strikers returned to work, and all the cars on that system were started on schedule time. But the attempt to reach an agreement between the Transit Company and its employees has not yet succeeded. The indications, however, are more favorable toward an agreement than at any time since the strike began. The order from the governor to the chief of police to call out 2,500 extra policemen came near precipitating a general strike of all labor unions in the city. But only about 500 applications were received, and better counsel prevailed in the representative meeting of the unions hastily called for Monday night. It is said that about one-eighth of the Transit Company's cars ran yesterday, and that about the same number will be run to-day. It is to be hoped, however, that to-day will see the end of the strike by an agreement to arbitrate their troubles.

Of all the exploration expeditions in Egypt and in the Tigris and Euphrates valleys, none are more successful than that of the American under the auspices of the University of Pennsylvania, led by Prof. Hilprecht. In a recent article from Prof. H. he says that within the last six weeks they have actually entered the temple library of ancient Nippur and taken out over 16,000 cuneiform documents belonging to the latter half of the third millennium B. C. The tablets were lying on ledges of unbaked clay serving as shelves for these imperishable old Babylonian records. Prof. Hilprecht says that the total number of tablets taken from different parts of these ruins during the present campaign now number over 21,000, and is rapidly increasing every day. The contents of this library, he says, is as varied as possible. "Lists of Sumerian words and cuneiform signs, arranged according to different principles, and of fundamental value for our knowledge of the early non-Semitic language of the country, figure prominently in the new find." On a number of other important finds he promises to report later.

A man must be a pessimist of the deepest dye who can walk forth these bright May days under the clear, blue skies, over the tender, springing grass, and amid the rustle of the fresh, young leaves, and not feel that this is a good world in which to live and labor and, at last, to die. Nature seems to be giving her contradiction to all the gloomy forebodings and dismal prophecies in which these beclouded philosophers indulge. Her singing birds, her opening flowers, her vernal zephyrs, her young life, manifesting its presence in so many forms—all these and a thousand other charms bespeak a world over which God is brooding with His tender love, and out of which He will bring at last the greatest possible good to every living thing. We can hardly agree with the old poetic line which declares that when we are happy in Him, "December's as pleasant as May." It is true, however, that when the soul is right with its Lord and Maker it will not fail to see evidences of His goodness in all the works of His hands. It is easier, however, we should say, to be optimistic in May than in some other months of the year. We who dwell in the cities get glimpses of the beauty of May and catch the breath of its fragrance at times, but we almost envy the lot of those who live in the midst of its charms in the country. But even the city cannot conceal entirely the presence of May, and we who dwell there rejoice, with those who live where nature is less interrupted, in the beauty and fragrance which she brings.

THE GOSPEL AT THE PARIS EXPOSITION.

For two years Bro. Z. T. Sweeney, of Columbus, Ind., has had under consideration the project of carrying on a series of Gospel Meetings in Paris, during the great Exposition. He has talked with a great number of brethren about the matter, and has everywhere received encouragement to carry out the plan. The plan is to rent a large hall, conveniently located, in which the gospel shall be preached during the Exposition, and our literature distributed to the people who attend these services. It is believed that the thousands of Americans and other English-speaking people who attend the Paris Exposition would welcome the privilege of attending religious services, conducted in English, where they would hear the gospel preached "in their own tongue wherein they were born." Americans especially would go to hear an American preach under such circumstances, when they probably would not do so at home.

It seems to us that this is an opportunity of making known the Word of truth which has been given to us, throughout the whole world, which we ought not to neglect. Bro. Sweeney has very generously consented to give up his engagements for the summer to go to Paris and conduct these religious services without any salary, if only his expenses and the expenses of the mission be provided by the brethren. Bro. Sweeney is a popular and attractive preacher of the gospel, and a series of discourses by him on the elements of the gospel and setting forth our plea for a return to the Christianity of Christ, and for the unity of Christ's followers, would, no doubt, fall upon many listening ears and and open minds and be productive of much good. And when this is supplemented by a generous distribution of literature of the same general character, the propaganda could hardly fail to widely disseminate those truths and principles which we feel that the world needs to-day.

We are glad to give our hearty endorsement to this enterprise and to commend it to the brotherhood as worthy of their support. There is need, however, of very prompt response, if the plan is to be carried out, for Bro. Sweeney should leave this country early in June, and the work should be begun in Paris by the 1st of July and continued through July, August, September and October. We will gladly receive any pledges for the support of this cause, in conjunction with our other papers, which are co-operating in this matter. We understand that a fund of at least $4,000 or $5.000 should be pledged in order to make the enterprise a success. Let those who believe that this opportunity should not be neglected communicate with us at once, stating the amount they are willing to pledge for this Paris propaganda The amounts and perhaps the names also of the donors will be reported in a later issue of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. What do you say, brethren? How much do you say? What thou doest, do quickly.

PUBLIC AND PRIVATE RIGHTS.

To any one who has at all studied the sociological conditions of our country it is apparent that a large per cent. of our troubles in the industrial world grow out of a failure to distinguish between that which rightfully belongs to men as individuals and to men in collective bodies. Organic collective bodies are as essential to a Christian civilization as are individuals to a collective organic body, and any theory of government that does not recognize this fact must prove abortive; it cannot attain to the right purposes of a just government. And the same thing is true of every kind of reform movement; unless they recognize the rights of the collective body as well as those of the individual or vice versa the cannot succeed.

When any government permits the appropriation of things which rightfully belong to the people in a collective sense to individuals for their individual use and enrichment without due compensation to the public, therefor it has failed in its duty as a government and opened the way to every kind of trouble. That many have come into the possession of great fortunes in this way is hardly a debatable question. And it is in this particular field that unscrupulous politicians and fortune-seekers have done untold injury to the people. The public lands have been squandered, cities plundered of their franchises and other storehouses of wealth perverted to private uses.

But it is encouraging to know that there is an awakening of the public conscience on these things. The distinction between public and private rights is becoming more apparent, and public sentiment is beginning to demand their recognition. What belongs to the public should be held as sacredly for the public as individual belongings, and in this way only will labor come into the rightful enjoyments of its fruits. When that which belongs to a city, state or nation is taken away and the burdens of these organic bodies thrown upon the individual, a great injustice has been done to the individual by the increase of his burdens and the decrease of his liberties.

It is not our purpose to go into details or attempt a catalogue of either public or private rights, but to call attention to the importance of a proper distinction between them and of the need for a more sacred observance them in our future. An awakened public conscience on this vital question will do much to rectify the evils of which we complain in the social, civil and industrial departments of life.

In a nation so thoroughly imbued with the spirit of commercialism as the United States the question of social, civic and commercial righteousness cannot be too strongly insisted upon. People's eyes are easily blinded by the god of this world and unless they can be kept open by the Word of truth we shall soon have a blind nation plunging headlong over the precipice to its destruction in its mad rush after wealth. The church never had a greater task before it than now, and that task can be accomplished only by the most urgent claims of the gospel upon men. The leaven of righteousness must be instilled into every department of our national life if we are ever to bring this or any other nation into the kingdom of Christ. H.

MR. CAMPBELL AND HIS WORKS.

On page 610 of this issue of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST will be found an offer of the works of Alexander Campbell, made by the Christian Publishing Company. So great is the value of the books offered and so liberal are the terms, that we are justified in editorially directing the attention of our readers to it.

Alexander Campbell died thirty-four years ago. Like all men who have been truly great, he has continued to grow since he passed from earth. In the eyes of the religious world he is a greater man to-day than he was thought to be while living. His life was necessarily largely spent in conflict and controversy. The smoke of battle veiled him round and obscured his true stature. But now he is seen as one of the giants of the century that is closing. In the years to come, church historians will place him with Martin Luther and John Wesley among religious reformers.

Not even among the Disciples of Christ has Campbell received the honor that is his due. Fearful of the nickname, "Campbellite," and the reproach of "Campbellism," we have gone to an opposite extreme, and have minimized the influence and the place of the Sage of Bethany.

But all this is changing. Recently there have been signs of a revival of interest in the life and work of Mr. Campbell. Since the beginning of the present year there has been an unprecedented demand for the literary works which he left. Thousands of our preachers have never owned or read these volumes. They are beginning to supply their deficiency. To encourage this movement the Christian Publishing Company has made a generous reduction in the price of each of his works, with a still greater reduction when all are ordered at once. The complete works of Alexander Campbell for Eight Dollars is an unprecedented offer, which should immediately be taken advantage of by hundreds. The Campbell-Rice Debate is now out of print, but our "Campbell Library" includes all the other works of the great Reformer. The publishers do not guarantee the continuance of this offer for any length of time.

It is a source of gratification to us that our people are now reading more books than ever before. This is due to two influences. The preachers are realizing that the men who suffer involuntary retirement at the age of forty-five or fifty are very largely the men who do not read books, and the prices at which first-class, standard works are now being offered by our publishers are enabling even those not abundantly blessed with this world's goods to possess the volumes which have hitherto been unattainable. The policy of the Christian Publishing Company is to issue the best possible literature at the lowest possible prices. The larger the circulation of any publication, book or periodical, the lower can it be sold. We ask the co-operation of the brotherhood in the work of extending the circulation and influence of a literature that tends to the upbuilding of character and of the Kingdom of God.

Hour of Prayer.

JOSHUA—A CHARACTER SKETCH.

(Josh. 1:1-8; 24:15.)

(Uniform Midweek Prayer-meeting Topic, May 23.)

CENTRAL TRUTH: God chooses courageous and faithful men for important and difficult tasks, and the succession of such men to carry on his work never fails.

It is a most interesting and instructive thing to study the succession of great men, by which God carries forward His great purposes in the world. It often seems to short-sighted mortals that the success of a great enterprise depends upon some single person, who is at its head, and that when his death occurs disaster will follow. But if the work be of God it will not fail for want of a proper man as leader. God has always raised up a succession of leaders, who carry forward His great enterprises.

It no doubt seemed to Israel that no man could take the place of Moses; and that was true in a sense. The place that Moses filled in the liberation of Israel from bondage, and in its organization, especially in the legislation for that nation, was unique. What was needed at his death was, not another Moses, but another leader who should meet the demand of his day and generation as Moses met the demand of his generation. Joshua was such a leader as Israel needed when it was about to cross the Jordan and take possession of the land of Canaan, according to the promise made by God to Abraham and Isaac and Jacob. It is not too much to say that he was better adapted for the exigencies of that period than Moses would have been. He had the same fidelity to the law of God which Moses manifested, but he was a general rather than a lawgiver. He was one of those bold, rugged, honest, outspoken characters, suited for dark and troublous times. He was not a legislator, but he was an executor of the law which had been given. He was a man of deeds rather than of words. He was greater in achievement than in working out theories and systems.

Joshua had manifested his qualities of leadership and fidelity many years before this, at the time of the return of the spies from Canaan, when they reported what they had seen and learned to Israel. He sided with Caleb against the other ten in the view that they should go forward and possess the land which God had given them. In this crisis, and in the subsequent experiences of Israel, he had proved himself to be a brave and loyal-hearted man, who could be trusted. It was this that led to his selection as the successor of Moses.

The commission which Joshua received from the Lord when he was appointed to his responsible position is interesting and instructive, renewing, as it does, the promise made unto the fathers for the possession of Canaan, assuring Joshua that he would be with him, and that no man would be able to stand before him, bidding him be strong and very courageous, and above all, to be loyal to the law of God, which had been given through Moses. With such a commission, containing such a guarantee of divine support, it is not strange that Joshua became the strong and invincible leader that he was.

Looking at the character of Joshua as it is portrayed in the Scriptures, the following traits seem to stand out prominently:

1. He was a brave man, a man of high courage. Otherwise, he would have been unable to accomplish the work to which he was called. He was willing to go up from the wilderness directly to Canaan and possess the land, and did not doubt the ability of Israel to accomplish this work. God does not choose cowards for great and difficult tasks, nor does He put them in the front as leaders. A leader should fear none but God.

2. Fidelity to God was another characteristic of Joshua. He was never seduced by any of the false gods to turn away from Jehovah and from following his law. When his army met with defeat, through some unfaithfulness on the part of Israel, he humbled himself before God until he found out where the evil was, and then he sought to remove it. He realized what every great leader must learn, that his success must come in carrying out God's purpose, and not in antagonizing that purpose.

3. He was a man of decision of character. This trait is brought out very strikingly in one of the citations given above, where he said to Israel, who were halting and hesitating about whether they would serve Jehovah or the gods which their fathers had served, "Choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served that were beyond the river, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Others might hesitate about whom they would serve, but not he. His mind was unalterably fixed. His heart was set on Jehovah. Even if all Israel turned away to serve other gods, as for him and his household, they would serve Jehovah. This had the ring of true courage and of that decision of character which is essential for a great leader. If a religious leader does not know what he believes, how can he inspire others with faith?

After such a statement we are not surprised to learn that the people answered and said: "God forbid that we should forsake the Lord to serve other gods." This shows the value of bold leadership.

Are not these qualities, which stand out so prominently in the character of Joshua, the very elements of character which are needed in the church of God to-day? Do we not need courage, fidelity to duty and decision of character? The value of such a study as this is in indicating defects in our own characters and in prompting us to strengthen them wherein they are weak, in order that God may use us for carrying forward His purposes in the world.

PRAYER.

Almighty God, from whom cometh all power and might and dominion, we thank Thee for the great characters of history, for the succession of mighty men whom Thou hast raised up as leaders of the people to accomplish Thy purposes in the world, to establish Thy kingdom among men. We thank Thee for the lessons learned from the study of the character of Joshua, Thy servant, and we pray Thee that Thou wouldst endow us with these qualities, which enabled him to be so useful in his day and generation. May we have courage, may we have an unwavering faith, may we be submissive to the divine will, and may our hearts be unalterably fixed on Thee amid all the changing experiences of this mortal life. So shall we enjoy Thy favor here and inherit everlasting life. In Christ's name. Amen!

Questions and Answers.

1. Does the physical defense of our rights and privileges strengthen us in the graces of Christian life? If not, why, then, are we taught that it is right to do so?

2. Is it not a law of life and a scriptural injunction that we should not organically relate ourselves to the world? Why, then, do Christians do it?

3. Is the ordained grass-hopping preacher system of to-day in harmony with the universal priesthood thought of Christianity? If so, please show points of such. C. R. Paine.

April 27, 1900.

1. If a ruffian attacks with murderous intent, and, by self-defense, the party attacked succeeds in thwarting the purpose of his enemy, he thereby perpetuates his own life and gives opportunity for strengthening himself "in the graces of Christian life." The right of self-defense on the part of individuals or of nations is inherent, and there is no teaching in the Scriptures that forbids it.

2. It depends upon what is meant by "the world" and by the term "organically." We cannot live in the world without mingling with and having relations with the people of the world. Perhaps our querist would understand human government to be a part of the world with which Christians should not be associated. There is a view of this kind held by some Christians. We do not believe it. We accept Christ's statement, that his followers are the salt of the earth, and we believe that the salt must come in contact with that which it saves. Human government is ordained of God, and God desires it to be conducted in righteousness and justice. It is the duty of Christians, as far as in them lies, to see that it is so conducted.

3. We see no conflict between an ordained ministry for special service and a universal ministry for all Christians. The New Testament teaches both. Why should we reject either? We do not know what our brother means by "the grass-hopper preacher system," unless he refers to their frequent changes of place. It would be better, no doubt, if preachers were so trained and equipped for their work, and congregations were so intent on the building up of the kingdom of God, that preachers might remain located longer in one field. This, however, will be the case just in proportion as preachers and churches are educated as to the meaning and method of Christian service.

Who constitutes the official board of the Christian Church? Is the clerk, who is neither deacon or elder, considered one of the official board? J. E. Walton.

Humansville, Mo.

"The official board" is a phrase that has come into use to designate the collective body of the officers of the church, consisting ordinarily of the deacons and elders, together with the deaconesses, if there be such. There would be no impropriety in having the superintendent of the Sunday-school, the president of the Endeavor Society, or the president of the Ladies' Aid Society, or any other member holding a responsible position in the congregation, meet with this official board in their regular monthly meetings to hear reports of the work and consider how best to further the interests of the church. It is purely a matter of expediency and not of divine prescription. Perhaps it would be better, to avoid confusion, that the elders and deacons be considered the official board, and that they have the right to invite any member of the congregation to be present whom they may see proper to invite.

When the New Testament speaks of deacon (Acts 6, 1 Timothy 3:8-13), there are no qualifications mentioned in regard to finance. Why is this the case if it is their duty to look after the finances of the church? I think it the duty of the treasurer and clerk, or of a finance committee to be appointed by the board. A Deacon.

Perhaps undue stress has been laid on the financial duties of the deacons among us to the exclusion of other work which they were originally expected to perform. When, however, you have men "of good repute, full of the Spirit and of wisdom," they are capable of managing the business interests of any local church. It is well, perhaps, to have a special finance committee, composed of members of the diaconate. Both the treasurer and clerk of the church might well be members of this committee. If, however, deacons are to "purchase for themselves a good degree and great boldness in the faith," there should be laid out for them some religious work, as well as that of looking after the material interests of the church. This is a feature of the deacon's work that has been neglected and no doubt to the detriment, not only of the deacons themselves, but of the church.

---

1. Is there a sense in which the words "church" and "kingdom" are different in signification? If so, what is the nature and extent of that difference?

2. Is there also a sense in which these words are identical in meaning? If so, please cite Scriptures supporting this view.

3. Was the church, or kingdom, or both, in existence before the day of Pentecost? Give Scripture and reason. C. J. Kimball.

St. Louis, Mo.

1. The words church and kingdom are not always synonymous. They touch at certain points, but kingdom is a broader term than church. Some one has expressed it that "the church is the kingdom as seen from below, while the kingdom is the church as seen from above." In other words, we suppose that the church is the objective and organized form of the Kingdom of God, but since the Kingdom of God is the rule or reign of God over the heart and lives of men, it is necessarily broader than any possible church.

2. It seems to us there is a sense, as indicated above, in which they refer, at least, to the same institution. For instance, in John 3:5, where the conditions of citizenship in the Kingdom of God are indicated, it would seem that the organized phase of the Kingdom, which we call the Church, is meant.

3. The Church had its birthday on Pentecost, when the spirit descended and filled the Apostles, and through their preaching 3,000 persons were converted, baptized and added to the nucleus of believers. The Kingdom of God in its New Testament sense had its beginning in Christ's own person and gradually extended over the lives of His immediate disciples. It may be said to have had a subjective existence in Christ, and in His Apostles to a certain degree, during Christ's ministry, but it had no objective or organized existence until Pentecost. Jesus said to His disciples: "The kingdom of God is within you, or among you," if the latter translation be preferred. In either case it is the kingdom in its spiritual, subjective force that is referred to.

If the Baptist Church is the Church of Christ, and was organized by John the Immerser, what church did Jesus speak of where he says: "On this rock will I build my church?" And what church was organized on the day of Pentecost? Let the Battle Flag answer through the Christian-Evangelist. L. C. Wilson.

We have no control over the Battle Flag, but when it gets its answer ready we will publish it. We do not believe, however, that the Battle Flag represents the great religious people known as Baptists. If a fairly representative man were answering this query he would probably say that there is no such an organization as "the Baptist Church," but that there are Baptist churches or local congregations, made up of baptized believers; and if he were a representative Baptist he would not claim that the present people known as Baptists could trace an unbroken succession back to John the Baptist. He would also probably say that the language quoted from Jesus refers to the church which most Baptists believe began during the earthly ministry of Christ, but which we believe had its birthday on the day of Pentecost. In so far as Baptists and Disciples of Christ are true believers they are members of the same church, namely, the church which Christ is building on the foundation of his Messiahship and divinity.

In the discussion of the familiar motto: "In matters of faith, unity; in matters of opinion, liberty; in all things, charity," at the Congress in Indianapolis, there was no little confusion as to the exact location of the line separating "faith" and "opinion." In the Homiletic Review, Vol. 34, p.448, I find this excellent motto quoted a little differently, and credited to Augustine: "In essentials, unity; in unessentials, liberty; in all things, charity." Does this make the matter any plainer, or is it just as difficult to distinguish between "essentials" and "unessentials" as it is to separate "faith" and "opinion?" Percy Leach.

The motto, as credited above, which was its original form, should not be credited to Augustine, but to Rupertus Meldenius. See our editorial on this motto in our issue of April 12.

On the last day of the Ecumenical Conference, "that great day of the feast," stood up Dr. A. J. F. Behrends, pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Brooklyn, and cried aloud, saying:

"Make a bonfire of all ecclesiastical millinery and cap the whole pile with hard criticism, strike a match, and blessed be God, how it will burn! But don't call out the fire department.

'I am tired of being a theological mummy. I believe in all creeds, but would put them all in a metal hopper and then let the mills go to grinding. From all those creeds would fly out sticks and stones, chaff and hay and straw, leaving only the golden grain of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Take all of your old doctrines and theological theories and store them in a theological museum under a glass case. I believe in creeds, and I will sign any creed that will permit me to sign all creeds. But unless you will permit me to sign all creeds, then I refuse to sign any of them."

For "hard criticism" it should probably read higher criticism. This substitution makes the whole thing hang together more consistently. We have no doubt this saying got the ear of the crowd and brought forth a rousing cheer, for it sounded, no doubt, a good deal better than it reads. It would strike the average reader that after the "bonfire" and "metal hopper" had done their work on the creeds, there wouldn't be very much left to preserve "under a glass case in a theological museum." It is a little difficult, too, for the average mind to understand how Dr. Behrends can believe in all creeds, both Calvinistic and Armenian, and be willing to sign them, when there is so much "sticks, stones, hay and chaff and straw" in them. Not many of us are sufficiently elastic in conscience and credulity as to enable us to do that. It is refreshing, however, to hear a man confess that he has been a "theological mummy," and that he is tired of being such and wants to be a living, thinking freeman in Christ Jesus. That is good. The trouble is, we have too many theological mummies in the church who are all unconscious that they have undergone the embalming process. Let us have some more good, healthy confessions like that of Dr. Behrends and it will be good for the soul.

THE SPIRITUAL SIDE OF OUR PLEA.

The Letter and the Spirit.

A. B. JONES.

The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life (2 Cor. 3:6). What does that mean? It is a strong antithetical sentence, a bold declaration of thought. Whatever differences may obtain among scholars as to the details of their exegeses of that Scripture; however various their critical views of its letter, there is a general agreement as to the spirit of the passage. On all hands it is held that "the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life."

Every law, every ordinance and every institution has its letter and its spirit. Nor may these distinct parts be lost sight of or confused and identified. That they were two separate and distinct things in the mind of Paul is made clear in the fact that he says the one "kills" and the other gives "life." The difference between the form and the substance, the expression and the essence of a thing is generally conceded. A word is said to be the sign of an idea, but is the word and the idea the same thing? Ideas existed before words, and words were formed as a means of transferring ideas from one mind to another. In this case the word is the "letter" and the idea is the "spirit." To listen to a flow of words that convey to us no ideas is a punishment, and tends to confusion and mental death; while words that do convey to us thought are a stimulus to the mind, and tend to enlarge its vitality, its capacity and its power. A written law is an assemblage of words, an association of ideas and an expression of thought. The written form is the "letter" of the law, the intention of the lawmaker is the "spirit" of the law. But is the thought of the lawgiver always adequately set forth in the written form of the law? If so, why these contests in courts over legal technicalities; and why these appeals to higher courts for a better interpretation and construction of the law? The letter of a law is what it says; the spirit of a law is what it means. But the law does not always mean what it says. "Six days shalt thou labor." Does it mean just what it says, or does it mean that what labor is performed must not be done on the Sabbath, but within the six working days? "Thou shalt not kill." If that means just what it says, then it is wrong to deprive an animal of life, to cut down a living tree or to pluck a flower. The meaning of this law, however, is evidently to interdict murder, as usually defined in our statutes. "He that believeth not shall be damned." Construe that literally and every infant, and idiot and pagan is doomed to endless condemnation. But the law does not always mean what it says.

Nor does it always say what it means. "Thou shalt make no graven image of anything in heaven or on earth." Abide by the letter and this interdicts art, as Mr. Ingersoll contended it did. In spite of this, however, Moses was instructed to make two cherubims and place them on the mercy seat in the tabernacle. While this was a violation of the letter of the law, yet it was not of its spirit. The law was intended as an inhibition of idol images. Hence, when the golden calf was made and set up in the camp of Israel as an object of worship, both the letter and the meaning of the law was infracted, and the divine wrath incurred.

"Bear ye one another's burdens." "Every man shall bear his own burden." Here are two injunctions of the Apostle Paul, couched close together in the same chapter. Construed literally they are contradictory in their teachings. When we "read between the lines," however, as we sometimes say, we are brought into touch with the spirit of the two texts and all trace of inconsistency disappears. "Bear ye one another's burdens," in Christian sympathy and fellowship; and "every man shall bear his own burden," of responsibility and accountability unto God, are each alike essential and fundamental principles of our holy religion.

What fantastic capers preachers do cut sometimes in their interpretations of Scripture, "playing hide-and-seek" between the letter and the spirit of the Word of God. When it suits a man's preconceived theory of any point in religious doctrine to construe a given text literally, the most easy and natural thing in the world for him to do is to stand by the letter of the law. When, however, the letter makes against his notions, he sees the wisdom of not being a literalist, but rather with a broad and liberal view he seeks to go beyond and behind the letter in quest of the meaning of the passage. And thus often the same text is construed literally by one theologian, and figuratively by another. What battles have been fought, what tournaments, what windmill feats have been exhibited in the valley that lies between the letter and the spirit of God's holy Word! And is there not some reason why this condition of things should obtain? While it is true that the law does not always say what it means, and does not always mean what it says, is it not true that sometimes the letter and the spirit of the law are commensurate with each other? Are there not instances in which the letter and the spirit, the form and the essence, the expression and the meaning so exactly coincide that there is left no ground for contention, no battlefield for the theological pugilists? Possibly so. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God." "He commandeth all men everywhere to repent." "The Judge of all the earth will do right." Such declarations as these will perhaps be generally if not universally accepted at their face value. The necessity for penetrating beneath the surface of the outward form to ascertain the inward meaning of such passages of Scripture appears to be well-nigh eliminated —certainly it is reduced to a minimum.

It is safe to say that a habitual tendency to literalism, to literal constructions and interpretations of Scripture, is a dwarfing process; while a habitual tendency to interpret and live according to the spirit of the inspired writings has the effect to enlarge our spiritual nature and enjoyment.

"Pray without ceasing," says the apostle. And yet the Pharisee may stand upon the street corners, or the hermit may kneel in his cave and repeat his prayers until he dies of exhaustion without understanding or obeying the injunction, "Pray without ceasing"—cultivate a prayerful spirit; lead a prayerful life.

"He that confesseth me before men, him will I confess before my Father in heaven." What a depth of pathos in the true significance of this lesson; but how easy to stand before the great congregation and "confess with the mouth" without any adequate appreciation or appropriation of the mighty truth: "THOU ART THE CHRIST, THE SON OF THE LIVING GOD." "In vain do you worship me with your lips when the heart is far from me." "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven."

Liberty, Mo.

(CONTINUED NEXT WEEK.)

RELIGIOUS WORLD MOVING TOWARD A COMMON CENTER.

D. A. WICKIZER.

The book entitled "The World's Parliament of Religions" has on its cover this text: "Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us?" (Mal. 2:10.) The sittings of that congress of men revealed to the world that in great minds of all religious colorings there was a desire that all should be drawn closer together by some great, central truth. Dr. Horace Bushnell said: "It is only religion, the great bond of love and duty to God, that makes any existence valuable or even tolerable." It is this same religion that enables us to respect and even admire men, though they may differ widely from us on what appears to us as vital doctrines.

With our greatest optimism we may not hope that this unification will be based upon like belief, in the abstract, on all questions. But rather it must be founded upon a common acceptance of fundamental principles of the Christian religion, accompanied by the spirit that will make toleration, forbearance and love prevailing virtues among us.

While in men the power of the mind varies, one is able only to catch a glimpse of that halo of glory that surrounds the Christ-life, while another, rising to those lofty conceptions of the Christian religion, is able to present his life a willing sacrifice that he may reflect the glory of the Christ among men; and while this is true there must of necessity exist a difference of belief in the abstract, though not necessarily a conflict between them. The one believeth that he may eat herbs, the other that he may eat all things.

John Henry Barrows said: "Religion, like the white light of heaven, has been broken into many-colored fragments by the prisms of men. One of the objects of the Parliament of Religions has been to change this many-colored radiance back into the white light of heavenly truth." The object of the Christian religion is to flood this world with the white light of heavenly truth. Can this be best accomplished by God's searchlight piercing with a flood of light the darkest night and the wildest storm, casting a halo of glory about the vessel that is battling with the elements, or by placing our denominational lenses within this stream, diffusing and separating its light? The one is the light of the sun upon our meridian, the other the starlight of night. When it was proposed to hold the Parliament of Religions in connection with the World's Fair, fears were entertained that it would engender the animosities that have characterized our religious gatherings of the past. Scarcely a sadder comment could have been made against so-called Christian religion. Sad as the thought itself may be, sadder still is the realization of the conditions that make it possible. But at the close of that great Parliament Carroll Bonny voiced the sentiment of many hearts in this language: "What men deemed impossible God finally wrought. The religions of the world have met in a great and imposing assembly; they have conferred together upon the vital questions concerning life and immortality in a frank and friendly spirit, and now they part in peace, with many warm expressions of mutual love and respect." The pulsation of the spiritual heart of that Parliament was the desire for a foundation that should be common to all religions, which fact could only be true when all religions became one. If, then, the religions of the world can entertain a hope for such a basis, shall it be deemed impossible that they who accept the one Father above all and the one Savior among men shall discover the one common center about which we shall revolve, having been divested of selfish strife and harmful divisions? Z. Noguchi, of Japan, said: "Then is there a hope of decreasing the number of religions? Yes. How far? To one. Because the truth is only one. . . . If thousands of religions do continue to develop, and reach the state of full development, then there will be no distinction among them." If the Christian religion shall be able successfully to demonstrate to the world that it is the one and only true religion, that it is the consummation of the one great truth, its followers must of necessity become "one body in Christ Jesus." A spiritual unity cannot long exist without manifesting itself in an organic oneness.

If Brahman, Buddhist, Parsee, Confucian, Mohammedan, Jew and Christian can meet in prayerful and friendly convocation, while there exists between them the widest possible distinction in religious doctrine, does it not appear that the religious world is moving toward a common center? Why should not we, being filled with the Holy Spirit, representing the energy of God in us, dwell together in peace and harmony, being one great family in Christ Jesus? Then the world will believe on him who hath called us. Lady Henry Somerset — and this century has scarcely produced a greater among women—said: "A consensus of opinions on the practical workings of the Golden Rule, declared negatively by Confucius and positively by Christ, will bring us all into one camp, and that is precisely what the enemies of liberty, worship, purity and peace do not desire." Concerning the movement of religions toward a common center, Merwin Marie Snell said: "It is especially by love and in love that the breaking down of the old barriers will be realized. The fundamental characteristic of the religious future will be universal union in love." Upon this theme John Talbot Gracey said: "The irresistible laws that hold human society impel men toward some common faith. . . . It is much more probable that the faiths of the world will be readjusted than displaced, and just that religion which shall hold the key of the ultimate adjustment of the discordant beliefs of mankind will force itself into final acceptance." Dr. John J. Keen said, concerning this ultimate religion: "We feel as we look into one another's eyes that the only condition upon which we can ever attain to 'unity in truth' is to dismiss the spirit of hostility and suspicion and to meet on the basis of mutual truthfulness and charity." Josiah Strong said: "After having considered carefully the work of the Alliance, embracing a period of more than 50 years, the duty of 'Christian union' and co-operation becomes more evident as the sin and waste of selfish competition grow more apparent; and the weakness of disunion grows more apparent as we better appreciate the magnitude of the work demanded by the churches." He further states: "It seems to be the general conviction that the divisions of Protestant Christendom are lamentable, and that the selfish competition of the churches is scandalous." Mr. Strong gives as one of his first suggestions organic union as a remedy for all this. While we may not agree in the ultimate with all the above statements, we must by them be convinced that the eyes of leaders in great religious movements of the present are turning toward a common center. As Christ is the "central truth" concerning all that we hope and all that we are, we find the closing of this century with the minds of all men turning toward this center. One of the characteristics of the conventions of history was the formulating of doctrines composing creeds. But that which most characterizes the conventions of the present is the spirit of toleration—a seeking to get back to Christ in spirit as in doctrine, and an almost unanimous protest against the discord as seen among the churches. The thought is parent to the deed. May we not hope that with the birth of the new century the thoughts of getting back to Christ may give birth to deeds of fellowship and love, by which the energies of the mighty host of Jehovah shall be focused for the destruction of sin and the advancement of righteousness?

NOTE.—The above quotations are made from "The World's Parliament of Religions."

Beatrice, Neb.

"There is no little enemy." Little impurities in the blood are sources of great danger and should be expelled by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

INDIFFERENCE AMONG CHRISTIANS.

MRS. CORNELIUS M'KAY.

I am greatly impressed with the complaints that come from all our brotherhood through our papers of the lack of appreciation of their obligations as citizens of God's kingdom as evidenced by their failure to exercise their privileges of Christian citizenship among the great mass of our people.

It is greatly to be deplored that the great body of church members only enjoy in part their blessings and privileges. This fact is impressed upon me as I go out among our membership in our own church and mingle with them and hear them discuss with that intelligence born of much reading, thought and interest, all the topics of the day, from the newest style in dress to the latest war news, from the latest drama, opera or novel to the most advanced thought in sociology, political and progressive science, and in painful contrast is the lack of knowledge and appreciation of "natural law in the spiritual world," of the glories and beauties in the science of Christianity, of unfamiliarity with the grandeur, excellence and magnitude of the Bible, at once the oldest, newest, most interesting book ever written, comprising as it does the beginning and destiny of man, the highest principles of life, the purest ethics, and the only guide pointing man to that high and noble destiny to which he is born. The conclusion has been forced upon me that this great indifference to the obligations and privileges resting in such full measure upon all Christians is the result of ignorance. We don't study our Bibles. We may read in a perfunctory way our Bibles every day, but this will not avail—we must study it. We do not read our church papers. This great common school for the people which comes into the home every week, teaching, admonishing, warning, encouraging and strengthening us, while it brings greetings from all our brotherhood, from our churches, from all over the world, is the greatest educator of our times, and when our people read our best church papers closely you have a people full of zeal for the Master and his church. We must put forth more effort to awaken our people to the great importance of this too long neglected avenue to spiritual development. The benefit to be derived from reading our church papers cannot be measured—the influence goes on widening and circulating through all the ages, thus linking time to eternity.

From our papers we can engraft into our own minds and lives the grandest, noblest thoughts of our strongest men, both mentally and spiritually, and constant reading of noble sentiment and holy aspirations will inspire us with a desire to be noble and true. That our lives are influenced by our reading none will deny. How important, then, that we read only from the purest, best writers, whose words carry with them the conviction that the heart from which they emanated has been made pure by the blood of the Lamb. Our best papers are now within the reach of all. For the mere pittance of $1.00 or $1.50 a teacher will be sent into each home that will make the Bible reading clearer, more delightful, that will give a fuller knowledge of Christian duties, and at the same time create a determination to discharge all Christian obligations and enjoy the privileges permitted only to a child of God. This silent but most effective teacher will enlarge the conception of the great work that depends upon each individual as it arouses to a sense the obligations resting upon every creature. It will keep us in touch, love and sympathy with our brotherhood and our work for the Master throughout all this beautiful world. It will make us active, earnest, working, praying, giving Christians, and open up fountains of joy and happiness that we never dreamed of, as it gradually causes the world to lose its hold upon us and gently but surely draws us to the feet of our Savior.

Our growth as a people has been wonderful, and our present attainments are but the bright foreshadowings of the future, the rosy dawn which harbingers the approach of day, but yet these bright prospects may be darkened by the clouds of ignorance, dwarfed by the chill winds of indifference, marred by the storms of worldliness and destroyed by the thunderbolt of ambition as it flashes from life to life, consuming by the fires of its worldly desires the nobler, the higher, the Godlikeness of man. The church—not only the pastor, but the elders, the whole membership—must begin an earnest, prayerful, aggressive campaign against this great enemy to spiritual life and growth, indifference. If we will work, talk, write and pray we will be heard. Let us present a solid phalanx to this great enemy of Christ's church, and never cease from our labors until we have placed a Christian paper in every Christian home; then we will have no empty pews in our churches, no church letters lying in the bottom of trunks or some far-away church, but we will be "as a city upon a hill," our mission boxes will be full and we will take the world for Christ.

Memphis, Tenn.

ELEVATING THE LAW ABOVE THE LAWGIVER.

JOSEPH FORT NEWTON.

The men of science have much to tell us about law. They proclaim the universal reign of law. They describe the order and unity of nature, the harmony of her great and lovely laws. These laws operate with unfailing accuracy. The universe is a perfect system. There is no anarchy. All is order. He who breaks a law must pay the penalty. We may safely trust the great order of the world. Everything is done by law. Law evolves this and destroys that. Things are fixed and we cannot alter them. Science deifies law. Whether there be a God is a theme with which it has not to do. Law is the only God it knows anything about.

But what is law? The term law implies two parties, one of whom has authority to command and power to enforce obedience, and another who is conscious of the ability and the obligation to obey. Law is a rule of action. When applied to nature it is the name for the manner in which we have observed some force at work. It is the statement of an invariable order of action. The use of the term law in connection with inanimate matter, where no conscious authority or obligation exists, has been the occasion of much confusion of thought, in that it seems to imply that law is itself a distinct entity, capable of acting. The way in which scientists speak of law would lead one to think that law is an independent existence, a creative energy, a sort of automatic creator. Speaking of the materialistic idea of laws and forces Huxley remarks: "They tell me that matter consists of atoms, which are separated by mere space devoid of contents, and that through this void radiate the attractive and repulsive forces whereby the atoms affect one another. If any one can clearly conceive the nature of these things, which not only exist in nothingness, but pull and push there with great vigor, I envy him the possession of an intellect of larger grasp than mine" This is a unique confession of the failure of materialistic philosophy. Materialism is an explanation that does not explain.

Force is nothing but a name for the cause of motion, and law is simply a name for the manner in which that force acts. To say that a thing is governed by law does not satisfy the mind. Law is not a force, but only a form; it is not a motor, but a regular motion. Laws do not create themselves; laws do not execute themselves. In the very nature of things law requires a lawmaker and an executive. To deny or disregard this essential truth is the height of unreason. To endow an effect with the power of a cause and ascribe to law the attributes which men have in all ages, by the very law of their reason, ascribed to the eternal Lawgiver, is a subterfuge born of a prejudice as culpable as that which the man of science so glibly condemns in the theologian. By a law of its nature the human mind must acknowledge God. There is no device by which proud science can escape from his presence. Mr. Spencer states the plain truth when he says that "the axiomatic truths of physical science unavoidably postulate absolute being as their common basis."

Mr. Tyndall states the case clearly: "The scientific mind can find no repose in the mere registration of sequence in nature. The further question obtrudes itself with resistless might, Whence came the sequence?" Even when the ambiguity concerning the term law, which may be due to the poverty of language, is cleared away, the mind refuses to rest with the explanation that a certain thing occurs simply because another thing preceded it in orderly arrangement. We instinctively feel the insufficiency of physical law to produce this bright and boundless universe, and persist in believing that there is some invisible and efficient intelligence connecting antecedent with consequent in stately progression. The present tendency of science is toward the conviction that spiritual forces are the basis of the natural order, that nature is at heart intelligent. It would be proper to say that the universe is governed according to law, meaning thereby the direct and consistent exertion of a spiritual intelligence.

The great poet may be right—poets are the pioneers of progress—who said: "Nature is spirit visible; spirit is nature invisible." The influence of the scientific method gave birth to that great religious book, "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," and the influence of religious thought may yet give birth to a great scientific book, "Spiritual Law in the Natural World." We may yet see a scientific exposition of religion blended with a spiritual exposition of science. The present writer hopes to see the day when the great faith which the soul of man eternally affirms will be actually confirmed and verified in the constitution of nature; when the title-deeds of our holy religion will be none other than the very laws of nature; when we shall know that the laws of nature are the habits of God and that the intuitions of the human soul are in harmony with the eternal verities of the universe. This was the vision that haunted the closing years of the life of Lord Alfred Tennyson, and upon which he looked through the dim gates of dream:

"God is law, say the wise, O soul, and let us rejoice;
For, if he thunder by law, the thunder is yet his voice.
Speak to him, then, for he hears, and Spirit with spirit may meet:
Closer is he than breathing, and nearer than hands and feet."

St. Louis, Mo.

NEWSPAPER REFORM.

REV. WILBUR F. CRAFTS, PH. D.

The one great benefit that should be obtained from the Sheldon paper is a thorough discussion of the daily paper as it is, and as it should be. Let us not allow this main question to be covered up with side issues and theological trifles, such as the charge of irreverence in the term, "What would Jesus do?" That phrase and "In His Steps," which expresses the same thing more briefly, are but synonyms of the still shorter command of Christ, "Follow me," expanded into the motto of John, "Even as he;" and yet more in the words of Christ, "I have given you an example that ye should do as I have done." John expresses it in this way: "We should walk even as he walked," the word "walk" having the sense of "behave;" and this is a precise equivalent of, "I will do what Jesus would have me do," which again is the equivalent of, "What would Jesus do?" Wiser than many of the critical editors was the little girl who, being asked, "What is it to be a Christian?" replied, "It is to do what Jesus would do if he was a little girl at our house."

The charge of irreverence, started by the secular papers and echoed by religious ones, is drawing attention from the really important issue. I move the main question: "What changes ought to be made in our daily papers?" Is it right for any man to defraud his fellows by publishing misleading advertisements that promise sudden wealth and sudden health, and invite to stock gambling as well as race gambling. There is not a single metropolitan daily paper in the United States, so far as I know, though many of them are edited by prominent Christians, that does not invite its readers to races and to rum; that does not advertise also the foulest theatrical shows that have a fee to pay. And there are some religious papers that are living on quack medicines.

In the matter of news, surely we have a right to demand that papers shall tell only the news that is worth telling, and that concisely and completely and correctly and cleanly. And the editorial of a Christian man ought to be as much a courageous utterance of conviction as the voice of the preacher, though there may be in it no pious word. We would not advocate the introduction of texts or prayers in a daily paper, but rather hiding the leaven of Christian principle in the very heart of every article, influencing, not only the matter included, but the very exclusions, which are equally important. Surely 27,000,000 of Christians ought to be able to develop and sustain a group of newspapers that will say nothing in their columns that a Christian man would not say in a Christian home. Some day some wise millionaire will see that instead of multiplying colleges he can best serve his age by establishing a syndicate of daily papers, both good and great, both popular and pure.

The Reform Bureau, 210 Delaware Ave., N. E., Washington, D. C., April 16, 1900.

Our Budget.

—"A little child shall lead them."

—Prophecy has become history, and the children of our churches and Sunday-schools are leading us into larger giving for the extension of Christ's kingdom.

—The children are the hope of the future. The cultivation of the missionary spirit in them by "Children's Day" is one of the greatest factors in our future development.

—There are signs of an abundant harvest throughout the country. Shall we not remember Him from whom cometh every good and perfect gift? Shall we receive bountifully and give sparingly?

—These lines are written amid the waving, undulating wheatfields of Oklahoma, one of the youngest and richest in future possibilities of all our territories. It is gratifying to know that something is being done to lay here the foundations of a Christian civilization.

—Nothing can save this country but the gospel, and nothing can save the churches but the earnest, aggressive efforts which they may put forth for the evangelization of this and other lands.

—This week closes the story of The Lost Emigrants, which has been running in our Family Circle for several months. The story is a valuable one, portraying, as it does, our plea, and is told in a very interesting way. If the demand from our readers is sufficient we shall publish the story in book form. Let those who think the story should be published drop us a postal card to that effect.

—On the third Sunday in June F. O. Fannon will preach at the dedication of the new house of worship built by and for the church in Spencer, Iowa, J. A. Seaton, pastor.

—What A. B. Jones wrote of Bro. Calvin in his article on "Our First Congress" last week as a "full-orbed man" the types transformed into a "full or big man." As the term "big man" is a very indefinite one Bro. Calvin had better know just what Bro. Jones did say about him. Our proof-reader was caught on the jury last week and had to divide up his time between the jury room and his office and this probably accounts for the oversight.

—The program of the Arkansas Missionary Cooperation, June 5-7, will appear in our next issue.

—Children's Day is the greatest day in the Sunday-schools in the year. It is the one day in the year when offerings are made to send the gospel to the ends of the earth. The first Sunday in June is the time.

—Children's Day was first observed by our people in 1881. Since that time the Sunday-schools have given $330,000 for Foreign Missions. Almost one-third of all the moneys received by the Foreign Society has come from this source.

—The children were the ones to start the work on heathen soil. As soon as they began to give they said they wanted their money to go to send the gospel to those who had never heard the name of Jesus. Their gifts and faith led to a change of policy on the part of the society.

—G. L. Wharton has resigned as a missionary of the Foreign Society. This was made necessary by the failure of the health of Mrs. Wharton. It is an inexpressible disappointment and grief to both. They entered upon the work expecting to live and die in it. But man proposes, and God disposes. Churches looking for a minister would do well to consider this man of God. He has culture, experience and consecration. He is a rare man, and should find an abundance of work at once. He will be ready for service about the first of July.

—The Eastern Iowa Preachers' Association will meet at Oskaloosa, Iowa, May 22-24. A good program and a cordial invitation is extended to all.

—Any church desiring to secure a preacher at moderate salary, either for part or all of the time, will be informed of such an one by addressing at once with stamp, L. S. Harrington, Sheldon, Ill.

—The Sedalia, Mo., District Convention, comprising the counties of Cooper, Cole, Camden, Benton, Pettis, Johnson, Moniteau, Lafayette, Morgan, Saline, Osage and Miller, meets at Holden, May 21-23, 1900. They want every church in the district represented at that convention, and the church at Holden will be glad to entertain all who attend. Let those intending to attend the convention send their names to David C. Peters, minister, at once.

—Cotner University is looking forward to its commencement, June 6th, for a grand time. Bro. J. B. Radford, of Eureka, who dedicated the University, is expected to be there.

—We are under obligations to Fillmore Brothers, Cincinnati, Ohio, for a copy of the "Jubilee Medley of Patriotic Airs," compiled and sung by Mrs. Princess C. Long. This certainly makes a beautiful and enjoyable souvenir of the Jubilee Convention and is fittingly dedicated to our secretary, Benj. L. Smith. A copy may be had of the Fillmore Bros. for seventy-five cents.

—We are in receipt of a communication from Bro. Baghdasarian, dated Kalamar, Salmas, Persia, April 2nd, in which he acknowledges with gratitude the receipt of the draft for $75, contributed by friends in this country, and forwarded by us to him in February last. He asks us to convey to the kind friends who sent their contributions his sincere thanks for their generosity and Christian charity. He adds that he would be very glad indeed to leave Persia at once and put an end to his troubles, but that, unfortunately, the fund raised and forwarded to him is not sufficient to defray the expenses of himself and family to this country, and that he would not be allowed by the Sultan to return to Armenia. In this condition of things he does not know exactly what course to pursue, but will think the matter over and adopt the course that seems the wisest to him. Meanwhile, he asks that friends in this country remember him in their prayers.

—The Democrat, of Bethany, Mo., for May 10, devotes two full pages to an illustrated account of the new house dedicated in that city for the Church of Christ on May 6. The morning sermon was preached by H. O. Breeden, of Des Moines, Ia., and the evening sermon by M. M. Goode, of St. Joseph, Mo. The building is modern, handsome, convenient and cost $10,000. The extreme measurements of the building is 54x92 feet. The main auditorium is 45x45 feet, with ceiling 26 feet above the floor; the Sunday-school room proper is 28x30 feet, with ceiling 20 feet above floor; four classrooms, 12x12 feet; pastor's study, 12x12 feet; robing room, 7x12 feet; four vestibules, averaging 9x12 feet; the gallery, 10 feet wide, extends the entire length of the main auditorium on west and south sides; height of main tower, 85 feet. The gallery is reached from both front and rear vestibules; the auditorium and Sunday-school room are separated by a system of handsome draperies; the basement is supplied by two approved furnaces, guaranteed to keep the building at even heat throughout; the finishings are of southern pine, and the whole is supplied with electrical appliances and water; handsome carpets supply the auditorium and gallery, which are also supplied with latest patterns of opera chairs.

"A Friend in Need Is a Friend Indeed."

Your blood is poor and therefore you suffer from eruptions, pains and general debility and "that tired feeling." The blood is the real source of all health. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the shepherd of health. Why? Because it purifies the blood as nothing else can.

Tired Feeling—"I had that tired feeling and headaches. Was more tired in the morning than when I went to bed, and my back pained me. Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills cured me and I feel ten years younger." B. Scheblein, 274 Bushwick Place, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Be sure to get Hood's because

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

—The Fifth District of Nebraska will hold its annual convention at Belvidere from May 22 to 24. Congregations are urged to send two delegates for each department of their church work. Entertainment will be furnished free. Delegates should go prepared to make reports concerning their church work.

—Dr. B. B. Tyler is now in a meeting at Springfield, Mass., and will go from there to Boston, where he will dedicate the new church in Everett (Boston suburb), on May 20, and will remain there about two weeks. During his sojourn in the East he will write up our work in New England. He writes enthusiastically of his visit with old friends in New York, adding: "Blest be the tie that binds.'

—The refusal of the General Conference in Chicago last week to grant license to women to preach the gospel of Christ may emphasize the orthodoxy of that great religious body, but it will hardly advance its favor with the women. However, it shows how reluctantly a body imbued with the spirit of conservatism concedes an old position. It took that body fifty years to see its way clear to admit lay delegates into the fellowship, and the good sisters of the Methodist Church who want to proclaim the glad tidings of salvation to the unsaved will have to bide their time.

—We give again, on page 2 of this issue, our special announcement of a reduction in price of the works of Alexander Campbell. Every reader of the paper should carefully examine this announcement.

—After several vexatious delays "Wheeling Through Europe" and "Christian Science Dissected" are now ready. Both these books merit a wide reading.

—The first cover page of the New England Messenger for May is illuminated with the familiar face of B. B. Tyler. Dr. Tyler has been doing some evangelistic work at Danbury, Conn., of which he has written in his letters in our columns. The New England Messenger, as its name implies, is the organ of our people in the New England and Eastern States, and is always filled with encouraging reports. That our cause is rapidly growing on Eastern soil is a matter of great promise to the future of our movement in the United States and we all rejoice together in their success.

—The beauties of summer have come.

—Do not forget your obligations to the cause of Home Missions.

—No church should allow the month of May to pass without an offering for Home Missions.

—The 112th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church convenes in this city on the 17th day of this month. It promises to be an interesting session.

—The Missouri Bible-school convention meets in California June 11-14. The program of this convention appeared in this paper last week. Preserve the paper for future reference.

—We suggest to our readers, and especially to the younger portion, that in selecting books for summer reading they give "The Dutchess," "Laura Jean Libbey" and "Ouida" a rest and take up something—fiction, poetry, history or treatise—that is really worth reading.

—"Missionary Addresses," by A. McLean, is a splendid volume of 292 pages, bound in cloth, illustrated with about seventy-five half tone portraits of our foreign missionarries, and is sent by the Christian Publishing Company, postpaid, for sixty cents.

—The Southern Illinois Ministerial Association, this year, will be held in the First Christian Church of East St. Louis, May 22-24, and a cordial invitation is extended to all to attend. The program of this meeting appears in our columns this week and on it will be found a number of the St. Louis preachers. It will be the nice thing for as many of our St. Louis brethren to attend as possible.

—The Texas Missionary Convention meets in Paris, June 12-15, and arrangements have been made for a convention commensurate with the greatness of the state. A splendid program has been prepared and appears in full in the Christian Courier for May 3. The Courier also prints a cut of the church in which the convention is to be held upon the first page, besides devoting much space to its demands and interests. We shall certainly hope to hear of a great convention at Paris at the time given.

—F. O. Fannon, of the First Church, this city, and Dr. Fullerton, of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, exchanged pulpits last Sunday evening. Dr. Fullerton's sermon emphasized the necessity for Christian union and was greatly enjoyed by our people. There were three additions to the First Church on last Sunday and two at Ellendale; 15 in all to date at the meeting now in progress there by our city evangelist, A. J. Marshall. The collection at the Fourth Church for Home and City Missions on last Sunday was over $85. They will make it $100. Church attendance in this city was generally reduced on account of the street car strike. There were no cars at all throughout the entire day. No effort was even made to run them.

"Special Catalogue No. 22"

A neat booklet containing a large number of Book Bargains. Send us a postal card and we will send you a copy — free. You ought to know what books we are selling at Half Price — and sometimes less.

The Christian Pub. Co.
St. Louis.

—One of the facts emphasized by the strike in St. Louis last week is unity of municipal life. If one part is suspended then the entire city must suffer. In times of peace and the rush of business we forget these things. We also forget how vital to our well-being is labor and the laborer. Inventions may reduce labor here and there, but they can never eliminate it. Labor is one of the pillars of civilized life and must remain, no matter what the progress of the world.

—The Christian Courier, edited by Frank E. Mallory, Topeka, Kan., is a handsomly published church paper, being both neat and newsy.

—The India Famine Relief Work under the direction of the Christian Herald Bible House, New York City, will forward any contribution you can make for that purpose. In their strong appeal for help they say:

The half has has not been told. Our courage has failed us to present all the shocking details. Every time the clock strikes the hour it toils the deathknell of at least 500 victims in India who died for want of food. Your contribution to day may save scores, hundreds, yes thousands of lives to morrow. Twenty dollars will support a thousand lives for one day. A thousand dollars will save as many for two months. Two dollars will save a life until the next harvest, and that practically means that it will save it for good. We cable free of expense all you contribute. What will you give? What thou doest do quickly, for the Master's business requires haste. Send your contribution to India Famine Relief Work, Bible House, New York City.

—The first presidential ticket is already in the field. We are tardy in making the announcement. The "Union Christian Party" held its convention at Rock Island, Ill., on May 2, and nominated for President of the United States the Rev. S. C. Swallow, of Harrisburg, Pa., and for vice-President, John G. Woolley, of Chicago. The platform we are told is thus summarized:

"It deprecates certain alleged immoral laws that have grown out of the failure of the government to recognize the divine sovereignty, notably such as require the desecration of the Christian Sabbath, unscriptural marriage and divorce and the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and asks for such amendments to the constitution as will eliminate these laws.

"It declares against war, favors the settlement of all disputes by arbitration; favors the daily reading of the Bible in the public schools, declares for government ownership of public utilities, for the election of President, vice-President and United States senators by direct vote of the people, and maintains that men and women were created free and with equal rights."

Most of the principles set forth in this platform, if not all, would meet with the favor of a large majority of Christian people, but we apprehend that there will not be a large number who will think that the best way to enforce these principles is to vote for the party that has put them in its platform.

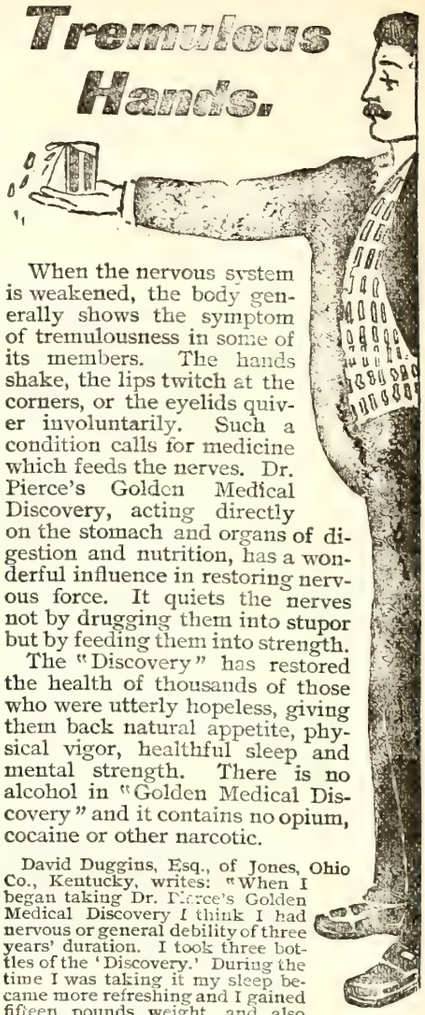
—The newspapers have revived once more the story of the alleged correspondence between Jesus and Agrippa, which is referred to by the historian, Eusebius, in the fourth century. Following is the alleged correspondence:

King Agrippa to Christ:—"I have heard of Thee and the cures wrought by Thee without herbs or medicine, for it is reported that Thou restoreth sight to the blind and maketh the lame to walk, cleanseth the leper, raiseth the dead, casteth out devils and unclean spirits and healeth those who are tormented of diseases of a long continuance. Hearing all this of Thee, I was fully persuaded that Thou art the very God come down from heaven to do such miracles, or that Thou art the Son of God and performeth them. Wherefore I have sent Thee a few lines entreating Thee to come hither and cure my disease. Besides, hearing that the Jews murmur against Thee and continue to do Thee mischief, I invite Thee to my city, which is but a little one, but is beautiful and sufficient to entertain us both."

Christ's reply to Agrippa:—"Blessed art thou for believing Me, whom thou hast not seen, for it is written of Me that they that have seen Me shall not believe and they that have not seen Me shall believe and be saved. But concerning them thou hast written, this is to acquaint thee that all things for which I was sent hither must be fulfilled and then I shall be taken up and return to Him that sent Me. But after My ascension I will send one of my disciples that shall cure thee of thy distemper and give life to all them that are with thee."

The recent claim is that these letters have been discovered in stone, over the gateway of the old palace of the king at Ephesus. Prof. Bohrmann is quoted as pronouncing these letters genuine. Whatever may be the opionion of experts as to the early date of this correspondence, very few Christian thinkers will give their consent to the view that such correspondence ever actually transpired between Jesus and Abgarus or Agrippa of the biblical text. To say nothing of the letter of King Agrippa, the alleged reply of Jesus is hardly what we would expect from Him. To one who recognized in Him only the healer of diseases, and whose only request from Jesus was that he might be healed of his own disease, we can hardly doubt but that Jesus would have replied, if at all, to such a request, by reminding the writer that his chief mission in this world was, not to heal diseases of the body, but to heal the soul of sin and its consequences. This correspondence may date back to one of the early centuries, but it evidently belongs to the class of pseudo-graphic literature, which sprang up concerning Christ in those early times.

Tremulous Hands.



When the nervous system is weakened, the body generally shows the symptom of tremulousness in some of its members. The hands shake, the lips twitch at the corners, or the eyelids quiver involuntarily. Such a condition calls for medicine which feeds the nerves. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, acting directly on the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition, has a wonderful influence in restoring nervous force. It quiets the nerves not by drugging them into stupor but by feeding them into strength.

The "Discovery" has restored the health of thousands of those who were utterly hopeless, giving them back natural appetite, physical vigor, healthful sleep and mental strength. There is no alcohol in "Golden Medical Discovery" and it contains no opium, cocaine or other narcotic.

David Duggins, Esq., of Jones, Ohio Co., Kentucky, writes: "When I began taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I think I had nervous or general debility of three years' duration. I took three bottles of the 'Discovery.' During the time I was taking it my sleep became more refreshing and I gained fifteen pounds weight, and also gained strength every day."

Free, on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only, Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, 1008 pages. Send 21 one-cent stamps for book in paper covers, or 31 stamps in cloth binding to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Bible Study By Mail.

Diploma and degree course right at your home. No loss of time from regular work. Terms $1 per month. Trial lesson free. Write Prof. C. J. Burton, Christian University, Canton, Mo.

—One of the largest conventions yet held by the Southern Baptists met May 11, at Hot Springs, Ark. Most of the 1,306 delegates from the fourteen states represented in the convention were in attendance, together with about 2,000 spectators. The total amount of money received by the board during the year was $75,866.68. Missionaries supported, 671; baptisms, 5,696; total additions reported, 11,951; churches constituted, 195; houses of worship built, 71. During the past year the board has aided in supporting 66 missionaries in the Indian Territory, 48 in Oklahoma and 171 in Texas. These latter figures furnish our own people some food for reflection on our Home Mission work in this territory.

—The third district missionary convention, of Illinois, will be held in Agusta, May 16, 17. L. F. Davis is pastor of the church in Agusta and will see that the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is in evidence in the convention.

Philander Green.

Philander Green, who has just gone to his reward, was born in Canfield, Mahoning County, O., July 21, 1811. He was the son of Samuel Green, a native of Connecticut, and Lucy Bailey, who was of Welch descent. They came to Ohio in 1810 and settled in Canfield. Afterward they lived for a short time near where the city of Akron now stands, and then moved to Norton, where they resided until the death of Samuel Green, in 1836.

Philander's first schooling was received in a log schoolhouse which, if still standing, would be in the center of Akron. Afterward he attended school at Wadsworth. His parents were Baptists, and he was instructed in that faith, but as there was no Baptist Church near his home, he attended the services of Presbyterians and Methodists, and, as he once expressed it, "got pretty badly confused on religion." In June, 1830, William Hayden, a famous preacher among the Disciples of Christ in the Western Reserve, made an appointment to preach in Middlebury, and Philander and a friend—a cousin of Prof. B. A. Hinsdale—went to hear him. At the close of the service on Sunday morning he made the good confession and was straightway baptized in the river close by. The following Sunday he united with the church at Wadsworth. Very soon afterward he began to speak in the social meetings, and finally, in 1842, began to preach regularly. His first sermon was delivered near Manchester. From this time on he preached faithfully for the churches of Northern Ohio.

November 15, 1835, he was married to Tarissa Root. Two children, F. M. and A. W. Green, were the fruit of this union. Mrs. Green died a few days after the birth of the second son. Afterward Mr. Green married Lestina B. Briggs. She died in 1888. From that time until his death Mr. Green made his home with his older son, F. M. Green, one of our best and best known preachers of Ohio.

Philander Green belongs to a class of preachers whose work was as necessary, if not as noticeable as that of some of his contemporaries. He did not possess the analytical power of his brother, Almon, nor was he a daring polemic like Jasper Moss, or a silver-tongued exhorter like Harrison Jones; but in the qualities of intellect and heart that are necessary to keep a church in good order and peace he was their equal. He had the qualities of a good shepherd of the flock; good judgment, aptness to teach, vigilant, sober, of good behavior and given to hospitality, and he heeded the divine admonition to read, exhort and teach.

Personal Mention.

Morris J. Lynch, editor and publisher of the Texas Christian Endeavorer, has become managing editor of the Christian Courier, Dallas, Texas.

J. W. Lowber is delivering a series of chapel addresses at the University of Texas on the question: "In What Sense Am I my Brother's Keeper?"

Hattress H. Shick, of Herrin, Ill., has closed all his work with churches and is now ready to hold protracted meetings on easy terms.

C. C. Cline recently closd a successful meeting at Orange, Ill., with 42 additions and is now at home at Greensburg for a litttle rest.

The meeting reported in our columns recently as held by W. A. Van Dyke at Sherwood, Ohio, was held at Newark, Ohio, instead of Sherwood.

J. W. Ball, of Waterville, Kan., has received a call to preach full time for the church in Burr Oak, Kan., and will make his home there instead of Waterville.

J. M. Lowe, of Des Moines, Iowa, has resigned the pastorate of the East Side Church of that city with the intention of doing evangelistic work. The resignation takes effect August 1, 1900.

The Portland editor of the Pacific Christian expects to spend his vacation this summer in Nome City, Alaska, in search, probably, of authentic information on the land of the midnight sun.

Jeu Hawk is expected to be in St. Louis this week. He is on a lecture tour and will visit New York City, Boston and other cities before returning. He is preparing himself for his mission in China.

G. Halleck Rowe has accepted a unanimous call to the church in Rock Port, Mo., for three Lord's days per month; the fourth is taken at Linden, six miles north of Rock Port. His Address is Rock Port, Mo

C. H. Hilton, of Olathe, Kansas, has resigned that he might accept a call to the Clifton Church, Louisville, Ky. Bro. H. has been in Olathe fifteen months and leaves the work in good condition. He will be succeeded by S. H. Givler, of Osawatamie, Kansas.

S. G. Battenfield, pastor of the church in Eureka Springs, Ark., passed through this city last week with his children to La Grange, Ind., to see his mother-in-law, who is dangerously sick. His wife had previously gone to her mother's bedside.

The marriage of Frank D. Watson and Miss Loretta P. Vaugn, April 25, 1900, by Samuel B. Letson, was made doubly poetic by a very beautiful poem composed by the officiating minister on the following morning, inspired by the surroundings and dedicated to their marriage.

R. B. Havener, of Mechanicsburg, Ill., has resigned that he may accept work under the auspices of the Missouri Bible-school board in Southwest Missouri. He will locate at Windsor, Mo. This leaves Mechanicsburg, Ill., open for some preacher who can work for a small salary.

On April 22nd we received into our fellowship Rev. Edward Owers, a Baptist preacher, who has been dissatisfied with partyism for years and at last decided to become a Christian only. We have reason to believe Bro. Owens is a good and sincere man and believe him entireiy worthy of the confidence of the brethren.

J. P. LICHTENBERGER.

J. S. Hughes, who has published his book on the Revelation of St. John, and also "The Seer of Patmos," is preparing and will soon have ready for the press a handbook on the Revelation intended for colleges, seminaries and Sunday-school teachers. It is an outline dealing chiefly with the literary formation and object of the book.

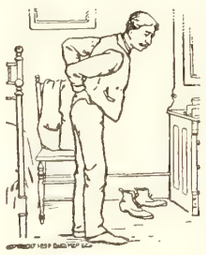
Bro. Meigs, our missionary to China, is here with his wife and two beautiful little children, visiting the parents of Sister Meigs and other friends. Bro. Meigs was one time pastor of this church for a little while. Sister Meigs reached here several weeks in advance of her husband, she coming direct by way of San Francisco and he returning through Europe, thus completing a circuit of the earth. It was a great pleasure to see the faces of these good people in the audience last Lord's day, and we are anxious for the next Lord's day to come, for Bro. Meigs has promised to tell us of his work in China. DAVID C. PETERS.

Holden, Mo.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.



It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

Home of Swamp-Root.

J. T. Ogle has accepted a unanimous call to the church in Guthrie, Oklahoma. This takes an another of our strong men from Missouri. Bro. Ogle has done a good and faithful service for the Carrollton Church and they will certainly miss his presence and efficient labors. Bro. Ogle, we know, regrets to leave old Missouri, but, like others, he will doubtless return again. He says that he is delighted with Guthrie in every way and will begin work there about the first or second week in June.

That our people are beginning to receive attention at the hands of other religious bodies in the East is indicated by the following clipping from The Herald, Syracuse, New York: "The Sunday services for men at the Young Men's Christian Association will assume a new form to-morrow. Under the leadership of the Rev. E. Richard Edwards a series of meetings will be conducted, the general topic of which will be 'The Conversations of Christ.' The first conversation as recorded in Luke, will be considered to morrow. Mr. Edwards is an enthusiastic member of the Y. M. C. A. business men's gymnasium class and has always been popular with young men. His church, the Church of Christ, has more young men in proportion to its membership than any other church in the city."

CHANGES.

A. Neese, LaCrosse to Alexander, Kan.
Jas. McGreive, Blue Rapids to Hiawatha, Kan.
A. N. Linsay Canton to New Franklin, Mo.
J. O. Davis, Waterville, Wash., to San Jose, Cal.
D. D. Boyle, Topeka, Kan., to Nevada, Mo.
A. C. Eaton, Buffalo, Ill., to Cobb, Wis.
S. B. Moore, Denver, Col., to Moberly, Mo.
F. E. Meigs, Nankin, China to Holden, Mo.
J. H. Hardin, Eureka, Ill., to Liberty, Mo.
R. W. Elder, Greenwood, Tenn., to Denver, Col.
N. G. Brown, Ottumwa to Earlville, Ia.
L. R. Thomas, Washington, D. C., to Brookland, D. C.

"ASHEVILLE."

In the suburbs of which is situated

"PINEHURST."

Now open to guests. Surrounded by a forest of Pine and Oaks. Convenient to Car Line. Cuisine unexcelled. Rates to families. Apply to

MRS. J. L. MORGAN,
Pinehurst. Pearson's Drive, Asheville, N. C.
Former proprietoress of "The Altimont."

About to Lose His Home.

To the Christian Churches, Greeting:

DEAR BRETHREN—Our beloved brother, John C. Mathes, is 79 years old. He has been preaching 48 years. Has lived here 30 years. Began preaching in Monroe Co., Ind., and organized many churches in Indiana and Illinois and received two thousand into the fellowship of the church. Through this long life of labor, and conflict his character has been above reproach. He is now aged and infirm. His home is sold under mortgage for $300. We ask you to read this letter to your congregation, ask them to give one collection to save his home. We will send letters to all our churches. Please take a collection or send a gift.

Please send all remittances to Miss Edna White, Atwood, Piatt Co., Illinois. Hoping we may receive a liberal contribution from you and thus relieve a worthy pioneer of the Christian Church,

We are truly yours,

A. H. HARRELL, Pastor.

WM. M. WHITE, JOHN H. EASTON, } Elders.

Southeast Missouri.

Last week the assistant editor of this paper took a trip over the Iron Mountain and Cotton Belt Railroads to Campbell, Dunklin Co., Mo. It is needless to say that a trip over these roads at this season of the year is especially enjoyable, passing, as they do, through some of the most fertile valleys of the state. A man does not have to go to the far East or far West for picturesque scenery. He can have it in its most attractive forms from the mountains of the Ozark to the lowlands of the Mississippi River, which probably even the Nile Valley does not excel in richness. The human eye has seldom beheld a prettier tract of land than may be seen along the Cotten Belt road from Dexter to Malden.

Planting down in that country, however, seemed to be in a very backward state, owing to the frequent rains this spring. We had no time to visit any of our churches in Southeastern Missouri this trip, as we should like to have done, but we regret that we have so few churches at all in this great and promising part of the state. How badly good evangelists are needed in all that country; and our state board would gladly give them if only they had the money. How inadequate our offerings to the state board, compared to the needs of the field. It is simply appalling to one who gets glimpses of the situation. If some way could be had to pass these regions before the larger and richer churches of the state there would certainly be an outpouring of funds that would enable the board to evangelize Southeastern Missouri in the next five years. It can and should be done. W. W. H.

Shreveport Dedication.

It is almost with joy unspeakable that we announce the dedication of our new church, which is to take place on May 20th. Through many weary months the little congregation has worshiped in a rented store room, working, praying, sacrificing and longing for the glad day when they might have a creditable building in which to worship God.

The completion of this building is a great victory for the cause of primitive Christianity in this flourishing little city. It is the entering wedge in a large section where our people and great plea are hardly known. There remains but one thing to make the victory complete. The day of dedication will find $1,000 indebtedness upon the building. The joy of that day must not be marred nor the future of the church imperiled by such a debt. It must be wiped out. Though already burdened with much giving the membership and public will yet give more. But there is one feature of our program for the day of dedication which is for every Disciple in America. It is "Twenty Minutes' Fellowship with our Brethren abroad," in which messages of cheer will be read and one dollar offering received from all who have it in their hearts and power to join in this beautiful and effective fellowship. Send the messages whether you send the offerings or not. It is greatly desired that Disciples from every state in the Union should respond with a short message. It will inspire the membership and deeply impress the public. All letters with words of congratulation or offerings should be addressed to the undersigned and marked with a cross in the left-hand corner of envelop, so as not to be opened until dedication day. Will you who read this offer up one sentence of prayer, asking God to richly bless us upon that day and make it indeed a day of triumph? CLARINDA L. JONES, 1034 Hicks St.

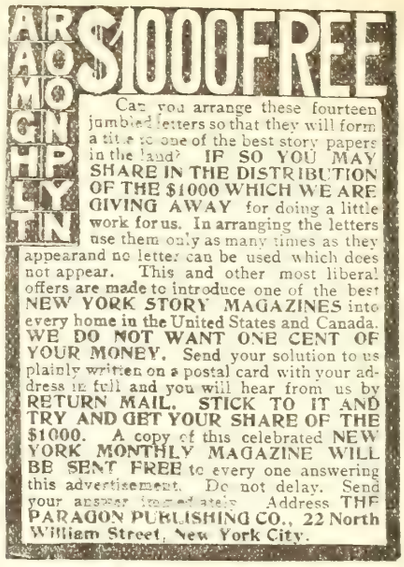
Shreveport, La., May 2, 1900.



$1000 FREE
Can you arrange these fourteen jumbled letters so that they will form a title to one of the best story papers in the land? IF SO YOU MAY SHARE IN THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE $1000 WHICH WE ARE GIVING AWAY for doing a little work for us. In arranging the letters use them only as many times as they appear and no letter can be used which does not appear. This and other most liberal offers are made to introduce one of the best NEW YORK STORY MAGAZINES into every home in the United States and Canada. WE DO NOT WANT ONE CENT OF YOUR MONEY. Send your solution to us plainly written on a postal card with your address in full and you will hear from us by RETURN MAIL. STICK TO IT AND TRY AND GET YOUR SHARE OF THE $1000. A copy of this celebrated NEW YORK MONTHLY MAGAZINE WILL BE SENT FREE to every one answering this advertisement. Do not delay. Send your answer immediately. Address THE PARAGON PUBLISHING CO., 22 North William Street, New York City.

... SOME VERY CHEAP BOOKS ...

REVIVALS: HOW TO CONDUCT THEM.

By Geo. F. Hall. Mr. Hall is himself a successful evangelist and revivalist, thoroughly competent to write instructively on this subject.

Price, Ten Cents.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL HELPER.

By J. H. Hardin. A book of helps, hints and suggestions to all Sunday school workers, and especially to energetic superintendents.

Price, Fifteen Cents.

KOINONIA.

A treatise on the weekly contribution. There are few churches that do not need instruction on this subject. This booklet of 79 pages was formerly sold for 40 cents, but has been reduced.

Price, Fifteen Cents.

DICTIONARY OF SCRIPTURAL NAMES.

A pronouncing dictionary of all proper names found in the Bible. Also contains tables of weights, measures, values, etc. A valuable help for Sunday school workers or Endeavorers.

Price, Fifteen Cents.

SYMPOSIUM ON THE HOLY SPIRIT.

By Alexander Campbell, A. B. Jones, Thomas Munnell, G. W. Longan and J. Z. Tyler. A valuable book on this subject. Former price 75 cts.

Price, Thirty Cents.

THE POCKET MANUAL.

A handy little reference book for writers, travelers, business men, etc. Contains statistics, tables, etc., of much value. Former price, 50 cents.

Price, Fifteen Cents.

These are just a few of the many book bargains offered in "Special Catalogue No. 22." If you havn't received a copy yet, drop us a postal card and we will gladly send you one—FREE.

N. B.—A One-Dollar Bill will secure all Six of the above Books.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Correspondence.

B. B. Tyler's Letter.

The Ecumenical Missionary Conference was all and more than it promised to be. The attendance was large and the character of the addresses, as a whole, was high. The details of the great meeting you have already seen. I will not, therefore, speak of them. Let us look at some of the lessons of the conference.

1. It is evident that the church is beginning to understand her duty, her privilege, her honor in the work of evangelizing the nations. The whole body is beginning to be aroused to the prosecution of this work as at no previous period in her history. To make disciples of all the nations is at once the duty, the privilege and the glory of the Church of Christ.

2. The facts collected and exhibited by the speakers will greatly encourage the church. The ignorance of many Christians as to what has been done on the mission fields and by the missionary forces of the world is great. The addresses generally were filled with information. This information spread abroad among the people will dissipate much of the ignoranre concerning this work which exists. "Nothing succeeds like success." When the church awakens to the fact that the Lord is with his people and is crowning their efforts with marvelous success, a mighty impetus will be given to the work of preaching "the gospel to the whole creation."

3. As a result of the full, free, frank discussion of methods there will come greater efficiency in the work with non-Christian nations. This must of necessity be one and that a most important result of the Ecumenical Missionary Conference.

4. It seems to me that the church is at the beginning of such a wave of intelligent missionary enthusiasm, partly as a result of this conference, as has never been seen since Pentecost.

5. The church is slowly but surely coming to recognize in a practical way the Lordship of the Christ. Jesus said: "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" The last command of the Master, and in some respects the most important, was the command to "preach the gospel" EVERYWHERE. By engaging in this work the Lordship of the Son of Man is recognized, practically recognized, as in no other way.

6. An important step in the direction of the solution of the problem of Christian union was taken. The fact that so large a number of the followers of the Christ were brought face to face in an earnest and protracted discussion of questions relating to the Christianization of the world must, in itself, have a tendency to bring Christians into a more intimate fellowship. Such a meeting promotes acquaintance. This acquaintance promotes respect and this increased respect leads to confidence and affection. In these ways unity and union are promoted. But the discussion of "comity" was most important. There can be no "comity" in this work without a recognition of the fact that others are loyal to the Christ and preach his gospel. It is possible that others may not understand the nature and official dignity of our Lord so fully as we understand these things, that others do not so fully nor so accurately comprehend the gospel as we ourselves comprehend it; but others hold to the Christ and preach the gospel. This is a most important point. But this is involved in all that was said in favor of "comity" in the work of of evangelizing the heathens.

But the word "comity" is not the word to be used in this connection. It is not strong enough. Its use, however, marks a step in the right direction. The exercise of "comity" on the foreign mission field is a step in the direction of Christian unity and union. It is for this that our Lord prayed and it is for this that his disciples should labor and pray. The tide in favor of union among believers for the evangelization of the world is advancing. I recently attended a prayer-meeting in a Regular Baptist Church. The pastor gave his people an interesting and helpful account of the Ecumenical Missionary Conference. When he referred to what was said in this conference on the subject of "comity" he said: "This word is not strong enough. The desire for 'comity' does not go far enough. We need more than 'comity' and must have it." He then arraigned the church on a charge of the sin of sectarianism as I have seldom heard the church arraigned. The words "denominationalism" and "sectarianism" were used interchangeably. The present divided condition of the church is not merely unfortunate, a thing to be deplored; it is a sinful condition, and is to be repented of as every other sin is to be repented of and abandoned.

And this particular congregation of Baptist Christians has reached the point of granting letters to persons to unite with a church of Congregationalists. This is done I know, for I was present when three such letters were granted by a unanimous vote of the congregation on a recommendation of the board of deacons.

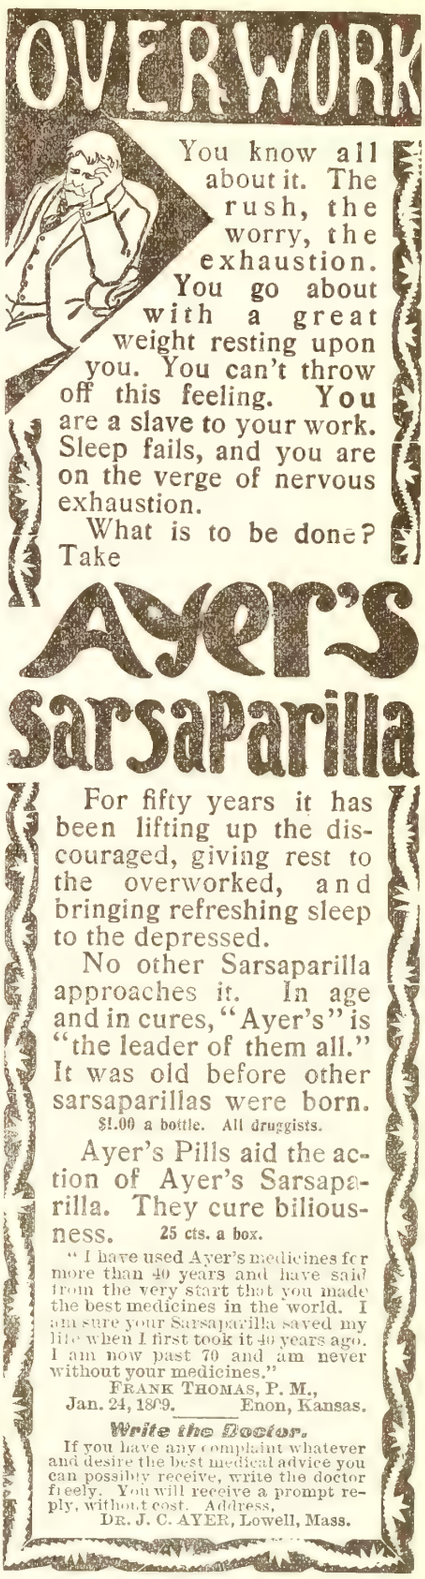
The Sunday-school Times of April 14 has an article on "What is the Sunday school Doing for Missions?" in which a tabulated statement is made of the receipts of thirteen missionary societies. From this it appears that the Sunday schools of the Disciples of Christ give a larger per cent. of the amount contributed than the Sunday-schools of any other people. This statement is concerning Foreign Missions alone. The statistics of the Methodist Episcopal Church (North) include Home Missions. The per cent. of the Methodists is a little larger than that of the Disciples; but this is the only exception. Ours is 26.2, that of the Methodists 32.3. The per cent. of the amount for Foreign Missions received by the American Board from Sunday-schools is 1.8, the American Baptist Missionary Union 1.7, the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions 4.8. The average amount contributed by each pupil in our Sunday-schools is exceeded only by the contributions of the Moravians, the Reformed Church in America, the Protestant Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church (North).

There is not space in this letter to give in full the statistical table in the article referred to, but the figures are significant and suggestive. It appears that the Disciples of Christ are training their children to give to missions as but few other people are training their children in this great work. And what does this mean? It means that when those who are now children become men and women they will give to missions more freely and largely then their fathers give. It also means that those who are now neglected—the children of Congregationalists, Presbyterians, etc.—in this feature of the Christian life, will not give as generously as their fathers now contribute to the support of missions. The future for us is bright. We are working for coming generations. Thirty years from to-day the Disciples will be in the lead in conquering the world for the Christ. This result is inevitable from the training their children are receiving.

From a report presented to a meeting of the Ecumenical Conference it also appears that the Disciples have the second best handbooks on missions, if not the very best.

This letter is written in New Haven, Conn. I stopped here to visit the Toof family, and to baptize Elizabeth, the little daughter of the late J. T. Toof. Four years ago last January Bro. Toof in a moment by an accident was called from earth to heaven. Elizabeth was then about five years old. She now lacks a few days of being nine. Her mother and grandparents have so carefully trained the child in the Bible that she has for some time desired to publicly confess Christ and obey him in baptism, and naturally the family desired the baptism to be administered by an old friend of the father. The service was conducted in the Calvary Baptist Church. At the same time Mrs. Nettleton, who could not conform to the usages of the Baptists, confessed the Lord Jesus and was baptized. These are believed to be the first baptisms ever administered by a Disciple of Christ in this latter-day Athens.

B. B. T.



OVERWORK
You know all about it. The rush, the worry, the exhaustion. You go about with a great weight resting upon you. You can't throw off this feeling. You are a slave to your work. Sleep fails, and you are on the verge of nervous exhaustion.
What is to be done? Take
Ayer's Sarsaparilla
For fifty years it has been lifting up the discouraged, giving rest to the overworked, and bringing refreshing sleep to the depressed.
No other Sarsaparilla approaches it. In age and in cures, "Ayer's" is "the leader of them all." It was old before other sarsaparillas were born.
$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.
Ayer's Pills aid the action of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. They cure biliousness. 25 cts. a box.
"I have used Ayer's medicines for more than 40 years and have said from the very start that you made the best medicines in the world. I am sure your Sarsaparilla saved my life when I first took it 40 years ago. I am now past 70 and am never without your medicines."
FRANK THOMAS, P. M.,
Jan. 24, 1899. Enon, Kansas.
Write the Doctor.
If you have any complaint whatever and desire the best medical advice you can possibly receive, write the doctor freely. You will receive a prompt reply, without cost. Address,
DR. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.

Rest and Health to Mother and Child.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over FIFTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, with PERFECT SUCCESS. It SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHŒA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" and take no other kind. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Chicago Letter.

To one who spent ten years as far south as St. Louis, spring seems just a little belated. The air here is chill with the breath of winter, though the sun shines and the trees are putting forth their leaves. The ice cream manufacturers are complaining of the cold. One concern that has been selling from one to two hundred gallons a day all winter feels that it has a grievance against the weather clerk. Think of such an output of ice cream in a Chicago winter! The icy blasts without and the ice cream within almost transform the epicure into an ice sandwich.

***

In a crisp article in The Advance on "Hindrances to Success in the Pulpit," Dr. D. J. Burrell mentions the pulpit itself; that is, the stand, the manuscript, indolence, the dictionary, dullness, an air of uncertainty, sensationalism. Under the last sub topic he says: "It is folly to undertake to recapture a lost congregation by putting in a hurdy-gurdy. The people do not go to church to hear music and see pictures, but to hear the gospel of Christ. The pastor who turns his church service into an entertainment is running a stern chase with other entertainers who can always furnish a better show for less money. Our coign of vantage is the presentation of the gospel. We have that field to ourselves, and it is quite large enough for the best of us."

***

The Methodist Conference is full of business. Yesterday (May 9) the bishops were on the rack. The conference committee discussed a plan for making the episcopacy diocesan, at least for comparatively long periods. Those who favored the plan feel that the bishops do their work poorly under the present system; those who opposed it thought they would be still more inefficient if settled in permanent districts. "Your own safety lies in moving bishops," said Dr. A. B. Leonard. "Let the bishops come and go," said Rev. Jacob Graw. "They might easily do worse things than travel about. Some of them we would be glad to see never come back till we had all the rest." There is at least a suggestion of politics in the candidacy of some men for the office of bishop. As we write, the report of the committee on the time limit of the pastors is expected. It is said that the majority report will favor the removal of the time limit the second will either favor a reduction to three years, or oppose any change whatever.

The question of consolidation or unification of several of their societies is up, and the arguments pro and con remind one of our own discussion at Indianapolis. The committee having the matter under advisement has two lawyers as members, in view of the legal difficulties anticipated, because of property interests. The indications are that the majority of the committee will favor unification, and that no snags of legislation or judicial decision will be permitted to obstruct the progress toward unification and greater efficiency.

It was proposed to reduce the number of presiding elders. Judge O. H. Horton said: "There are 505 in the church at $2,000 a year, which costs $1,000,000,. I think there is a useless expenditure of at least part of this amount." There was a lengthy discussion, but nothing came of it. The anniversary of their Church Extension Society was a jubilant session. Ex-Governor Robert E. Pattison, of Pennsylvania, presided. Bishop C. C. McCabe reported that since 1868 the society has built 11,000 churches, housing 3,000,000 Methodists, and accumulated a fund of $1,600,000.

The Christian Advocate is issuing a daily during the conference. The superior fruitfulness of the West as a field for extension is shown by the figures reported: Sunday-schools, as 832 to 164; property values, as 1,520 to 321, and collections, as 1,709 to 86.

Chicago extends a hand of sympathy to St. Louis in her great street railway strike. The strike of the trades and labor unions is still on here, and while it does not cause the inconvenience daily and hourly of a street railway strike, it does cause suffering and loss. A call has been sent out to all the trade unionists to attend a convention next Sunday afternoon (May 13) to consider the strike situation and some method of settlement. The editorial in this week's Christian Endeavor World, "With Prosperity, Why Strikes?" is a sensible statement; marked copies ought to be sent to both parties in controversy. "We believe," writes the editor, "that one prevalent cause of strikes is the want of consideration by employers that do not understand their workingmen as well as they do their horses, and by superintendents that want to figure as little czars . . . Employers that show a brotherly spirit seldom have strikes. What some can do, all can do, with the same effort to establish kindly relations, provided always there is no outside interference."

***

Mrs. E. W. Darst writes that her husband is improving in health, and that they will probably be able to return to Chicago this summer. The second quarterly rally of the Chicago Christian Missionary Society will be held at Kimball Hall, May 13, at 3 P. M. J. W. Allen, of the West Side, and W. B. Taylor, of the North Side, will deliver the addresses. The music will be led by a chorus of 100 voices. Geo. A. Campbell retires from the editorship of the Christian Century and Chas. A. Young takes the tripod. The University of Chicago is out with its announcements for the Summer Quarter. The Disciples' Divinity House offers two courses under Dr. Willett: "Practical Problems Among the Disciples of Christ" and "The Place of the Disciples of Christ Among the Relious Forces of To-day;" two also under Mr. Van Kirk: "First Principles" and "The Historical Theology of the Disciples of Christ." Address The University of Chicago, Chicago, Illinois 4957 Prairie Avenue.

FRANK G. TYRRELL.

Colorado Springs Letter.

I am very much in sympathy with the old lady who said: "We used to have fairly respectable weather until the weather bureau got to meddling with it; since then it has been horrible!" I have been here five weeks and during four of the five we have had about the ugliest weather I ever saw. During three Sundays it has rained and snowed all day and all night. I am interested to know how these good Colorado people, who boast of 365 days of sunshine in the year, are going to arrange their calendar so as to get them into this year. Almost every morning the predictions from the weather bureau in Washington say: "For Colorado, 'fair and warmer.'" That prediction reminds me of a squirrel hunt I once had over in Illinois. I borrowed an old squirrel dog of a friend and made for the woods. I had not gone far till the dog walked up to a tree and began to bark with great enthusiasm. I looked carefully over the tree but found no squirrel. That thing was repeated at least half a dozen times during the morning. When I took the dog home and reported his conduct to the owner he said: "I will explain that to you. The dog is quite old he has been hunting in these woods for many years. He has found squirrels in those trees; he is now 'treeing' largely from memory." So with the weather bureau. I think possibly there was a time when they could report for Colorado "fair and warmer;" and their work is now done largely from memory.

Regardless of the weather our work has begun beautifully. The attendance has been good, and the interest all that one could ask. Bro. and Sister Tyler, whose praise is well-nigh universal here, did a most excellent work in this church and left every department in excellent condition for the new pastor.

I find one of the best planned church houses in the brotherhood, and an enthusiastic body of young people who are already taking hold of the work with me. We have received six additions since I came, and I have the promise of several more to come soon. We shall take the collection for Home Missions next Sunday.

F. N. CALVIN.

May 1, 1900.

California Tourists.

Over thirty thousand have already visited California this season. But the large majority have only visited this drouth district of Southern California and have not seen the rich Sacramento Valley of the central part of the state. Only last week a gentleman who was a member of a great company of tourists run up here from the South. He was astonished to see the richness of the country and the splendid crops and to learn that the earliest fruits of the season are shipped from this Sacramento Valley, and most of all that the drouth never ruins the crops here. He said had his party visited this valley they would have carried back a better impression of the state. I write this for the benefit of persons who intend visiting California this summer.

The paragraph below is clipped from an article published in an Eastern paper by a man who had returned from a trip over the state:

"I write of the Sacramento Valley rather than of Northern California. I do this out of regard for the prejudice of Eastern residents who, without experience on the Pacific Coast, must associate the name with harsh, raw, cold climate. The fact is that the oranges, lemons and limes of the Sacramento Valley ripen two months earlier than do those 400 miles farther south in the luxurious climate from Pasadena to Riverside. The rich section of Sacramento Valley would take in the whole state of Massachusetts with ease and leave a fringe sufficient to make one or two Rhode Islands. It is a dual valley. It is as level as a prairie, as rich as the Valley of Nile, as healthful as Colorado, as tonic as San Francisco and as enterprising as Illinois."

J. J. MORGAN.

Woodland, Cal.

At a Sewing Society.

LADY GETS FUNNY ON A HARMLESS? DRINK.

"Our Sewing Society meets every week to sew and we always have lunch. Just as sure as I take a cup of coffee I act so silly and say such absurd things it seems as though I were intoxicated. I feel so ashamed of myself, but cannot help it. My heart will go like a triphammer and I am invariably kept awake half of that night. So I thought I would take my Postum Food Coffee the next time and you should have heard the names they called me, 'old maid,' 'crank,' etc. But before the lunch was through, Postum had more than one convert and those who tried it were delighted. They had heard of it, but had no idea it was so good.

"I have given a great deal of Postum away to friends, just to convince them how good it is, and they invariably adopt it. There are so many people who cannot drink coffee without it distressing them, and Postum Food Coffee seems to be exactly the thing. Postum and I have been friends for years. I began the use of it when it was first introduced, four or five years ago. At first I thought I could not use it, it was flat and tasteless, but when I found out that it simply required long boiling, the old trouble disappeared and we always have an elegant cup of coffee when we make Postum right." Send postal card to Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., for the name and address. Put a small piece of butter the size of two peas in the pot, to prevent it boiling over.

Ohio Notes.

When this goes to press we will be within less than a week of the state convention of Mansfield, so this must be our final word before that convention opens. We are sending out from the Cleveland office thousands of copies of the convention program. It has also been published in our leading papers.

Everywhere we are receiving kindly words as to the most excellent program we have prepared. Take such speakers as F. D. Power, of Washington; W. J. Lhamon, of Allegheny; Geo. A. Miller, of Covington, Ky; Chas. Loos, of Lexington, Ky.; J. N. Kersey, of Bethany, W. Va., and G. W. Muckley of Kansas City, Mo., and they cannot help but lend power and enthusiasm to the convention.

Our corps of home speakers forms a no less able collection: M. L. Bates, of Newark; W. A. Harp, of Springfield; Chas. Fillmore, of Carthage; Benj. L. Smith, of Cincinnati; F. A. Bright, of Painesville, Ind.; W. W. Sniff, of Cleveland; C. A. Freer, of Columbus; John E. Pounds, of Cleveland Pres. E. V. Zollars, of Hiram,and others.

The C. W. B. M. program begins with the reception on Monday afternoon, and extending until Tuesday afternoon, is full of interest. Such names from abroad appear in these sessions as the following: Miss Mary Graybiel, Adelaide Gail Frost and G, L. Wharton, of India; Wm. M. Forrest, of Chicago University, and Helen F. Bames,traveling; secretary of the Young Woman's Christian Association. The home representatives upon the program present no less able and well-known speakers than Mrs. A. R. Teachout, Mrs. Jessie Brown Pounds and others.

The convention begins at three o'clock Monday afternoon with a reception in the Mansfield church. The final session will be held on Thursday evening with F. D. Power, of Washington, as the speaker upon the attractive theme, "Our Place To-day.' Hundreds have written us that they intend to attend the convention.

We are working for one thousand delegates and have every hope that we shall be able to reach this number. The times are prosperous. The year's work has shown a growing enthusiasm all over the state. The program is first-class, the railroads have granted a rate of a fare and one-third and the location is in the heart of our great state. Surely, we shall have a large and enthusiastic convention.

The work of the year has been successful in a very marked degree. Allen Wilson, our state evangelist, has held three great meetings since the first of January; one at Springfield, in which more than 90 made confession of Christ, and a weak struggling church was put upon its feet and enthused for larger and more effective work. This meeting closed three months ago, but the ingathering has not scattered, they are still at work.

The second meeting was held at Toledo. More than 300 were added to the Toledo Church and the Toledo Church feel that they have received the largest help for the permanency of their work that has ever come to them by any evangelistic effort.

The third meeting has just closed at Bellefontaine with 140 additions. This church was discouraged and unable to carry on its work. They are now full of courage and enthusiasm, and will locate a pastor at once and move on to future success.

Two of these meetings, that at Bellefontaine and Springfield, were entirely self-sustaining, and Toledo nearly so.

O. L. Cook, our state evangelist, has labored at Galion since November, with the exception of one month, in which he held a meeting at Warren. In this time the struggling mission at Galion has been put upon its feet. The little band of faithful workers have built and paid for an excellent tabernacle and they are practically free from debt. A man will be located with them immediately following the state convention. Brother Cook held a meeting for them as soon as the new tabernacle was completed and more than forty have been added to the membership of the church.

A. J. Sever, working at Coshocton, has aided this new work in building a house of worship, which is nearly paid for, with all lines of work prospering.

Solomon Metzler has labored at Marietta since the first of the year and has had excellent success in gathering in scattered Disciples in this community and organizing the church for work.

J. E. Pounds is our city evangelist for Cleveland, and he has been most effective in bringing encouragement and new life to the missions of our city. A new German mission has been started upon the West Side, and at the end of three months 360 were enrolled in the Sunday-school. All lines of work are prospering.

We have twenty-seven missions within the borders of Ohio, and shall be able to report at the state convention a year of aggressive and enthusiastic work, that has accomplished eminently large results.

We are at this writing within two days of the close of our financial year. We cannot tell exactly what shall be the entire amount that has been raised for the year, but we are confident that when all reports are in and our work tabulated, we shall have considerably more than was raised last year. Last year a large gift of $5,000 came from Lathrop Cooley just at the close of the year. We have no such large gift this year, but our general offerings have very materially increased.

Do not forget the convention at Mansfield begins Monday, May 21st, continuing until Thursday evening, May 24th. Come to the convention. Work up a large delegation from your church. We shall have an enthusiastic and soul-stirring time. When you purchase your ticket for Mansfield be sure and ask for a certificate. We must have 100 of those certificates in order to get the one-third rate. If you neglect to get this and hand it in at the convention, it cuts that many off from the total number we have. We are sure of far more than 100 this year if all get their certificates and present them at the convention. If we have a large delegation this year, possibly we may secure a one-half rate for next year. We are working towards this, and surely ought to have it. We will meet you at Mansfield May 21st to 24th.

S. H. BARTLETT, Cor. Sec.

240 Bell Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

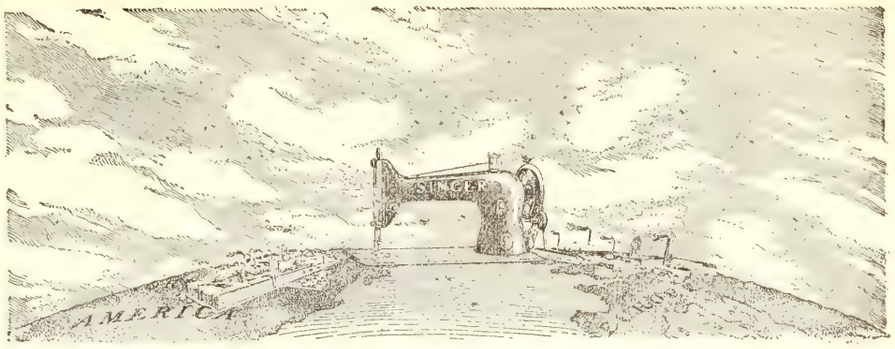
Parsons, Kan.

We want you to know of the very large and enthusiastic services at this place last Lord's day. It was the climax to a missionary rally that had been running through the previous week. The following ministers were in attendance and assisted in the services: D. H. Johnston, C. E. Cole and W. E. Harlow, all of whom reside here; Col. R. Finley Smiley, the noted lecturer, and Bro. Jaggard, of Howard. The pastor spoke at the morning hour, and Col. Smiley in the evening. It was a beautiful day and all seemed to delight in making it a day of worship.

While I am sending this report I take pleasure in announcing also that Bro. W. E. Harlow, who has been engaged in business here since last September, has sold out to his partner and will again devote all of his time to evangelistic work. There is not a more successful evangelist in the entire brotherhood, and the church that calls him for a meeting will make no mistake.

W. W. BURKS.



Half-a-Century's Product.

During the last half-century nearly Seventeen Million Singer Sewing-Machines have been made and sold. This tremendous product would make one gigantic machine head that would reach from the Singer factory at Elizabeth, N. J., to the factory at Kilbowie, Scotland. Its base would be about three thousand miles long and twelve hundred miles wide. The top of its needle-bar would be fifteen hundred miles above the earth.

ONE MILLION SINGER SEWING-MACHINES WERE SOLD DURING THE YEAR 1899.

The reason Singer machines are so much preferred is because of their uniformly easy operation, great capacity and durability. A Singer machine outwears all others because of its superior construction from the best materials; every part can be exactly duplicated in any City in the World.

SOLD ON INSTALMENTS. OLD MACHINES EXCHANGED.

The Singer Manufacturing Company.

SALESROOMS IN EVERY CITY IN THE WORLD.

ESTEY PIANOS AND ORGANS

Excel in Superior Tone, Perfect Construction and Great Durability

THE ESTEY CO., 916 OLIVE ST., ST. LOUIS, MO.

Salt Lake Letter.

It is no uncommon thing to hear explosions in a mining camp. They may startle nervous persons in the immediate vicinity every day. Occasionally, one startles and horrifies the whole civilized world. And such was that one yesterday in the Pleasant Valley Coal Mines, about one hundred miles south of Salt Lake City, which resulted in the death of 250 men and boys. The awful roar of the explosion died out in a minute, but the groans of widows and orphans will be heard for years to come; the clouds of smoke and dust settled down in a short time, but the dark pall of sorrow and penury will hang over many homes till they cease to be such; the flying debris soon fell to the ground, but the tears of widows and orphans will still be falling after many, many days; the shock of the explosion was felt only for a moment, but the shock of the awful calamity will be felt by hundreds of hearts after the lapse of many long, sad years.

The twelfth annual convention of the Utah C. E. Union was held in this city on the 27-29th of April. It was the best in the history of the organization. About 100 delegates from different parts of the state outside Salt Lake City were in attendance. These represented the C. E, Epworth League and B. Y. P. U. Societies. It was a union convention of all these societies, but the C. E. was dominant. It was known as the C. E. convention, the badges were C. E. badges and the talks were C. E. talks. There seemed to be a hearty willingness on the part of the others that it should be so, and we saw many evidences of the fact that if the young people had been left to choose for themselves there never would have been any strictly denominational organizations among them. It is a case of young people having been turned from their first love and forced into distasteful unions by the old people. Their tractableness speaks well for the hearts of the young people, but it is to be hoped that the day will come when the leaders among God's people will be too Christlike in their breadth to force the sympathies and activities of the young people within the Chinese walls of denominationalism.

The speaker from abroad was Dr. David N. Beach, of the First Congregational Church, Denver, Colorado. Dr. Beach is a most earnest and enthusiastic Endeavorer, and captured the interest and the hearts of all. He has a big, broad, warm heart and an unctious, sympathetic manner that make him an interesting and attractive speaker. He was evidently here to help the young people, and devoted himself to that rather than to an effort to air his learning and eloquence, of both of which he is possessed in more than an average measure. Dr. Beach was enthusiastic over the outlook for Utah as he saw it revealed in our splendid convention. It was a great surprise to him to see the great throngs of young people that crowded all the sessions and overflowed the two large churches in which the closing exercises were held on Sunday night.

It will be gratifying to "our people" to know that the Central Christian Church of this city was right at the front in every way in the convention. In entertainment, in work in the diningroom and on the program our young people were right up at the front. If not the very best certainly one of the best papers read before the convention was read by the president of our society, Miss Nannie Clayton. The report of our society showed that we have about forty of the liveliest Endeavorers in the city. The retiring president of the State Union said that if he wanted anything done he felt safe in committing it to the hands of the representatives of the C. E. Society of the Central Christian Church.

Our work here will doubtless receive a great impetus from the convention. The prominence given to both pastor and young people will serve to encourage our own people to continue the good work they are doing, as well as to open the eyes of the community to the fact that we are a factor among the religious forces of the city. The outlook for our work here has never been brighter. We see our advantage and are determined to press forward to victory in spite of the fact that the way to the heights is long and steep.

If we could only get rid of our indebtedness. Does not some good brother and sister want to help two good causes at one and the same stroke by making the Extension Board a present of $5,000 or $6,000 in the name of the church at Salt Lake City? We have the permission of both the Home Board and the Extension Board to make a special appeal for help to relieve the church of its indebtedness. This growing and promising and important work in this strategic city ought to appeal to the generosity of some of our liberal-hearted members of large means. If any feel moved to respond to this informal appeal, a letter addressed to either myself or T. M. Breeze, of Salt Lake City, will open up the way.

W. H. BAGBY.

Salt Lake City, Utah.

Los Angeles Letter.

Lord's day, April 8, was a great day in the First Church. Seventeen persons presented themselves for membership; of these, ten had been baptized the previous Sunday. Two made a confession of their faith in the Son of God. Five came bearing letters of commendation. In my pastorate, now reaching nearly ten years with the First Church, so many were never received into our fellowship in one day. Those who were baptized came principally as the result of Decision Day in the Sunday-school. It was our first observance of this day and the results brought happiness to the hearts and homes of many families in our church. I would commend to all our churches the observance of Decision Day in their Sunday-schools.

***

I fear that many of our churches do not appreciate the value of the Sunday-school as an evangelizing agency. The great commission comprehends two things, viz., the evangelization of the world—"preaching the gospel to every creature"—and the edification of the church—"teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." As in no other part of our church work the commands of the commission are carried out in our Sunday-schools. It is through them that the largest portion of recruits are brought into the church. It is by means of the Sunday school that the church does most of its teaching. The Sunday-school, in its true place, is but the church at work converting the unsaved and edifying the saints. In doing this it commands the ability of a large number of the choicest people in the church, and they become preachers of the gospel in a limited sphere. On account of the important place and work of the Sunday-school in our churches, there ought to be a general awakening of interest in Sunday-schools all along the line.

***

The account published in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST of the recent Congress in Indianapolis sets the heart of a Kentuckian to burning for the East. It creates homesickness in the hearts of many of us Eastern preachers whom the Lord has called to his work on this great Pacific Coast. We are deprived of many advantages that come to the preachers of the central states. Time, distance and cash separate us from many of the gatherings of the brethren back East, and this proves a genuine hardship to many of us. We are so few in number and too much scattered in territory to have such gatherings on the Coast. The result is that we must suffer the deprivation. Some atonement, however, is made in the superior climatic advantages furnished by the Golden State. Surely, no other place in the world more nearly approaches perfect climatic conditions than Southern California. This morning's press dispatches record a snowfall of three inches in Chicago, and here we are bathed in the glories of a California sun. Another atonement for our enforced absences from such meetings as the Congress is found in the splendid reports of these meetings given by our religious weeklies, and most especially the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST; for the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST is a paper that we can put into the hands of our religious neighbors with a just pride, since it has few if any superiors published in this country.

***

This leads me to say that we have too long failed to appreciate the value of the religious newspaper in our church work. They ought to go into every family in our churches. They are able preachers of the gospel. They convict sinners and edify saints. They disseminate religious knowledge and foster missionary enthusiasm. They enlarge the spiritual horizon and deepen the spiritual life. They ought never to be characterized by a bitter, partisan or unchristian spirit. Everything that engenders strife ought to be put out of their columns. Editors of religious papers ought to be perfect. The ordinary imperfections of human nature ought not to characterize them. I think we ought to insist that the columns of our religious papers shall not be filled with personalities or strife. Let the spirit of the Master fill the columns of our religious newspapers as it ought to fill the pulpits of our churches.

***

The church on the Pacific Coast has sustained an irreparable loss in the death of William A. Gardner, who passed from this life April 5. For the past ten years Brother Gardner has been a leading spirit in our work on this coast. He was for several years the successful pastor of the Woodlands Church. Leaving them he organized the West Side Church in San Francisco. This church flourished under his work and will long stand as a monument to his energy and consecration. He was an active supporter of our coast paper, the Pacific Christian, and was a moving spirit in the Berkeley Bible Seminary. Last year he spent in Honolulu. Some months ago he returned to Watsonville, where he yielded up his spirit to the God who gave it. He was an able exponent of the truth. He loved our plea. He was unremitting in his labors and self-sacrificing in his service to the Master's cause. He was prudent and far-seeing and commanded the confidence of the brotherhood. No one can fill his place, as he will be greatly missed from our councils. The memory of his beautiful life will long remain as a benediction to our churches on the Coast. May God comfort his sorrowing family.

A. C. SMITHER.

Los Angeles, Cal.

IF YOU HAVE Rheumatism
and drugs and doctors fail to cure you write to me, and I will send you free a trial package of a simple remedy, which cured me and thousands of others, among them cases of over 50 years' standing. This is no humbug or deception but an honest remedy that you can test without spending a cent. It recently cured a lady who had been an invalid for 52 years. Address
JOHN A. SMITH, 627 Germania Bldg., Milwaukee, Wis

VITALITY low, debilitated or exhausted, cured by Dr. Kline's Invigorating Tonic. FREE $1. Trial Bottle containing 2 weeks' treatment. Dr. Kline's Institute, 931 Arch Street, Philadelphia. Founded 1871.

Springfield, Mo.

The Queen City of the Ozarks has been the center of religious interest during the past winter that is seldom felt or witnessed in a city of this size. All the energies involved and the efforts put forth would make an interesting chapter.

The Ministerial Alliance of the city is a body of remarkable unity. It represents about all the religious organizations usually found in a city like ours. The ministers are godly, consecrated pastors, with the love of humanity burning constantly in their hearts. They love each other as brethren and work together for one common end. About one year ago now it was agreed that all the churches, so far as practicable, should begin meetings at the close of October or the opening of November following.

No claptrap methods were to be employed, nor was any one known to resort to such methods, but rather an earnest, prayerful, united effort to deepen piety, quicken zeal, broaden faith, and to purify the church rather than make converts.

The meetings were held, as agreed, with glorious results, closing some two weeks before Christmas, or earlier, as seemed best. The expectations of the pastors were more than realized. Our own church held its own meeting. Some thirty were added to the saved, and new life seemed to enter into every department. From the middle of November to this day only two Lord's days have passed without additions, and the end is not yet.

Immediately following Christmas Major J. H. Cole, of Chicago, came in response to a call of the Alliance. Meetings were begun and continued every day and night up to the present in some parts of the city, sometimes in churches, then in stores, shops, schools, courthouses—any and everywhere.

The writer has several times preached two sermons and a sermonette after 7 P. M., held a Young People's meeting, baptized, talked to two or three privately, and then gone home to try to sleep. For nearly three months the meetings were continued on the South Side. The pastors worked hard and incessantly. Almost every one of them was in bed sometime during the seige. One spirit seemed to possess all—the salvation of souls. This was the theme, in song and story, everywhere. On the streets, in stores and shops, in courthouse or college, the theme was the same. "Get right with God," the motto of Major Cole, was scattered on stickers throughout the city, "Springfield for Christ," "Yes, our town for Christ," "Frisco shops for Christ," "Yes, our schools for Christ," and such like catchy phrases were sung every day. A great wave of enthusiasm swept over the town. The great union revival was on every lip, and talked of in almost every circle.

Many, very many expressed a desire to live better lives, to accept Christ. The meetings extended into many corners and circles where religious influence is seldom felt. A goodly number of strong business men have gone into the churches. Many, of course, have gone back to the old haunts of vice. It is probably a safe estimation to say that about twenty-five or thirty per cent. will go into some church. Here is a great weakness, as we conceive, in suct meetings and in such methods. It is a very easy thing to express an interest by the uplifted hand or to promise to take Jesus as a personal Savior, and go no further. It is quite another thing to obey the gospel and take your place in the Church of Christ. There should be as many additions as conversions. This seems to be apostolic. "The Lord added to the church [not churches] daily such as were being saved."

During the meetings a wealthy merchant of Chicago, Hon. John V. Farwell, came in response to a telegram from Mayor Cole, and assisted for some days in the work. This was an effort to reach the business men. The Christian business men here were also enlisted. It was a great success, and to the writer opened up a new chapter in city evangelization. Why not our Christian business men go out with the evangelist or come at his call to bring the business men to Christ? They are able and should do it. Such a movement would work wonders. Here is a field that none can enter so effectively as the business man who is a consistent Christian. Shall we enter?

During the last three weeks we have had Bro. H. A. Northcutt with us in South Street Church. It was a glorious meeting, with highly gratifying results. Sixty-five were added to the church; fifty-five by baptism. Six families were among the number. It was a great and glorious time. Our expectations were more than realized. Had we continued, every indication pointed to even greater results than three years ago. But circumstances made it impossible to continue, Bro. Northcutt feeling urged to return. He left us, however, rejoicing in a rich harvest of souls.

The simple, tender, loving message brought by the evangelist sweetened all our lives and made us to love the dear Lord with a new affection. The church is in fine condition in every way. One of its oldest officers and chairman of its board of elders encourages us with the statement that the church was never so prosperous in her history. Our list of subsbribers to the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST has been more than doubled, now numbering some 84 names. Sister J. R. Haldeman has charge of this matter and is a tireless worker. It is in my heart to say that the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST represents to us the cream in religious journalism. May the Lord greatly bless it and send it foward in the new era of prosperity upon which it has entered. To him be all praise and glory evermore.

Last Lord's day we had one confession. In the afternoon we went six miles into the country and assisted Bros. Edward and Wade Moore in organizing a new congregation. A nice new church house is nearing completion, all paid for. A Bible-school of seventy, only three weeks old, is one of the hopeful signs. One confession at this service. This is a prosperous community of farmers and stockmen. They are happy and hopeful.

Many such fields are to be entered in Southwest Missouri. These are a progressive people. We shall be heard from some day.

D. W. MOORE.

I am glad to see the Campbell and Purcell debate pushed to the front. It indeed occupies a unique place in literature. I have examined numerous works on the Roman Catholic religion. Not one of them is to be compared to this book in the field that it covers. I delivered a series of twenty-six lectures on Romanism in Seattle, Washington, in 1894, and I found this debate the most valuable help in my library. Its statements were made in the presence of a most competent critic and received his most searching review, and is rendered doubly valuable on this account. R. E. DUNLAP.

Florence, Montana.

FITS Permanently Cured. No fits or nervousness after first day's use of Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. Send for FREE $2.00 trial bottle and treatise. DR. R. H. KLINE, Ltd., 931 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa

Learn to Talk Well.....

The man has the advantage in life who learns to talk well, to meet people, to make a speech, write a paper, or deliver a lecture. The DRAKE UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF ORATORY AND ENGLISH, Des Moines, Iowa, is the place to study Elocution, Literature, or Physical Culture.

ED AMHERST OTT, Lecturer, Author, Dean.

HARVARD SUMMER SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

July 5-21, 1900.

Courses in New Testament, Homiletics and History of Religions of India, by Professors in Harvard University and by Professors E. P. BURTON, F. C. PORTER, M. BLOOMFIELD, E. W. HOPKINS, Deans G. HODGES, C. H. LEONARD, Pres. C. C. HALL, Dr. G. A. GORDON and Bishop J. H. VINCENT.

Circulars on application to R. S. MORISON, Secretary Harvard Divinity School, CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

POSITIONS GUARANTEED under reasonable conditions; car fare paid; board, $10-$11; catalog free; no vacation.

DRAUGHON'S PRACTICAL BUS. Colleges.

St. Louis; Nashville, Tenn.; Savannah, Ga.; Montgomery, Ala.; Galveston, Tex.; Fort Worth, Tex.; Little Rock, Ark.; Shreveport, La. Indorsed by merchants and bankers. Best patronized in South. Bookkeeping, Shorthand, etc., taught by mail. Begin any time. Address (at either place) Draughon's College.

DIVINITY SCHOOL

—OF—

HARVARD UNIVERSITY

CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

AN UNDENOMINATIONAL SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.

ANNOUNCEMENT FOR 1900-01, NOW READY

"LIFE OF MOODY." Cloth, 358 Pages. 25 Cents, postpaid, of C. F. HOWARD, Windfall, Ind.
"DAILY BREAD." Cloth, 192 Pages 25 Cents, postpaid, of C. F. HOWARD, Windfall, Ind.
VEST-POCKET DICTIONARY, etc. Morocco, Gold Edges, Alphabetic, 194 Pages. 25 Cents, postpaid, of C. F. HOWARD, Windfall, Ind.
(Agents' Library.)

SPENCERIAN

ARE THE BEST

Sold by STATIONERS Everywhere

Samples for trial of the leading numbers for correspondents and accountants, will be sent on receipt of return postage.

SPENCERIAN PEN CO., 349 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

...The...

Standard Dictionary.

We have for sale a number of sets of the Standard Dictionary, in two volumes, bound in full morocco, thumb index, etc. This is undoubtedly the completest and best dictionary of the English language ever published. The regular price of the set, in this binding, is Twenty-six Dollars. We offer the set, spick, span and new for Thirteen Dollars.

At this price, the purchaser pays express charges. Cash must accompany order. We have only a few sets, and when these are exhausted can supply no more at the same rate.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.

Notes and News.

I have had two years' experience in evangelistic work as gospel singer and general assistant in special meetings. I have my own books and make the congregational singing a special feature of the meeting. Would like to engage with some pastor or evangelist for summer months. Would prefer permanent arrangement with some live evangelist. Can give you a list of references. My permanent address is 915 Aubert Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

GUY B. WILLIAMSON, Singing Evangelist.

Arkansas State Convention.

The annual convention of the churches of Arkansas will be held in Little Rock, June 5-7. It is expected that this will be the most largely attended and best meeting ever held. The work in the state is growing nicely and good reports may be expected from all over the state. Secretary Browning will make glad all hearts. Some noted speakers will be present. Look for program later. A grand time is in store for all who attend. The church in Little Rock extends a cordial invitation and will be pleased if its ability to entertain shall be severely strained. The church wants the opportunity of entertaining a large number of delegates. Begin now to make ready to come. Write to J. N. Jessup for entertainment. There will be a cheap railroad fare. J. N. JESSUP.

Little Rock.

Two New Yorkers.

ONE GIVES THE OTHER A HANDY LIFT.

Mr. E. C. Hazard, one of the oldest and best-known wholesale grocers in New York, has for many years given his attention to the preparation of fine food delicacies. He has a farm and experiment station down on Staten Island, where the famous Shrewsbury Ketchup, Burnt Onion Sauce, Shrewsbury Mushrooms and other delicacies are prepared in a most skillful manner.

One evening last autumn while on his way home, Mr. H. sat with one of the officials of the N. J. C. Railroad, who seemed to be living with one foot in the grave—stomach so badly disordered that nothing would digest. It seemed only a question of a few weeks, at most, when death would come.

"Mr. Hazard insisted upon taking the gentleman to his house and giving him a package of Grape-Nuts breakfast food which is manufactured by the Postum Cereal Co., at the pure food factories at Battle Creek, Mich., a food which Mr. Hazard had been using at his own table for a long time, greatly to his benefit.

"He told the gentleman that he could get well in a few weeks by the use of perfectly prepared food of this sort, and would never forget the day when he first tried Grape-Nuts. The prediction came true; the official is not only alive to-day, but is in better health than he has experienced for many years, all of which he attributes to the use of Grape-Nuts and from the advice of Mr. Hazard."

There are two reasons for this; in the first place, Grape-Nuts are made from certain selected portions of wheat and barley that contain phosphate of potash and albumen which nature uses in the human system to make up the gray matter in the brain and nerve centers throughout the body.

The nervous system directly controls the digestive machinery and the brain controls the working and money-making power. Mr. Hazard knows this, from his knowledge of foods and from his own experience with Grape-Nuts. Therefore when he took the railway official in charge, he knew exactly what he was doing, and the result proved the correctness of his knowledge.

Missouri Bible-School Notes.

During the call of your servant to the bedside of my father, Brother J. A. McKenzie saw that no disappointment occurred with my appointments by meeting them for me, and I thank him publicly for it. I am compelled to keep within call, as it is getting serious with one whom I love very much.

The programs are before you and I am sure you have pronounced them good, it being common talk that it is one of the best we have ever had, and now let every one get ready for the convention.

Have you sent in your name? Well, even if you are not certain, send it in, and then if you can not possibly go, write C. C. Hill to that effect, but tell him that you expect to go, and he will do much better by you than he possibly can if you go in unexpectedly. See? Well, now, do so.

Yes, we are getting out the neatest thing in the shape of a souvenir ever issued for one of our conventions and the Register Publishing Company are going to show you what can be done when one has a mind that way.

J. B. Corwine, our president of the board, has spent the week in St. Louis, going over the files from the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST from 1875 so that we may include in our souvenir an outline of the work from its incipiency, and when the program comes to hand you will hold it for future reference.

The Christian Publishing Company's office editor, W. W. Hopkins, always a friend to our work, gave us every facility in the search for facts connected with our past history, and it was no small favor either.

This reminds me to ask the friends to look over their files and see if they can not send me copies of the minutes of our conventions beyond 1887, as mine were destroyed during a fire. I will cheerfully bear any expense in order to have them, and if you can, please help me in the case.

The brethren are beginning to hold Brother T. A. Hedges in proper light and are now writing him for dates. He goes to Wellsville, Belleflower, Middletown, Marceline and Elsberry during May, and if you are thinking of having his help any time soon you had better write him immediately.

John Giddens reports the house at Metz as done and the brethren as happy in their work, having had a struggle to accomplish what they have in the service of Christ. Our evangelist has been most faithful and we are trying to send him the salary for April immediately, but you must do it, and this is to urge that your school does. May 31 closes these books and the delinquents go before the convention and you must not charge your secretary nor his assistant with it; only yourselves are to blame in the matter.

Mitchell Park, St. Joe, is doing fine work, and at our rally we had a great day. They have bought a new lot, and then will come the new house. J. A. McKenzie is held in the highest esteem; while as superintendent L. A. Kelso is to the front. On Sunday afternoon we were with the Northside Mission where Will E. Woodson is doing a great work of God and the mission flourishes. Was glad to see the evidences of their growth and development in this high calling. Brother McKenzie was ordained that night at his request and the service did us all good. The missions of St. Joseph are worthy of the heartiest support of the congregations, and under Goode and Chilton will receive it, too.

Ridgely is always a friend to the work, and brethren Morgan and Creel mean to have it so this year, while DeKalb very promptly raised the apportionment and will send the same in this week.

New Santa Fe joins the army of helpers, sending in an offering to our work, while Raytown, as usual, pays in full. But what will you do about it?

H. F. DAVIS.

Commercial Building, St. Louis.

Rheumatism Can Be Cured

promptly and easily, its tortures banished, comfort and rest brought to the aching limbs and frame by cleansing the impurities from the blood with

Dr. Peter's Blood Vitalizer

—The 100 year old remedy

a Swiss-German preparation which was discovered by a wise old physician, but advertised only within recent years.

It restores purity and life to the blood, strengthens the entire system and builds up the general health. Seldom fails to cure all diseases caused by impoverished blood or disordered stomach.

No Drug-Store medicine; is sold only by regular Vitalizer agents.

Persons living where there are no agents for Dr. Peter's Blood Vitalizer can, by sending $2.00, obtain twelve 35-cent trial bottles direct from the proprietor. This offer can be obtained only once by the same person.

Write to DR. PETER FAHRNEY,
112-114 South Hoyne Ave., Chicago.

Individual Communion Outfits. Send for free catalogue and list of users.
SANITARY COMMUNION OUTFIT CO.,
Dept , Rochester, N. Y.

Either or Both These Books Mailed Free.

"Among the Ozarks"

The Land of Big Red Apples.

Is an attractive and interesting book, handsomely illustrated with views of South Missouri scenery, including the famous Olden fruit farm of 3,000 acres in Howell county. It pertains to fruit raising in that great fruit belt of America, the southern slope of the Ozarks, and will prove of great value, not only to fruit growers, but to every farmer and home seeker looking for a farm and a home.

"Wealth in Northern Arkansas,"

Is the title of an illustrated pamphlet giving detailed information relative to the mining region of Northern Arkansas, conceded by experts to be the richest zinc and lead mining region in the world. This district, practically undeveloped, offers investors the opportunity of a lifetime. The pamphlet will be mailed free. Address,

J. E. Lockwood, Kansas City, Mo.

SUBSCRIBERS' WANTS.

Miscellaneous wants and notices will be inserted in this department at the rate of one cent a word, each insertion, all words, large or small, to be counted, and two initials stand for one word. Please accompany notice with corresponding remittance, to save bookkeeping

180 SONGS for 10 cents. J. G. Miller, Elk Mills, Tenn.

SALESMEN WANTED.—Mell's self-selling novelties are a gold mine. Particulars free. Mell Manufacturing Co., Dep't J, Minneapolis, Minn.

"LIFE OF MOODY," cloth, 318 pages, 25 cents, postpaid, of C. F. Howard, Windfall, Ind.

"DAILY BREAD," cloth, 192 pages, 25 cents, postpaid, of C. F. Howard, Windfall, Ind.

VEST POCKET DICTIONARY, etc., Morocco, gold edges, alphabetic, 192 pages, 25 cents, postpaid, of C. F. Howard, Windfall, Ind.

THE ACME SMELTING AND REFINING COMPANY, of Phœnix, Ariz., is controlled by Christian business men and offers for a short time excellent opportunities for either large or small investments. Write for full information. A thorough investigation is desired by the company.

Dedication.

The Church of Christ in Lansingburg, N. Y., organized the 28th of March, 1899, succeeded in purchasing a lot on 3rd Avenue, between 20th and 21st streets. On Jan. 1, 1900, they laid the corner stone, and on March 18 the house was opened for the worship of God. The day was fine, a large congregation was present. Pres. E. V. Zollars, of Hiram, Ohio, preached the dedicatory sermon, and raised by cash and pledges the amount of $1,450 toward the indebtedness. The brethren are greatly encouraged and the prospects so far for the cause of Christ in Lansingburg are very encouraging indeed. We have had about 14 additions by baptism and letter. Our audiences are large, and especially in the evening, when up to the present the house has been crowded. Our Sunday-school has increased in size very rapidly. The prospects for a large Sunday-school are good. There are many more to come, and we most sincerely hope to have many good things to report in the near future. The pastor, R. W. Stevenson, entered upon his work the 20th of January and the work has continued to improve. The gospe is gladly received by many. We look for quite an increase in the near future. "Paul may plant, Apollos water, but God gives the increase." Our prayers are to this end. R. W. S.

Drake University.

Des Moines is to the state of Iowa what Indianapolis is to Indiana, or Denver is to Colorado. It is the central city, the metropolis and the capital of one of our greatest states. It is a growing, thriving city, full of enterprise and progress. Some twenty years ago, under the patronage of Gov. F. M. Drake and the aid of some other excellent men, Drake University was founded here. It has the distinction of being inside of the city limits of the largest city in which the Disciples have a school in America. It has also the distinction of having grown up more rapidly and more substantially than any other school among the Churches of Christ. This is easily explained by the fact that Gov. Drake has made it the child of constant care. From first to last Gov. Drake has given more than $150,000 toward the buildings and endowment of this school. His recent gift to building an auditorium which will seat over 1,600 students was most timely and benevolent on his part. Having given some $50,000 so far as known to other benevolences, he is possibly the largest, and among the Disciples the most liberal giver.

Drake University has a campus valued at $100,000. The buildings, including the chapel, have cost $150,000, and they have near $200,000 of endowment. This gives them a working base of $450,000. One of the great surprises to the writer is the amount of work that is being done on this capital. Over 800 students have attended the collegiate departments (including commercial, oratorical and Bible College) this year. In addition to this there were 200 in the Law and Medical Colleges and over 800 more in the summer schools, or about 1,800 students in all. This whole work was done, too, in a most creditable manner and highly satisfactory to all. No wonder our people of Iowa feel a just sense of pride in Drake University, and a legion of others have united with Gov. Drake in establishing this great work of the Lord.

Chancellor Wm. Bayard Craig is an indefatigable and capable worker. His labors have been very fruitful in good results. The excellent auditorium just being completed, the new front to the main university building, the large increase in the number of students and the constant cry for more room to take care of the students who are pressing for admittance into this excellent institution, all go to show that the work of the chancellor is richly crowned with success. More buildings and a larger endowment is a great need of the University now and the Chancellor is to give his constant attention to these needs.

We highly appreciated the kindness and courtesies of Dean Haggard, of the Bible College. He states that they have over 100 students in his department of the University. The work the young men are doing is highly satisfactory and the Dean was well pleased with the outlook. Especially so as Prof. Clinton Lockhart, of Canton, Mo., was to be his assistant during the coming year.

We were also glad to meet Prof. Ed Amherst Ott, dean of the College of Oratory and English. The professor is not only at the head of the English department and teacher of elocution, but bears the distinction of being one of the finest lecturers on the American platform. It is a great benefit to a student to have such excellent advantages in this school of oratoy.

We also met I. N. McCash, H. O. Breeden and J. M. Lowe, pastors in the Des Moines churches. There are eight congregations and missions in the city with over 4,000 members. G. A. HOFFMANN.

"Sing His Praises."

A Service of Song for Children's Day.

By F. S. Shepard and L. E. Jones.

Contains the following songs, written for this work: "Brightest of the Festal Days," "Remember Thy Creator," "Children's Day," "Gladsome Days," "Do Something for Somebody, Quick!" "Little Workers," "We're Singing," "Swing Song," etc., etc. Recitations, Responsive Readings, etc.

5 CENTS PER COPY; 50 CENTS PER DOZEN.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Home Mission Reports.

We took our joint offering for missions last Sunday at the First Church, amounting to $1,400, which will be apportioned among our various boards. I go to Jefferson City to-day to help Bro. Pinkerton in a short meeting. Yours,

W. F. RICHARDSON.

Kansas City, Mo. May 8, 1900.

Yesterday was my first day with the Ocala Church. I am very favorably impressed. Yesterday morning I spoke on Home Missions. The offering was $56.10. W. H. COLEMAN.

Ocala, Fla., May 7, 1900.

In spite of the rain we had a good audience and doubled our offering of last year.

WM. DRUMMET.

Shelbyville, Ill., May 7, 1900.

Our report for the March offering for Foreign Missions is our report for the May offering for Home Missions: "Collection yesterday exceeds apportionment and is the largest ever given by this church to that society." GUY HOOVER.

Minerva, O., May 7, 1900.

Offering for Home Missions from this church will probably be $30. We are hopeful of greater things next year. S. W. BROWN.

Beloit, Kan., May 6, 1900.

Our full apportionment, $30, for Home Missions raised last Sunday. Prosperity in all departments.

A. R. HUNT.

Savannah, Ga., May 9, 1900.

For Foreign Missions.

Comparing the receipts for Foreign Missions for the month of April with the corresponding month, 1899, shows the following:

	1899	1900	Gain
Churches,	943	941	Loss 2
Sunday-schools,	21	48	27
C. E. Societies,	32	58	26
Individual Offerings,	69	228	159
Amount,	$17,066.89	$25,493.62	$3,426.73

Comparing the receipts from different sources, shows the following:

	1899	1900	Gain
Churches,	$14,537.64	$14,960.97	$ 423.33
Sunday-schools,	44.54	316.69	272.15
C. E. Societies,	184.47	413.92	229.45
Individual Offerings,	1,186.85	899.42	Loss 287.43
Miscellaneous,	578.75	720.32	141.57
Annuities,		8,000.00	8,000.00
Bequests,	534 64	182.30	Loss 352.34

Gain in regular receipts, $779.07; gain in annuities, $8,000; loss in bequests, $352.34; total gain for the month, $8,426.73. F. M. RAINS, Treas.

Box 884, Cincinnati, O.

The Iron Mountain Shortens its Time to Texas.

Train No. 51 now leaves St. Louis 2:21 P. M., daily, shortens the time by several hours from St. Louis to Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio, Houston and Galveston. Through Pullman Buffet Sleeping Cars will be operated on this train from St. Louis to San Antonio, and reclining chair car service to Dallas and Fort Worth. A delightful feature of this train is the daylight ride along the Mississippi and through the beautiful Arcadia Valley. Time of other trains remains the same excepting train No. 57 for Delta, Columbus, Cairo and Shreveport which now leaves at 8:00 A. M.

DR. J. HARVEY MOORE,

EYE, EAR, NOSE and THROAT....

648-649 CENTURY BUILDING,

HOURS: 10 to 3. SAINT LOUIS.

FACTS ABOUT PAINT

SUTCLIFFE & CO., Louisville, Ky.

Publish a book on use, selection and application of paint. It is of great value to anyone having painting to do. Our readers can procure a copy by writing this firm for Book No. 94.

BALE YOUR HAY

It will keep better, sell better and save room. Rats and mice can't eat and destroy baled hay. The best and most rapid machine for baling purposes is Steam and horse power.

The "ELI" BALING PRESS.

Made in 35 styles and sizes to suit every case. All steel, light, strong, lasting. Write for free illustrated catalogue.

COLLINS PLOW CO., 1157 Hampshire St., QUINCY, ILL.

For 25c Stamps or Silver, I will send either of these Sterling Silver articles: Pair Link Buttons, Hat Pin or Brooch, also my large illustrated catalogue of Diamonds, Watches & Jewelry. HY. LOEWENSTEIN, The Satisfactory Jeweler, 1230 S. Bv. St. Louis, Mo

Evangelistic.

OKLAHOMA.

Oklahoma City, May 7.—Four additions yesterday.—J. H. MARSHALL.

WASHINGTON.

Palouse, May 5.—Two by confession and baptism, since last report.—E. C. WIGMORE.

COLORADO.

Ft. Collins, May 7.—One confession here yesterday at the morning service. This makes two confesssions since last report.—S. P. TELFORD, pastor.

ONTARIO, CANADA.

Walkerton, May 6.—April 29, two confessions, one previously baptized received. May 6, one confession. Took Home Mission collection. Are preparing for Children's Day. Annual Ontario convention in Guelp, May 31 to June 4.—W. McM. LOGAN.

INDIANA.

Terre Haute, May 7.—Four confessions at the regular services yesterday; two confessions and four by letter the previous Sunday. The work prospers and the outlook is very good.—THEO. J. FREED.

Seymour, May 9.—Just closed a two weeks' meeting at Smithville with 55 added, mostly grown people. Go to Danville June 1st.—EUGENE MARTIN.

NEBRASKA.

Omaha, May 7.—Yesterday was a great day here in spite of the threatened rain all day. We raised nearly $500 to pay off the entire floating debt of the church. I never saw more cheerful and liberal giving. The mortgage debt will soon be wiped out. I am just starting in on my second month here. The blessing of God is with us and we are all greatly encouraged. Eighteen have been added; four by confession and baptism. We are planning a Sunday-school rally for the last of the month.—SUMNER T. MARTIN.

KANSAS.

North Lawrence, May 7.—Six additions to date. Pastor's salary greatly increased. Audiences and interest growing. Meeting continues. L. S. Ridenour and R. A. Givens, evangelists—H. L. WILLIS, pastor.

Augusta, May 8.—April 29, baptized three. May 3 moved into the new parsonage—a six-room cottage. May 6, one confession.—R. W. WOODSIDE.

Clay Center, May 9.—Revival meeting two days old; five additions to date. Evangelist J. R. Speck will reach us to-day and take charge of the meeting.—J. M. HARRIS.

IOWA.

Oelwein, May 7.—Three accessions yesterday. We are having additions almost every week. Outlook splendid for a great work. Brethren, pray for us.—J. H. STARK.

Greene, May 7.—Pleased to announce three additions by baptism the past four weeks. Twelve added since I came here, September 1. Have taken every missionary collection on time. Raised about $16 for B. C. C. C. Church is being newly carpeted this week. Organ tuned and cleaned. In fact, we are wholly alive at this place and good will prevails. Will preach the memorial sermon here.—G. A. HESS, pastor.

ILLINOIS.

Le Roy, May 8.—Seven accessions here last Lord's day, 36 since I began work last October.—F. A. SWORD, minister.

Charleston, May 7.—Two added here yesterday. Took Home Missionary Offering on time and it will be larger than heretofore.—F. W. BURNHAM.

Sullivan, May 8.—Two accessions here Sunday and others near. Mrs. Brickert received one into the church at Dalton City.—E. W. BRICKERT, pastor.

Stanford, May 7.—Our meeting at Browning, held during April, closed with nine additions. The Stanford Church tendered my time to the state mission work. Brethren J. Fred Jones, J. W. Knight, Prof. B. J. Radford and Miss Anna Hall spoke during my absence.—FRED E. HAGIN.

Watseka, May 7.—A most estimable young lady responded to the gospel invitation yesterday. I am preaching a series of Sunday evening sermons on "The Accusations of Infidelity Against the Bible." There are two or three small congregations in this county that should have regular preacning.—B. S. FERRELL, pastor.

MISSOURI.

Nevada, May 7.—Five more added to this congregation yesterday, making 10 at our two last services.—BEN F. HILL.

Kirksville, May 8.—Closed the meeting at Kansas City, Sunday night, with 10 added and fine interest. It was really only begun and I have accepted a unanimous indefinite call to become minister for this church (First of Kansas City, Kan.) and will take up the work about June 1.—T. L. NOBLITT.

Joplin, May 7.—During April we received 12 additions as follows: Letter, eight; reclaimed, two; statement, one; baptism, one. We have secured one of the finest lots in the city and have raised almost $9,000 towards a new building. Our Sunday-school is so large now that it can scarcely be handled in our present building.—W. F. TURNER.

Kansas City, 2841 E. 6th St., May 8.—Bro. Combs and his church are workers. Our revival revives at Sixth and Prospect Church this city. Sunday audiences utilized the utmost capacity of the building and 17 more were added, and 14 Monday night—last night—20 last Sunday; 135 to date. We had a great service Wednesday from 1:30 to 9:30 P. M., in which all our city pastors took part. Have 802 added in four meetings so far this year.—CHAS. REIGN SCOVILLE.

An All-Year Resort.

The Crescent Hotel, Eureka Springs, Ark. opens March 1, 1900. A most desirable, attractive and convenient resort for health and pleasure-seekers. Ideal climate, pure, sparkling water, best accommodations. Through Sleepers via Frisco Line. Write for particulars to Manager Hotel or to any representative of Frisco Line.

Reduced Rates to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo.

May 15, June 5 and 19, the Union Pacific will sell round trip tickets from St. Louis and Kansas City or Omaha to above points at one fare plus $2.00. Illustrated publications, time tables and any desired information address J. F. Aglar, Gen'l Agent, St. Louis.

Excursions to Denver.

Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo are included in the territory to which homeseekers' excursion tickets will be sold by the Iowa Central Railway on the first and third Tuesdays in May, June, July, August. Only one fare plus two dollars for the round trip. Ask coupon ticket agents as to territory to which tickets are sold, dates of sale, limit and other information, or address Geo. S. Batty, G. P. & T. A., Marshalltown, Iowa.

In the Lake Country

of Northern Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan, there are hundreds of the most charming Summer Resorts awaiting the arrival of thousands of tourists from the South and East.

Among the list of near-by places are Fox Lake, Delavan, Lauderdale, Waukesha, Oconomowoc, Palmyra. The Dells at Kilbourne, Elkhart and Madison, while a little further off are Minocqua, Star Lake, Frontenac, White Bear, Minnetonka and Marquette on Lake Superior.

For pamphlet of "Summer Homes for 1900," or for copy of our handsomely illustrated Summer Book, entitled "In the Lake Country," apply to nearest ticket agent or address with four cents in postage, Geo. H. Heafford, General Passenger Agent, Old Colony Building, Chicago, Ill.

Iowa Central Excursions—1900.

On account of the following meetings the Iowa Central Railway will sell tickets at greatly reduced rates:

East St. Louis, Annual Convention, German Catholic Societies of Illinois, May 27-29.

North Manchester, Ind., May 28-30. Annual Meeting German Baptists.

Sioux Falls, S. D., June 9-20. Annual Meeting Supreme Lodge, A. O. U. W.

Waterloo, Iowa, May 23, 24. Annual Convention, Iowa Funeral Directors' Association

Kansas City, Mo., May 25, 26. Annual Meeting, Fraternity of Operative Millers of America.

Keokuk, Iowa, May 18-20. Annual Convention, Tenth District Iowa Christian Endeavor Union.

For date of sale of tickets, rates, time of trains and other information, inquire of Iowa Central agents, or address Geo. S. Batty, G. P. & T. A., Marshalltown, Iowa.

B. & O. S-W.

"ROYAL BLUE SERVICE."

ST. LOUIS,
CINCINNATI,
LOUISVILLE,
COLUMBUS,
PITTSBURG,
WASHINGTON,
BALTIMORE,
PHILADELPHIA,
NEW YORK.

BEST LINE BETWEEN THE EAST AND WEST.

Luxurious Vestibuled Trains, Palatial Ladies' Coaches.

Pullman Drawing Room, Sleeping and Observation Cars.

B. & O. S-W. DINING CARS. Meals Served a la carte at POPULAR PRICES.

For Rates, Maps, Time-Tables or Sleeping Car Space—Call on any Ticket Agent or address

O. P. McCARTY,
General Passenger Agt.,
G. B. WARFEL, Cincinnati, Ohio
Asst. Gen'l Pass. Ag't, St. Louis, Mo.

Illinois Central R.R.

ANNOUNCEMENT FOR

WINTER TOURISTS.

The Illinois Central desires to call attention to the unexcelled service that is offered by its lines to the South for the season of 1899-1900.

CALIFORNIA via NEW ORLEANS

Pullman Tourist Sleeping Car

FROM CHICAGO EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING

Personally conducted. Runs through to Los Angeles and San Francisco, via New Orleans in connection with the Southern Pacific, leaving Chicago on the Central's fast "New Orleans Special;" connection also made by this train with daily trains out of New Orleans for the Pacific Coast. The Limited, from Chicago every evening, connects on Mondays and Thursdays at New Orleans (after December 18, 1899) with the

SUNSET LIMITED

of the Southern Pacific, giving special through service to San Francisco.

FLORIDA via NASHVILLE and ATLANTA

THROUGH SERVICE FROM ST. LOUIS.

Double daily service is maintained out of St. Louis via the Illinois Central and connecting lines to Nashville, Chattanooga and Atlanta, through sleeping car to Jacksonville, Fla., being carried on the leaving St. Louis every evening. This train, as well as the Day Express leaving St. Louis in the morning, are both solid trains to Nashville, having through coaches and sleeping cars, running via Martin, Tenn., and the N. C. & St. L. Ry. Connection via this line for all principal points in the Southeast, such as Charleston, Wilmington, Aiken and Savannah, and for all points in Florida.

DIXIE FLYER

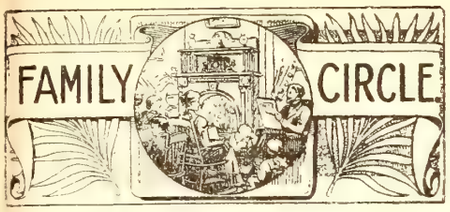
TWO SOLID FAST VESTIBULE TRAINS
DAILY FROM CHICAGO TO MEMPHIS AND NEW ORLEANS.

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS to certain points in the South on the lines of the Illinois Central and Y. & M. V. Railroads will be run on the first and third Tuesday of each month during the winter season.

Full particulars concerning all of the above can be had of agents of the Illinois Central, or by addressing A. H. Hanson, G. P. A., Chicago.

Reduced Rates to Colorado.

Union Pacific Railroad will make One Fare plus $2.00, or $19.00 for the Round Trip from Kansas City or Omaha to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, on May 1st and 15th, June 5th and 9th. For particulars address J. F. Aglar, Gen'l Agt., St. Louis, Mo.



The Lost Emigrants.

R. H. JOHNSON.

CHAPTER XXIX.

The white-winged angel of peace hovered over the island from the day of the departure of the malcontents. Industry thrived, and—

"All cheering plenty, with her flowing horn," lavished abundance on us all.

Religion with us, far from being simply a social matter, was an affair of life. We had not so much "got religion" as it had gotten us.

The Lord's day, with its sacred memories and hallowed associations, witnessed a total cessation of all secular pursuits. It was a day on which the incense of prayer and praise went up to God from all hearts; a day so sacred, calm and sweet that we hailed its coming with joy, and accepted it as a foretaste of the happy home—

"Where congregations ne'er break up
And sabbaths never end."

In due time, as had been forecasted, there was a double wedding; and although many a day has lapsed since the irrevocable vows were made, I think no one of the quartette has for a moment regretted the action of that auspicious day.

On the season following the departure of the Blackbirds, work on the ship was begun and carried on at intervals when other work was not pressing. But the ship was not completed until the next spring.

It was a staunch and thoroughly seaworthy schooner of about seventy-five tons, and was christened the Madora.

The name (not patented) was, I believe, the offspring of the two master geniuses of the island, Dr. Andral and Jack Burton, and was built by a scientific combination of the names Maria and Dora. Verily, word-building is more wonderful than shipbuilding!

During the ship's construction there had been a somewhat exultant feeling at the prospect of a return to the beloved land of our nativity. And now that a way was supplied for this the islanders were called together for a decision in the matter.

The Captain among his remarks said: "We've been in port for sometime, and now that the ship's ready, the question is, are you going to lift anchor and make sail for the port for which we cleared when we left Philadelphia?"

"Conditions have altogether changed since we started for San Francisco," said Smithson.

"We know nothing of the business chances there at present; and we do know that our means of entering into business are very limited, since our money was stolen by the Blackbirds, with the safe in which we had deposited it. It therefore appears to me unwise to continue our voyage."

"Well, then, if the wind's from that quarter," the Captain responded, "let's 'bout ship and head for the port from which we started."

"That would certainly be no better for us than San Francisco, since we would go back empty handed," answered Smithson. "I can think of no place so favorable for us as right here. We know what this island is. It's a good climate. There's no mad rush after riches, and into fashion and folly. We live a plain, simple life, without the worries of the hothouse civilization of the states. We have returned to the simplicity of the ancient gospel. We have a plain, sincere worship, with a cordiality and brotherly love, charming and inspiring to me. Having once enjoyed the blessedness of a church that is all for Christ, I could never be satisfied to go back to the narrowness of a church that is for Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas. I can never again take comfort in a worship so narrow and sectarian that I must raise the question of Paul: 'Is Christ divided?' I for one prefer to remain here."

"So the wind's dead against us for that cruise is it?" said Captain Wolcott. "Well, when the cabin mutinies, what are we to expect from the forecastle? What in the name of reason did we build the Madora for? How many are in the dead set against the ship's officers? Let's hear from you."

Thus invited, several freely gave their views, which may be summarized as follows: We had removed from the Atlantic States for the improvement of our condition. We had taken our little possessions with us and these had been lost. If we returned to the states it would be in an impoverished condition: it would be to engage in an unequal struggle with those possessed of abundance. Here, our simple wants were lavishly supplied, and we were of one heart and soul, and were loath to exchange the joys of our simple, earnest religion for the divided state of the worshipers we had left behind us.

To confess the truth we thought we wanted to get away from the island till we had the means of going; but brought face to face with the alternative, we were satisfied that no better and happier lot could be ours than the contentment and happiness of the peaceful abode of our Arcadia.

"Here's a pretty backwater," said the Captain, after our views were given. "We, at the cost of great labor, build a ship to get away from here and then everybody mutinies. May the Madora turn into a porpoise if it isn't just what I've been expecting all the time!

"I thought we'd have to make a ship to let you find out you did'nt want to leave here.

"Well, when the Captain's battened down under the hatches and the crew and passengers are on deck, he might do worse than to pull down his flag to them.

"It's all right, and I'm satisfied to make my home here. But I love the sea, and there are some good sailors here who, like me, having spent much time on the water, are sighing for—

HEART DISEASE.

Some Facts Regarding the Rapid Increase of Heart Troubles.

Heart trouble, at least among the Americans, is certainly increasing, and while this may be largely due to the excitement and worry of American business life, it is more often the result of weak stomachs, of poor digestion.

Real organic disease is incurable; but not one case in a hundred of heart trouble is organic.

The close relation between heart trouble and poor digestion is because both organs are controlled by the same great nerves, the Sympathetic and the Pneumogastric.

In another way also the heart is affected by the form of poor digestion, which causes gas and fermentation from half digested food. There is a feeling of oppression and heaviness in the chest caused by pressure of the distended stomach on the heart and lungs, interfering with their action; hence arises palpitation and short breath.

Poor digestion poisons the blood, makes it thin and watery, which irritates and weakens the heart.

The most sensible treatment for heart trouble is to improve the digestion and to insure the prompt assimilation of food.

This can be done by the regular use after meals of some safe, pleasant and effective digestive preparation, like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which may be found in drug stores, and which contains valuable, harmless digestive elements in a pleasant, convenient form.

It is safe to say that the regular, persistent use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at meal time will cure any form of stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach.

'A wet sheet and a flowing sea,
And the wind that follows fast,
And fills the white and rustling sail
And bends the gallant mast.'

"You all want to send letters and hear from the old home. Then there are some things we need and can't make. We want tools and horses and cows and books, and I'm going to make a run to San Francisco and back. Yes, make it every year, for that matter. But I'll stick to the island like a barnacle to a ship's bottom!" To all of which we gave a hearty amen.

Upon mature deliberation it was decided to make a run to the Coast of South America in the fall for the much-needed horses and cattle, and by next season, and yearly thereafter, to carry to San Francisco a cargo of the island's products to barter for needed articles.

When preparations were being made for the first trip to California, believing it to be my duty to make the voyage, I informed my husband to that effect. Greatly surprised he rejoined: "I thought you were wedded to this island." "So I am, and so I was," said I. "That is, I am wedded to the island, and was wedded on the island, to one of the best of men.

"But I must leave the dear island home and take the long and hazardous journey, because I cannot forget the dying wish of dear Mrs. Gray, that I should return to the states and tell the story of this colony, and of the blessedness of turning away from the world's wisdom, and sitting at the feet of the great Teacher and being his disciples; and discarding party names and creeds and profound theological speculations just to be simple Christians, as in the long ago. I can do that much for Mrs. Gray's sake, and I ought to be willing to do a thousand times as much for my Savior's sake. Do not discourage me, and God willing, I shall return."

"But," he said, "think of the dangers, and of your dreadful experience at sea."

"I have thought of that, and trusting in Him who holds the sea in the hollow of his hand, I shall commit myself to the great deep without fear.

'I know not where his islands lift
Their fronded palms in air;
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond his love and care.'"

The Doctor stood a moment looking thoughtfully out upon the sea. Then turning to me he said: "If Mrs. Gray asked it of you, you are right, and I will go with you. But we will come back again to our Arcadia."

CHAPTER XXX.

In due time the Madora brought her cargo from the island to San Francisco, and among those taking passage were Dr. Andral and myself. No sooner had we touched American soil than an insatiate desire of revisiting the scenes and mingling with the friends of former days seized us.

We were therefore soon flying across the continent. But we were doomed to a vexatious delay, as a wreck and a broken trestle were in our way. In consequence Saturday afternoon found us merely descending the great slanting plains east of the Rocky Mountains.

Under the conviction that since the great Proprietor, whose servants we were, had generously given us six days of the week for our own, we ought not to be so mean as to rob him of the one he had reserved for himself, we decided to stop over Lord's day, and accordingly got off at the little village of Amity.

We were pleased to learn that the churches had united in the call for a union meeting that evening. There were six meeting house, with more in prospect, in the village of about three hundred inhabitants, and with a sparse population in the surrounding country.

A majority of the people seldom attended meeting and the support of each church was necessarily very feeble; and the ministers were often in anxious suspense as to how their families should be fed.

It was in discouragement consequent on the religious apathy, the neglect of worship, the arrears of salary and the cheerless outlook that the ministers had called the meeting to take counsel together. It was evident that there were too many churches. These were overburdened and disheartened, without influence or zeal or hopefulness. How could it be otherwise? Are there not thousands of localities in a like condition all over the land from a like cause?

Various suggestions were offered in the way of propping up the feeble churches, but mainly of an impracticable character. Finally, one man, a member of a leading church, got up and suggested that the weaker churches be requested to move out and abandon the field to the stronger, but this was met instantly by the most bitter opposition, as contrary to the spirit of the gospel which enjoined upon the strong the duty of supporting the weak.

Amid the confusion an elderly gentleman —one whom you would notice in any audience—arose and said: "Pardon the intrusion of a stranger whose sole excuse is a desire to help you. There is surely a radical wrong in the condition that permits a half dozen sects to organize rival churches in a little town like this, incapable of supporting half as many. No sane man will believe that Christ ever intended that a half dozen little starveling churches should crowd and cripple each other, where there might be one of strength and influence to dominate the entire community. But for such partisan rivalry and waste and wickedness, what is the remedy? Shall some churches pull out and abandon the work to others? We have just had a practical proof that that will not work.

"Will all become Methodists, or Presbyterians, or Baptists? Every other sect rebels at the suggestion. This seems most unfortunate. It is bad enough to squander the Lord's money and bar the way to success in thousands of places all over the land by divisions, just as is being done here, but this is not the worst. Still more delporable is the wicked and open disobedience to Christ. He prayed for the union of all his followers. Dare any one call himself a Christian and not plead and work for that for which Jesus prayed?

"It is a serious thing to block the way of Jesus and to hinder the world's conquest. Why did he pray for the oneness of believers? 'That the world may believe that thou hrst sent me.' Will the world believe unless we are one? Never, never! Jesus has said it. He said it when he conditioned the world's belief on the union of his disciples. Will the blessing of Jesus rest on a divided and disobedient church?

"Will the Holy Spirit attend with power the preaching of a riven church? Will there, in this divided state, be a mighty harvest of thousands of souls from the preaching of a simple sermon, as in the early days of a united church? Never, never! Jesus has said it.

"But this does not fill up the measure of evil. While Protestantism is hopelessly weakened from its want of coherence, the papal church by its unity is possessed of vast power and influence.

"This mighty organization, giving allegiance to a foreign potentate who demands, according to Leo XIII., 'perfect submission and obedience of will to the church and the Sovereign Pontiff as to God himself,' this church, the foe to free government, to free schools, to freedom of conscience and to individual reason in the interpretation of the Bible, is making mighty headway in its avowed purpose to get control of this country. Father Hecker in 1870 said, and it could be emphaized to day: 'There is ere long to be a state religion in this country, and that state religion is to be Roman Catholic.'

"I hear some one say: 'Such dreams are the result of a disordered imagination.' But I tell you nay, and answer by the logic of facts.

"What with the mighty influx of illiterate papists from the old world, and the organized work of priests and parochial schools in America, the percentage of increase c Catholicism is greater than of all Prote tant churches combined. Take near c quite a score of our greatest cities, wit their pent-up populations of many millions and in numbers, power and influence th papal church is in the lead of the combine Protestant churches.

"Here, then, is the situation: One the o hand Protestantism, a disorganized mob; o the other Catholicism, organized, compac united. So much a unit that each one o its millions of subjects is bound to obey th will of one man as of God himself.

"Which force must inevitably wield th scepter of supremacy? There can be bu one answer. Protestantism, divided, mus go down before united, aggressive Roman ism; and I can give no better reasons tha to say God wills it. A church disobedien to the will of Jesus in its factionalism, can not cary out the great work committed t the Church of God.

"God will raise up a better, a loyal peopl to gather his followers into one and to wi the world to himself unless we awaken t duty. In that awakening is my hope an our salvation.

"I find encouragement in the fact tha there are many sagacious leaders alert t the impending dangers. Many consecrate leaders in all denominations are raisin their voices in condemnation of the sin an folly and ruin of divisions. There is growing love and sympathy that is gettin too Christlike to be shut up within narrov partisan bounds.

"There is everywhere a quickening of con science in regard to the sin of being fo Paul or for Apollos or for Cephas, when al should be for Christ and him alone.

"We are getting ashamed of denomina tionalism, of what is distinctive, and er the new century is shorn of its youthfu vigor I look to see a mighty impulse every where, a breaking down of sectarian bar riers and a uniting together simply a Christians, on broad and evangelica grounds, wherein all true disciples of ou Lord can agree.

"And then, the blessing of Jesus, with th help of the Holy Spirit and with the powe and efficiency of a united church, the da of the world's submission to Jesus is a hand; and America will lead in the van o the conquest.

"God rules in the affairs of nations. I was not by chance that America was dis covered. It was not by chance that th Anglo-Saxon race, the most enterprising in history, is in the ascendancy. It was no

A $12 Bath Cabinet FOR only $5.00

Our new 1902 style Square Quaker guaranteed best of all cabinets at any price. Has real door on hinges, steel frame, best materials, rubber lined, folds flat, lasts 20 years. Turkish and Vapor baths at home 3c each. Open the millions of pores, sweats poisons out of the blood, keeps you clean and healthy, beautifies complexion. Physicians recommend it for Colds, LaGrippe, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Obesity, Female Ills, all Blood, Skin, Nerve or Kidney troubles. Money refunded after 30 days use, if not as represented. Price with heater, directions, formulas, $5.00. Face Steamer $1.00 extra. Order today. Write us. Valuable Book FREE. Big Wages. Splendid Seller. Agents Wanted.
World Mfg. Co., 37 World B'ld'g, Cincinnati, O.

y chance that this is the land of the ighest evolution of civil liberty known, nd that it is the birthplace of religious reedom. It was not by chance that but esterday, in snatching from a brutal opression the victims of a haughty, priestidden monarchy, the isles of the Occident nd of the far-off Orient fell to us as the ruits of victories that seem miraculous. Nor is it by chance that, as the gospel egan at the world's center, the junction of Europe, Asia and Africa, so now the gospel estored to its primitive simplicity shall go forth from the modern world's center, America, whose Eastern gates open on the highways of the seas to Europe and Africa, nd whose Western portals open on the highway of the Pacific to the isles of the Orient and to Asia, the cradle of our race.

"Happy will we be if we read in these onditions the call of God to enter upon our ofty mission—the call to preparation by hat unity and consecration that Jesus demands to fit us for the world's conquest.

"It is no time for croakers and doubters who decry the possibility of union. Union mpossible? Jesus prayed for it. That is ny answer to unbelief. The sun may fail n his rising, but the oneness for which esus prayed shall not fail to come. But ow? By our higher consecration. By ur having the spirit of Jesus. By our eing Christians—simply Christians—without a qualifying adjective. By our going ack to the simplicity of the ancient gospel nd sitting at Jesus' feet as his disciples. And then, under the mighty enthusiasm of he united millions of believers, and with he blessing of Jesus, the universal reign of he Prince of peace shall be ushered in."

At the conclusion of the speaker it was ecided to appoint another meeting for deiberation, and then the meeting adjourned.

I returned to my room and retired to seek est; but pondering deeply the thoughts of he evening, it was long before I sank into lumber; and then it was to dream.

I was in a spacious park, and a vast multitude was present. Gifted orators were here, impressively telling their reasons for heir religious beliefs; that is, "Why I am n Episcopalian," "Why I am a Lutheran," etc. Presently, I was gratified to hear one ay: "Without taking aught from the glory of your great leaders, and the great principles you stand for, I glory in a leader who n consecration, in culture, in labors, in sufferings and in winning souls is probably without a peer among all the followers of Jesus. Brethren, I glory in the name of Paul." And, as the others had called many to their standards, so did he lift up the standard of Paul, and call for adherents.

His words were so in harmony with my veneration of the great apostle to the Gentiles, who labored and suffered with such sublime heroism for Jesus, that I found myself flocking with the throng that came flockihg to his standard. And yet I came with a vague alarm, for the sun had hid its face, and the great forest trees loomed up with their shuddering branches like crosses toward an angry sky; and the weird sobbing of the winds was like the moaning of the crucified.

Among the many coming to the Pauline standard I notice done clad in a long garment like a Roman toga. He was small of stature, but with a countenance expressive of the highest intelligence and sagacity. Hastily approaching, he cried out: "Why this fulsome praise, this rallying to the banner of him who was less than the least of all the apostles?'

"Pray, who are you," said the bearer of the standard. "I am less than the least of saints," was the response. "I am not worthy to be called an apostle. Who is Paul and who is Apollos, but servants by whom ye believed? While one saith I am of Paul, and another I am of Apollos, are ye not carnal? Is Christ divided? Was Paul crucified for you, or were ye baptized in the name of Paul? Let no man glory in men. To him who was slain for us, whose name is above every name, be all the honor, all the glory. If ye would not dishonor Him, lay every trophy at Jesus' feet."

And seizing the banner of the last speaker, Paul—for it was he—advanced and laid it at the feet of one I had not seen before. His raiment was white and dazzling, and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength. And as I looked, I beheld the standards of every name brought and laid at the feet of him in the shining raiment.

And the bearers and the vast assemblage no longer divided into many parties cried: "God forbid that we should glory save in the cross of Christ the crucified. This alone shall be our standard evermore."

And they cried with a mighty voice as they went forth to the four winds: "Fly abroad, thou everlasting gospel; make the waste places glad and the deserts to bloom." And the clouds, no longer threatening, were radiant as with the wings of seraphim.

And the darkness fled before the advancing standard of the cross until all lands were aglow. And behold, from all peoples of earth there arose the voice of thanksgiving and praise to the Redeemer; while from the glowing heavens there came back a response to the acclamations of earth like the sound of many waters: "Alleluia; salvation and honor and glory and power unto the Lord our God, and to the Lamb that was slain for sin."

And then I awoke; and the vision and the glory were gone, and the gray light of dawn was stealing in at my window. And upon me still rested the burden of toil and suffering for the sake of Christ the crucified.

A Tour of the Great Lakes
Mackinac is Indian for "Island of Giant Fairies"—one of them they say formed Arched Rock. Odd formations and historic interest make Mackinac the "Gem of the Inland Seas." Tickets, St. Louis to Detroit, through Lake Huron to Mackinac, through Lake Michigan to Chicago, back to St. Louis, cost $25.50. Our booklet suggests Summer Tours $20 to $100 illustrates them with beautiful engravings and gives valuable information to the contemplating summer vacationist. Bound in cloth—you will want to preserve it. It is free.
Give us some idea of how long you can take for your summer outing, how much you want it to cost you, etc. Ask for any information you may desire about any trip you have in mind. We will cheerfully answer any and all questions, and can make suggestions from the experience of others which will save you money and enhance the pleasure of your summer outing. We may be able to suggest just the trip you have been looking for. It will cost you but two cents postage. Address,
SUMMER TOUR DEPARTMENT, WABASH RAILROAD,
1640 LINCOLN TRUST BUILDING, ST. LOUIS.

Egyptian Impressions.

E. H. KELLAR.

You are impressed that the tourist agencies, Cook, Gaze & Co. desire strongly to do business for you and open or close so much of the Oriental door as they desire, according to program, at about ten dollars a day—dress suit at dinner, no contact with the natives, everything done for you—sit still and watch the procession go by. They impress you as being the authorized agents of the various steamship and railroad lines when you go to them for rates—behold, it is all connected with carriage drives, sight-seeing and hotels, and this or that sight or sixteen or thirty-two days itinerary, personally conducted—a program that gives you everything and you avoid all annoyance—

How much?

"O, very cheap; everything first-class."

How much?

"O, very cheap; $500, $1,000, $2,000; very cheap; everything paid," etc., etc.

But how much for steerage passage only? how much for third-class railway fare?

"O, nobody travels that way! O, you could not stand it! We provide everything first-class—"

Yes, high price; but how much for the cheap fares only?

"O, we don't know; can only give you first and second-class rates."

Even Baedeker (guide book) extensively advertises these tourist agencies, so withal you are impressed that these agencies have, so to speak, a "lead pipe cinch" on everything, having consummated a gigantic trust of all steamships, railroads and hotels owning or controlling the sights, giving or withholding information.

Board in Cairo?

"O, very high; nothing lower than $2.00 per day, and in season, as it is now, $2.50 to $4.00." So say this great tourist monopoly.

As a matter of fact, I secured good board for 75 cents per day. Of course, a man could pay $3.00 to $4.00 per day in St. Louis, but you and I know he would be as happy, as well cared for, and could give vastly more for missions if he were to go to a $1.00-a-day house.

As for traveling up the Nile, these agencies want a small fortune, when you can disregard them and go from Cairo to Luxon 417 miles—for $2.50; round trip, 834 miles, for $5.00.

I am am telling this for the benefit of hundreds of economizing missionary people who would be vastly more useful from having visited historic lands, but have been prevented hitherto, judging the expenses from the figures and statements of these touring agencies.

So also many may be deterred from the great C. E. Convention in London because they cannot reach the figures published for the tour in the Christian Endeavor World.

Can one go steerage?

"Yes, if he is not too proud."

Can one go third-class or fourth-class on the railroads?

"Yes, if he is not 'too nice.' "

Can one put up at a cheap boarding house?

"Yes, if he will."

Nowhere is traveling or living cheaper than in the East, and my experience has been that one cannot look to these tourist agencies to help him ascertain the fact, whether from design or force of circumstances they are very little assistance to the man of small means.

Luxury and squalor run side by side everywhere, but here it is more glaring, distressing, sickening. We have been in Cairo but two weeks, yet we have seen these extremes.

Oriental luxury, swell turnouts, runners before carriages, servants galore, silks and satins and mirrors and perfumery and high-priced debauchery rampant, all the day idle. Oriental squalor, masses of people sore-eyed, filthy and wretched, all the day idle.

The American Mission (Presbyterian), the English Church (Church of England), the German Church (Evangelical), the Church Missionary Society (English), Russell's Soldier's Home (Interdenominational)—these are doing good reformatory work.

I see in to-day's Egyptian Gazette that an English company just organized proposes among other things to erect adjoining Cairo a model English village, industries and all.

If these Arabs can be induced to look at and study this village, it might still be a problem to get them to model after it.

I think it is the Englishman's religion makes him clean and industrious. However, the village contemplates that, too, and is well worth an effort.

Cairo, Egypt, Feb. 3, 1900.

God's Temple.

LAURENE HIGHFIELD.

There stands upon the shores of time,
In glory matchless, strength sublime,
  A temple pure and fair;
The line of judgment marked its site,
A Master workman built aright,
  And formed each part with care.

Infinite wisdom drew the plan,
Justice and truth adorned each span,
  Love guided every tool;
Righteousness was the plummet true;
It neither spot nor blemish knew,
  Perfection was the rule.

Exalted high above the hills,
Its grandeur all the heavens fills,
  It fears no earthly shock;
Secure against each stormy blast,
It never can be overcast,
  'Tis founded on a rock.

Built in a world of direst need,
A land of death and grief and greed,
  Sin-sick and sore oppressed;
It lifts its spires so fair to see,
Entrance into its courts is free;
  By it are nations blessed.

This temple is the Church of God;
And in the way that men once trod,
  In doubt and misery,
It rose majestic on their sight,
Supplanting every wrong with right,
  Woe with sublimity.

Builded of stones with hearts and brains,
With voices tuned to heavenly strains,
  Stones full of life and power;
With hearts to love both God and man,
With hands to work, with minds to plan,
  They form each wall and tower.

Christ is the sure foundation stone,
And on His lasting strength alone
  His church will e'er depend.
He is the corner stone, the head,
The high priest risen from the dead,
  Both origin and end.

It is His kingdom here on earth,
It stands for everything of worth
  The finite mind has known;
A refuge from the stormy way,
A shadow in the heat of day,
  A shelter for His own.

Transparent in its purity,
Fit for indwelling majesty,
  The Spirit of the Lord
With glory filleth all the place,
His presence every part doth grace,
  Its wisdom is His Word.

Beneath its sills abundant flows
Salvation's stream, which widening grows
  In cleansing power and worth;
Ever increasing still to be,
Till like the waters of the sea
  God's knowledge fills the earth.

To meet its destiny, God-given,
To show the way from earth to heaven
  And do His will aright,
The church must His commandments heed,
Must love in word, and love in deed,
  Abiding in the light.

Filled with His spirit, from each wall
In mystic radiance must fall
  Across the traveler's way;
The attributes of the divine,
In marvelous beauty they must shine,
  A cheering, guiding ray.

For God is love and God is light,
Omniscient majesty and might,
  And in communion sweet;
His people must his likeness wear,
Until through faith and zeal and prayer,
  Their mission is complete.

And though stones crumble and decay,
And from their places sink away
  As dust returns to dust;
In that blessed land which knows no sin.
They all shall be reset within
  The mansions of the just.

Sceptics may hurl their scorn and sneers,
Weak souls may quake with chilling fears,
  Yet God upholds His own;
The Church will stand serene and fast,
Assured against doubt's every blast,
  As steadfast as His throne.

For justice, mercy, hope and peace,
In glad acclaim that shall not cease,
  Resounding o'er and o'er;
The house of God shall ring with praise,
Unto the Ancient of all Days,
  Till time shall be no more.

Quincy, Ill.

The Open Mouth.

ARTHUR M. GROWDEN.

Sermon on the Mount. Christ "opened his mouth (Matt. 5:2) and taught them." Here we have a glimpse of Christ as a speaker.

He did not open one of the current fictions; neither did he read them a novel or a moral story.

He did not open a MS. with an elegant cover of embossed leather. He did not read a little essay on sociology or a plagiarized sermon as one of his own.

He opened his mouth and gave emphasis and articulation. The people understood, for he neither "mouthed" nor "muzzled" his words. What a startling lesson for many who pose as speakers!

They use neither the open eye nor the open mouth. The people, therefore, are deprived of the expression of the former and the power of the latter. With a half shut eye, and that half directed to the ceiling, some far-off window, at the floor or, what is as bad, chained to a manuscript, and with a half open mouth, mumbling the words—is it any wonder people lose interest in some speakers? Christ was an entertaining, instructive, optimistic speaker, and the masses heard him gladly. Even his enemies listened.

I remember a sermon I heard in Westminster Abbey—not deep nor learned, but clear and convincing—for an open heart, a clear brain and an open mouth were behind the words.

We are not called upon to shout our learning, the amazing depth of our profound research, but God does call for a worthy utterance for his unspeakable gospel, the power unto salvation. It is worthy of the purest rhetoric and sweetest elocution and best emphasis.

Why should any gospel preacher be dry or uninteresting? We are thinking and uttering God's thoughts after him in a more direct sense than any astronomer ever did. We are following God in his mighty plans, we are his coworkers in a world's regeneration!

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address,

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.
Hall's Family Pills are the best.

The Liquor Question in Japan.

LAURA DELANY GARST.

The native liquor of Japan is called sake (a-ah; e-ay).

It is made of rice. A yeast or ferment is made of steamed rice by putting it in a dark room at a low temperature, and a fungus growth is developed. To this more steamed rice is added and finally the mass is, when fully fermented, subjected to the Pasteur process, which, it is curious to relate, was used in Japan many, many years before Pasteur's time!

Sake contains about 11 per cent. of alcohol. A very strong brew is sometimes made of the dregs, containing ¼ to ½ alcohol.

Sake, though not nearly so strong as brandy, affects European heads more quickly.

Saloons have, till recently, been unknown in Japan. The onward march of "civilization," which carries, alas! so much death and destruction with it, is rapidly leading to their establishment already. Beer halls are being introduced in the large cities. With the home element so sadly lacking as it is in heathen lands, these dens of iniquity will be even a greater menace there than they are with us. Our W. C. T. U. sisters are raising their voices against such vicious innovations. A new responsibility is placed upon the Christian people of our land by the expansiveness of our national policy. Unless the expansion of the Christ-life in individuals here and in our churches is commensurate with the aggressions of war, we will but see "confusion worse confounded" in those lands beyond. How our boys at the front need every effort we can put forth against liquor being shipped into the East. Japanese food is very deficient in nutritive quality and the strong, adulterated "fire water" shipped to them, is especially destructive to manhood and womanhood. Sake is used on all occasions. It is served at the evening meal. It is a prominent feature of weddings and funeral ceremonies. It is offered as libations to the gods. It is most freely imbibed by Buddhist priests, those "blind leaders of the blind."

Some 200,000,000 gallons of sake are manufactured yearly in Japan. This besides the immense quantity of foreign wines and liquors put before the people. There, as here, the liquor question is a burning one. Its ravages constitute an additional Macedonian cry to Christian lovers of Christlike manhood and womanhood: "Come over and help us!"

What an impetus would be furnished every brave effort of our missionary workers there if they could say: "Our government condemns the manufacture and sale of the vile, damning, poisonous stuff!"

"Thy kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

Coon Rapids, Ia.

For a Nerve Tonic
Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

DR. H. M. HARLOW, Augusta, Me., says: "One of the best remedies in all cases in which the system requires an acid and a nerve tonic."

IF YOU CONTEMPLATE BUILDING A NEW CHURCH OR REMODELLING AN OLD ONE
LET US HELP YOU
WE CAN FURNISH YOU WITH THE LATEST
UP TO DATE PLANS & DESIGNS EITHER
FROM CATALOGUE OR SPECIALLY PREPARED AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES
COOPERATE WITH US
YOU WILL HELP OUR SOCIETY BY LETTING US HELP YOU
SEND 10c FOR CATALOG OF 100 PLANS & DESIGNS WITH FULL DESCRIPTION AND MUCH OTHER VALUABLE INFORMATION.
ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS G.W. MUCKLEY SEC. EXTENSION BOARD
KANSAS CITY, MO. 600 WATER-WORKS BUILDING.

SHORT STORIES FOR CHILDREN.

By LAURA GEROULD CRAIG.

Complete in Six Volumes. Profusely illustrated.

Vol. I. Little Presidents
" II. " Kings
" III. " Queens
" IV. " Orators
" V. " Generals
" VI. " Statesmen

Price, cloth, per vol.....$ .50
Price, cloth, per set..... 2.50

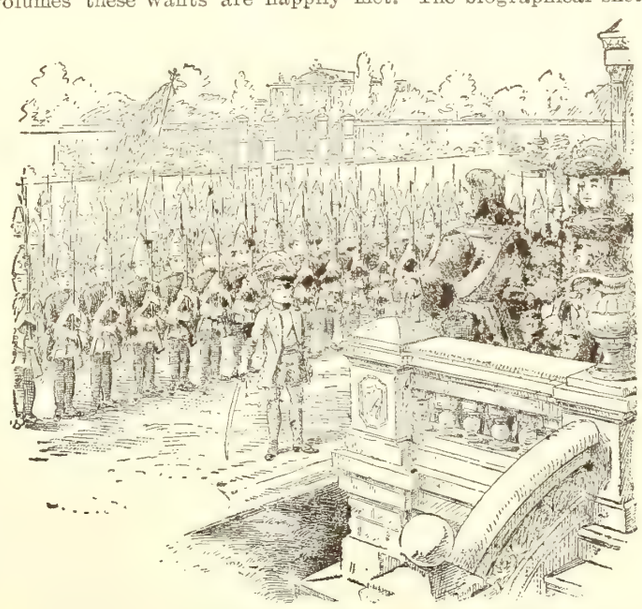
These volumes are dedicated to "All the little sons and daughters that are ever asking for stories that are true."

THE MILL-BOY OF THE SLASHES. (From "Little Orators.")

The author thoroughly understands the mental wants of the child, and in these volumes these wants are happily met. The biographical sketches of the great of the world, while they were growing into greatness, are always fascinating to the children.

These stories are presented in such an attractive manner that the mind of the child will retain them all through life. The little folks that will carefully read these stories will be in possession of many of the little incidents in the lives of a large number of the great men and women who have blessed the world with their lives.

These little volumes should be placed in the homes of this country to bless children.



FRITZ AND HIS LITTLE CADETS. (From "Little Kings.")

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO., - - ST. LOUIS, MO.

The Red Box Clew.

J. BRECKENRIDGE ELLIS.

From St. Louis the happy travelers went straight to Creekville, and they swooped down upon the Clarmonts, much to the secret disgust of Mrs. Clarmont. But she kissed Frank and said she was glad to find she had turned out not to be common after all, although Frank couldn't tell how she was any different from what she had been before. But Frank and Vega! How they embraced, and wandered off in the pasture to visit the summerhouse and the dam, and how Frank covered Vega's slate with writing; only she wrote so fast Vega couldn't read it, and Frank couldn't either! The first time they went to the branch they wouldn't let Ronald go with them, for if I am not mistaken they waded. Any way when they came up to the house Vega carried a very wet towel, and both of them looked rosy and bubbling over with merriment. After that Ronald accompanied them wherever they went. He walked with a crutch, but the doctor had promised him that would not be for long. And Vega told Frank that she had been baptized, and was now a member of the church, and her mother had stood it better than any one could have hoped. And she had at last determined to go to school; to an institution where the deaf are instructed. And she thought she would devote herself to art. Maybe she would become a great painter some day; being deaf would not interfere, of course. When Vega had confided these hopes she added, throwing her arms about Frank: "And I owe all this to you! That day I was so hateful to you—pushed you in the brook—and when I fell in myself, and then you kissed me." But Frank wouldn't let her go on; but they understood each other. And when they were going away, and everybody was at the depot except Mrs. Clarmont, Ronald took Frank aside and said: "If you never see me again, or hear of me—well, I thought you'd like to know now, that, I am going to be a Christian, too. You see, I had heard of Christianity all my life, only I never knew anything about people trying to live it. But I've seen what it has done done for you, and see every day how it has changed Vega."

"I am so glad!" said Frank, grasping his hand. "Oh, Ronald, I am so glad! if you had given me a diamond, it wouldn't have pleased me so much. But don't say I will never see you again."

"If I live," said the boy, "you will see me. It may not be till I am grown. But I will come to you then, and thank you for what you have been to me." And then it was "good-by," and the train bore them away. Good-by! many a word is in one language that has no equivalent in another; but it is the language of heaven that hath not its "good-by."

It was raining when they left Creekville, and it poured all night. As the train passed through Indiana, it came to a place where the bridge was unsafe. It was very dark and stormy, and the train crept as slowly as possible over the swollen stream. It was nearly across when the bridge fell in, and the last coach was torn loose from the train and cast into black space. Many on that coach were injured and some were killed. The engineer learned that another washout was ahead, so they had to wait there till it could be repaired. Those who had been recovered from the wrecked coach were carried to some farm houses that stood near the track. The Douglases were safe, since they had ridden in another coach. Mr. Douglas went to see if he could not render help to the unfortunates. He hurried back, about two hours later, with the news that a woman was dying, and that she was begging everybody that came near to send Frank Douglas to her. "She says she did you a great wrong," said Mr. Douglas, "and she cannot die without asking your forgiveness. Yes, it is the old woman who calls herself Nance. Will you go?"

Chapter XXIV.

"No, Mary," said her mother in quick alarm, "you must not go out into this storm, and who knows whether that wicked Nance is dying or not? She may be pretending; she may only want a chance to do you an injury." Now the real name of Frank Douglas was Mary; thus she had been called before she was stolen away. Her father liked to call her Frank in memory of his brother. But when Mrs. Douglas wanted to be particularly tender to her, the name "Mary" fell unconsciously from her lips; for all these years she had thought of her child as Mary. "Father," said Frank, "do you think she is dying?"

"She seems very ill," returned her father. "She says she is dying. She won't let anybody touch her. But she calls out that she wants to beg your forgiveness, and that she knows you are on the train and she prays people to send you to her. I leave it entirely with you. I will go with you if you wish and protect you if there is any danger. On the other hand if you do not care to go that is an end of it."

"But I must go," said the child, looking pale and unhappy. "I can't bear to think of her lying there calling for me, and may be dying and wanting to be forgiven. Dear mother, do not ask me to refuse her cry." So it ended in the only way it could have ended, by Frank and her father setting forth through the driving rain toward one of the farm houses where Nance lay. They would not let Mrs. Douglas go on account of the storm. As Frank was shown into the room—always holding her father's hand—she heard a shrill voice above the confusion, "Send Frank Douglas to me, good people, I want her forgiveness!" Frank went in the direction of the voice. Pallets had been spread upon the floor, and half a dozen people lay upon them groaning and sometimes shrieking out in an agony of pain. In a corner lay Nance, tossing her malignant face back and forth wildly and crying out for Frank Douglas. "I am here," said Frank, as she fell upon her knees beside the pallet. She was almost fainting from the effect of the dreadful scene, and the groans of the wounded passengers. Nance turned to her suddenly. "So you come, did you, pudding. I knowed you'd come to old Nance when you heerd she was adying. Tell yore pap to go away a little; I wants to have you all to myeelf."

DRUNKENNESS CURED.

An eminent St. Louis physician has given a positive answer to the oft asked question, is drunkenness a disease, or is it simply a temptation that cannot be resisted by a vast number of the human race? The physician in question is Dr. Ozias Paquin, who for years has been a practicing physician in the City of St. Louis. He has answered this question by taking five of the worst drunkards that could be found and cured them of all further appetite for intoxicating drinks. The five cases were all beyond middle age and they had sunk into the deepest pit of drunkenness, with the odor of drink about them so obnoxious that it was almost impossible to stand within speaking distance. He not only cured them of all desire for intoxicating drink, but at the same time placed upon their cheek the flush of health and into their eyes the light of happiness, and took from their person the odor of whiskey. It was almost a miracle, for he had raised five cases from degradation into the sunshine of health and happiness. Dr. Paquin has cured hundreds of patients who were relapses from other treatments, and in every instance he cured these patients, and they have remained cured for months and years. It can therefore be said that the Paquin Treatment is a permanent cure, and not a temporary one, for the patient never relapses to his former condition. We know of no more humane work being done at the present time than that which Dr. Paquin is doing, and it is the duty of every reader to assist Dr. Ozias Paquin in his noble work, and if any reader has brother, sister, husband, father or friend in whose system lurks the disease of drunkenness, he should at once send their name to Dr. Paquin or see that they either visit or place themselves in communication with the Ozias Paquin Immune Co., Suite 1113 Chemical Bldg., St. Louis. The reader that does this will certainly be doing a christian act, for no matter how hopeless the case may seem, and no matter how many other treatments have unsuccessfully been tried, the method known as Ozias Paquin Treatment will perfect a cure, dispelling all desire for drink, and at the same time will place the constitution in a robust and healthy condition.

Church, Peal and Chime Bells, Best Mer...
BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY,
THE E.W. VAN DUZEN CO. Cincinnati, O.

Largest Foundry on Earth making
CHURCH BELLS CHIMES & PEALS
Purest copper and tin only. Terms, etc., free.
McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY, Baltimore, Md.

BLYMYER CHURCH BELLS.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Yellowstone National Park.

An Ideal Inter-mountain tour is the one embracing

Scenic Colorado,
Unique, Historical Utah
and The Wonderful

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK.

The OREGON SHORT LINE R. R.

Offers you this Matchless Trip

D. E. BURLEY, G. P. and T. A.
Oregon Short Line R. R.
Salt Lake City, Utah.

Elegant New Park Folder
"WHERE GUSH THE GEYSERS"
Sent on Receipt of 4 Cents Postage.

Sunday-School.

W. F. RICHARDSON.

PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM.*

The three parables included in the present lesson, together with that of the Sower, and the several additional brief ones found in the later portion of this chapter of Matthew, form a group of object-lessons concerning the kingdom of heaven which display its nature, purpose, law of progress, obstacles, and final victory, and are worthy of the careful study of every searcher after truth and righteousness. Our space will not permit us to enter on any analysis of the group, but we suggest that the teacher make an attempt at such analysis, as a means to better understanding of each separute parable. We must address ourselves at once to the three which enter into our present lesson—those of the tares, the mustard seed and the leaven.

The parable of the Sower dealt with the kingdom of heaven as it was received by men of different dispositions and circumstances. The truth was effective or otherwise according to the heart of the hearer. The parable of the Tares sets before us the efforts made by the evil one to thwart the work of the truth by planting falsehood side by side therewith. The former represented the conflict waged by the truth or Word of God with the unfavorable dispositions of men. This one shows us the strife between Christ and Satan for the possession of the world for good or evil. The first treats of the truth in its saving influence on the individual soul. The second of that truth embodied in righteous men living side by side with wicked men who are used by the devil as his instruments.

The story is short and simple. A farmer sowed good seed in his field and an enemy came in the night and scattered amid the wheat the seeds of the "bearded darnel," a plant whose grains are poisonous and nauseating. This base act was unknown until the grain reached the stage of heading out, when the darnel displayed its true character, and the farmer knew that an enemy had been seeking his hurt. When his servants brought him tidings of the wrong he had suffered, and suggested that they would go through the field and pull up the stalks of darnel, he forbade it lest they should pull up also the wheat. He bade them let the two grow together till the harvest time, when they should first gather out the tares and burn them, and then reap the good grain for the barn.

Many ingenious interpretations have been given of this parable, but we are spared the need of considering them, from the fact that Jesus himself gives us the full explanation of its meaning. In verses 36-43 the Master tells the meaning in simple speech. He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man; the field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom, or Christians; the tares are the the children of the evil one, or Satan; he is the enemy who sowed them; the harvest is the end of the world, and the reapers are the angels. Heaven is the destiny of the righteous and hell of the unrighteous. These facts need little comment. A few words may be added with profit, perhaps.

The field is the world, not the church. This passage, therefore, has no bearing on the question of church discipline. Other Scriptures tell us how to deal with the brother that walketh disorderly. This parable exhibits, not the proper action of the church toward the unworthy member, but God's patient bearing with the sinful world. He will not suffer his angelic servants to remove the children of the evil one from the earth, but "is long-suffering to usward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." But the day will come when sin and righteousnesss will alike have ripened, and then this separation shall be effected. He will send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that cause stumbling, and them that do iniquity, and shall cast them into the furnace of fire. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father.

This parable suggests an answer to that perplexing question of the origin of sin in the world. Jesus says: "An enemy hath done this." The devil is charged with the introduction of sin into the heart of the world, but the assurance is given that his nefarious plot will be foiled and his wicked schemes come to an end. This is a comfort even in these times when we see the work of the enemy so widespread among men. Not forever shall he triumph. When each Christian shall watch the field of his own heart, uprooting from it the tares of selfishness and lust, that the good seed of God's Word may come to maturity in Christian character, he will hasten the harvest day when the tares shall be separated from the wheat and the work of the evil one on earth be ended.

The short parables of the mustard seed and the leaven bring us a different view of the kingdom in its relations with men. The parables of the Sower and the Tares show us the strength of the enemies of the kingdom, and how desperate is the warfare that must be waged against sin. These two tell us of the strength and certain growth of that kingdom and its victory as inevitable. The mustard seed is used to illustrate the power and the leaven to show the manner of the kingdom's growth.

Among herbs the mustard plant is noted for the smallness of its seed compared with the size of the mature plant. So Christianity began with insignificant means, judged from the standpoint of the world's wisdom. The Babe in the manger, the Carpentar of Nazareth, the fishermen of Galilee give little promise of the marvelous ministry that has transformed the race. The humble Monk of Erfurt was despised by the haughty prelates of an apostate church, but they soon learned to tremble at his voice; and a regenerated Europe is the fruit of his noble life. A young Scotch Presbyterian preacher and his aged father, pleading for Christian unity in the midst of an indifferent or hostile army of sects, met with cold contempt; but before they had passed to their reward they saw a mighty brotherhood bearing the banner of unity forward to a glorious success. The first missionaries to heathen lands were counted fanatics or worse, but the treasures of money and life-blood are now being poured out by an awakening church. The mustard seed is becoming a great tree in the earth, and its branches will spread until they shadow every nation and clime.

In like manner, the parable of the Leaven illustrates the manner of the kingdom's growth. It is by assimilation. The leaven is placed in the midst of the meal and it sends out its leavening power in every direction. So the truth of God is set in the midst of the world, in the life and ministry of the children of God. They are the salt of the earth, sweetening and saving it by the contact of their righteousness with its unrighteousness. They are the light of the world, banishing its darkness by the shining forth of their light. Sad would be the condition of the world if all the leaven now dwelling in Christian hearts and lives were banished from among men. Glorious would be the result if all Christians were so full of the Spirit of Christ as to be constantly making their saving influence felt. In the work of leaven every particle is of value and may bear its share in the leavening of the loaf. So, in the work of Christ every Christian, however humble, may be a saving power in the measure of his endowments and his diligence. The golden texts of last Sunday's lesson and of this are suggestive. "The seed is the Word of God." "The field is the world." Let us not forget to complete the lesson of these texts by adding the words of Jesus: "The good seed are the children of the kingdom." Truth in us, believed, loved, obeyed, preached, will become a seed of the kingdom to the whole earth.

Lesson for May 27—Matt. 13:24-33. Parallel passage—Mark 4:30-32

ARMSTRONG & McKELVY Pittsburgh.
BEYMER-BAUMAN Pittsburgh.
DAVIS-CHAMBERS Pittsburgh.
FAHNESTOCK Pittsburgh.
ANCHOR, ECKSTEIN } Cincinnati.
ATLANTIC, BRADLEY, BROOKLYN, JEWETT, ULSTER, UNION } New York.
SOUTHERN, SHIPMAN } Chicago.
COLLIER, MISSOURI, RED SEAL, SOUTHERN } St. Louis.
JOHN T. LEWIS & BROS CO Philadelphia.
MORLEY Cleveland.
SALEM Salem, Mass.
CORNELL Buffalo.
KENTUCKY Louisville.

EVEN though you want but a pound of White Lead, you do not want to have some cheap mixture of Zinc, Barytes, etc., labeled "White Lead," foisted upon you simply because the dealer makes a greater profit on it.

Insist on getting Pure White Lead. It will be pure if the package bears one of the brands named in the margin. You can buy them in one, two, three or five-pound cans.

FREE For colors use National Lead Company's Pure White Lead Tinting Colors. Any shade desired is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving full information and showing samples of Colors, also pamphlet entitled "Uncle Sam's Experience With Paints" forwarded upon application.

National Lead Co., 100 William Street, New York.

"A Single Fact is worth a shipload of argument." Every cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla is a fact, proving its merit, and the thousands and thousands of cures recorded certainly should convince you that Hood's will cure you.

Indigestion, nausea are cured by Hood's Pills.

CHILDREN'S DAY SERVICES for the Sunday School. GOLDEN SUNBEAMS music by Gabriel, Thiel and Roscne: words by Laura E. Newell. This service offers exceptional opportunities for decorative effects. The music is particularly bright and sparkling. Price 50c. per doz., $4 per 100, postpaid. Enclose 10c. in stamps for samples of our three latest services for Children's Day. THE CHURCH CHOIR for May contains Children's Day music for the Choir. Enclose 10c. for sample copy. GEO. F. ROSCHE & CO. Chicago, 38 Randolph St. New York, 22 N. William St.

Christian Endeavor.

By Burris A. Jenkins.

TOPIC FOR MAY 27.

HAVE PATIENCE.

(Matt. 18:21-35.)

"Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." This is all that our Lord seemed to think we have a right to ask. "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured." "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." These and many other words of sacred Scripture indicate to us that if we would receive mercy it is ours to exercise forbearance with others. Long-suffering is placed among the fruits of the Spirit, along with love, joy and peace.

Without reference, moreover, to the consequences in retaliation, one ought to bear with others. The beauty of patience in itself, its adorning power to a Christian life, is enough to induce one to seek it as a grace. To see one calm while others storm; to see one gentle while another is harsh; to see one forbearing with another who may or may not deserve kindness is refreshing.

Patience implies the ability to put one's self in another's place and see things with another's eyes, which, indeed, is the rarest virtue. How seldom do we find people large-minded enough to see two phases of a question at once, to look on both sides of a shield, to see not only from their own point of view, but also from that of others. O, rare hearts that can understand and appreciate the motives and temptations of others!

Sympathy, then, is also implied in patience—sympathy which is able to bear even with foolish and erring ones—for is it not true that even the erring ones?—may yearn for kindness and forbearance? As Shylock said of a Jew, so may we say of the unwise: "Hath not a fool eyes? Hath not a fool hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions?—fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer as the wise?" O, rare heart that can understand the weaknesses and failures of others, and can stretch out to the lonely one who has gone out into the night a hand of sympathy, pour into the void heart that has blundered among thieves and into debt, balm! Such sympathy is not strained, but is like the gentle rain that falls from heaven upon the place beneath. It is twice blest; it blesseth him that gives and him that takes. And how many there are, in debtors' prisons of one sort and another, who sigh for the touch of a vanished hand of tenderness and the sound of a voice of compassion that is stilled!

There is another sort of patience, not implied, perhaps, in the lesson, but very necessary; and that is the patience to bear with our own misfortunes. It is a monumental virtue, one that towers out conspicuous, wherever found, as in God's servant, Job. There is a beautiful passage in the blind Milton's poem about the blind Samson, which reads:

"Many are the sayings of the wise,
In ancient and in modern books enrolled,
Extolling patience as the truest fortitude, ...
But with the afflicted in his pangs their sound
Little prevails, or rather seems a tune
Harsh and of dissonant mood from his complaint,
Unless he feel within
Some source of consolation from above,
Secret refreshings that repair his strength
And fainting spirits uphold."

Such a secret and inner spring the blind bard certainly possessed amid the trying circumstances of his life. Indeed, there is no lesson of patience more effective for the most of us tempest-tossed than the patient faces of the blind!

"Help thy foolish ones to bear,
Help thy vain worlds to bear thy light!"

Bethany Reading Courses.

SARGENT'S PROPHETS.

By Herbert L. Willett, Director.

Probably no picture has attracted more attention during the past two years than the great fresco by Sargent in Boston Public Library entitled "The Prophets." It has been reproduced in photographic and nearly every other form, and hangs in a multitude of homes, in nearly every artist's studio, and in the majority of art salesrooms. Either the whole picture or certain figures from it have become so familiar that one feels a fresh interest in the subject which the artist tries to illuminate.

The central figure is that of Moses, the great lawgiver and prophet, holding in his hands the two tables of the law with their strangely backward written inscriptions in the Hebrew tongue, and his mysterious figure clothed about with the symbols of his divine legation. On either side stands a strong, heroic figure. That on the right is Joshua, young and ardent, his sword half drawn from its scabbard in token of his martial nature. That on the left is Elijah, with bared arms, strong, upward lifted face, and girt round with a mantle which partly hides the stout staff in his hand.

Then the various other figures of the prophetic groups extend to right and left. In one of these Isaiah is central, with uplifted arms and eyes fixed on the sky. At his side stands Habakkuk, shrouded in a long, white mantle and on the other side Jeremiah, with sad, downcast face, while Jonah reads from an inscription in the rear.

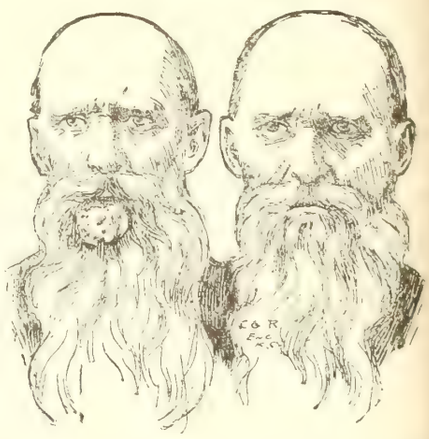
Beyond these stand the group of later prophets, all looking toward the future — Haggai and Malachi with embracing arms, and young Zachariah, rapt and expectant, while Micah, with face turned aside, covers his eyes with his uplifted hand. The group of which Ezekiel is the center shows also Daniel holding an open scroll; Nahum with mouth open as with a cry and Amos leaning upon his shepherd's crook. The last of the group reveals the most familiar of the entire series—Hosea, with mantle covering his entire person and thrown over his head like a monk's cowl; Obadiah sunk upon the ground in dejection; Joel with mantle covering his face as in despair, and Zephaniah gazing sadly upon the ground.

It is much to be able to see and appreciate such a picture as this, some of whose figures, like Hosea and Isaiah, have become better known in recent art than any other of the entire list of paintings. But it is still more worth the while to know something of these men, and thus be able to feel that thrill of appreciation with which only the Bible student can look upon such an array of familiar faces and feel within his soul that he knows them every one. And why should not these figures be familiar to us, since we have read of them from childhood? The reason that they are less understood than the apostles is because they have seemed to us like some far-off and mysterious beings who spoke out of cloudland to future generations, and had little touch with the actual affairs of the world. To realize that they were men with passions like ourselves, that they struggled with temptation as we do, but that in spite of all God used them for the highest purposes in the education of his people, is to find the secret of the interest which is drawing the world to a study of the prophets in these days.

Such is the purpose also of our course on the "Prophets of Israel" and such the value of the handbook of that course—not that it tells all that may be known of them, but that it supplies a point of view from which their activity and characteristics may be studied, and thus gives us such an introduction as makes them no longer strangers to our acquaintance.

Cancer of Lip Cured.

Regarding the Remarkable Case of Mr. John Johnson, Sullivan, Indiana.



Dear Dr. Bye: Mr. John Johnson's lip is healing up all right since the tumor dropped out after the last application. He was greatly discouraged for three or four weeks, and had it not been for me he would have abandoned the treatment, because several persons said to him: "Your lip is getting worse all the time." In the last two weeks they have changed their tune, however. Your remedy is a grand success. For the last two weeks I have bathed Mr. Johnson's lip with warm water and castile soap, and with a weakened solution of carbolic acid and water. The tumor finally came out and the lip healed rapidly. It took a month to perform a cure, but it was entirely satisfactory.

WM. T. CRAWFORD,
Pension Attorney and Real Estate Agent,
SULLIVAN, IND.

Mrs. Nancy Hughes, of Goss, Mo., says: "The cancer on my face has been removed and the sore is completely healed. I thank you and will gladly recommend your treatment for the removal of cancer."

Persons suffering with cancer should write for illustrated book, which treats cancer in all its phases, showing the action of the oils in each instance, and also their effect in the following diseases: Tumors, catarrah, piles, fistula and all forms of skin and womb diseases. Dr. Bye, Room 109, 9th and Broadway, Kansas City, U. S. A.

AMERICA'S MOST POPULAR RAILROAD
CHICAGO AND ALTON RAILROAD.
PERFECT PASSENGER SERVICE BETWEEN
ST. LOUIS AND CHICAGO.
ST. LOUIS AND KANSAS CITY.
ST. LOUIS AND PEORIA.
KANSAS CITY AND CHICAGO.
Direct connections at terminals and at junction points with through trains of connecting lines for
ALL POINTS NORTH, WEST AND EAST.

If you are contemplating a trip, any portion of which can be made over the Chicago & Alton, it will pay you to write to the undersigned for maps, pamphlets, rates, time tables, etc.

D. BOWES,
GEO. J. CHARLTON, General Western Passenger Agent, 216 North Broadway, ST. LOUIS, MO.
General Passenger and Ticket Agent, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Obituaries.

CARSON.

Isaac Carson was born in Pennsylvania Dec. 17, 1819. Died at Rock Port, Mo., May 1st, 1900. Funeral at the Christian Church at Rock Port, May 3rd, at 10 A. M., conducted by the writer. G. HALLECK ROWE.

GOODALE.

Our dear old father left us March 10 for his heavenly home, aged 93 years, 10 months and six days. Sometime in '51, I think, he was baptized by Elder Burns, having been interested in religious matters by the preaching of Burns and Jonas Hartzel of sacred memory. Grandpa had taken the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST ever since it was started as an experiment, and all that time never a week had passed that he did not have and read it. He came from Cedar County to live with us five years ago this spring, and we having the paper—he discontinued his. His death was caused by cold on his lungs and his extreme old age. Sure, a good man has gone home. May we all be prepared to meet him.

MRS. ELIZABETH GOODALE.

GREEN.

Philander Green was born in Canfield, Ohio, July 21, 1811 and died at the home of his son, F. M. Green, of Kent, O., April 18, 1900, at the age of 88 years, eight months and 27 days. He leaves two sons, F. M. Green, of Kent, O., and A. W. Green, of Alliance, O. Seven grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren, and a large circle of friends to rejoice in his long and useful life and to mourn his departure. He was "a good man and full of the Holy Spirit and of faith." A sketch of his life will appear soon. F. M. GREEN.

Kent, O.

HENDERSON.

Died, at home, three and one-half miles northwest of Westboro, Mo., Katherine, wife of Frank Henderson, April 30, 1900. She was born in Iowa, October 9, 1866. Sister Henderson confessed her faith in the Savior and was baptized in his name by the writer, at Westboro, Mo., in March, 1900. Funeral at the Waldron Grove schoolhouse, three and one-half miles northwest of Westboro, May 1, at 10 A. M., conducted by the writer.

G. HALLECK ROWE.

Rockport, Mo., May 2.

JACKSON.

Calvin J. Jackson was born in Union County, Indiana, Dec. 2, 1820, and died in Mahaska County, Ia., March 3, 1900. Bro. Jackson was twice married. Of the first union seven children are living; Jennie, Belle, Frank, John, William, Mary and Allie; of the second union, Sister Parthenia K. Jackson, his bereaved wife, and Harry D. Jackson, only child. Bro. C. J. Jackson had been a member of the Church of Christ for 40 years. He has done noble work both as a minister of the gospel and as a teacher in the Bible-school. For nearly 40 years he has discharged the duties of elder in the local church at Rose Hill. His was a singularly strong and pure life. Gifted with vigorous mental powers and possessed of a deeply spiritual nature, his life was a benediction to those about him. Sister Jaskson says of him: "His life of unceasing love, of unselfish devotion and burden-bearing, his sweet, tender, forgiving spirit, his patience under trial and affliction, his great desire to do the will of his Heavenly Father, have made the earth-life of our Savior more real to me—more fully understood." To have companied with him was a precious privilege. We do not say "he is dead;" he has simply gone a little in advance. He "walked with God, and he was not, for God took him." Funeral services from the house, conducted by Bro. W. T. Fisher, Delta, Ia.

B. E. YOUTZ.

JOHNLON.

John W. Johnson was born in Shelby county, Ill., June 18, 1831. He died at his home in Chapin, Ill., on March 14, 1900. He obeyed the gospel in 1869 and was baptized by Bro. E. G. Rice. From that time until his death he lived a devoted and faithful Christian life. He was a charter member of the Concord Christian Church, and at the time of his death was a member of the official board of that congregation. He is survived by his wife and four daughters, but they sorrow not as they who have no hope. The funeral services were held at the Christian Church at Concord, Ill., March 16, 1900, conducted by Ivan W. Agee. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

I. W. A.

MOORE.

Nannie H. Graves was born in Nichols County, Ky., on Jan. 20, 1835, and was married to H. T. Moore April 2, 1857. To this union were born nine children, eight of whom with her aged and devoted husband survive her. Sister Moore became a Christian in 1853 and for 47 years was a true disciple of Jesus Christ. It has never been the writer's privilege to know a better woman, and the entire community was shocked and saddened on the morning of April 17 when it became known that she had succumbed to that dread disease, pneumonia. Her life was one of great activity and usefulness, her disposition cheerful and always kind, and the entire community, as one person, was saddened by her death. Her children were devoted to her as was also her husband, and all, except one, were present at the funeral service which was conducted by the writer at the Christian Church in Pleasant Hill on Thursday afternoon, April 19. During her life the Moore home was ever a preachers home, and many of our Missouri brethren who have enjoyed the hospitality of these worthy Disciples will be grieved to learn of her death. In the home and in the church there's a vacant place, but we know that heaven is richer and withal brought nearer to us by her departure. We sorrow, but not as those who have no hope. CLAUDE E. HILL.

Pleasant Hill, Mo.

MORGAN.

Mrs. Susan Morgan passed into rest at her home Hannibal, Mo., April 19, 1900, aged 80 years and one month. She was for about 50 years an earnest member of the Christian Church. She passed with a sweet spirit of resignation from the activities of a busy life into the quietude of old age and welcomed the messenger who opened to her the door of entrance into the larger life.

LEVI MARSHALL.

PHILLIPS.

Josiah W. Phillips was born Sept. 16, 1823, at Crooked Farm, Allegheny county, Pa., and died April 18, 1900, at Morgantown, W. Va. In 1850 he married Miss Susan Riggs, of Library, Pa. Had he lived one month longer the golden anniversary of this happy union, perfect in its harmony, would have been celebrated—an event to which our brother was looking forward with fond anticipation. Five children blessed this union, two of whom survive him, Mrs. L. F. Bittle and Mrs. J. L. McCutcheon, both of whom married ministers of the gospel. He was laid to rest near his old home at California, Pa. Throughout his long life he was noted for honesty and piety. His devotion to his family, his championship of the poor and oppressed, and fidelity to Christ and his church won for him the love and trust of all who knew him. He had been a faithful Christian for nearly 60 years. Wherever he held his membership, whether at Lebanon, Mo., California, Pa., or Morgantown, W. Va., his aptness to teach, his excellent judgment and spiritual life well fitted him to serve his brethren as an elder of the congregation. In his last hours his thoughts were on the little congregation of which he was the oldest member. One of his very last words when he was making arrangements for his departure was: "If the Lord has any other work for me to perform I would like to live to do it; but 'all things work together for good to them that love God.'" While his loss has brought unspeakable sorrow and loneliness to his home, yet his beautiful life as well as his triumphant death will be a perpetual benediction to those nearest and dearest to him.

L. C. WOOLERY.

Morgantown, W. Va., May 7, 1900.

RANDLE.

Jacob Randle, son of Samuel and Annie Randle, was born Nov. 3rd, 1819. Departed this life on the evening of May 2nd, 1900, at the advanced age of 80 years, five months and 29 days. He was baptized by Dr. Robert Foster, when a very young man. He was married in the early 40s to Sarah Sexton. To this union one child was born, Mrs. Priscilla Best, now near Albany, Mo., who was with him during the last 10 days of his illness. His second marriage was to Elizabeth Swain, August 26th, 1849. Bro. Randle's illness began April 11th. He united with the church here March 1st, 1871. Soon after this he was elected deacon of this church. April 18th, 1895, he was chosen as one of our elders. In his social life Bro. Randle was reticent. Besides his daughter, Mrs. Best, he leaves behind his aged widow, Sister Randle, and many relatives. The funeral discourse was preached by the writer in the Christian church, to a large audience, after which the remains were laid to rest in the country cemetery near this place. J. E. MASTERS.

Dorchester, Ill., May 5, 1900.

ARE YOU
Deaf or Blind
Or Partially So?

If you have any trouble whatever with your eyes or ears write to DR. ONEAL, the noted Eye, Ear, and Catarrh Expert.

He cures the Blind and Deaf by new methods. No matter who has treated you, you never used anything like his medicines.

Over 5,000 cures of Deafness and Head Noises in the past 3 years.

DO NOT Allow Yourself to GO BLIND

Cataracts, Scum, Film, White Spots on Eyes, Granulated Lids, Weak Watery Eyes, and Sore Eyes of all kinds cured at home.

Write explaining your symptoms and he will advise you fully, and will send his 48-page illustrated book on EYE, EAR, NOSE and THROAT free of charge. Address

DR. OREN ONEAL,
Suites 650-652, 52 Dearborn St., CHICAGO.

RICHARDSON.

Bro. Jas. P. Richardson has gone to the faithful Christian's glorious home. He, with his estimable wife and nephew, Lurline, moved here from Decatur, Ill., some months ago for the purpose of regaining his health, which for some time had been failing. He was the last of five brothers, one of whom was pastor of the London Tabernacle Christian Church, England. He was born at Mt. Eden, in Spencer County, Ky., April 4th, 1848, and died here at Independence, Kan., March 30th, 1900. He became a Christian at the age of 18. At about 21 years of age he was married to Rebecca Cleveland, whom he has left behind. The services were conducted by the writer in connection with the "Modern Woodmen," of which the deceased was a member, after which the remains were sent to Decatur for burial.

J. C. COGGINS.

SANDERLIN.

Mrs. Lillie Sanderlin was born at Collierville, Tennessee, Feb. 14, 1859. At the age of 13 years she joined the Christian Church and always lived a consistent Christian life. She died April 23, 1900. She married W. F. Sanderlin, Dec. 23, 1880. To this union nine children were born. Her husband, seven children and mother survive her; two of her children preceded her to the other shore. She suffered most excruciating pain during her sickness, but not a murmur escaped her lips; she bore it all with Christian fortitude. I have never witnessed in thirty years' practice such beautiful Christian resignation. The funeral service was conducted by her physician,

DR. CLARK.

SEIFERT.

Sister Jennie Seifert was born in Springfield, Illinois, Nov. 30, 1853; died in her native city April 24, 1900. She was a faithful member of the Church of Christ. She served as organist at Cantrall and Springfield churches more than ten years. Her services were always faithful and efficient. She leaves four children to mourn their loss. The writer, a former pastor of hers, preached the funeral sermon at Springfield.

L. T. FAULDERS.

Sidell, Ill.

SHEWMAKER.

Lawrence S. Shewmaker, youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Shewmaker, was born Aug. 12th, 1899, and died April 22nd, 1900. Funeral at home and interment in Bennett Lane Cemetery.

A. R. HUNT.

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM Baking Powder

Dr. Price's Baking Powder is the true friend of all the people, rich and poor alike. It supplies a pure, wholesome leavening agent, which makes the biscuit and cake of highest healthfulness at medium cost and protects the food from alum, which is the greatest dietary danger of the day.

The foremost baking powder in all the world.

PRICE BAKING POWDER CO., CHICAGO.

NOTE.—Alum baking powders are low priced, as alum costs but two cents a pound; but alum is a corrosive poison and it renders the baking powder dangerous to use in food.

Announcements.

Program

Southern Illinois Ministerial Association, to be held at Christian Church, East St. Louis, May 22, 23, 24.

TUESEAY EVENING.

8:00. Praise Service, W. C. Swartz, Olney.
8:30. Sermon, J. H. Garrison, St. Louis.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

8:30. Devotional.
8:45. President's Address, J. F. Rosborough, Sandoval.
9:00. "The Church"—
(a) "What Constitutes a Church?" J. H. Smart, Centralia.
(b) "Its Mission," E. H. Hart, Grayville.
(c) "Its Worship," W. C. Swartz, Olney.
(d) "Its Social Life," C. W. Freeman, Mt. Carmel.
(e) "Its Benevolences," Mrs. H. M. Meier, St. Louis.
(f) "Its Literature," H. Y. Kellar, Effingham.
10:30. Discussion.
11:30. Business.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

1:30. Devotional.
1:45. "The Minister"—
(a) "His Person," J. E. Moyer, Lawrenceville.
(b) "His Qualifications," J. T. Evans, Clay City
(c) "His Influence," Dr. A. M. Buxton, Louisville.
(d) "His Relation to God and the Bible," N. J. Wright, Olney.
(e) "His Relation to the Church," G. T. Smith, Bridgeport.
(f) "His Relation to the World," W. H. Kern, DuQuoin.
3:15. Discussion.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

8:00. Praise Service.
8:30. Sermon, J. H. Stotler, Mt. Carmel.

THURSDAY MORNING.

8:30. Devotional.
8:45. "Our Attitude to the Liquor Traffic," Conference led by J. J. Harris, Marion.
9:30. "Our Attitude to Capital and Labor Questions," Conference led by W. W. Hopkins, St. Louis.
10:15. "Missions, Home and Foreign," W. Groves, Lawrenceville.
10:45. "Illinois Work," J. F. Jones, Stanford.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

1:30. Devotional.
1:45. "City Evangelization," O. A. Bartholomew, St. Louis.
2:15. "Country and Village Evangelization," E. E. Hartley, Toledo.
3:00. Discussion.
4:00. Closing Business.

THURSDAY EVENING.

8:00. Praise Service.
8:30. Sermon, F. O. Fannon, St. Louis.

Pastor W. A. Meloan and the church extend a cordial invitation.

Let us have a good attendance. Ample time for discussion.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE TABLETS. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. GROVE'S signature on each box. 25c.

Book Notes.

"Special Catalogue No. 22" is accomplishing the mission whereunto it was sent. One preacher sends for a list of eighteen books. Another list contained seventeen volumes. Still another ordered thirteen different volumes. Several orders for twelve books have been received. Scores of orders are for from five to ten of our unprecedented book bargains. Orders for one, two and three volumes are coming almost as fast as snowflakes in December. Of course we are glad, from a business standpoint, to be selling these books; but that isn't all. We rejoice for the sake of our patrons, that they are buying and reading more books than ever before.

All of Alexander Campbell's works have been reduced in price. Those which were formerly $1.50 are now selling for $1.00; those which sold for $3.00 are now selling for $2.00. "Christian Baptism," formerly sold at $1.00 and $1.25, now sells for 50 cents. The Campbell-Rice Debate has been out of print for many years, but with the exception of this volume we offer Campbell's Complete Works—eight fine volumes and three pamphlets—for EIGHT DOLLARS.

Remember our four very latest books, "Wheeling Through Europe," "Christian Science Dissected," "Leaves From Mission Fields" and "Our First Congress." These are volumes which any publisher might be proud to have issued. In matter and contents they are of great practical value; in mechanical appearance they are strictly first-class. "Christian Science Dissected" sells for 25 cents; the other three for one dollar each.

"Doctrines and Dogmas of Mormonism," by D. H. Bays, contains more practical information about Mormonism than any other book of which we know. The author was for many years a preacher of Mormonism. He knows the system from the inside, and what he writes is reliable. The book contains 459 pages, and is handsomely bound in cloth. Price, $1.50.

Drop us a postal card and we will send you two little booklets containing sample pages, title-page, price lists, etc., of "Silver and Gold" and "Tidings of Salvation," our two new song books. Church and Sunday-school music committees should be on their guard against the countless collections of trash which are being pressed upon the people. No book should be purchased until it has been given a thorough examination. This is all we ask for "Silver and Gold" and "Tidings of Salvation." Given this chance, the books will sell themselves. "Tidings of Salvation" may be had for $10 per hundred—the cheapest yet.

"Dawn of the Reformation in Missouri," by T. P. Haley, is a volume of over 500 pages, giving a very full and complete history of the beginning and progress of our cause in Missouri. The price was formerly $2,00. Now we are selling it bound in cloth for Ninety Cents!

THE CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.
St. Louis, Mo.

Homeseekers' Best Route.

The Iowa Central Railway is the most direct and best line for Homeseekers' excursionists. Tickets sold on first and third Tuesdays of each month to points in the west, northwest, south and southeast and southwest at rate of one fare plus two dollars for round trip, including Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo. Ask any coupon ticket agent for dates of sale, limit territory to which tickets are sold, or any other information, or address Geo. S. Batty, G. P. & T. A., Marshalltown, Ia.

THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.

A WEEKLY FAMILY AND RELIGIOUS JOURNAL.

Vol. xxxvii | May 24, 1900 | No. 21

CONTENTS

EDITORIAL:
- Current Events....643
- Children's Day—A Great Day....645
- A Little Child Shall Lead Them....646
- Editor's Easy Chair....646

ORIGINAL CONTRIBUTIONS:
- The Spiritual Side of Our Plea.—A. B. Jones....648
- Facts About the Origin of the F. C. M. S. —W. T. Moore....648
- Jesus and Children's Day.—J. P. Rose...649
- The Changeless and the Growing Creed. —Geo. T. Smith....650

CORRESPONDENCE:
- English Topics....655
- Tyrrell at Vandalia, Mo....655
- New York Letter....656
- B. B. Tyler's Letter....656
- Washington (D. C) Letter....657
- Texas Letter....658
- Colorado Letter....658
- The Hannibal Meeting....658
- Missouri Bible School Notes....659

FAMILY CIRCLE:
- Dreaming and Doing (poem)....663
- Beware of the First Drink....663
- The Echo Song (poem)....664
- A Helpful Suggestion....664
- A Reverie....664
- Pilgrims of the Air....665
- Recipe for Peacemaking....665
- A Wise Mother....666

MISCELLANEOUS:
- Our Budget....651
- Personal Mention....654
- Missionary....660
- Evangelistic....662
- With the Children....667
- Sunday-school....668
- Christian Endeavor....669
- Bethany Reading Courses....669
- Announcements....670
- Marriages and Obituaries....671

Subscription $1.50

H. W. EVEREST. (SEE PAGE 653.)

PUBLISHED BY

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY

1522 LOCUST ST., ST. LOUIS

Where will you attend School the Coming Term?

Before deciding, send for Catalogue of the Northern Indiana Normal School and Business College.

VALPARAISO, INDIANA,

And Consider the Advantages Offered.

This Institution is thoroughly equipped and offers a greater list of subjects from which students may select their work than any other school in the land.

ORGANIZAION. The Institution was organized September 16, 1873, with an enrollment of thirty-five students. The attendance has increased until now, this is the LARGEST NORMAL SCHOOL IN THE UNITED STATES.

While the attendence is thus large, yet the classes are so sectioned that students have the same advantage of reciting as though the attendance did not exceed 300. Work is offered in the following DEPARTMENTS: Preparatory, Teachers, Psychology and Pedagogy, Kindergarten, Penmanship, Scientific, Classic, Higher English, Biology, Geology and Mineralogy, Engineering, Elocution and Oratory, Pharmacy, Medical, Musical, Fine Art, Law, Commercial, Phonography and Typewriting, Review.

With the exception of private lessons in music, one tuition pays for work in any or all of these departments.

CHARACTER OF THE WORK. The high grade of work done at the school has never been questioned by any one who has become familiar with its workings. Credits received here are accepted in the best Universities everywhere.

PROFESSIONAL WORK. Now no other school exceeds this in the amount of professional work done. With reference to the thoroughness of this work, we refer to any educator, whether he has been a patron of the school or not.

NEW BUILDING. A new Science Hall is now in process of erection and when completed and equipped, will cost $40,000. It is the purpose of the school to give not only the regular work done in the Sciences, but special work as well.

VISITORS. Every year many prominent educators, from all parts of the land, visit the school. These are always welcome, we are glad to give them every opportunity to investigate the workings of the institution.

School is in session the entire year. Students may enter at any time.

EXPENSE. Upon investigation, we believe that any one will find that expenses here are less than at any other place offering anything like equal advantages. Tuition, $10 per term. Good board and well-furnished room, $1.50 to $1.90 per week.

CALENDAR FOR 1900. Summer or Review Term—Will open June 5, 1900, and will continue Ten Weeks. Fall Term—Will open September 4, 1900, and will continue Ten Weeks. First Winter Term—Will open November 13, 1900, and will continue Ten Weeks. Second Winter Term—Will open January 22, 1901, and will continue Ten Weeks. Catalogue mailed free. Address,

H. B. BROWN, Pres. or O. P. KINSEY, Vice-Pres., Valparaiso, Ind.

POSITIONS GUARANTEED under reasonable conditions; car fare paid; board, $10-$11; catalog free; no vacation.
DRAUGHON'S PRACTICAL BUS. Colleges.
St. Louis; Nashville, Tenn.; Savannah, Ga.; Montgomery, Ala.; Galveston, Tex.; Fort Worth, Tex.; Little Rock, Ark.; Shreveport, La. Indorsed by merchants and bankers. Best patronized in South. Bookkeeping, Shorthand, etc., taught by mail. Begin any time. Address (at either place) Draughon's College.

DIVINITY SCHOOL
—OF—
HARVARD UNIVERSITY
CAMBRIDGE, MASS.
AN UNDENOMINATIONAL SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY.
ANNOUNCEMENT FOR 1900-01, NOW READY

...The... Standard Dictionary.

We have for sale a number of sets of the Standard Dictionary, in two volumes, bound in full morocco, thumb index, etc. This is undoubtedly the completest and best dictionary of the English language ever published. The regular price of the set, in this binding, is Twenty-six Dollars. We offer the set, spick, span and new for Thirteen Dollars.

At this price, the purchaser pays express charges. Cash must accompany order. We have only a few sets, and when these are exhausted can supply no more at the same rate.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.

Learn to Talk Well.....

The man has the advantage in life who learns to talk well, to meet people, to make a speech, write a paper, or deliver a lecture. The DRAKE UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF ORATORY AND ENGLISH, Des Moines, Iowa, is the place to study Elocution, Literature, or Physical Culture.

ED AMHERST OTT, Lecturer, Author, Dean.

THE
Christian - Evangelist.

J. H. GARRISON, Editor.
W. W. HOPKINS, W. E. GARRISON,
Assistant Editors.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

SINGLE SUBSCRIPTIONS:

Single subscriptions, new or old.....$1.50 each
Ministers.....1.00 "

CLUB RATES.

25 or more copies.....$1.00 each

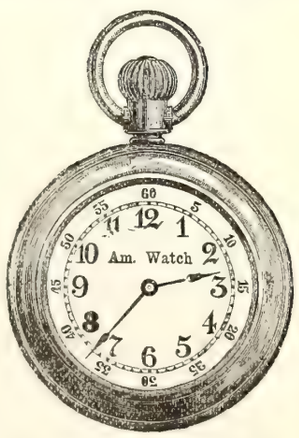
All subscriptions payable in advance. Label shows the month up to the first day of which your subscription is paid. If an earlier date than the present is shown, you are in arrears. Paper will be discontinued at end of time paid for if express orders to that effect accompany payment of subscription. Arrears should be paid when discontinuance is ordered.

If paper fails to reach you regularly please notify us at once.

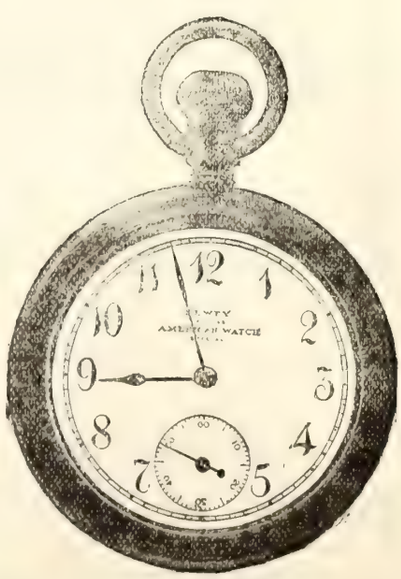
In ordering a change of post office, please give the OLD as well as the NEW address.

Do not send local check, but use Post Office or Express Money Order, or Draft on St. Louis, Chicago or New York, in remitting.

ADDRESS, CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING CO.,
1522 Locust St. St. Louis, Mo.



Ladies' Watch. Actual Size.



Gentlemen's Watch—Actual Size.

THE DEWEY WATCH

Case Made of Steel From

THE WRECK OF THE MAINE

BEAUTIFULLY OXYDIZED

Special Movement Made By

THE AMERICAN WALTHAM WATCH CO.

A Beautiful Ornament.

A Valuable Souvenir.

A Splendid Time-Piece.

Recommended by the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST.
Guaranteed by the manufacturers.

FIVE DOLLARS

PAYS FOR ONE YEAR'S SUBSCRIPTION

TO

The Christian-Evangelist

And Secures For You

ONE OF THESE WATCHES

OFFER TO OLD OR NEW SUBSCRIBERS ALIKE

FIVE NEW SUBSCRIBERS

Secured by You For

The Christian-Evangelist

AT... $1.50 EACH

Will Entitle You to One of These Watches Without Cost to You

REMEMBER,
The five subscribers must be new ones.

THE CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST

"IN FAITH, UNITY; IN OPINION AND METHODS, LIBERTY; IN ALL THINGS, CHARITY."

Vol. xxxvii. St. Louis, Mo., Thursday, May 24, 1900. No. 21.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The strike among the street car employes of this city drags its slow length along, to the great inconvenience of the public and with occasional scenes of disorder. The granting of an injunction by the United States Court last week against any interference with the mail cars on the part of the strikers or their sympathizers is so worded as to give protection to the wires, the tracks and car houses and all the property of the company, and has proved to be a valuable adjunct in preserving order. About three hundred out of eight hundred cars of the Transit Company are now running under police protection, and the street car managers promise to have other lines in operation soon. It is greatly to be regretted that the efforts of the Business Men's League and of the Merchants' Exchange to bring about a mutual agreement failed in their object after coming so near to success. The only remaining point of difference between the strikers and their employers was on the question of the Transit Company's receiving back into their employ all the original employes who went into the strike. The company claims that this would necessitate the dismissal of men they had employed to take the place of the strikers, with the promise of permanent employment, and that if they violated this agreement their employer could not rely upon them to keep their promise in any case. Negotiations were then broken off and at this writing they have not been resumed. It seems to us that this single point of difference might well have been submitted to a committee of fair-minded men, representing both sides, for arbitration. Whatever may be the merits of the question at issue, the people of the city are determined that law shall be enforced, order preserved and the street car service resumed at an early day. It is not reasonable that a city of 700,000 population should submit to such loss and inconvenience because of a difference of opinion between street car managers and their employes. Some way must be found by which these questions can be settled without inflicting so great a loss upon the public and upon the parties immediately concerned in the strike.

There is one phase of the strike that is of commanding importance. The executive committee of the Union has called for a sympathetic strike on the part of other labor Unions of the city. If this were responded to by all the Union men in the various lines of business, it would paralyze the business of the city, and bring untold loss and suffering upon the people, and could in no way, so far as we are able to see, benefit the cause of the strikers. We can see how a call for assistance, in the way of contributions from other Unions to support the men engaged in the strike, might be helpful to them, in assisting them to hold out, but the principle involved in the sympathetic strike seems to us essentially wrong, and is as serious an abuse of power as any trust is guilty of which destroys competition and oppresses the people in its own interest. We do not believe that the public sentiment of this country will ever endorse what is called the "sympathetic" strike, that is the striking of men who have no grievance with their employers, who are receiving satisfactory wages and satisfactory treatment, and thus inflicting great injury upon their employers themselves and the public, in order to express their opposition to a wrong which they believe some other corporation has committed against another class of labor. This is wrong in principle, wrong in policy, and the strikers that resort to it will be sure to call down upon themselves, sooner or later, the opposition of that public sentiment without which no strike can succeed. We are glad to state, however, that, so far, there has been little or no response to this appeal for a sympathetic strike, and we sincerely hope that we are near the amicable and just settlement of this unfortunate trouble.

Two important labor bills were passed in the House last week by a strong majority vote. One of the bills extends the eight-hour law to all laborers employed under contract upon government work, and the other prohibits interstate traffic in prison-made goods by bringing them under the jurisdiction of the police powers of the state. The eight-hour bill passed is designed to carry the law of 1892 to its logical conclusion. The adoption of this law now broadly covering all government work means the employment of more men, and also strongly commends the further adoption of the rule in the industrial world. It will also have its corresponding influence upon wages to the credit of the laborer. The bill was passed under a suspension of the rules by a vote of 151 to 24. Thus by peaceful methods the rights of the laborer are being recognized and guarded by legislation.

The relief of Mafeking was officially announced in Pretoria on the 18th instant. The news had been previously announced in London, but was not confirmed until the Pretoria dispatch had been published. The enthusiasm in London over the news is said to have equaled that of the relief of Ladysmith. Mafeking was besieged immediately after the declaration of war in South Africa and has bravely withstood repeated assaults, heavy bombardments and the ravages of hunger and disease until relieved. The pluck and heroism of the town and garrison has been of the most remarkable quality, and Baden-Powell has justly achieved the title of "a hero." The details of the seige have appeared from time to time in the press dispatches but the details of the succor of the garrison are not yet officially reported. That the relief came in as a part of General Roberts' sweeping movement seems evident at this writing. Every opposition is receding before his rapid movements and the end of the war is at hand.

The relief of Mafeking was effected May 17 by a composite column 2,300 strong, led by Colonel Mahan. This column was organized by General Hunter, and consisted of Imperial Light Horse, from Ladysmith, Kimberley Mounted Corps, Royal Horse Artillery and pom-pom, a select body of infantry from the Fusillier Brigade, and a special equipment of light-springed mule transports. The column left Barkley West May 4 and reached Vryburg May 11. After a fight with a Boer column that had been following them, Colonel Mahan joined Colonel Plumer May 15, and two days later Mafeking was in their hands. This expedition was accomplished in a remarkably short period of time after its organization, and their signal success was due largely to their rapid movements. The loss of Mafeking to the Boers greatly weakens the defense of Pretoria, as it opens the way to Lord Roberts to approach their citadel from the west.

Just previous to the relief of Mafeking a few days Baden-Powell gained a signal victory over the Boers investing the town. In making what proved to be their last attempt to take the place they fell into a trap, in which they suffered a loss of their commander, Sarel Eloff, President Kruger's grandson, and 150 men. More than half of their loss, however, were in prisoners, among whom was their commander. This signal defeat, followed by the approach of the relief column, seems to have disheartened the Boers, and led them to abandon the place to the British without further resistance. General Roberts' army is now advancing upon Pretoria from different quarters and with but little resistance. It was reported that President Kruger had sued for peace, but that report is now denied. The opinion still prevails that Pretoria will be defended to the last ditch.

The long political contest in Kentucky, which has been attended with so much excitement, and which has not been without its tragic phases, has been ended at last, so far as its legal phase is concerned, by the decision of the Supreme Court. The decision as handed down by Chief Justice Fuller, is in effect that the Supreme Court has no jurisdiction in the case. "It is obviously essential to the independence of the states, and to their peace and tranquility," says Justice Fuller, "that their power to prescribe the qualifications of their officers, and the tenure of their offces, the manner of their election, and the ground on which, the tribunal before which, and the mode in which, such elections may be contested, should be exclusive and free from external interference, except so far as plainly provided by the Constitution of the United States; and where controversies over the election of state officers have reached the state courts in the manner provided, and have been determined in accordance with state constitutions and laws, the cases must necessarally be rare in which the inteference of this court can be properly evoked." The Chief Justice then cites a number of cases in which this principle is set forth, and adds: "For more than one hundred years the constitution of Kentucky has provided that contested elections for governor and lieutenant-governor shall be determined by the General Assembly. The highest court of the state has ever held, and in the present case has again declared that under their constitutional provisions the power of the General Assembly to determine the result is exclusive, and that its decision is not open to judicial revision." Justices McKenna, Brewer and Harlan read dissenting opinions, Justice Harlan differing entirely from the decision of the majority, and the others on certain points. Justice Harlan holds that the Supreme Court has jurisdiction in a case like this, else it would follow that "while we may inquire whether the citizen's land or his mules have been taken from him by the legislative, executive or judiciary authorities of his state, without due process of law, we may not inquire whether the legislature or the judicial authorities of the state have without due process of law ousted one lawfully elected and holding the office of governor for a fixed term with a salary which cannot be diminished during such term, and put into his place one whom the people have said should not exercise the authority appertaining to that high position."

The above decision of the Supreme Court had been anticipated by most people, including Gov. Taylor himself, who accepts the same gracefully and yields the place to Gov. Beckham. There is, no doubt, room for difference of opinion as to the merits of the decision, as indicated by the dissenting opinions of the other Justices, but, on the whole, we think the preponderance of public opinion will endorse the decision as safe and conservative, even though it may and does, perhaps, work hardships in the present case. The effort to throw full responsibility on ach branch of the government for the decision of its own questions, and upon each state to solve its own domestic problems, within the limits of the Constitution of the United States, seems to us to be wise. Once it is clearly understood that the state legislature, acting under the forms of law, is the final tribunal for deciding who is elected governor and lieutenant-governor, the people will guard with all the greater vigilance the purity of the box, and will see that wise election laws are enacted to that end. If any injustice is done by this decision, if the will of the people of Kentucky has been perverted by the act of the General Assembly of that state, the remedy is to be found at the ballot box, and there the appeal must be made, and no doubt will be made. If the Goebel law tends to prevent the will of the people from being registered at the ballot box, the people of Kentucky will in time remove it from the statutes of the state. Kentucky and the country generally are to be congratulated on the termination of this long-pending contest, and let us hope that in this particular history will not repeat itself again.

The Boer envoys who have been sent to this country by the South African Republic to represent their cause and to plead for assistance from this government, have been received both at New York and in Washington with a great deal ot sympathy and enthusiasm, and many kind words have been spoken to them and for them since their arrival. They have been received at Washington by Secretary Hay, and have been accorded every mark of respect; but, of course, no assurance, or intimation even, has been given to them that this government can interfere in any way with the war in South Africa. Secretary Hay reminded the envoys of the action formerly taken by this government in tendering its good offices in the interest of peace, and said to them: "The President sympathizes heartily in the sincere desire of all the people of the United States that the war which is now afflicting South Africa may, for the sake of both parties engaged, come to a speedy close, but having done his full duty in preserving a strict neutral position between them, and in siezing the first offer that presented itself for tendering his good offices in the interests of peace, he feels that, in the present circumstances, no course is open to him, except to persist in the policy of impartial neutrality. To deviate from this would be contrary to all our traditions and all our national interests, and would lead to consequences which neither the President nor the people of the United States should regard with favor." It has been arranged that the Boer representatives be received by the President at the White House in an unofficial character. They will meet with a cordial reception there and everywhere, but any hope which they may entertain that this government can or will do anything to terminate the present struggle in South Africa is in vain. Both parties having appealed to arms, the issue must be decided by themselves, and the sooner it is decided, and the greater the magnanimity with which the defeated party is treated, the better will the American people be pleased.

But few people realize the magnitude of the oil industry in California. The output last year is given at 2,292,123 barrels, and it is said that these figures will be exceeded this year. The Union Oil Company now owns 100,000 acres of oil land in California and has wells that have been pumped steadily for twenty-four years. This company has produced 3,000,000 barrels of oil from one thousand acres of its land. Oil traces are found throughout the state, but the richest oil lands are said to be in the counties of Fresno, Los Angeles, Ventura, Santa Barbara, Orange, Kern and Santa Clara. But paying lands are by no means confined to these counties. An expert in oil lands has said that there is more oil in California than in any five states of the Union, including Pennsylvania, Ohio and Virginia. If any one wishes more accurate information on this subject let him send for the exclusive petroleum oil number of The Times, Los Angeles, Cal., and he will find figures and facts that are simply marvelous. California now ranks fourth among the oil producing states, and in the opinion of experts will before many years take front rank in this industry.

Encouraging progress has been made with the bill for the World's Fair celebrating the centennial of the Louisiana Purchase, in St. Louis. The committee having the matter in charge, it is said, will make a unanimous report in favor of the appropriation by Congress of the five million dollars necessary to insure the success of the enterprise. This, with the ten million dollars guaranteed by St. Louis, makes a respectable sum by which the proposed Fair may be made to compare favorably with other World's Fairs of recent date. An amendment has been suggested to the bill, by which the government is to share proportionately in any profits that may result from the Fair, along with the city and the citizens who subscribe to the fund. It is hardly probable, we think, that this amendment will be insisted upon, since it is not proposed that the government enter into partnership with the city of St. Louis and share with it any losses that may result beyond the amounts contributed. It is held by the friends of the bill, therefore, that since this is the case, and it has not been the custom in similar appropriations to attach this condition, it ought not to be insisted on in this case. The unanimity of sentiment on the propriety of holding such an Exposition in celebration of the Louisiana Purchase, so far as it has been expressed, is remarkable, and it is altogether probable that if the committee agrees on the provisions of the bill that it will pass Congress with little or no opposition. What the people of St. Louis fear most is not so much the defeat of the bill, as it is postponement until a later session of Congress, leaving the whole matter in uncertainty for some time to come. This would be unfortunate, as there is not too much time to make all the necessary preparations for so gigantic an enterprise as the Fair is proposed to be. We hope next week to be able to report favorable action upon the bill, believing that such an exhibition of the best products of our civilization in this city would prove of great benefit, not only to the states included in the Louisiana Purchase, but to the entire country, and to all nations participating.

The annual meeting of the Bible Society was held in New York City May 10th. The Eighty-fourth Annual Report of the Board of Managers was presented, in substance as follows: Nineteen Life Directors were constituted during the year by the payment of one hundred and fifty dollars, and three hundred and ten Life Members were constituted by the payment of thirty dollars each. Receipts were $286,029. Cash balance, $18,265. The Society's drafts to meet obligations in foreign lands to the amount of $20,864 were outstanding at the close of the financial year. The apportionments already made for the foreign work during the current year amount to $192,260. Invested funds were increased by legacies and gifts during the year $43,300, and the total amount on the 31st of March, 1900, was $459,952. The income from these permanent funds for the past year was $18,126. The Society has other assets which are available for its general purposes. Their par value on the 31st of March, 1900, was $158,703.

The 112th General Assembly convened in this city May 17th, and after an eloquent sermon by the retiring moderator, Rev. Robt. F. Sample, D. D., LL.D., of New York, proceeded to the election of a new moderator, which honor fell upon Rev. Chas. A. Dickey, now of Philadelphia, but formerly of St. Louis. The election of Rev. Chas. A. Dickey is supposed to lend strength to the liberal element of the Assembly and to the question of creed revision which will come up at this session for consideration. One of our papers gives the following brief sketch of the new moderator's life:

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Dickey, the new moderator, is the third moderator in succession from Washington and Jefferson College, where he graduated in 1857. He was born in December, 1838, in Wheeling, W. Va., graduated from the United Presbyterian Theological Seminary, and was pastor of the Fourth United Presbyterian Church in Allegheny, Pa., for many years. His lifelong friend, Rev. Dr. S. J. Nicholls, brought him to this city, and he was for several years pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. He is now chief pastor of John Wanamaker's church, Bethany Presbyterian Church, in Philadelphia, and is president of the Presbyterian Hospital Association of that city.

The action of the General Conference on the popular amusement question is not likely to leave any room for believing that the Methodist Church contemplates any relaxation of discipline toward indulgence in things detrimental to spiritual life. The committee having charge of this matter have decided to recommend that the section of prohibited amusements be taken out and that a new section be inserted in the chapter on advices. The paragraph recommended for insertion reads as follows:

Our church has from the beginning of its history insisted that dancing, playing at games of chance, attending theaters, horse races, dancing parties, circuses or patronizing dancing schools and other amusements which cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus, are perilous to the spiritual life and influence of the members of our church and enervating to the spiritual power of the church in the great work of saving souls. The tendency in social circles toward amusements was never stronger than it is at the present time, and therefore we deem it wise to reaffirm our historic attitude upon this subject and urge our people to abstain from and bear their unwavering ties against all amusements and diversions which endanger Christian life and repress the spiritual power of the church. This advice must not be interpreted as the waiving churches' right to call to account any member who continues to indulge in these diversions which cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus."

CHILDREN'S DAY—A GREAT DAY.

One of the great days in our missionary calendar is the first Lord's day in June, which is known as Children's Day. It is a great day for the children. They look forward to it with interest. It is their day. On this one Sunday in the year, if on no other, the children come to the front and control the order of exercises. It is their songs, their recitations, their offerings that give character to the services of the day. This fact has vast and far-reaching educational influence on the children. The proper observance of the day and the preparation for the day, including some teaching and practice in self-denial, cannot fail to have a most wholesome effect on the future character of the children.

It is a great day for the Sunday-schools. Organizations and institutions thrive in proportion as they serve some useful purpose. Children's Day helps to give the Sunday-school a definite aim, a Christian purpose, in helping on the work of saving the world. An institution must have some purpose outside of itself in order to have the clearest right to exist and the highest claim for sympathy and support. Children's Day supplies this unselfish, altruistic aim to the Sunday-school, and thereby imparts to it a new dignity and value. Many who might otherwise "grow out of the Sunday-school" grow up in it, bound to it by associations sacred and tender, of lessons learned and service rendered.

It is a great day for the churches. Children in Christian training are the brightest jewels of the church. They are its future wealth. No church can have a better object-lesson than a Children's Day service, in which the little ones sing Christ's praise and make their little free-will offerings in His name for the conversion of the heathen world to Him. Thus it is that the prophetic words are true that "a little child shall lead them." The children in our homes, our Junior Societies and Sunday-schools are leading us to a higher appreciation of the joy and the blessedness of giving. Every congregation whose school observes Children's Day will be blessed by it, and will be the richer for it in proportion to the time and thought given to it.

It is a great day for our Foreign Missions. It means much now; it means more for the future. Think of what a blessing to the work in foreign fields is the aggregate sum of these little offerings, amounting to nearly $40,000 the past year, and likely to swell to $50,000 the present year! What would our foreign secretaries do without this help from the children? Let the children understand they are giving about one-third of the total amount contributed for Foreign Missions and they will feel that they are an important factor in the work of missions. And then the future! Who can tell to what magnitude these Children's Day offerings will grow? Who can forecast how many missionaries will grow up among these children and go to the foreign field?

In view of all these consequences are we not justified in calling the first Lord's day in June "a great day?" And ought we not to give to Children's Day the most thoughtful, prayerful and painstaking preparation, that it may best serve these worthy ends?

Dun's Review for the week ending May 19th, opens with the following statement on commercial and financial conditions:

Business is not what it was a year ago, but men do not agree in defining the difference. The working force, then increasing fast, is now decreasing. Works are stopping to relieve excessive output in manufactures of paper, cotton, wool, leather and some forms of steel, while prices are suddenly reduced for the same purpose in lead, wire and nails. What seems to some "merely spring dullness," others think "the beginning of reaction." The remedy for one difficulty does not fit the other, and there is more need than usual for close attention to the meaning of events.

While there is nothing alarming in the above diagnosis of the business world, there is food for reflection. The speculative element in business is an uncertain quantity, and it is not always possible for the public to know to what extent regular trade is influenced by this element. "Close attention to the meaning of events" is, therefore, a bit of timely advice from the wisdom of R. G. Dun & Co., to which the public would do well to give heed at this time.

Hour of Prayer.

"A LITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM."

(Isa. 11:1-10.)

(Uniform Midweek Prayer-meeting Topic, May 30.)

CENTRAL TRUTH: There is a golden age coming in which all discords will be harmonized, and when the gentler and the moral forces shall dominate the world.

This is a striking Messianic passage. It is a picture of a golden age yet to be. It is characteristic of the prophetic writings that they all look forward to a brighter day —to the complete triumph of righteousness. The pagan nations place their golden age in the past. In this the Bible writers are distinguished from pagan religious writers.

Isaiah sees that the future triumph of righteousness will come through a deliverer who shall be a descendant of Jesse. The characteristics of the deliverer are given, among which are wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, righteousness in his own character and righteous judgments, and the power of judgment against the wicked.

The characteristics of the age which this deliverer was to introduce are next set forth. The wolf and the lamb are to dwell together, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; also the calf and the young lion and the fatling; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the suckling child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice's den. "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain."

The reason assigned for this universal peace, extending even to the domain of nature, is specially significant. "For the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." This shows that the language of the prophet is a strong figurative expression of the moral changes to be brought about by the preaching of the gospel and the extension of Christ's reign. All the animosities and antagonisms among men shall be removed, and universal brotherhood shall prevail. Nature itself and all animal creation is to share in this restoration of the earth to its rightful relation to God.

In this process of bringing in universal peace and righteousness, through the extension of the knowledge of the Lord, it is recorded that "a little child shall lead them." Jesus said of little children, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." They represent ideal citizens in the kingdom of God, in their humility, purity, trust and teachableness. The church has been slow to recognize this ideal type of citizenship. It is a noteworthy feature of modern times that the children have come into new prominence, not simply as worthy of special training and care, but as active agents for extending Christ's reign.

The Sunday-school and the Junior Endeavor Society are showing us, not only what children can learn, but what they can do for the Master who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me." Children's Day has become a recognized feature of our missionary activity. Beginning as a little rill or rivulet, it has grown to be a mighty river, which increases its depth and width every year. Nearly $40,000 was contributed by the children last year on Children's Day, and it is believed that $50,000 will be given by them on our next Children's Day, the first Lord's day in June. In unselfishly giving for Christ's sake, as in other things, the children are leading us. Let us encourage them in their gifts that they may lead us to a higher degree of missionary consecration.

PRAYER.

Our Father in heaven, we thank Thee for the glorious vision given to Thy prophets of old of a golden age to be, and we praise Thee for the gift of Christ, through whom this vision is to be realized. We thank Thee for the children and for the many lessons they are teaching us. May they lead us to a better understanding of Thy kingdom and to greater consecration in extending it over the world. In His name. Amen!

Editor's Easy Chair.

One sees things best by contrast. After spending ten days in the crowded city of New York and traveling through the eastern portion of the country, with only a few days of interval at home we were called into Oklahoma Territory, from which we have just returned, after a tour of ten days. Such a journey eastward and westward gives one a vivid impression of the greatness of our country—great in geographical extent, great in its agricultural, mineral and other resources, and great in the energy and enterprise of its population. Our first stop in Oklahoma was at Pond Creek, the county seat of Grant County, in what is known as "The Strip," the last part of the territory to be opened for settlement. We visited this section of the territory six years ago, only a few months after the great rush for homes had been made. At that time the country was beautiful, indeed, with young buffalo grass and its long stretches of undulating plains, but there was little else that was attractive. Dug-outs and "shacks" dotted the wide-stretching prairies, but improvements had scarcely begun. It was not even known at that time what the country was good for. It was in its experimental stage. Six years have brought about a wonderful change. Everywhere, now, one sees fields of waving wheat, of young corn, of growing orchards. Respectable-looking dwelling houses, too, have taken the place of the dug-out, or sod-house, and the shack. Schoolhouses and churches have gone up like magic, and all the necessary adjuncts of civilization are in evidence. Perhaps nothing in the history of the world has equaled the rapidity with which this portion of our national domain has been transformed from an uninhabited hunting ground, roamed over by Indian tribes, into an abode of civilization, filled with prosperous homes, thriving villages and growing young cities.

We have never seen, anywhere, in ar country, finer wheatfields than we saw i Oklahoma on this journey. Some of th fields we visited were immense in area, th wheat reaching the armpit and standin very thickly on the ground. When swaye by the wind, these fields presented th aspect of the sea, with its billows, witho the whitecaps. Many of these wheatfield will produce from forty to fifty bushels pe acre. Nor is wheat the only product of th country. Crops of growing corn and oat and fields covered with a luxurious growt of alfalfa, were seen on every side. Okla homa has proved to be, too, one of the bes cotton countries we have, producing no only a good yield, but a high grade of cot ton. The country is well watered an healthful. The only disagreeable featur that we noticed was the high winds whic prevailed for two or three days during ou stay, but these winds, we were told, nearl always precede and bring on the rain. I this case they were followed by mos copious rain, which seemed to preva throughout the territory. On the sam night on which these rains began, news wa received of the passage of the free home bill by the Senate without a dissentin vote, after its previous passage by th House. The territory was wild with joy Sky rockets rent the air and the explosio of dynamite carried the good news from th towns and cities to more distant settle ments. Dennis Flynn was the hero of th hour. For eight years this bill has bee his hobby and its passage, at last, put within his reach any office he may ask o the people of Oklahoma.

Pond Creek lies near a stream of th same name and has a population of abou 1,600, being as above stated, the county seat of Grant County. It has an excellen high school, the graduating exercises o which were in progress on the evening of ou arrival. We reached the operahouse, where the commencement exercises were being held, in time to give a brief address to the graduating class. A large audience, which more than filled the building, was present to witness these exercises. On the follow ing day, being Saturday, we attended the annual high school picnic in a grove on Pond Creek, about three miles from the town. It is a beautiful natural park which has been set apart by the legislature of the territory for the use of the precinct as a park. A large concourse of people was present, and there were recitations by school children and music by the glee clubs from Pond Creek and other neighboring towns. It was a good opportunity to study the character of the people and to witness their sociability and their neighborly qualities. Everybody seemed to know everybody else, and they were on free and easy terms with each other. Though a busy time of the year, the people had left their farms and shops and come together in wagons, carriages, on horseback and on foot, to meet each other and have a good time together. The people brought their dinners with them and spread bounteous repasts under the shade of the great trees while they discussed politics, religion and free homes. It was delightful to see the people thus come together without regard to denominational or political lines and mingle freely together as neighbors, mutually interested in building up the community and establishing a high type of civilization. It carried us back to the days of our boyhood, when, in the rural districts of Missouri, the people came together on the Fourth of July for a barbecue and for a patriotic demonstration. These gatherings seem an essential feature of the life of a new country, helping as they do to foster that unity and mutual interest in each other which is so essential to the welfare of the community.

On Lord's day, by request, we delivered the baccalaureate sermon to the graduates of the High School in the forenoon, and preached again at night, both meetings being held in the Opera House. There were large and appreciative audiences at both these meetings. We have a young church in this town, which holds its meetings in the schoolhouse, having no building of its own. The church has recently engaged Bro. Monday as its preacher, and they are planning to build a house of worship as soon as possible. They have a good Sunday-school and Endeavor Society, and some of the most substantial men of the place and of the community are members. Under wise and energetic leadership there is no good reason why this church, with such material as it already possesses, should not occupy a leading, if not the leading, place among the religious factors of the community. Our visit to Pond Creek was chiefly for the purpose of visiting a brother, William Garrison, who has for several years been a member of the Oklahoma Senate, and who has given himself unstintedly to the promotion of the welfare of the territory, and whose health has been materially impaired by this service. Bro. J. W. Hopwood, known to many of our readers, resides near Pond Creek, and has been dividing his time between preaching and teaching and farming. His influence in whatever capacity he labors, with that of his excellent family, is always for the best interests of the cause and the community. The church has received recently some material additions to its strength by brethren who have moved into the community from Missouri and other states, and who have taken their places in the work of the church. We were delighted with this community, and when we learned the price of farms thereabouts, it was a wonder to us that more people were not availing themselves of the opportunity of securing cheap homes in a young and growing country.

A further object of our visit to the territory was to attend the annual meeting of our Ministerial Institute, which was held at Norman, in the southern part of the territory. The journey there gave us a good opportunity to note the development of the territory and to further appreciate its splendid possibilities in the future. The route led us by Kingfisher, El Reno and Oklahoma City, all thriving young cities. The meeting at Norman was not largely attended, being on one side of the territory, but the program was well arranged and fairly well carried out, though there were a number of absences. It was delightful to meet and have fellowship with such men as Bro. W. A. Humphrey, of Guthrie, the corresponding secretary of the territory and the chairman of the institute; Dr. H. R. Walling; C. W. Van Dolah, of Shawnee; Bro. Barney, of Perry; Bro. Carpenter, of Chandler; Bro. Wherry, of Norman; Bro. Marshall, of Oklahoma City; Bro. Puckett, and Bro. D. D. Boyle, who is engaged in a protracted meeting in the church at Norman; also Vernon Rose, who is in a meeting at Edmonds. The weather was against us in the way of local attendance, but the papers and discussions were of great value. By the invitation of President Boyd of the State University, which is located at this place, we addressed the students on Thursday morning at which time the institute visited the school in a body. The building is charmingly located on a high ground overlooking the town and country round about. There had been an enrollment of about three hundren students, though about one hundred and seventy-five were present at this time. Referring to the need of religion in education, mentioned in our address, President Boyd said the University would most gladly welcome biblical instruction in connection with the University, from our own or any other religious body that would establish such instruction near it. The church has a good building and is served by our young brother, W. W. Wherry, who is greatly esteemed by the church and community. Bro. Boyle was having a good meeting with prospects of larger success.

We reached Oklahoma City in the afternoon of Thursday and an appointment having been made for us, we addressed a good audience at night in the Christian Church at that place. We were delighted to find as large and prosperous a church in this, the chief city of Oklahoma. The city has a population of 15,000 or more, and has made rapid growth in the last year. The house was well filled with a very appreciative audience. Bro. J. B. Boen had that day returned home from a three or four months' visit to Palestine and Europe. Bro. Marshall has been supplying for him during his absence and kept the work moving. It was a joyful meeting to the church, greeting their pastor and his wife, for she too had been absent in Texas during his visit to the East. We were delighted with the reception we received in this church and with the spirit of aggressiveness which was manifest. Ours is the chief church in the city and has before it a useful career if it shall continue to be wisely managed. Leaving Oklahoma City the next morning by the Frisco, we came through a section of the Indian Territory which, like its close neighbor, Oklahoma, is rich in its undeveloped resources and which probably should be identified with it eventually in the blessings and privileges of statehood. This would make one of the strongest and wealthiest states in the Union in time to come. The capital, at Guthrie and the State University down at Norman have been located with a view to the union of these two territories into one state. Now that the Indian problem is practically solved, there remains few obstacles in the way of the admission of this territory into statehood. Dropping off in Southwest Missouri we preached Lord's day morning in the village of Crane, to an overflowing house, gathered at short notice. Our church here is building a new house of worship, which will be ready for dedication in a few weeks. All through Southwest Missouri our cause is looking more hopeful as we are securing more permanent pastors for the chief towns and cities. We reached St. Louis Monday morning, completing the circuit of about 1,200 miles through Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Indian Territory and were impressed anew with the magnitude of this great Southwestern field and with its splendid future, if only it can be dominated by the religion of Christ and the civilization which it produces.

Christian Orphan School of Missouri.

The friends of this institution throughout Missouri will be glad to know that there is now a prospect of speedy liquidation of the debts which have so long existed.

The success of the school in the face of the difficulties created by the debts has challenged the esteem of its founders. The public are already familiar with the fact that during the past ten years the enrollment has been over 1,100 pupils. Of this number 180 were gratuitously educated, 325 were part beneficiaries, and the remainder were full-pay pupils. The efficiency and thoroughness of the graduates of this institution have commended them to the public esteem, and many of the young ladies occupy positions of usefulness in the public schools.

The directors, who met in Kansas City on the 8th inst., took steps for the liquidation of the debts of the school, and after mature reflexion, and acting under the resolutions passed at the last state convention at Jefferson City, Mo., the name of the school was changed. It will be known hereafter as "Daughters' College of the Christian Church of Missouri." It is distinctly understood, as expressed in the resolution passed by the convention and by the directors, that the purpose of the school will continue unchanged. The charter obligates the directors, as far as the income permits, to educate poor and dependent girls; but it is a fact which must be considered in all the movements of the directors, that the school has never been endowed, that the total receipts from endowment last year did not exceed $3,000, and that the remainder of money necessary to run the institution has come from pupils who pay for what they receive. We must, therefore, if the school continues its existence, either be endowed or adjust ourselves to our patronage. We have not been endowed and we must then yield to the demand for a change of name. J. B. JONES.

THE SPIRITUAL SIDE OF OUR PLEA.

The Letter and the Spirit—II.

A. B. JONES.

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." How brief these words; how comprehensive their import; how profound their significance: and yet, how flippant the manner in which they are sometimes preached, accepted and dispensed! Faith, we say, is the "belief of testimony." "If you believe the historical facts that George Washington lived and wrought and died, can you not believe the historical facts that Jesus lived and wrought and died and arose from the dead?" In this superficial way the superficial preacher often proclaims what he calls the gospel. "Yes," says the unsophisticated hearer, "I have always believed those facts of history." "Then," says the preacher, "You have faith; come along and be baptized, and be saved; the Savior says: 'He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved;' take him at his word; obey and claim the promise." "But I don't feel like it now," says the honest man. "Don't feel like it!" exclaims the preacher. "You must not be governed by feelings—feelings are no evidence of pardon or acceptace with God."

Gentle reader, did you ever hear a preacher talk that way? What a caricature of the gospel! What a travesty on religion! And then again he says: "Repentance simply means a change of mind—a reformation of life. You changed your mind once, and joined the temperance society and reformed your habits of dissipation; now change your mind about religion and join the church and reform all your bad habits." But the honest sinner replies: "I don't feel like it." What a revelation there is in that honest man's remark: "I don't feel like it!" That man understands Christianity better than that preacher. He thinks religion ought, somehow, to embrace the heart, the emotional and affectional nature; that he ought to "feel" on the subject. And he realizes that there is nothing in abstract historical facts to move his soul. He cannot love facts, nor can facts love or save him. He can love a person and a person can love him; and a person only can save him—can forgive his sins, can guide his life, comfort him in sorrow, raise him from the dead, and show him the way to heaven and crown him with immortality and endless felicity. The man is "feeling after God, if perhaps he may find him;" while the blind preacher is leading him into the ditch of false views of religion into which he himself has fallen. Salvation is a personal matter, and must be wrought out by a personal Savior through the heart and life of the personal sinner.

Faith in Christ Jesus as the real, living, thinking, reigning, loving, "strong Son of God," moves the heart from center to circumference, and stirs the feelings to their profoundest depths. Faith in abstract facts of history has no such power. We love a person and admire things. And "we love him because he first loved us." Can a man love without feeling? Can a man believe on the blessed Savior of sinners without feeling? "With the heart man believeth." "Now faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen." The facts of history are important, they serve a purpose. They lead us to the "Christ of history," the mighty Redeemer of men, before whom we bow and worship, and in whom we trust. This is the "faith that worketh by love," and that "purifieth the heart." Paul, in his epistle to the Philippians speaks of the "joy of faith;" and we read of the early converts who "rejoiced, believing in God." And in his epistle to the saints in Rome Paul writes: "Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing;" and the Apostle Peter says: "Yet, believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory."

And what is repentance? Simply a "change of mind," did you say? A change of mind about what? About yourself as a sinner against the almighty and eternal God. Your view of self has changed. Your view of sin has changed. Your view of God has changed. Your view of the Christ has changed. Your views of life, of responsibility, of duty and destiny—all have changed. No "feeling" in all this? "Repentance from dead works." What does that mean? A "change of mind" from "dead works to serve the living God" certainly dips deep enough to root itself in the emotional nature of man. "Repentance unto life." Does not that imply a moral revolution, a change of the inner man, a change of state, of spiritual condition?

"The goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance." Can a man contemplate the amazing goodness of God as seen in his providences every day; as set forth in the incarnation of his Son; in his earnest teachings of divine truth; in his submission to human violence and cruelty; in his sorrow and humiliation; in the pathetic and plaintive utterance in Gethsemane: "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death;" in the wild and piercing agony of the cross: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Can such influences lead him to repentance, and yet his heart not be enlisted, his feelings unmoved?

"Godly sorrow worketh repentance unto salvation," says Paul. Is this possible without the soul's richest libations being poured out before the Heavenly Father?

We hold, then, that "repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ" are such subjective moral forces as strike their roots into the very innermost vital parts of man's spiritual being. They involve the rarest treasures of feeling known to human experience; the most potent energies and activities within the domain of human consciousness.

We confess to an admiration for the honest sinner when he says: "I don't feel like it now." Let him alone; he is not fit for baptism; it would be a solemn mockery in his case. Do you tell me that all he lacks is "obedience?" If you mean obedience to the call: "My son, give me thy heart," we say, Amen! But if you mean "obedience in baptism" or any other outward act, we protest, and declare such "obedience" impossible. When it is said: "Many of the people believed on Christ, yet they would not confess him for fear of the Pharisees; for they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God," do you tell me that all they lacked was obedience?" What they lacked was faith—the heart's trnst in Jesus Christ; with this, obedience would naturally follow. The devils believe and tremble." What do they lack? "Obediencej" Away with it! They lack moral character, spiritual discernment and loyalty of heart.

"According to thy faith, so be it unto thee," is a principle of universal application in spiritual life. "Except a man be born again, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God." Passages like these discover to us the subjective nature and power of faith—a personal faith in a personal Christ. It was views like these that obtruded themselves into the mind of that honest sinner who, when the preacher would have led him into a superficial profession of faith in the gospel, faltered and wisely observed: "I do not feel like it now." A heart-felt trust in Christ is one of the conditions of our acceptance with God. Hence, "feeling" may be reckoned one of the conditions of pardon. Even faith and repentance, then, have their "letter and spirit," their technical and scriptural import.

(CONTINUED NEXT WEEK.)

Liberty, Mo.

FACTS ABOUT THE ORIGIN OF THE F. C. M. S.

W. T. MOORE.

In a former article I gave a brief account of the organization of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society. I will now endeavor to make clear the reasons which led to that organization. In tracing these reasons it will be seen that the popular impression, in reference to the establishment of the English mission, is almost wholly wrong.

As far back as the year 1864 I find the following in the minutes of the General Society:

"Bro. W. T. Moore introduced the following preamble and resolution:

"Whereas, The little band of faithful brethren in the city of London has made a special call on the brethren of this country to send a missionary to that great metropolis, and whereas, such a mission promises well, and is likely soon to become self-sustaining; therefore, Resolved, That the board of this society be instructed to take into consideration the propriety of sending a missionary to that city, and if the means of the society will justify such a mission the coming year the board is hereby instructed to select a man for that work.

"Bro. Moore supported his resolution with some remarks showing the importance of establishing missions at the great centers of trade, learning and civilization, and expressed the conviction that a mission in London would soon become self-sustaining."

This resolution was heartily supported by O. A. Burgess, L. L. Pinkerton, A. I. Hobbs, W. B. Mooklar, Geo. Campbell and A. R.

Benton, and was finally heartily adopted by the convention.

It will be seen by this resolution that missions in England were seriously contemplated eleven years before the formation of the Foreign Missionary Society, and was not, therefore, a purely accidental thing, as some have supposed, growing out of the fact of Bro. Timothy Coop's liberality towards the society. It is true that his liberality greatly stimulated the desire to plant the cause in England, but this was mainly incidential, and had nothing whatever to do with the origin of the movement to send missionaries to that country.

In 1868 I visited Europe, and while in London I had a conference with leading brethren in reference to the matter of sending a missionary to that country, and I was requested to use my best endeavors, on my return to America, to secure the services of such a missionary.

At the annual meeting of the convention, held in October of that year, I find that the board was instructed, "as soon as means would justify, to open a correspondence with brethren in London with reference to sending an evangelist to that city."

I was a member of the committee which reported this resolution, and the resolution was ably sustained by R. R. Sloan, James Challen, O. A. Burgess, P. B. Wiles, T. D. Garven and L. L. Pinkerton.

These facts completely dispose of at least two misapprehensions as regards the English work. First, the establishment of missions in England was no incidental afterthought when the Foreign Society was organized, but grew out of a deep and long-settled conviction that it was exactly the thing to do. Second, the sending of missionaries to that country was not an impertinence on our part, as has been alleged by some, but was at the suggestion and urgency of brethren in England.

In 1869, at the semi-annual meeting of the General Convention, held in May, at St. Louis, I offered the somewhat notorious resolution appointing the committee of twenty to report a plan of general co-operation. This committee, at the subsequent October meeting, reported a plan which, in my opinion, was about as perfect as a plan could be. But when the plan came before the convention, an amendment to the eighth article, proposed by J. W. McGarvey, and finally adopted, practically killed the whole plan by leaving all contributions optional with the donors as to how the money should be divided. This amendment broke the backbone of the whole plan and really left us in a worse condition than we were before. Just here is where the "Louisville Plan" became a failure. J. W. McGarvey did it with his little amendment.

From the moment that amendment was passed I had little or no hope that the plan would amount to anything; and after a few years' experience with the plan I gave it up altogether; and finally I wrote an article in the October Quarterly, 1874, in which I took strong ground that the "Louisville Plan" was a failure, and that the time had come when we must go forward to something else. If any one should have had pride in that plan, I was surely that one. I had done more than any other person to originate and perfect it. Indeed, as it was reported to the convention it was, in a large sense, my own work. But when I saw it was a failure I did not hesitate to abandon it for something else.

This brings us again to the convention of 1874, during which the first meeting was held to organize a Foreign Society. I saw that the convention would do nothing definite as regards Foreign Missions, and, indeed, could do nothing, owing to the inefficiency of the "Louisville Plan." I at once called the conference meeting to which reference was made in my former article. This conference led to the formation of the Foreign Society.

At the annual meeting of the convention, next year, as chairman of the committee on Foreign Missions I made a report, in the course of which I gave some reasons for the organization of the Foreign Society. These reasons may be interesting to the readers of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. They are as follows:

"First, we do not think it necessary to discuss the importance of the work proposed. It must be abundantly evident that it is a work greatly needed. In fact, we can never be a truly missionary people until such a work is begun and energetically pushed to success. We need, therefore, only to call attention to the importance of beginning that work now. Now, indeed, is the accepted time, now the day of salvation.

"Second, if it be asked why we are making the present movement, we answer: The general plan under which we are now working is admirable for home work, but until states and districts are all thoroughly organized so that the General Board can receive its share of the contributions, it will be practically impossible to do any work through this instrumentality in foreign fields worthy of the name.

"But even should the General Board receive, by special contributions, a sufficient amount of means to begin a foreign mission, it is by no means certain that it could be sustained. The board is elected annually by a convention, made up of delegates, the majority of whom do not, perhaps, represent a dollar in the treasury. Of course, it is doubtful whether such a convention would control the mission in harmony with the wishes of those who contribute to it, even though the mission should be continued and sustained with the money sent to the board. Hence, it is evident, in the very nature of things, that the work of the General Board must be confined, at least for the present, to 'promoting the co-operation of the churches,' and such work as may be accomplished in the home field. It was in view of these facts that the General Board abandoned its purpose to enter the foreign field, and gave its cordial assent to the present movement."

A third division of the report affirmed the intention to hold the Foreign Society in working harmony with the General Board, and to this end it was proposed to hold the two conventions at the same time and place.

Such was the origin of the Foreign Society, and such some of the motives which influenced its formation. The facts in the case suggests the following reflections:

(1) The starting of the Foreign Society was no premeditated movement, but came out of a conjunction of facts which made the movement necessary, at least in the opinion of one man. He soon found his own convictions were catagious. There was a general feeling that something should be done and the suggestion of a Foreign Society at once became popular.

(2) The spirit of those early days has continued throughout the history of the society. It was never intended in any way to interfere with our home work. It was believed that the two societies, working separately, would accomplish more than would be done without such separation.

(3) The time may come when a union of the two societies will be desirable, but there can be no doubt that at the beginning of the foreign work in earnest it was a wise move to start a Foreign Society, such as was organized in 1875.

JESUS AND CHILDREN'S DAY.

J. P. ROSE.

It was a long lapse of time with very dark ages between the blessed teachings of Jesus concerning the little ones and Frœbel's beautiful exhortation: "Come, let us live with the children." Thousands of the greatest leaders are giving their time and talent to the development of child-life today, where scarcely one gave it a thought a hundred years ago. This is emphatically, not the age of steam and electricity and smokeless powder; it is the children's age. There is more steam, electricity and smokeless powder for the good of the world and the glory of God in the Sunday-school army to-day than in all the martial hosts ever arrayed to conquer by killing men! To-day's Sunday-school will make to-morrow's church. "Their muster rolls contain the names of pastor, teacher, Sunday-school superintendent. Would you free the church of the coming generation from the ignorance, narrowness and selfishness which blight its growth and threaten its life to day? Then give to the boys and girls the broadest possible instruction in the Bible and world-wide missions, and train them, in the impressionable age of childhood, in the habit of liberal giving."

Of all the glad days in the year, none is so well calculated to accomplish this result as "Children's Day"—the first Sunday in June. Did you ever consider how many children's days Jesus brought to this sad world? That was a child's day when, at twelve years of age, Jesus lingered in the temple at Jerusalem, "sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them and asking them questions. And all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers." That was a new day for Jerusalem, and so it will be for you when you hear your boys' and girls' understanding and answers concerning the "Father's business" on "Children's Day."

It was another children's day when, in spite of rebuking disciples, the little children were brought to Jesus "that he should put his hands on them and pray," and he pronounced them citizens of the kingdom of heaven.

It was another glad children's day with songs and sunshine and flowers when Jesus had made his triumphal entry into Jerusalem, had cleansed the temple of its merchants and money changers, and "the chief priests and scribes seeing the wonderful things he did, and the children crying in the temple and saying, Hosanna to the son of David; they were sore displeased, and said unto him, Hearest thou what these say? And Jesus said unto them, Yea; have ye never read, Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise?"

Children's Day had its origin with Jesus. The world never knew a children's day till he came. He has blessed the day and those who have observed it as more and more the children are being taught to obey his great commission in the lessons, exercises and offerings of this day.

See how it has grown, building up the church and blessing the world! In 1881, 198 schools gave $750. "In 1899, 3,187 schools gave $39,071, and the total given from '81 to '99 aggregates $330,375. The children are sending the gospel to all nations. They have built ships, and homes, and schools, and chapels, and hospitals; they have paid for the education of thousands of children; they have supported native teachers and preachers; they have provided printing presses for the missionaries; they are willing to do more than they have done to expel debasing superstition and to give to every heart the ennobling influences of the Christian religion. There is scarcely a limit to the resources of the Sunday schools."

Very much depends on the superintendent. Let him bring it before his teachers at once and announce it thoroughly to all the school as a grand rally and jubilee day. Some of the best results have been obtained by giving out the envelopes or "pockets" weeks beforehand and securing from each class a promise to try to raise a definite amount. Our superintendent stimulated this by giving to each of his 20 classes a half dollar and asking them to raise an average of $5.00 each. This they did easily and gladly. Not all superintendents can do this, but perhaps some one in the congregation can.*

Get the children and young people to do all the work you can. Put them on decoration committees to gather flowers and flags, which may be had without expense. Prepare your program carefully. Invite the aged and infirm who are scarcely able ever to come to church. Send the careful boys and young men with family carriages for them on the morning of Children's Day. Let the old and the young rejoice together. It will be a spiritual revival for the whole community, for "the light that shines farthest abroad shines brightest at home," and Jesus will be with you on Children's Day. Out of the mouths of children he will perfect praise.

Lebanon, Ind.

*This year the officers of the school offer $5.00 for every $2.50 raised by the school.

THE CHAGELESS AND THE GROWING CREED.

GEO. T. SMITH.

The Bible has confessions of faith. There is that of the Pharisees, to which Paul subscribed (Acts 23). Paul also confessed that after the way which they called a sect he worshiped God, believing the law and the prophets. Jesus made a good confession before Pilate, and Timothy did the same. That is, that Jesus is King, that he is a prophet of the truth, that he is the way by which men come to the truth and God. This is the changeless creed, the one that is living and can never be revised. It is the core of the entire revelation of God. All the Old Testament looks forward to it and is an enigma without it. The life of the New Testament lies in that simple formula.

Therefore the Bible is concerned to prove that, nothing more. That carries all.

The Gospels are written to prove and to exemplify it. Matthew writes of the Son of David; Mark, "The beginning—Jesus Christ, the Son of God;" Luke, "The matters which have been fully established among us;" John, "In the beginning was the Word—and the Word became flesh." "These things are written that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing ye may have life in his name."

The apostles preached it. Though we may find a dozen theses which they upheld they are all rays of the Sun of Righteousness. Men confessed that and nothing more. "He that confesseth me before men." "What saith it? . . . If thou shalt confess with thy mouth Jesus as Lord, and shalt believe in thy heart that God raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."

This unchangeable creed, held by all Christian people, has its advantages over any doctrinal statement of belief.

It is simple. Any one can understand it. John 3:16 is music to the vilest when stricken with a sense of sin. "God so loved." It is faith to a person. How simple, how sweeping, how triumphant is Paul's swan song: "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able." It is sufficient. God has had but one issue with man at any one time. First, God is, and is a rewarder; second, God is one, one only and a spirit supreme; third, Jesus is the Christ. In its form the good confession involves the human and the divine.

It is perfectly adapted to man. For he is ignorant, sinful and a slave. By this confession he takes Jesus as his Prophet or Teacher, his High Priest to take away his sin and King to deliver from; the blackness of evil and the midnight of the grave.

It is divine. It was first confessed by God. He has commanded the angels to acknowledge Jesus and yielded his throne to the Divine Man. It is unifying. Creeds have done good. So have crutches. Human creeds have parted the body of Christ as the soldiers did his raiment. It can never be revised. Perfect as the pearl, which can not be polished by the lapidary, so this creed can never be improved. It is personal, not doctrinal. The question is whom do you believe, not what. Suppose as a preacher a man's soundness in the faith is suspected: is the faith in Christ sufficient? No. Paul says of some, they had erred from the faith; they said that the resurrection is past already and overthrew the faith of others. He says that to say there is no resurrection is to make faith vain and to leave men in their sins. He decides it too by the logical results which he traces of such belief. The faith in a personal Christ is for salvation. The faith in this larger sense, the holding of the truth as it is in Jesus, is for instruction. Privately a man may hold to views which are not in harmony with the Scriptures, the majority of his intelligent brethren being judges, and yet be saved. He may be a weak brother, yet God is able to cause him to stand. His liberty is checked the moment he steps into the pulpit. That is not his as an individual possession. It has been built by men who hold to a certain consensus of belief, and he is their voice to the community. Still, he is to grow. Whatever lives, grows. Whatever grows, changes. No man should hold precisely the faith he held last year. The birds always build new nests.

In this sense a man may preach what his hearers do not believe. He is leading them higher. But if they decide that his new revelation is some old heresy, as an honorable man he must consent to remain silent or step aside. He may be right. Let him be a martyr. He may be wrong. Let him be a man of sensitive honor.

This creed is ever growing. The Bible is a mine inexhaustible. No one has sunk the plummet to its depths, none has soared to its summits. Having it as our rule of faith we may survey with pleasure the shortening of human standards under which such sturdy specimens of manhood have grown. But alas! those ironclad creeds put men under the harrow. Beecher said they made men, but where they made one they killed a thousand. When asked during his Yale lectures by a pompous professor if he thought some church architects ought to be hanged he replied: "No; hanging is too good for them. They ought to be made to read the Westminster Confession of Faith!"

Now is the time to preach "the Creed that cannot be Revised," and to cry "Home Missions to-day is Foreign Missions to-morrow," and "America in the Twentieth Century is the World in the Thirtieth."

Winfield, Kan.

Rest and Health to Mother and Child.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over FIFTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, with PERFECT SUCCESS. It SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHŒA. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" and take no other kind. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Our Budget.

—St. Louis strike continues.

—Presbyterian General Assembly in session.

—St. Louis had a pleasant visit from Secretary Baer.

—Everybody getting ready for Children's Day.

—Press all the work before the summer hegira begins.

—One by one our great leaders are falling, nay, rather, are rising to the higher and holier fellowships of heaven.

—Thank God for the number of young men pressing on to take their places and to carry the banner forward to victory.

—We shall have something to say in our next concerning the Presbyterian Assembly, now in session in this city. Many things are crowded out this week.

—One of the most enjoyable days of the year is Children's Day. There is no joy so enjoyable as children's joy, and they are never happier than when heartily enlisted in doing good. There is no grudging in children's giving. It is a free will offering indeed on their part. Encourage the children by helping to make their day one of crowning joy and abundant giving, and the good you do will never end.

—Send to A. McLean, Cincinnati, Ohio, for the "Children's Day Manual." This valuable tract should be scattered throughout the entire brotherhood. It contains all the facts of Children's Day in a nutshell. You will be surprised at the information it contains and benefited beyond expression. Send for enough for your school, C. E. Society and church.

—H. F. Davis authorizes us to announce that the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. has granted a one-fare rate to the Missouri Bible-school convention at California. Round-trip tickets will be on sale June 11, 12. This is a kindness from the M. P. that the brotherhood of Missouri will appreciate and a kindness that they would be glad to be constrained to extend other railroad companies in the state for similar reasons.

—If you reside in St. Louis or vicinity and expect to attend the Bible-school convention at California, Mo., June 11-14, please send your name and address to W. D. Cree, care of this office. A special coach will be attached to the Missouri Pacific express train leaving St. Louis at 9 A. M., June 11th, for our accommodation, if a sufficient number respond. This invitation is also extended to those from other points who come by way of St. Louis. Please let us hear from you at once. Remember, the rate from this city is one fare for the round trip, four dollars and fifty cents.

—The relief on the way to the famine sufferers of India, told in the New York Letter, this week, will be cheerful news to our readers. The condition of these suffering ones in India is indescribable, heart-rending. And yet in Christian America and England wealth is used as lavishly as though there was not a sufferer for the want of bread upon the face of the earth. Just recently read of a gathering at a place of amusement where the diamonds worn by the audience were estimated at thirty millions of dollars, and in another instance of the millions of dollars that will be invested in yachts this summer. Surely, the wealth of the world has not yet felt the subjugating influence of Christ very strongly or such contrasts would be unknown. But we are glad to know that there are those who are sharing of their abundance for the famine stricken region of India.

—The Missionary Intelligencer for June is a splendid number. Of course it dwells upon the importance of Children's Day in the interest of Foreign Missions, but it comprehends within its grasp a wide knowledge of the mission field and of mission work.

—One day last week we mailed forty-one copies of "Christian Science Dissected." This is an indication of how the book is selling. At the low price at which it is sold (twenty-five cents) there is no excuse for any one remaining ignorant of the real character of Mrs. Eddy and her doctrine.

—Ministers and superintendents should strive to impress upon the children that the work of evangelizing the world is the greatest work that Christ left for his church. The church does not exist for itself any more than a steam engine or a gristmill exists for itself. The church is the agent of Jesus Christ. Its business is to carry the gospel to every kindred and tongue and tribe and people.

—If for any reason a school cannot observe Children's Day and give the exercise, an offering should be taken and forwarded to the treasurer of the society. This will be a good thing for the school; it will bring the children into touch with Christ's purpose and Christ's efforts to redeem a lost world. If the exercise can be given it should be given. This will be a good thing for the school: it will increase the interest of the parents; it will make a suitable impression upon the entire community.

—The railroads of Missouri are kindly offering reduced rates, one and one-third fare, to teachers intending to attend the summer school of the Missouri University, June 4th to August 25th. Teachers must pay full fare one way to Columbia and take a receipt therefor. Upon presentation of this receipt, together with a certificate that they have been in the summer school, they can purchase a return ticket at one-third fare. As several of the roads have agreed to this it is thought that all the roads in the state will do likewise.

—W. D. Cree, manager of our subscription department, and Barclay Meador, manager of our advertising department, are at work on special rates, special coach and an especially large delegation to the Missouri Bible-school Convention at California, June 11-14. Bro. Meador is at work on a delegation from the Mt. Cabanne Church and Bro. Cree from the Beulah Church. There will be a large delegation from our churches in St. Louis as it now looks.

—Infidelity among the Bohemians in the United States, to which Dr. Tyler alludes in his letter in our issue of May 3rd, seems to exist to an alarming extent. To think that a society exists among them for the propagation of infidelity here in enlightened, Christianized (?) America, is a matter for serious reflection. Is it an accident, or are we preparing soil congenial to the growth of such deadly trees? Surely, the importance of Home Missions cannot be overstated. If Christianity is to save America it must be done now. A few decades more may be too late. Surely, the foreigners who come to our shores do not know of the benefits of the gospel of Christ to the world, or they would not seek its destruction by the propagation of infidelity.

—The central division of the Christian Endeavor Union, of St. Louis, will hold its quarterly meeting in the Beulah Christian Church on the evening of May 29, at which time and place an enthusiastic season is anticipated.

—The name of the Christian Orphan School, Fulton, Mo., has been legally changed to Daughters' College of the Christian Church of Missouri. This change was made because it was felt that the former name did not cover the work done by the school and does not therefore mean any change whatever in its purpose. Orphan girls will still be educated by it, but its work will by no means be limited to orphan girls.

—The Presbyterian Church is not waiting until the Philippine Islands are Americanized or their missionaries Philippinized to give them the gospel, but propose to furnish them Bibles in their own tongue wherein they were born. The Bible Society of the Presbyterian Church has instructed their agent in the Philippine Islands to select four of the fifty Malayan tongues spoken there and into which to have the Bible translated and printed at once. The Home Mission Society of the Presbyterian Church uses five thousand copies of the Bible from the Bible Society annually in its work. Here is a matter that we, whose special plea is the Bible and the Bible only would do well to carefully consider.

—An unfortunate event occurred at the opening of the 112th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in this city, May 17th. While sitting in his pew the Rev. William A. Echols, of Middleport, Ohio, suddenly expired and was carried into the pastor's study of the Compton and Washington Ave. Presbyterian Church a corpse. The event stopped all proceedings for awhile and cast a deep gloom over the sessions of the day. It is said that this is the third event of this kind that has occurred in the last three sessions of this body.

—A number of our pulpits in this city were filled on last Sunday by preachers from the General Assembly, now in session in this city. At Mt. Cabanne Rev. Dr. Daniel Fisher, president Hanover College, preached in the morning and Rev. Dr. Bonner, of Florida, N. Y., in the evening. At the First Church Rev. Dr. Hindman, of Lincoln, Neb., A. M., and Rev. Dr. Smith, Clarinda, Ia., P. M. At Beulah Rev. W. C. Court, of St. Paul, Minn., A. M., and others of which we probably are not yet informed. We are glad to see this courtesy extended by our people and are sure that the effect upon our Presbyterian friends cannot be other than pleasant and profitable.

—Miss Zoe Franklin, eldest daughter of Joseph and Sarah E. Franklin, of Bedford, Ind., and sister to Josepha, Stella and Mildred Franklin, missionaries in India, died May 14, 1900. She was born at West Lebanon, Ind., Sept. 30, 1858. At the age of fifteen years she was baptized by the late Eld. John F. Rowe, and was a faithful and earnest Christian ever afterward. Teaching was her profession. This led her into the Sunday-school as her especial line of church work. She was superintendent of the Bedford (Ind.) Christian Sunday-school when attacked by the malady which has proved fatal. Nearly two years she was a sufferer, patient, kind, grateful to the many friends who sought to help her, and always more thoughtful for others than for herself. This will be a sad message to her sisters in the foreign field, but the faith that has led them into that land will comfort them in the loss of their sister, who made it possible for them to become the efficient missionaries they are. To these sisters and to the parents of our departed sister we extend our deepest sympathy and pray the God of all consolation to sustain and comfort them.

—The time of the Bible-school convention for Missouri is now at hand. Great preparations have been made by the board and the corresponding secretary for a fine convention. Some new features are to be given in this convention of great additional interest. The program, which we published May 10th, is a good one and insures an enthusiastic, busy convention. Do not fail to send your name to C. C. Hill, California, Mo., at once for entertainment. This is important for several good reasons. Be kind enough to make the burden of the brethren and committees in California as light as possible by sending in your name immediately if you have not already done so. This convention ought to start the Bible-school work of Missouri off on an era of renewed and enlarged prosperity. Do not think for a moment that your presence is not needed in that convention. Let it be the largest and the best in our history.

—Fraternal greetings were exchanged between the General Conference of the Methodist Church, now in session in Chicago, and the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, now in session in this city. Such expressions of Christian greeting form a beautiful prelude to that Christian union which is surely coming.

—We regret the discomfiture of the street car strike to our distinguished visitors in St. Louis, the General Assembly, but they are not alone in the privation. We are all sufferers together, not by choice, but by reason of those who are afraid to commit their cause to arbitration.

—The General Assembly is taking strong ground against Sabbath desecration, as they term it, and we all know what they mean thereby. Among their strong resolutions on the subject is the following touching upon the labor question:

Resolved, That we deprecate the rapidly increasing slavery of corporate employes in this country, so that to-day by a careful estimate no less than 4,000,000 men are thus enslaved and robbed of their inalienable right to this day of rest.

—The 19th anniversary exercises of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, Tuskegee, Alabama, will be held May 27th to 31st. Rev. H. H. Proctor, pastor First Congregational Church, Atlanta, Ga., will deliver the commencement sermon and Rev. I. B. Scott, D. D., editor Southwestern Christian Advocate, of New Orleans, will deliver the annual address. The Tuskegee Normal Institute, under Booker T. Washington, is doing a work not only for the colored people of the South, but for the nation, that is hardly excelled by any other one institution of learning. It is one of the solvent factors of the race problem in the United States.

—In the conference of the Board of Foreign Missions, in this city last week, in the discussion on the best methods of using missionary literature, Rev. Dr. A. W. Halsey criticised much of the current literature on the ground that it was lacking in interest and power, and we fear that that the occasion for the criticism is too conspicuous generally. It is not the quantity that counts, but that which appeals most directly to the head and heart. The people want knowledge of the fruits of missionaries, and nothing inspires them to liberal giving like their trials and triumphs in the mission field.

—We regret that a number of important communications, some of which are in type, cannot appear this week. We are so crowded with matter that it is impossible to find room for all. It is also difficult to tell what to leave over for next week. Let those whose articles have not yet appeared have patience and we shall give them space as soon as it becomes possible to do so.

—The district C. E. convention of Minnesota was held in Olivia, May 19, 20. The closing address of an interesting and profitable program was delivered by Henry Goodacre, state vice-president, of Redwood Falls.

—An evidence of the growth of the Woman's Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church was furnished in the report of Miss S. F. Lincoln, treasurer, in a comparative statement of receipts since its organization. In the first five years they amounted to $163,715; the next five years to $831,000; the next to $1,734,000, and the next to $1,677,000. The receipts in the last year were $345,857, while the disbursements were $285,854 exclusive of $55,736 set aside for the Freedmen's Bureau.

—The fourth national Congress of Mothers is to be held in Des Moines, Iowa, this week, May 21-25. The program for this assembly is an artistic and elaborate affair, containing in addition to the program and some attractive advertisements much information about the Congress of Mothers. The program is one of promise, containing as it does many vital themes and prominent women for addresses. The program will make a very suitable souvenir of the Congress, and the Congress we are sure will contribute to the uplifting of our homes.

—The popularity of Chautauqua as a profitable summer resort needs no comment. It is purely an educational institution. Its summer schools, lectures, concerts and entertainments afford every opportunity for intellectual, moral and spiritual improvement as well as mental and physical recreation. The catalogue of the Chautauqua Summes Schools presents an inviting course of study and the descriptive circular of Pictorial Chautauqua an inviting rest.

—On April 22nd, Lillian, the daughter of G. D. and L. M. Jackson, was called "up higher." While her life was in a certain extent confined to the home circle on account of paralysis, during the almost fourteen and one-half years of her stay on earth, she had won a place in the hearts of her family and friends that makes her memory all the more sacred. She had taught the lesson of the "good Father" and we are the richer and better. F. J. LONGDON, JR.

DeLand, Fla., May 17, 1900.

—The Chicago Christian Missionary Society is an organization formed of the Churches of Christ in that city for the work of city evangelization. They are going about the work in a systematic way, having started the publication of a paper called the Chicago Christian Missionary Society Bulletin, the appearance and contents of which have a very businesslike tone.

—Carlton College, Bonham, Texas, held its commencement exercises May 18-23. The baccalaureate sermon was preached by Elder J. B. Sweeney and the address to the graduates was delivered by Elder David Walk.

—The eighth annual commencement of Central Christian College, of Albany, Mo., will be June 10-14, 1900. Sunday, June 10, baccalaureate sermon by Eld. S. J. White, of Cameron, Mo. Monday 11, a play, "The Miller's Daughter." Tuesday 12, entertainment by the John S. Allen Literary Society. Wednesday 14, commencement exercises and annual address by Eld. George H. Combs, of Kansas City, Mo.

—The 12th annual catalogue of the Women's College, of Baltimore, is before us and from it we are at once impressed with the magnitude of this institution of learning. The fine full-page illustrations of its magnificent buildings and the record of its faculty, alumnæ and other information, indicates a school of the first rank and enduring qualities.

"A Stitch in Time Saves Nine."

A broken stitch, like the "little rift within the late," is the beginning of trouble. "I am tired, not ill." "It will soon pass away." "I don't believe in medicine." These are the broken stitches that lead to serious illness. Nature is wise and in Hood's Sarsaparilla she has furnished the means to take up broken stitches. Why? Because it starts at the root and cleanses the blood.

Bad Blood — "For years I was troubled with my blood, my face was pale, I never felt well. Three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla made me feel better and gave me a healthy color." Mae Cross, 24 Cedar Av., South, Minneapolis, Minn.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

—The convention of the fifth missionary district of Illinois will be held in Virden, June 5-7. A good program has been prepared and a good convention is hoped for. Let all interested in this convention help to make it the success that the cause in Illinois demands.

—The people of California, Mo., irrespective of religious faith, have generously promised to help to entertain our State Bible-school Convention. We anticipate a "feast of good things" and after reading the program we know we will not be disappointed. Delegates, please send your names so you can be assigned to your homes while you are with us. Do not forget the date, June 11-14.

P. D. GUNTER.

California, Mo.

—The address delivered before the National Biblical Congress, held in Washington, D. C., April 17-19, by Dr. T. T. Eaton, of Louisville, Ky., is a strong appeal to the American people to study the Bible. The address may be had by a card to J. H. Gilbert, D. D., 1503 R St. N. W., Washington, D. C. The American Society of Religious Education has its headquarters in Washington.

—A conference of Bible students will be held at Winona Lake, Indiana, August 19-29, to which all persons interested in a careful study of the Bible are cordially invited. Union Lake is on the Pittsbuag, Ft. Wayne and Chicago Railroad; also on a branch of the Big Four, with station at Warsaw. This conference was inaugurated four years ago and has rapidly grown in its attendance. Some able speakers have been secured for the coming session. J. Wilbur Chapman is the director of the conference.

—The eleventh annual commencement of Cotner University will begin Thursday, May 31st and end Wednesday, June 6th. The usual recitals of the departments of music and elocution, exhibitions of literary societies and class exercises will be given. The baccalaurate sermon will be delivered by Sumner T. Martin, of Omaha, Sunday, June 2nd, at 11 A. M. The annual commencement oration will be made by B. J. Radford on Wednesday at 10:30 A. M., June 6th. In the afternoon at 3 o'clock there will be a meeting of the alumni. An address will be given by A. D. Harman, of St. Paul, Minn., together with other interesting exercises. It will be a jubilee. All friends cordially invited.

—After a lingering illness, lasting through many years, Mrs. F. M. Call, wife of the former business manager of this company, passed away from the seen to the unseen, and from the mortal to the immortal, on Wednesday of last week. For the last five years Sister Call had been a great sufferer, and a hopeless sufferer, so far as her recovery from her illness was concerned, and yet she bore her pain without murmuring and with the greatest Christian resignation. She had long anticipated death, had made every preparation for it, and it had no terrors for her. She leaves a husband and three children, two daughters and a son, the daughters both being married. While her recovery was not even hoped for by her physician or her family, the loss is nevertheless deeply felt. In a letter from Bro. Call he says: "No one can understand the loneliness and the vacancy and sadness of the departure of wife and mother until the experience comes to him. The years of expectation and preparation had not brought us quite to a realization of the awfulness of a separation. But it is a comfort to know that she has entered into a rest where there is no more suffering. For nearly five years she has been a constant sufferer, not knowing a well day, yet without complaint." Such is the resignation which Christian faith inspires and makes possible. To the bereaved family we tender our sincere sympathies in this their great bereavement.

—Prof. O. C. Atwater, of Bethany, Neb., calls our attention to the fact that Rev. Judson Smith, to whom we referred recently as "Secretary of the Baptist Foreign Missionary Society," is and has been for a long time the senior Secretary of the "A. B. C. F. M.," the well-known Missionary Society of the Congregationalists. We knew this, but must have been led into the mistake by the name Judson, in associating him with the Baptists.

—We are just in receipt of the news of the death of James B. Goff, of Austin, Texas, for many years a resident of St. Louis, and a charter member and officer of Central Christian Church in this city until his removal to Texas. A tender and appreciative tribute to him from the pen of Bro. J. P. Pinkerton is received and will appear in our next issue. To Sister Goff and the family our hearty sympathy is extended.

—We learn that the Christian Century, of Chicago, has purchased the Christian Tribune, of Baltimore, Richmond and St. Louis, and that Peter Ainslie, the editor of the Tribune, is to be associated, editorially, with the Century. We trust this consolidation, if consummated, will result satisfactorily to all concerned.

—The commencement exercises of Milligan College will be held June 1-9. The baccalaureate sermon will be preached Sunday June 3rd, by J. A. Lord, editor of the Christian Standard. A number of addresses and lectures appear upon the program. The alumni reunion and dinner will be at 2 P. M. Thursday, June 7th.

H. W. Everest's Death.

This morning at twenty minutes past seven o'clock H. W. Everest, Dean of the College of the Bible, Drake University, passed to his home above. In November, 1898, he was partially disabled by a stroke of paralysis and did not resume class work until in September, 1899. At the beginning of the present term he was again compelled to lay down his work in the classroom. During the past week he sank rapidly and for three days had lain in an unconscious condition. He passed away as peacefully as a child falls asleep.

The remains will be taken to Hutchinson, Kan. The Des Moines services will be held in the University Place Church probably on Wednesday of this week. A great, good man has entered into the rest of his Lord and Master.

A. M. HAYWARD.

University Station, Des Moines, Ia., May 21.

This announcement will be read with profound sadness by thousands of our readers who knew Bro. Everest, either personally or by reputation, and who esteemed him highly, both for his moral and intellectual worth. We have known Bro. Everest rather intimately for more than thirty years. Our first acquaintance with him was during his presidency of Eureka College, when we were engaged in an effort, which proved unsuccessful at that time, but which later became a reality, to unite Abingdon and Eureka Colleges. In later years we came to know him more intimately in a social way during his summer residence at Macatawa Park. We came closer to him there and learned to appreciate him more highly, both on account of his pure Christian character and his high order of intellect. Bro. Everest has made his mark among us, both as a preacher and a writer. He was also widely known as a teacher and an author. For many years his health has been growing feebler, the result, perhaps, of continuous intellectual labor, and we had learned but recently through private sources that he was nearing the end. We can do no more at present than lay this humble tribute on his grave and express our profound and sincere sympathy with his wife and family.

On our first page we present our readers an excellent likeness of Bro. Everest. He was born in Essex county, New York, May 10, 1831, and had just passed his 69th birthday. He attended school in Geauga Seminary, Ohio, the Western Reserve Eclectic Institute, Hiram, Ohio, Bethany College and Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio. He became president of Eureka College in 1864, and served in this capacity for several years. Later he served as professor in Kentucky University for two years, and still later became President of Butler University, and then Chancellor of Drake University. His last teaching before going to Drake was with the Illinois State Normal College at Carbondale, of which institution he was President. He has held several pastorates, as at Eureka, Normal, Springfield, Ill., and Hutchinson, Kan. He is the author of "The Divine Demonstration"—a work on Christian Evidences, and "Science and Pedagogy of Ethics." He was Dean of the Bible department at Drake at the time of his death.

Hard To Break.

BUT THE COFFEE HABIT CAN BE PUT OFF.

"I was a coffee user from early childhood, but it finally made me so nervous that I spent a great many sleepless nights, starting at every sound I heard and suffering with a continual dull headache. My hands trembled and I was also troubled with shortness of breath and palpitation of the heart. The whole system showed a poisoned condition and I was told to leave off coffee, for that was the cause of it. I was unable to break myself of the habit until some one induced me to try Postum Food Coffee.

"The first trial the Food Coffee was flat and tasteless and I thought it was horrid stuff, but my friend urged me to try again and let it boil longer. This time I had a very delightful beverage and have been enjoying it ever since, and am now in a very greatly improved condition of health.

"My brother is also using Postum instead of coffee, and a friend of ours, Mr. W., who was a great coffee user, found himself growing more and more nervous and was troubled at times with dizzy spells. His wife suffered with nausea and indigestion, also from coffee. They left it off and have been using Postum Food Coffee for some time and are now in a perfect condition of health." Grace C. M., Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio.

Put a piece of butter the size of two peas in the pot, to prevent it boiling over.

Book Notes.

Concerning music books: Their name is legion! Every year a new crop is harvested from the printing press and offered to a guileless and unsuspecting public. Some of them are excellent; a few more are fair only; the great majority are worthless. It doesn't take very much musical knowledge to sit down and grind out a certain kind of "music" in indefinite quantities, but this sort of stuff should properly be sold by the yard. Good hymn writers are scarce, and only a small percentage of even their productions have sufficient vitality to survive more than one publication. These worthless books are filled with machine-made melodies, are offered at attractive prices (the publisher having expended little or nothing for copyright privileges) and are purchased by unsophisticated churches and Sunday-schools whose members presently wonder why it is that their singing has so degenerated.

These remarks do not apply to our two new books, "Silver and Gold" and "Tidings of Salvation." The first thought of the publishers was: "How good a collection of hymns can we produce?" When the collection was complete, the owners of the music selected were written to and their terms secured. Thousands of dollars were spent in purchasing permission to use valuable music. The next thought was: "Now how cheaply can we sell the splendid volumes we have planned?" A reference to the price list of these two books will demonstrate that the price was put very low. "Tidings of Salvation" can be had as low as $10 per hundred. "Silver and Gold," a larger book, may be had for $15 per hundred. We have prepared little pamphlets giving sample pages (reduced) of these two books, with facsimile cover. We send these free to any who ask for them. Drop us a postal card, get the sample, and see for yourself that what we have stated above is strictly true.

The author of "Christian Science Dissected" told us, when giving us the manuscript of the work, that he had earnestly tried to treat the subject seriously, but that there were so many things about Christian Science that appealed to his sense of humor that he just couldn't help "slopping over" at times. The reader of the book will find a number of laughs in it, though, in the main, the book is a most serious and forcible—examination—a real dissection—of that archcharlatan and rogue, Mary Baker Eddy, and that conglomeration of paganism, infidelity, idiocy and mendacity known as "Christian Science." The price of the book, postpaid, is only twenty-five cents.

From California, Nova Scotia, Florida and the uttermost parts of these United States come reports that "Special Catalogue No. 22" has received an enthusiastic and hearty welcome into the homes of our patrons. It is not surprising that we are selling more books than ever before. It would be strange indeed if the people did not take advantage of the special offers now being made, and our book department was not working overtime trying to keep up with orders. We try to fill every order on the same day it is received and generally succeed in so doing. We ask the indulgence of our patrons, however, if books reach them a day later than they were expected. We are very busy, but we are doing the best we can.

CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING COMPANY.

St. Louis.

The June meeting for central New York will be held at South Butler, Wayne County, beginning Friday evening, June 1st, continuing over Lord's day. The nearest railroad station is Savannah, on the N. Y. C. R. R. A. B. CHAMBERLAIN.

Auburn, N. Y.

Personal Mention.

H. Goodacre, of Redwood Falls, Minn., is to deliver the Decoration Day address at that place.

R. E. McKnight has been engaged to preach for the church in Sumner, Washington, for one-half time.

D. H. Patterson, after an extended visit to Carbondale, Kan., has returned to his home in Auburn, N. Y.

M. L. Anthony's address is now Altamont, Mo He expects to labor in Missouri for the present Will locate at Altamont.

J. L. Smith has closed his work in St. Louis, Mich., and solicits work in another field. His address will be 141 Ludlow St., Dayton, Ohio.

Edgar D. Jones reports an offering for Home Missions of $27.01 by the church in Bullittsville, Ky., the largest in the history of the church.

W. F. McCormick reports $15 raised for Home Missions by the church in Iowa Falls, Iowa. A liberal gift for a small band of workers.

Clark Bateman, of Monticello, Iowa, has resigned and the church there is desirious of another good preacher to succeed him. Address Wm. Brazelton.

J. P. Davis, of Fairfield, Neb., preaches the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of the High School in Fairfield, also the memorial sermon to the G. A. R.

J. D. Greer closed his work at Laddonia, Mo., with a collection for Foreign Missions and opened his new work in Mt. Sterling, Iowa, with a collection for Home Missions.

J. H. Harris reports $12 for Home Missions, $6.50 for the India famine sufferers and $2 for the Lawrence Bible Chair Fund, all contributed recently by the church in Miltonvale, Kansas.

Geo. F. Hall, of Decatur, Ill., recently delivered his lecture on "The New Woman" in Mauch Chunk, Pa. His address to men on the night previous was pronounced an able one by the Daily Times of that city.

President Clinton Lockhart, of Canton, Mo., will take the chair of Semitic Languages and Literature in the College of the Bible, Drake University. I will also be assisted by three other instructors in this department. A. M. H.

The church in Hebron, Neb., wants a member of the Christian Church to purchase a good grocery in that city. Also a young man who can sing and a good church worker for a permanent place in a printing office. Address R. A. Schell.

M. J. Duncan, of Burton, Kan., reports $14 raised there for Home Missions, house repaired and work of repapering. He also reports a visit to Kansas City, Kan., where he heard Brother Noblitt and Brother Ballon preach excellent sermons.

B. B. Tyler's address, until June 1, will be No. 44, Cleveland Avenue, Everett, Mass., where all communications intended for him should be directed. He is assisting the young church there in a meeting following the dedication of their new building.

Bible Study, edited by G. H. P. Showalter, Lockney, Texas, is an interesting journal. There is nothing sickly or trashy on its pages. Brother Showalter is president of Lockney Christian College, a flourishing institution of learning open to both sexes.

"Special Catalogue No. 22"

A neat booklet containing a large number of Book Bargains. Send us a postal card and we will send you a copy — free. You ought to know what books we are selling at Half Price — and sometimes less.

The Christian Pub. Co.
St. Louis.

L. W. Myers, of Blue Rapids, Kan., will locate in Powhatton, Kan., and preach one-half time for the church there. Powhatton will also be the home of D. H. Trowbridge for a few months.

The Compton Heights Christian Church will give their pastor, S. B. Moore, a month's vacation this summer, which month the pastor will spend in holding a protracted meeting somewhere. But month nor the place of the meeting have yet been decided.

One of the pleasant surprises of last week was the unexpected appearance of Howard C. Rash, of Salina, Kansas, in this office. Though it was Rash yet no one could have come in more quietly or talked more pleasantly. His report of the work and of things in general in Kansas was optimistic.

J. W. Coggins, of Odessa, Mo., reports a collection of nearly $100 from the church there for Home Missions. This, he says, is the largest missionary collection in the history of the church.

E. H. Kellar has just returned from his trip to Palestine and is now at Sullivan, Ill., where he preached on last Sunday night. There was one confession at the morning service. Pastor E. W. Brickert says that they will dedicate their new house of worship July 8th.

Concerning his work at Paynesville J. O. Walton, of Canton, Mo., says: "Our work with the church commenced most pleasantly last Lord's day. The house has been remodeled and thoroughly repaired and is now both attractive and convenient. Everything seems to promise a pleasant and profitable season of Christian work."

P. J. Dickerson, of Virginia, recently held a successful meeting in Rich Hill, Mo. He would be glad to engage with churches for meetings this summer on his way back to Virginia. He can furnish a singer for his meetings. His address will still be Holden, Mo., for a short time. While at Rich Hill he prepared and published a combined history, plea and directory of the Rich Hill Church, a tract of 16 pages.

Bro. W. A Foster entered upon his second year as pastor of the Walnut Hills Christian Church yesterday. There was one addition by letter in the morning and one was baptized in the evening. There have been accessions to our church every Lord's day for the past seven weeks. Our offering to both Home and Foreign Missions this year is the largest in the history of our church. We are all happy and united under the wise leadership of our beloved pastor. S. M. COOPER.
Cincinnati, May 21.

C. C. Hill, pastor of the church in California, Mo., and J. F. Short, of California, called at this office last week. Bro. Hill reports preparations for a great convention there next month. The church in California has already extended a call to Bro. Hill to preach for them another year three months in advance of the expiration of the first year. Such a compliment to efficiency of work is enough to touch the heart of any faithful pastor. We have known the Hill brothers for many years and know of no truer men to the high calling of the ministry.

Brother J. G. M. Luttenberger and his wife, of Dorchester, Ill., Miss Sophia Meyer, of Hayward, Cal., Bro. Alexander Morrow and his wife, of Greenfield, Ill., and Sister Sarah Helmick and her son, of Argenta, Ill., sail for Hamburg, Germany, on the First Bismarck, May 31st. They leave for New York via Washington and Philadelphia, May 24. Their tour will embrace Germany, Austria, Turkey, Palestine and France, and occupy about four months. Brother Luttenberger wishes it announced that his tent is sold, so that others need not inquire after it. The CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST wishes the above parties a profitable tour and a safe return to their home and friends.

C. A. Young, editor of Christian Century, with his wife and daughter, will sail on the "City of Rome," June 2, from New York to Glasgow. They will spend a few weeks resting in Edinburgh and among the Scottish lakes, and will then make a tour through England, visiting the old cathedrals, where Mrs. Young wishes to do some sketching. They will visit London, and the principal art galleries of Holland, giving a week to Paris and the Exposition. They hope also to take in the "Passion Play" at Oberammergau. They expect to return late in August on the Holland-American Steamship "Potsdam," in time to spend a month in the field, helping to complete the $25,000 endowment of the Bible Lectureship of the University of Virginia, founded by John B. Cary. We wish them a happy and prosperous voyage.

CHANGES.

E. K. VanWinkle, Madisonville, O., to Ludlow, Ky.
E. W. Bowers, Miller, S. D., to Springfield, Mo.
J. T. Ogle, Carrollton, Mo., to Guthrie, O. T.
J. W. Ball, Waterville to Burr Oak, Kan.

Reduced Rates to Colorado.

Union Pacific Railroad will make One Fare plus $2.00, or $19.00 for the Round Trip from Kansas City or Omaha to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, on May 1st and 15th, June 5th and 9th. For particulars address J. F. Aglar, Gen'l Agt., St. Louis, Mo.

Homeseekers' Best Route.

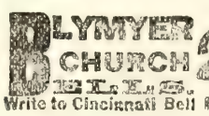
The Iowa Central Railway is the most direct and best line for Homeseekers' excursionists. Tickets sold on first and third Tuesdays of each month to points in the west, northwest, south and southeast and southwest at rate of one fare plus two dollars for round trip, including Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo. Ask any coupon ticket agent for dates of sale, limit territory to which tickets are sold, or any other information, or address Geo. S. Batty, G. P. & T. A., Marshalltown, Ia.

The Iron Mountain Shortens its Time to Texas.

Train No. 51 now leaves St. Louis 2:21 P. M., daily, shortens the time by several hours from St. Louis to Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio, Houston and Galveston. Through Pullman Buffet Sleeping Cars will be operated on this train from St. Louis to San Antonio, and reclining chair car service to Dallas and Fort Worth. A delightful feature of this train is the daylight ride along the Mississippi and through the beautiful Arcadia Valley. Time of other trains remains the same excepting train No. 57 for Delta, Columbus, Cairo and Shreveport which now leaves at 8:00 A. M.

"ASHEVILLE."
In the suburbs of which is situated
"PINEHURST."
Now open to guests. Surrounded by a forest of Pine and Oaks. Convenient to Car Line. Cuisine unexcelled. Rates to families. Apply to
MRS. J. L. MORGAN,
Pinehurst, Pearson's Drive, Asheville, N. C.
Former proprietoress of "The Altimont."

Church, Peal and Chime Bells, Best Metal
BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY,
THE E. W. VAN DUZEN CO. Cincinnati, O.



UNLIKE OTHER BELLS SWUNG, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE. CATALOGUE FREE. ALSO WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Yellowstone National Park.
An Ideal Inter-mountain tour is the one embracing
Scenic Colorado,
Unique, Historical Utah
and The Wonderful
YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK.
The OREGON SHORT LINE R. R.
Offers you this Matchless Trip
D. E. BURLEY, G. P. and T. A.
Oregon Short Line R. R.
Salt Lake City, Utah.
Elegant New Park Folder
"WHERE GUSH THE GEYSERS"
Sent on Receipt of 4 Cents Postage.

Correspondence.

English Topics.

AN UPGRADE OF LOVE.

The English Baptists are rejoicing over three great encouragements. In the first place, they have been enabled at the great Spring Assembly of the Baptist Union to report an increased membership in the English churches through many more baptisms than last year. In the next place, the best reports ever received in any year have come from the Foreign Mission field. Lastly, there is now an "upgrade of love," as one of the most earnest of the ministers puts it, after that long and dreary "downgrade of faith," which shortened dear Spurgeon's life and blighted the happiness of hundreds of Christian communions. Now, the whole life of an individual Christian, or of a church, or of any body of churches, depends on the difference between the downgrade of faith or the upgrade of love. There are times of tendency downward in every believer's life, as well as in the experience of every church; but, thank God for the sincere followers of Jesus, the sure reaction follows in the upward direction. Going to attend the missionary soiree of the Baptists it did my heart good to find them as my old friends rejoicing on the grand upgrade. We do not lose our love for old friends. Kind words from some of them, and meetings and greetings from friends of faded years, are like the still fragrant petals in a jar of rose-leaves, which carry through time the perfume of gardens haunted in periods of the past. As we make progress in knowledge of the truth may we all still hold retentively the memories of all the good and gracious experiences which helped us in youth!

AMERICANS IN ENGLAND.

As the beautiful swallows fly back to our shores and for the summer make their homes in the eaves of our English cottages, so to our island shores, to sojourn with us awhile, come multitudes of welcome guests from other lands, large numbers being visitors from America. This year we are already greeting some distinguished men and women from the United States. Talmage is with us. We have just interviewed him and have admired the graceful and sympathetic expressions which he had freely to spare for England. Dr. Talmage is unable to indulge even in casual chat without betraying his genius. He cannot reel off small talk. He is a grand American and seems to be now in the plenitude of his powers. He is an extraordinary optimist, and has been telling us frankly that he expects Providence to be on its very best behavior with mankind in the near future. We have in England a lot of little peddling prophets, each of whom is constantly retailing out a miniature apocalypse of coming horrors ending in "everlasting smash." Dr. Talmage seems to cherish splendid hopes of both England and America. As I venture to hold precisely similar hopes concerning both nations I am glad that the English people are thus encouraged by a famous American. Talmage declares that in America there is more religion than ever, and that it is of a higher order. That is equally true of England. He says that the tendency is for good to overcome evil. He made up his mind long ago that the Lord is stronger than the devil. God never likes a failure. He thinks the West the promising part of America. He maintains that the war with Spain would have been in full blast at this hour if England had not proclaimed to the world her full sympathy with America at this trying juncture. Dr. Talmage is confident that Mr. McKinley will be re-elected. He considers that the President is one of the grandest of men. As for Mr. Bryan he says that he is one of the most genial men he ever met. Dr. Talmage believes the election will work out all right. He thinks that the hand of God has been very conspicuous in American history. Even the mistakes of the American people have been overruled for good. Just as in the case of a private individual, if his face is in the right direction he will come out all right in the end.

BROTHERS ASSITER, KELLAR AND MEIGS.

It has been my great good fortune to see amongst other American friends just recently in London some whom I longed once more to greet. This life is very much made up of greetings and partings, of coming together and parting asunder. The coming is glad. The going is melancholy. I have had the privilege of some delightful conversations with Bro. Meigs on his way from China to America. This intercourse followed pleasant chats in transitu with Misses Graybiel and Frost. By this time those sisters from India are amongst your churches. Bro. Meigs has stirring and stimulating accounts to give of the good work in China. Next Sunday evening my people are to enjoy the privilege of a sermon from Bro. E. H. Kellar, of Texas, who is with us in London resting and studying for a brief spell after a tour on the Continent. Last Sunday he preached at West London Tabernacle to E. M. Todd's people. Our American preachers are all the time welcome whenever we can get a visit from any of them. During this month Bro. G. F. Assiter will give us a week's mission sermons at Hornsey. This "singing evangelist" is equally an Englishman and an American. He has been eight years preaching in Missouri and has lately left his sphere at Boonville and New Franklin to begin work either in the new country or in the old, according as God may lead him. Being an Englishman, at one moment he seems to think he loves England the better, but the next instant he appears to prefer America. I feel like that myself since I saw America. I shall never again be able to say which I think is the better country, for I am in this respect reduced to the quandary of the Irishman who declared that "one was as good as the other and better too."

OUR WORK MARCHES ON.

From some of our churches in this country the present reports are again encouraging. Efforts are being made by our churches unitedly to gather funds for the starting of a new cause in some part of England. Our Bro. Rapkin, of Margate, conceived the idea of a Self-denial Fund by the collection of a penny a week from every member of every church. This has been partially successful only at first, but it is likely to become a good and great move, for the churches are one by one coming into line. One of our hardest working men is Bro. Bicknell, who has brought the Liverpool Church up to a hopeful prosperity combined with real concord unknown before in its history. This indefatigable preacher has been holding protracted meetings in several of the neighboring churches with fine results. At Saltney, Lancaster and Birkenhead there were many additions after his sermons. It is nonsense for anybody to say that American preachers do not find acceptance in this country. The truth is, that when they are really good preachers they command better success than Englishmen themselves. Bro. Todd, at West London Tabernacle, is able to report that last year was a time of progress. There were 55 additions. This grand sphere, the scene of the devoted labors of Varley, Moore and Walden, as well as the all-too-short pastorates of Brooks and Morgan, is a center of work which will one day spring into commanding influence. But that will not be till its burden of indebtedness is abolished. Great honor is due to Bro. Todd for leaving the position where he flourished in the midst of the loving people of Chester to undertake the most onerous post of all in our English work. Nothing that can possibly be done should be omitted to encourage and sustain him. I was glad at heart when, a few weeks ago, the new pastor of Southampton sent me a brief note relating a series of successes there. So does prosperity at last come to any faithful people. In some of our churches the trials that happen are crucial, but if they are endured with fidelity, then "joy cometh in the morning." There is a disposition in our congregations to go right forward. W. DURBAN.

43 Park Road, South Tottenham, London, April 26, 1900.

The real rough rider is the man who rides the river with a twisting, squirming log for a saddle, on which he stands, balancing himself to its every motion. If his coolness fails or his nerve gives way, disaster and death reach out for him.

It's the giving way of the "nerve" which proves fatal to so many a man. Perhaps he is simply crossing the street, as he has done ten thousand times. He hears a shout, stops, hesitates, gets "rattled" and is run over. When a man finds that his memory plays him false often, when he starts off to get something and forgets what he went for, when he knows he has locked the front door and yet an irritating uncertainty compels him to get up and verify his knowledge, then that man is in danger at any minute when confronted by a trifling danger. He is unnerved.

This condition can be perfectly cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the stomach, nourishes the nerves, and purifies the blood. It contains no alcohol, whisky or other intoxicant.

"The reason I delayed writing was because I wanted to wait one year after I had taken the medicine before giving my statement, and now I can send a good, conscientious testimonial," writes Chas. H. Sergeant, Esq., of Plain City, Madison Co., Ohio. "During the summer and fall of 1896 I became all "run down," nerves were out of order and stomach out of order. I wrote to Dr. Pierce for advice. He said I had general debility, and advised Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and, thanks to you for your advice, I used six bottles; and since I stopped taking it, about one year ago, I have not taken any medicine of any kind, and have been able to work every day. My appetite is good, I can eat three square meals a day, I do not feel that miserable burning in the stomach after eating, and my blood and nerves are in good shape."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure biliousness.

Tyrrell at Vandalia, Mo.

We have had the imperial Frank G. Tyrrell with us for four nights and have heard him discuss living issues. His addresses are calculated to loosen the wool on the hide bound, petrified politicians and "shake the cobwebs from the intellectual interiors of those who are orthodox on the issues of the '60's." Those who are conscious that there are problems of social ethics and civic righteousness as grave as those which confronted the colonists or the abolitionists of chattel slavery, while they may not agree with him in all his premises will recognize his effort as a manly effort at solution. The result cannot fail to be helpful and generate a healthier municipal government.

God cannot use a man in his church who is not thrilled by the sight and sound of the suffering and whose gray matter has become stagnant because it is not agitated by the problem of industrial slavery.

Let us have more of those themes that breathe in the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST. F. A. MAYHALL.

New York Letter.

On Thursday afternoon, May 10, the good steamship, Quito, sailed from this port with 200,000 bushels of corn for the relief of famine stricken India. Before sailing special services were held aboard the ship, in which addresses were made by the Rev. Dr. R. G. Hobbs (who also presided), S. T. Willis, Countess Schimmelman, Commander Booth-Tucker, the Rev. Richard Winsor and the Rev. Dr. A. C. Dixon on the beneficent character of the enterprise and the distress of India.

The Quito was chartered by the United States Government for the Christian Herald, of this city, at an expense of $40,000, and that splendid paper provided, through the generosity of its constituency, the great cargo of 200,000 bushels of two-year-old corn, which is valued at $100,000, and is equal in India, at prevailing famine prices, to more than $300,000. Contributors of the cargo include Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists, Lutherans, Mennonites, Friends, Disciples of Christ, Episcopalians, Congregationalists and other religious people; many church societies, town and village communities and individuals in every state. A number of contributions also came from Canada.

Dr. Louis Klopsch, proprietor of the Christian Herald, is at Bombay and will receive the ship there about June 20, when the corn will be distributed through the interdenominational committee as follows: Rev. Edgar M. Wilson, Presbyterian Mission, Ratnagiri; Rev. G. N. Thomssen, Baptist Mission, Bapatla; Rev. Edwin F. Frease, Methodist Episcopal Mission, Baroda; Rev. J. H. Harpster, Lutheran Mission, Gunter; Rev. M. D. Adams, Church of the Disciples Mission, Bilaspur; Rev. M. B. Fuller, Alliance Mission, Girgaon; Rev. E. S. Hume, Missionary of the A. B. C. F. M. at Byculla, Bombay, secretary; Rev. Dr. Robinson, Methodist, Calcutta, representing Bishop Thoburn, chairman.

This is a most blessed work embodying the gospel of Christ who said: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these ye have done it unto me." This cargo of corn also shows the solid unity of Christian sentiment, of sympathy and love in the hearts of Christ's people for the suffering and dying in India. It is the best possible evidence of the Christian religion, and will do more than all else to give weight to the gospel message in that land of hunger and death.

Twenty-five million people are suffering there on account of the famine, which was caused largely by the failure of the monsoon from the Indian Ocean, on which the crops in that section are dependent in a large measure. As the next harvest will not come until October, no relief can possibly come to them for five months, except what the generous, willing-hearted shall give. Are there not many readers of this who will respond to India's call for bread, either through the Christian Herald or the Foreign Christian Missionary Society at Cincinnati?

The agitation in favor of creed-revision goes on with increasing velocity and is extending into several denominations. The movement has invaded the Baptist ranks. The Rev. Dr. Daniel Johnston Myers, of Chicago, said a few days ago in an address at the Rochester Theological Seminary: "We Baptists need to change some of our statements of doctrine as the Presbyterians are thinking of doing. The world is moving on and if we would continue to lead men to Christ we must accept the new truths that show Christ in a light which can illumine the world to-day.

"We need," said he, "a new statement of the theory of inspiration, of the doctrine of the atonement and of the church ordinances. Now, Rochester Seminary must be the institution to do this work. The University of Chicago Divinity School is too new and untrustworthy. The seminaries of the East have the only unbroken conservatism. I would have our president formulate a new system and a new theology—not the new theology in which we find little satisfaction. Let Dr. Strong write another book to give our entire church the truth of to-day. The tendency of our age is perfectly safe; it is toward a Christ-centered theology—not that the Bible is the revelation of God. Only when death ends all will change cease in this world."

While others are wrestling with the necessity of revising creeds, confessions and denominational standards we may well rejoice that such a necessity is not laid upon us, for our creed—Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God—is eternally unchangeable and the conditions of life offered under it are as flexible as human need. But the tendency of all this agitation among the denominations is toward the fundamental position of the Disciples of Christ.

The sentiments of the comity and interchurch fellowship evidently are growing, and while they are not all that the Christian people should look for, the ultimate end—Christian union—is materially helped by their cultivation. At a recent meeting of the Congregational Association of New York and vicinity special emphasis was placed upon the importance of interdenominational work and fellowship. One whole session of the recent Ecumenical Missionary Conference was devoted to it and an after-meeting, attended by many missionaries and delegates, still further enlarged upon the desirability of co operation and mutual helpfulness on the mission field. The National Committee of Church Federation, on which I have the honor of being a member, is just now drafting a letter of information and appeal looking toward the closer federation of God's people in all Christian work. I believe the Disciples of Christ should take hold of this movement and do all within their power for the unification of Christian people. The plea we make for Christian union is the only one that can possibly win, and we should hasten the day of organic, visible union by availing ourselves of every opportunity to set forth its strength and beauty. There is much nonsense and twaddle about "comity," but the very fact that it occupies so large a place in the current Christian thought is in itself a hopeful sign and gives promise of the certain coming of Christian unity in due time.

On Lord's day, the 13th, Bro. G. B. Bowen, of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, preached for us at the One Hundred and Sixty ninth Street Church, at the evening service, giving a good descriptive discourse, illustrating the pathway of life by a trip through Mammoth Cave. Bro. Bowen was a classmate of ours in college, and naturally we have watched his evangelistic career with deep interest, for as such he has been a great success. Under his ministry more than 4,000 souls have been brought into the churches within the last ten years. His greatest success was won, perhaps, while state evangelist of Texas, when he held a number of great meetings in different parts of the state. Bro. Bowen has traveled extensively in the New World and the Old and has the advantage of drawing upon his observations and experiences to illustrate and enforce his message. He has just completed a tour of three months through Italy, France, England, Egypt, Turkey, Greece and other Eastern countries. He had the priviledge of baptizing a woman at or about the place in the Jordan where Jesus was baptized. We enjoyed with Bro. Bowen in our house a review of the college days when in imagination many of the "old boys" of the College of the Bible passed before us. We concluded that there were no better boys in the world than those from Lexington.

S. T. WILLIS.

1281 Union Avenue.

B. B. Tyler's Letter.

The congregation of Disciples of Christ on West Fifty-sixth Street, in New York, is coming into a fine condition. B. Q. Denham has been with this church only a few months, but already the good results of his enthusiasm are visible. I have never seen the church so hearty in the support of a pastor as it is in the support of Bro. Denham. Thirty-two years ago, this month, I first visited this body of believers. My interest has been constant during all these years. With their history for almost a third of a century I have been more or less familiar. During a portion of this time my acquaintance with the Disciples in New York was quite intimate. It is, therefore, with no ordinary pleasure that the present apparently prosperous condition of the church on West Fifty-sixth Street is noted.

The offering Easter morning was more than a thousand dollars. This was a special contribution to assist in paying off an indebtedness which has been accumulating for a number of years. Such an offering is a hopeful sign. This is a thoroughly missionary church. It was the first church whose Sunday-school sent a gift to the Foreign Christian Missionary Society. It is believed that this Sunday-school has not failed to send an annual offering in aid of the work of Christianizing the world since the organization of the society in 1875. This is a record of which any congregation and Bible school may well be proud. STEADINESS in the work of the Lord is a grace that needs to be cultivated by almost all Disciples of Jesus. Nor has this church been indifferent to the claims of the home field. It liberally supports the work of evangelism in New York State. Then some years one-fourth of the money annually contributed by the Disciples in the Empire State for work in the state was given by the Disciples of Christ on West Fifty-sixth Street.

The work at One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Street, of which S. T. Willis is in charge, is in a prosperous condition. Fifteen years ago this was a mission point. Less than fifteen years ago it seemed to be in a dying condition. It is far from being in a moribund condition now. The success of Bro. Willis in Upper New York has been remarkable. The progress from the beginning of his work has been steady. At no time has the movement been rapid. The church has never experienced a spiritual cyclone. May it never be so unfortunate. A real-estate boom is bad, a church boom is worse. That a real-estate boom is bad, see the cities that have had such an experience; that a church boom is worse, see the congregations that have been so afflicted. It is evident that Bro. Willis has the work better in hand now than at any previous period. There are not less than about five hundred children in his Sunday-school. It is now no unusual thing for this house of worship to be filled with people to hear the Word. Some enlargements and other improvements in the house are in contemplation, to be made in the near future. Both of these churches are free from debt. There is a small floating debt carried by the brethren who worship at West Fifty-sixth Street; but on neither of the churches here named is there a mortgage indebtedness. This is a remarkable experience in New York.

M. E. Harlan speaks encouragingly of the work which he has in hand in Brooklyn.

The congregations of Disciples in Greater New York co-operated cordially in extending a welcome to their brethren who attended the Ecumenical Missionary Conference, and they ought to know that their efforts were appreciated by their country cousins and that we rejoiced in the evidences of progress and prosperity which were visible.

This Eastern field is difficult, but fruitful. It has well repaid the labor which has been here expended. By the Eastern field is not meant Ohio and Western New York; but the cities on the Atlantic Coast—Boston, New York, Brooklyn and Baltimore. Western New York is no more the Eastern field than is Eastern Ohio. It is not especially difficult; but in the region properly characterized as the Eastern field the progress of the Disciples has been and is slow when compared with other parts of our country. There is, however, no reason for disheartenment. Let the seed be freely scattered in this part of the land and a harvest will certainly reward the husbandman.

There is an increasing demand for such work as the Disciples are capable of doing. Leslie's Weekly, New York, for May 12, has an editorial entitled, "Pulpit Reform Needed," from which the following is quoted:

"The demand for the picturesque in the pulpit lessens. The demand for the rational increases. Craving for the emotional, hankering after stories and anecdotes, diminishes. The appetite for the solid, the substantial, the intellectual, strengthens. People are calling less loudly for the clergyman to set forth homiletical dainties, and they are calling more strongly for him to give them the roast beef of logic and thought.

"The change is salutary, and it is fraught with hope for the higher intellectual and religious interests of mankind. For people have become wofully ignorant of the Scriptures as a simple piece of literature. Put into the hand of the ordinary man or woman a volume of a modern poet and ask him to explain the biblical allusions, and he is proved to be sadly and ridiculously ignorant. People are hardly less ignorant, too, of the supreme lessons which the Scriptures are designed to teach, as touching life, doctrine, character. People need to learn, and they are eager to learn, that Christianity is a system of truth which its adherents believe is addressed primarily to the reason and to the understanding. To this demand of the people the pulpit should respond.

. . . . . .

"The pulpit should cease a large part of its exhortation. It should preach as if it had a message for dying and sinning men, but it should seek to prove that its message is the message which bears life and help.

. . . . . .

"The pulpit must not unduly tax faith. It should not minister to that vice and sin of weak minds—credulousness. It should adopt the mood and the method, be it said, of the lawyer talking to the Jury or to the Bench. It should give to the human reason of our day, thirsting for truth, the water of thought, and not the foam of emotional exultation. Come, oh, ministers, let us reason."

This editorial is one of the signs of the times. This appeal to the ministers is significant. The foregoing declaration concerning the ignorance of the people is the statement of a fact. It is not egotism or Phariseeism to say that the Disciples of Christ are able to meet the conditions indicated in the above quotation a little better, if they will, than any other people. They are much better prepared to do this character of work than they are to play the part of "salvationists."

A good story concerning ignorance of the Bible is told on a judge of the Supreme Court of New York. In a legal opinion he said: "We have the highest authority for saying: 'Skin for skin; yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life.'" The next morning the New York Herald commented on this opinion as follows: "We find that it was the devil who said, 'Skin for skin, yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life.' Now we know who it is that our Supreme Court Judges regard as the highest possible authority."

The Century Magazine for May contains an article from the Rev. C. F. Thwing, D. D., on "Significant Ignorance About the Bible"—as shown among college students of both sexes. This paper presents some surprising revelations on this subject.

This letter is written in Springfield, Mass. There is in this city a "Bible Normal College." Of this I will have something to say next week. There is a congregation of Disciples of Christ here which numbers between fifty and sixty members. E. C. Davis is the pastor of this little flock. The chapel is a model of neatness and comfort. The work is in good condition. The future is encouraging. But enough of this for the present.

B. B. T.

Washington (D. C.) Letter.

Friday, May 11, at the Vermont Avenue Church, of this city, representatives of our four churches gathered and solemnly set apart Frank T. Lea to the work of an evangelist. A large audience was present. F. D. Power presided, W. J. Wright made an address, Ira W. Kimmel offered ordination prayer and E. B. Bagby delivered the charge. The service was followed by a reception tendered Bro. Lea by the C. E. Society of the Vermont Avenue Church. Bro. Lea sails within a few days for Africa, where he will labor in the future with Bros. Faris and Dye at Bolengi on the Congo.

The first chapters in the life of a new missionary make an interesting story. Frank T. Lea was born in Montgomery County, Maryland, in 1869. His parents were Hicksite Quakers and he was reared in that faith. In 1891 he came to Washington and worked as a carpenter, devoting his earnings to the study of architecture. One day, while engaged in the construction of a fence around the Y. M. C. A. Athletic Park, a fellow-workman, whose name was Philip Johnson, inquired if he was a Christian. Young Lea replied that he had been converted a few days before at a Y. M. C. A. meeting, but had not joined the church. His companion took him to the Vermont Avenue Church. His reception there was so cordial that in a short time he was baptized by Bro. Power and received into fellowship.

Before the foundations, of the fence were finished they had settled the foundations of their lives and determined to give up their trade for a life of wider usefulness.

In September they entered Bethany College. There young Lea became interested in the Students' Volunteer Movement, and especially interested in one of the volunteers, Miss Grace Fortier, who afterwards became his wife.

After leaving Bethany Bro. Lea took a course in a medical college in New York City. For some months he was associated with B. B. Tyler at the 56th Street Church, where he was known as "the children's pastor."

He found time also to organize what is known as "Sunshine Mission in Hell's Kitchen." His success in mission work in the New York slums augurs well for his future career in foreign lands. In February, 1897, he was accepted as a missionary of the Philafrican League. The purpose of this league is to plant self-supporting Christian colonies in Africa. Bro. Lea became the mechanical director of the first colony, which was located in Portugese Territory, West Africa, some two hundred miles from the coast.

Bro. Lea found himself under such restrictions that he could not work to advantage, so moved inland about thirty miles, built a house and applied to the churches of Washington for support. We consented to sustain him provided he would enter the employ of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society. Before the arrangements could be consummated Bro. Lea found it necessary to return at once for a surgical operation. As his funds were nearly exhausted he had to come as a steerage passenger and was obliged to leave his wife behind. Her position was by no means an enviable one. She was alone in the house with only two children. The nearest white resident was more than a mile distant. Within a radius of three miles there were more than 1,500 natives. In this vicinity in the past six years 43 lions have been killed.

Bro. Lea has lately received news that his wife has been kidnapped. Missionaries of the American Board, stationed at Baibendi, some 200 miles to the north, hearing that she was alone, sent one of their number down and had her conveyed in a hammock to their own settlement to await there Bro. Lea's return. Bro. Lea expects to go first to Baibendi, and then to his own station, to settle his affairs, return to Baibendi for his wife and then again to the coast.

This will require a jaunt of 800 miles. As the surgical operation was a complete success and his walking powers the best, we expect him to complete the journey without serious mishap.

A man of such diversified talents and consecrated energy will make a valuable addition to our force on the Congo. We shall be disappointed if that part of the Dark Continent does not soon begin to glow with the light of the gospel.

* * *

The brethren who go from this city to the Hagerstown conference will take good reports from our four churches.

Whitney Avenue recently closed a meeting with twenty-four additions. When I. W. Kimmel began work with this mission last July some of the sanguine ones predicted that within a year he would have a congregation of one hundred members. He has at the present date ninety-eight and two others promised.

Vermont Avenue Church is much improved by the introduction of electric lights, frescoing, new carpets, etc. There has been a number of additions.

Ninth Street has had eighty additions since Jan 1st. Our attendance at Sunday-school for several Sundays has been above the 400 mark. Since Jan. 1, 1898, the pastor has married eighty-couples.

EDWARD B. BAGBY.

631 Eighth Street, N. E.

Bible Study by Mail.

Diploma and degree course right at your home. No loss of time from regular work. Terms, $1 per month. Trial lesson free. Write Prof. C. J. Burton, Christian University, Canton, Mo.

Texas Letter.

J. C. Mason, of Houston, has just celebrated his eleventh anniversary as pastor in that important city. The history of his work there is full of interest and inspiration. On May 22, 1885 a little church of fifteen members were organized. They had no house and worshiped in private homes, vacant business houses and halls, as they could get them, till April 24, 1889, when Bro. Mason took charge of the work. His coming was the dawning of the day of prosperity. He soon began to talk about a new house, and he did not talk in vain, for in due time it came, a handsome and commodious structure, costing $18,000.

The membership has increased to more than 500, with a number of prosperous missions well located, which are destined soon to become self-supporting churches. Net gain for the eleventh year is 100, with $4,000 raised, $320 of which is for missions. The Sunday-school, under the care of J. H. Douthit, is one of the best in the state. The average collection is over $8 per week. If any one has doubts as to the wisdom of sustaining strong men in important missionary centers, let him study the history of Houston and his doubts will vanish.

C. McPherson and wife have been married 25 years and the First Church, of Ft. Worth, where they are pastors, emphasized the fact by "storming" them in their home in a most orthodox way. Many of the flock, with genial faces and silvery gifts and golden words of congratulation and encouragement, spent the evening with them. It was a delightful affair, and it will do good. Even so sensible and matter-of-fact a man as McPherson needs and appreciates such tokens of love and confidence, while the warm heart of his wife can hardly live without them. So let the good work go on. Why not? According to the laws of reciprocity it ought to continue. The preachers pound the people and why should they not pound us sometimes?

Jno. P. Homan, son of the Courier editor, is away from home in search of health. "Pat" is a bright, noble young Christian, with great possibilities before him, provided he can have health; and there are many praying for his speedy recovery. As an evidence of his popularity, at the last election he was elected to the city council by a handsome majority.

Geo. B. Ranshaw, our San Antonio pastor, has been called to the sickbed of his father in Covington, Ky. The Ranshaw family have long been pillars in the church, and we hope the father will be given his health again.

Morris J. Lynch, the successful editor and publisher of the Texas Christian Endeavorer, has become publisher and business manager of the Christian Courier. His energy, newspaper knowledge and ability will be felt in the paper, while the overworked editor will now have ample time for his special department; so we congratulate the Courier on the new arrangement.

Our state convention, Paris, June 11-15, promises to be the best in our history. Here are some of the men who will make addresses: Judge J. T. Brown, of the Supreme Court; Judge Anson Rainey, of the Court of Civil Appeals; C. C. Smith, G. W. Muckley, J. S. Myers, B. B. Sanders, A. J. Bush, E. C. Boynton, F. E. Meigs, Granville Jones, J. W. Lowber, Prof. F. H. Marshall. These men will say something worth hearing. Then there will be reports from our fifteen workers. Send your name to J. N. Crutcher, and come and enjoy a great meeting with us.

M. M. DAVIS

833 Live Oak St., Dallas, Tex.

"Catch the opportunity." By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla now you may build up your health and prevent serious illness.

Colorado Letter.

F. N. Calvin has struck a popular chord in beginning his work at Colorado Springs. His work opens hopefully.

Flournoy Payne, formerly pastor of East Side Church in Denver, is doing a good work for Colorado City Church, while attending Colorado College at Colorado Springs.

Trinidad is the gateway to New Mexico. It is an important town of 10,000 people. F. W. Henry, formerly pastor at Loveland, having completed his special studies in the University of Nebraska, has accepted the pastorate at Trinidad.

Missouri readers of the CHRISTIAN-EVANGELIST will be glad to learn of good work in the East Side Church, Denver, where A. F. Holden ministers. The business of the congregation is kept in good condition, and the missionary interests of the church faithfully presented. The Sunday-school is large and growing. The church will probably build this year.

Grand Junction is the metropolis of the Western Slope, in Colorado, and has 5,000 people. The little city is prospering splendidly, and has excellent prospects. M. A. Thompson, of Des Moines, began April 1st., and there have been three additions, besides the prayer-meeting and C. E. Society have been reorganized. A new building is contemplated soon.

The Central, of Denver, has had offers upon their present property, and may sell. The present location is now needed for business, and a large hotel company seeks the site. Should the Central sell, they would erect their new building probably a little way up on Capitol Hill.

W. M. Taylor, of Chattanooga, Tenn., is supplying the pulpit of South Broadway Church, Denver, during May.

Mrs. Laura A. Pettit, who has been preaching for the Berkeley Church, Denver, since the death of her husband, F. D. Pettit, is being heard by interested audiences, and has frequent additions. Three were baptized by the state evangelist on May 6th. We regret that Sister Pettit's health may make it necessary for her to surrender that work.

La Junta is the principal town east of Pueblo in the Arkansas Valley. It is an important railroad center. The Disciples there own an excellent corner on which they expect to build a modern house as soon as they can sell the old property. B. F. Vaughan came from Horton, Kan., and began his ministry Feb. 15th, and the work is prospering in his hands.

D. A. Trundle, of Springdale, Ark., took the pastorate at Florence, January 1st. This town is the center of a great oil industry, and is the terminus of the Florence and Cripple Creek Railroad, and its junction with the Denver & Rio Grande. It has 4,000 to 5,000 people. The Disciples meet in a hall, up stairs. Their influence is spreading, and a place of their own will be sought before long.

D. W. Conner recently held a meeting of several weeks with his home congregation at Canon City, with 24 additions. The church is entirely free from debt, and has recently seated its house with pews.

J. P. Lucas, of Colorado City, is giving his entire time to evangelistic work. He has just held meetings at Lawrence and Leavenworth, Kan

The annual meeting of the northern district convention will be held with the church at Ft. Collins, June 6, 7. The first southern district will be organized in a convention to be held with Central Church, Pueblo, June 12, 13.

In Colorado's effort for $1,500 for state work this year there is now $773 under pledge and $460 cash.

LEONARD G. THOMPSON, Cor. Sec.

Denver, Col.

The Hannibal Meeting.

The writer has just returned from a ten days' stay in Hannibal, Mo., during which he assisted the pastor, Levi Marshall, in a meeting. Any one who has ever spent any time in Hannibal does not need to be told of the many ideal features of the church. With an elegant building, a host of intelligent workers, scores of people blessed with this world's goods and a long record of good works, they push ahead in all the Lord's work. No small amount of the present efficiency is due to the leadership of Levi Marshall. He is not a man who advertises himself as systematically as some, but we have few men who have prepared as thoroughly for the work as he. He has earned the degrees of A. B., B. D., Ph. D., from some of the best educational institutions in the land. He is a man of faith and a man of the Word. It was at his request a series of sermons on the position of the Disciples was delivered during the meeting, and he was as much delighted to hear these gospel themes handled as the writer was to handle them. The hospitality of Bro. Marshall's home and the side trips to the places of Mark Twain's fame in the vicinity of Hannibal every day will linger long in my memory. We explored the cave of Twain's fame and saw Grand Avenue, the Elephant's Trunk, the Parlor, the Boat, Five Points, the Springs and many other features of this underground wonderland. The cave is dry and the air not foul. You can go through in your Sunday clothes and come out unsoiled. The old guide told me of the time when the state C. E.s held services in Grand Avenue. He says: "They came in singin', they were singin' and preachin' all the while they were in; they went out singin', and I told a man I guessed they were still singin'."

H. A. DENTON.

Warrensburg, Mo., May 5, 1900.

A Scientific Breakfast.

Rightly selected food will cure more than half the diseases. Try a scientific and healthy breakfast:—Fruit of some kind, preferably cooked; a a dish of Grape-Nuts, with cream; two soft-boiled eggs. Put two eggs in a tin pint cup of boiling water, cover and set off nine minutes. Whites will then be the consistency of cream and most easily digested. One slice of bread with butter; cup of Postum Cereal Food Coffee.

On that breakfast you can work like a horse and be perfectly nourished until noon. Your nervous troubles, heart palpitation, stomach and bowel troubles, kidney complaints and various other disorders will gradually disappear and firm, solid health will set in.

Why? You have probably been living on poorly selected food, that is, food that does not contain the required elements the body needs. That sort of food, and coffee, is the direct or indirect cause of more than half the ills the human body acquires.

Grape-Nuts is a perfectly cooked food and both that and the Postum Food Coffee contain fine microscopic particles of phosphate of potash obtained in a natural way from the grains of the field and by scientific food experts incorporated into food and drink. That element joins with the albumen in food to make gray matter, which is the filling of the brain cells and the nerve-centers all over the human body.

A man or woman thus fed is scientifically fed and rapidly grows in vigor and vitality, and becomes capable of conducting successfully the affairs of life. To produce a perfect body and a money-making brain the body must have the right kind of food, and the expert food specialist knows how to make it. That is Grape-Nuts and Postum Cereal Food Coffee, produced at the pure food factories of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., at Battle Creek, Mich.

Missouri Bible-school Notes.

Have you sent word to C. C. Hill, California, Mo., that you expect to attend the convention. If not, please do so. If you do not go it is easier to strike the name off than to hunt you a home afterward. Hear?

Blairstown, C. B. Lotspeich, minister, meets apportionment in full.

Bro. M. H. Wood is doing a fine work at Ava, county seat of Douglas, with an organization of 50 members. Money being raised for a new house. All of which insures the permanency of the work.

